How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 11

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

Ray Bagley of the Missoula Amusement Company is the manager of the Empress Theatre in Missoula.

Missoula sounds like one of the small 2 x 4 towns where nothing happens, but the fact that live exhibitors are not always found in New York City is proven by some of Mr. Bagley's stunts with World Film.

The Empress Theatre runs programs of two other feature companies, giving a day to each one. He runs World Film two days.

When Mr. Bagley saw Lew Fields in "Old Dutch," he decided that the picture was good enough for something unusual, and the result was that he introduced what he calls Midnight Matinee. He ran the film on Sunday morning between 12 and 1.20 in addition to the regular night performance.

His newspaper advertising based on the suggestions of our pictures and ads. and our complete publicity service, were the best possible examples of what can be done by a man who keeps his eyes open and is willing to accept expert help. The Midnight Matinee was a great hit, both financially and as a publicity stunt.

In addition to the newspaper advertising used, Mr. Bagley also uses 3-24 sheets for every World Film feature, in addition to his regular paper, and boosts his frame showing with a beautiful hand-colored gravure three days in advance of the performance.

In concluding his letter Mr. Bagley says the World Film is to be complimented upon the men in their employ. He says he has never corresponded with a more congenial and obliging group of managers. "You've got a great organization," says Mr. Bagley.

No other feature company has gone into the cost we have in producing advertising aids for the exhibitor's use. For the men who will use them, no more effective method of publicity will be found. Ask our managers to outline to you the complete selling help and the advertising matter which is at your disposal.

GOOD GOODS

This list surely is a splendid sight for discouraged theatre owners. It sort of puts new life in you. You realize that there is really something that is "Standard" in the motion picture business. They are all Kriterion, that alone means good productions, good playing and good stories as well as good photography.

There are hundreds of exhibitors who have realized all of these things. We want you to look them over, inquire about them, in fact, ask about any one of our releases. You will find that they are all good. This is not a careful selection, but merely those that have been released during the past couple of weeks.

Write us or our exchange or your friend who is using Kriterion pictures and get the real facts concerning Kriterion Service.

SURE SIGNS OF SUCCESS

When those petty schemers who prey on the popularity of a big Company's proposition come out and deliberately use that big Company's thunder, it is convincing proof that that Company must be big or its thunder would not be worth using.

Petty pirates are at work using the name "KRITERION" in connection with motion picture enterprises that have absolutely no connection with the KRITERION FILM CORPORATION which issues the

"DECIDEDLY DISTINCTIVE KRITERION SERVICE"

They are not fooling the exhibitor who has been watching the growth of KRITERION and its releases. These concerns are foisting a few commercial reels on a few unsuspecting theatre owners. But, with the fame that is preceding KRITERION pictures all over the country, it is evident that these petty pirates have nothing but the name—they cannot deliver the KRITERION goods in the honest KRITERION way.

A WORD OF WARNING

is all that this is intended to be to those exhibitors who really want the high-class "KRITERION SERVICE." We advise them if they are in doubt, to first write this office and we will refer their inquiry to the proper exchange.

MUCH BEAUTY IN SCENES

NEW YORK WORLD

Then the big movie feature was thrown on—"The Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Leslie Carter as the heart. A new method of projection had to be used, because the distance from the S. O. S. cabin in the gallery, where they turn the movie crank, to the Hipp stage, is nearly a mile, and so they got this kineplasticon, which has a big lens and when music and picture are being run off together, kinny keeps 'em in unison.

Mrs. Carter's acting was so good that we felt like singing right out Maryland my Maryland, with all the dope about Donald's trusty sword, and what he was gonna raise with it.

Hippodrome's "Movies" Win; Music Is Good

The chief spectacle was a film production of "The Heart of Maryland," showing Mrs. Leslie Carter in her old role of Maryland Calvert, in which she was seen singing, and when church bell the house was stirred to enthusiastic applause. The play has been pictured on an elaborate scale, with the smoke on battle and burning villages to give it added reality. Mrs. Carter's vivid facial expression is pretty in her favor as a motion picture actress, and she is revealed as a more or less rough rider when, as a boy, she is seen on horseback in the

Herbert Brenon can be quite proud of the fact that this film, "The Heart of Maryland," has been selected for the opening of the big Hippodrome for their new policy of selected feature films and aquatic spectacles. The big feature was the Tiffany production of David Belasco's dramatic success, "The Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the original role that she created more than a decade ago. N.Y. HERALD

So prompt was the response of the public to the opportunity to see "The Heart of Maryland" as a motion picture play in the Hippodrome that the management of the house has decided to make it a regular thing, running from half past twelve o'clock in the afternoon until midnight. Mrs. Leslie Carter was present last night to see herself on the screen in the role of the play.

N.Y. CLIPPER

The Tiffany Motion Picture Company's greatest production, "The Heart of Maryland," will be seen tomorrow night at the Hippodrome, when the world's largest playhouse inaugurates its new policy of photo plays. The picture, which is billed as the world's biggest motion picture production, is expected to prove a sensation in a season already replete with silent drama sensations. Mrs. Leslie Carter is seen in her original role.

For more than a month the Shuberts looked for a fit motion picture subject with which to inaugurate the new policy at the Hippodrome, and it was not until after they had contracted some threescore features that they finally selected the Tiffany Motion Picture Company's elaborate production of one of Belasco's greatest successes.

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

AN IMAGE OF THE PAST. (1 Reel Majestic.) Release date Tuesday, March 30. An interesting story of a daughter's reconciliation with her father through the medium of her child. A picture of fair quality.

THE ARTIST'S WIFE. (1 Reel Majestic.) Release date Friday, April 2. The model's sacrifice reclaims the wavering love of her artist sweetheart. A picture with a thrill.

DOCTOR JIM. (2 Reel Majestic.) Release date Sunday, April 4. The kind-hearted Doctor Jim is misunderstood in the western community, but in the end wins the hand of the sheriff's daughter.

ETHEL'S DEADLY ALARM CLOCK. (1 Reel Komic.) Release date Sunday, April 4. One of the best of the "Bill" series in which a dynamite bomb and an alarm clock cause confusion and terror.

THE LITTLE MOTHER. (1 Reel Majestic.) Release date Tuesday, April 6. A very interesting child story, telling how a little orphan girl at last finds a home with her baby sister.

THE FENCING MASTER. (2 Reel Majestic.) Release date Sunday, April 11. A well produced story of an old fencing master who regains the vigor of his youth, featuring delightful "Teddy" Sampson and lovable Thomas Jefferson.

BY FAIR MEANS OR FOWL (1 Reel Komic.) Release date Sunday, April 11. A rural farce with Fay Tincher and Elmer Booth. Not quite up to Komic standard in story or production.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

The Inside Story of a Big Film

Just about a year ago, I went to Mexico to see General Villa about the moving pictures of the Mexican War, at which all the world marvelled. Some of the best camera men and two of the greatest directors in the United States were with me. Quite accidentally we stumbled upon a tragic story of Villa's own early life. Of how, in seeking revenge for the death of his two unprotected sisters, at the hands of officers of the Mexican Army, he was thrown into prison,—escaped with the aid of an Indian half-breed whom he had earlier befriended, became an outlaw,—and,—finally was made Chief of the band that formed the nucleus of the Mexican Rebel Army.

Here was a tremendous epic of real life,—a theme big with every human emotion—ready to hand. Here was almost the very scene of the tragedy; here were thousands of restless Mexicans—as there had been when only a few years before Villa was living the story we had just heard. Then the telegraph wires began to hum. Well-known actors and actresses came—learned the story—lived the life—and then re-lived the Story before the Camera.

The result is a wonderful picture,—doubly intense because of its reality. The battle scenes are tremendous; hundreds of the actors in them were actual Mexican soldiers,—members of the old rebel band. A few scenes are pictures of real battles "cut" into the story.

Frankly, this film wasn't made as a Mutual Master-Picture. It was made to go out alone as one of the big motion picture accomplishments of the decade. Thrilling—intense—overpowering, yet full of trembling sunshine and tremendous spaces—where the horizon is miles away and the foreground frighteningly near,—it is truly the great melodrama of the blood-red dawn of a new republic.

I am sending it out now—big as it is—as a fitting companion to the four Mutual Master-Pictures which have already appeared.

You'll be glad you saw it—and ten years from now—your children will be glad you took them with you.

I have called this picture

THE OUTLAW'S REVENGE
In the Dawn of a New Republic.

The tears would come—I couldn't help it—and I'm not ashamed.

I wonder if there's a school-boy who hasn't had all he could do to keep them back when he read Enoch Arden? Yet was a sweeter story ever told than in Lord Tennyson's poem? How simple and direct and wonderful it all is. And how very, very beautiful.

With me, when I saw the film at the Majestic Studios today, were half a dozen picture-hardened men, and two no less practiced women. It is not unnatural that we talk over the pictures as they are shown. There's a running comment always. But somehow—as scene followed scene in Enoch Arden—the room became very still. The click of the machine was lost in the booming of breakers on far-off beaches. Long-forgotten lines of smooth-running verse came back to us all, I think—and the old New England fishing village seemed like the brightening of some dim recollection.

For nearly an hour no one had spoken; then one of the women sniffled,—the lights came on,—and both my cheeks were wet.

Go to see ENOCH ARDEN.

Some good theatre near you should show it soon.

You will enjoy every minute of it—and so will your mother and your sister—and your sweetheart. So, too, will your son if he's red-blooded and the right sort.

And if—at the very end—your eyes fill up and there's a tightening in your throat—it's a good sign.

Meantime—while you think of it—

IT is done! My heart is glad—my judgment is confirmed!

I have told you of the material that the new Thanhouser releases will be made of, of the new inspiration, the high tone, the lofty ideal that will be put into them.

Well—all this time we have been hard at work, and two minutes before I sat down to write this I was in my projection room, looking at the first few of the new Thanhouser releases.

What I saw there made me rush back to my desk and get this off to you at once!

I can't be conservative now—I can't be modest! I feel like SHOUTING to you! They're great!—just positively and absolutely all that I want them to be! They're dozens of per cent. better than the best work I ever did before—and I don't need to repeat here what the name Thanhouser has meant to you in the past.

You are all men of business, men of enterprise, and many of you know what it is to have carried the spark of an ideal in your heart and mind for a long time—then to see it fanned into a flame from which, like Phoenix, the creature of your fancy arises!

That's where I stand now! I am satisfied, and you know that will mean satisfaction for you!

The new Thanhouser releases are ready, so be quick when I announce the release dates.

The Public and "The Other Side"

THIS is the tenth week since MOTION PICTURE NEWS began its series of exclusive interviews on the subject, "Weak Spots In a Strong Business."

Ten producers and distributors have pointed out what they considered the weak spots in the industry. Two or three times as many more will have contributed to the series before its conclusion.

THESE articles have been uniformly acute and penetrating. But their authors have, as uniformly, overlooked what must be admitted to be an imperative, if not the supreme need of motion picture business at the present time—imperative because the lack of it is, directly and indirectly, responsible for the censorship menace which hangs over the business like a thunder-cloud.

That need is the need of an intelligent, nation-wide publicity campaign in behalf of motion pictures, their makers and their exhibitors.

The motion picture needs an ambassador at the court of public opinion. It needs to establish diplomatic and friendly relations with the American people.

THE mainspring of the "off-stage" cries for censorship—misnamed by its advocates, "public opinion"—is ignorance.

Utter ignorance of what the motion picture is, of the nature and quality of the present-day productions, even of the class of men and women who are the patrons of motion picture theatres, marks the man and woman who believes that he or she believes in censorship.

That they are ignorant of the truth about motion pictures is not their fault. It is the fault of the motion picture men. No one in, or connected with the business has taken the trouble, for years, to use the common channels of information, open to all, to tell the public the truth.

THAT sloth, that indifference, has been and is now being paid for at a tremendous price. While the motion picture business has slept, the advocates of censorship have not been idle.

Not a day has passed but they have attacked the motion picture in some publication whose articles are seriously read by anywhere from ten thousand to five hundred thousand people.

Not a week has passed but they have assailed motion pictures from the pulpit, formed organizations to "combat the evil," and clamored to civil authorities in numerous communities for "protection."

Not a month has passed but some city council or state legislature has been urged, in the name of decency, to "regulate" the "obnoxious" motion picture.

THE advocates of censorship have a more perfect and more powerful system of publicity than any movement that has been initiated in modern times. For years they have been industriously pouring in accusation after accusation, charge upon charge, against the motion picture maker and the theatre manager, through the daily, weekly and monthly press, from the pulpit, in the club, by personal exhortation.

And that is the only publicity the motion picture has received—every word of it hostile, every word of it prejudiced, every word of it far-reaching in its effect. Nothing to stem this flood of damaging allegations was adduced.

THE fair-minded sought in vain for "the other side" of the question. There was none—none within his reach, at any rate.

The case has been going against the motion picture industry by default. You can blame no man for judging upon the evidence available to him.

Is it any wonder that the advocates of censorship are able to say, with some show of fact, that "public opinion" demands a censorship of motion pictures?

A less flourishing, less virile industry would have crumbled to ruins under such a bombardment. As it is, its assailants have done their best to persuade their audience that the motion picture business is dangerous to be at large and should be confined in that straight-jacket called censorship.

IT is not by any means too late to turn the tide. But a counter-campaign of wise, carefully selected, well-placed and incessant publicity cannot begin too soon.

This does not mean the publicity sent out in free mat or plate services, nor the kind that editors use to make up "Motion Picture Pages."

It means the accumulation of hundreds and thousands of items, articles, news stories, letters, editorials, addresses, apparently unrelated, appearing in the natural order of events, which, in their grand total effect, create a favorable attitude on the part of the public toward the picture. It means, in a word, a campaign of education.

Vol. XI April 10, 1915 No. 14

FAMILIARITY does not breed half so much contempt as ignorance breeds fear, misunderstanding and hatred. And when that ignorance has been traded upon and played upon without interruption for years, the need of such education becomes glaring.

The public has heard the worst of motion pictures for years.

When are they to hear the other side?

No One Knows the Answer

OF undoubted value and interest is the symposium of views on "Weak Spots in a Strong Business" now running in Motion Picture News.

This series surpasses the first serious, yet optimistic, attempt to "lay the ghost," to find out the underlying causes of the spirit of discontent with things as they are which has been noticeable of late in the motion picture industry.

Trade conditions have been discussed by men thoroughly experienced in the various branches of the business and views have been expressed which represent the outcome of years of earnest study of business conditions.

ALL of the men interviewed have agreed on five primary causes for whatever business lethargy may exist. In addition, each one has dwelt upon lack of attention on the part of others to his particular hobby. All have been optimistic about the future.

But the important part is that none of these men, men who would know if any does, dares predict what the future of the business will be nor by what steps it will be attained.

All feel that the future will be pleasant but what the next stage in the evolution of the industry will be no one dares predict.

THE five main evils, cited by all, are:

The European war, stock promotion schemes, the entry into the business of inexperienced persons and firms, ruinous price-cutting in the distributing end and foolish expenditure and poor judgment in the producing end.

Over-production everybody took for granted.

IN addition George Kleine felt that a high business standard should be maintained.

Siegmund Lubin foresaw the days when theatres would be classified.

R. H. Cochrane thought exhibitors should raise their admission prices and guarantee their own future by getting their films from an established source of supply.

Horace Plimpton felt that the scenarios of the short subjects are weak.

Harry Raver believed in big productions, well exploited.

Sol Lesser believed that the old school exchange man and exhibitor had permitted himself to be pushed to the wall and now found it hard to regain his "place in the sun."

Charles Kessel emphasized the need of good stories and more careful expenditure in production.

So each man stressed the point which was his particular hobby.

BUT when asked what the next step will be, without exception, they all side-stepped gracefully, but firmly. "Watchful waiting" was the policy of all. On only one thing did all agree—the need of good pictures.

What everyone wants to know is what is coming next. The man or company who reads the signs aright will pave the way for the others, to his own financial betterment.

As ever, the time is ripe for a Moses.

The Harrisburg Fight and Its Significance to the Business at Large

THE opposing forces have met at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, after a few preliminary skirmishes and some reconnoitring, in what promises to be a real test of strength on the censorship question.

The legislative hearing, as might have been expected, was a hot one. The tempers of each party—the film forces and the censor forces—were tried to the limit. The question of the victory, of course, remains to be decided by the vote in the Legislature.

ONE thing at least will be settled by this fight—no matter which way it goes—that is, the question of just how much "public opinion" the censors have manufactured, and how much is really and spontaneously in their favor. That they have wilfully exaggerated and distorted the amount of support they profess to have, is as true as that they have deliberately vilified and distorted the case of the motion picture in gaining what little sympathy they actually control.

But if the ghost of the "tremendous popular demand for regulation of motion pictures" is not effectually laid when the smoke of battle has cleared away, it will be because the censor party, though beaten, will be able to withdraw in good order behind its fortifications and reform for another onslaught.

IT may also be observed to advantage, in passing, that the spectacle of militant self-defense exhibited by the exhibitors and exchange men of Pennsylvania, in fighting manfully for their inalienable rights, cannot be too closely or completely emulated throughout the entire industry. Wherever such a problem presents itself the spirit of "No surrender" should prevail.

KEYSTONE CENSOR LAW CASE UP ON APPEAL

Constitutionality of Pennsylvania Censorship Law Argued Before Highest Court of the State—Attorneys Declare That Real Purpose of Code Is Disguised and That It Withholds Right of Hearing Before Censors—Also Right of Appeal on Reels

Special to Motion Picture News
Philadelphia, March 31.

THE constitutionality of the Pennsylvania Censorship Law was argued Monday in the Supreme Court.

George Quintard Horwitz, counsel for the Buffalo branch, Mutual Film Corporation and Mutual Film Corporation of Pennsylvania and Interstate Films Company, and for Alfred E. Brown, William Sachsenmaier, Vernon R. Carrick, trading as the Overbrook Theatre, presented six reasons to the Court why the act creating the censorship should be repealed as unconstitutional. The act was attacked in the first mentioned case as an attempt by the Legislature for the first time in the history of the Commonwealth to create and establish a censorship, thus adopting a radical and revolutionary course, contrary to the principle of Republican government.

Upon this basis it was argued that the act is unconstitutional because it is an unlawful, unreasonable and arbitrary exercise of the police power and deprives the appelants of their liberty and property without due process of law and because the appelants are deprived of equal protection of the law.

Regulation Unconstitutional

The second and third reasons advanced were that the act amounts to an unconstitutional delegation of the legislative power possessed solely by the General Assembly and because it affects and burdens interstate commerce to such an extent as to amount to a regulation of such commerce contrary to the Constitution of the United States and also because the fees of $2.50 imposed upon the appellants for the examination of each moving picture reel are grossly in excess of what may be reasonably and constitutionally exacted to meet the purpose of the act.

The fourth and final reason was that the subject and purposes of the act are not clearly expressed in its title, which also is misleading.

The court was informed that the real purpose of the act is disguised in its title and that it withholds any right of a hearing before the Censors and also the right of appeal from their decision on reels.

It was declared a physical impossibility for the censors to fulfil the provisions of the act in respect to examining all reels before they are exhibited. The appellants, it was asserted, rent at least 465 films per week. It was argued that no one film can be examined under 15 minutes. If both censors would work continuously for 10 hours per day, it is said, without intermission, they could not possibly examine more than 240 films per week.

700 Films a Week Rented

With these firms renting 465 films per week to exhibitors in Pennsylvania, it was pointed out that the films rented in the whole State by all companies number at least 700. The average length of such reels or films is about 1,200 feet and the average value of each film is $100 or more.

The act requires the examination of any film whether it be an original or a duplicate. It was alleged that the censors have interpreted the provision of the act requiring a payment of $2.50 for examinations to mean that this sum shall be paid upon the first reel examined as well as every reproduction thereof, although the reproductions are identical with the original.

Under such an interpretation, it was pointed out, the censors would receive from the appellants alone $1,150 per week or more than $66,000 per year. These are given as low figures.

In addition to the four reasons advanced for a decision declaring unconstitutional the act in the case of the film corporations, two additional reasons were argued to this same end in the case of the Overbrook Theatre Company. It was held that because of the cumulative penalty provisions of the act all resort to the courts for adjudication of the reasonableness or lawfulness of the censors, determinations are denied to the exhibitors, thereby depriving them of equal protection of the law.

Interest in Censor Fight Keen

The second reason was that under the act the exhibition of an unapproved reel is declared a crime and is punishable without trial by jury. It was argued that no matter how arbitrary, unreasonable or unlawful may be the action of the censors in refusing to approve a film, no provision is made whereby the exhibitor shall have the right to appeal for a jury trial to determine the justice of the charges made.

Interest in the censorship fight is still keen and warm arguments pro and con still hold forth whenever two people in any way interested in motion pictures gather together. But the principal movements in the affair have been confined last week to the conferences between the lawyers of the parties interested. David J. Smyth, appointed Special Assistant Attorney General by Attorney General Brown, had private interviews with Morris Wolf, representing one body of moving picture men; Samuel F. Wheeler, counsel for the Exhibitors' League; Geo. L. Horwitz, lawyer for some of the exchanges, and J. Louis Breitinger, Chief Censor. All expressed themselves as satisfied with the course events were taking, although the picture men failed to secure the public hearing of their grievances they desired.

The substance of the long discussions between Attorney Smyth and Mr. Breitinger was not made public.

After Mr. Wheeler had presented the film men's greviances in full to Mr. Smyth the latter said he had a clear understanding of the points at issue.

The picture people feel they have scored their first victory in the campaign for they declare it has been decided not to present to the Legislature a bill that would raise the Censor's salary from $1,500 to $4,000 a year.

Fox Film Corporation to Release Strong Features

Company Planning to Keep Up Its One-a-Week Policy During the Summer—Brenon Goes to Montreal, and Powell Leaves for South

THE Fox Film Corporation intends keeping up its one-a-week policy all summer. A list of striking releases has been made up and will be announced in due course. Movements of the different Fox companies are at the present time "A Woman's Regeneration," with Betty Nansen, busily engaged on studio work; the "Wormwood" company with an all-star cast under the direction of Marshall Farnum is in New Orleans.

Herbert Brenon and a numerous company have left for the North, namely Montreal, whose picturesque streets and locations will be used for the backgrounds of a production the name of which the Fox firm is as yet not ready to announce.

Frank Powell will leave for the South, most likely Florida, this week, and Edgar Lewis is in Dahlonega, Ga., directing the destinies of William Farnum and a company of twenty in "The Plunderer." The Fox concern states that in the immediate future a full and comprehensive announcement of its forthcoming plans will be made. This will include some big surprises.

Since the first of the year the firm has produced such big money-makers as "Kreutzer Sonata," with Nance O'Neil; "The Clemenceau Case," with Theda Bara, William E. Shay and Stuart Holmes; "A Fool There Was," with Theda Bara; "Anna Karenina," and "The Celebrated Scandal," featuring Betty Nansen, the famous royal actress; and the William Farnum series which now includes "The New Governor," based upon Edward Sheldon's much discussed play "The Nigger"; "A Gilded Fool" and "Samson."

In addition to these record breaking photodramas the Fox concern is also sponsor for "From the Valley of the Missing," by Grace Miller White, author of "Tess of the Storm Country"; "The Thief," with Dorothy Donnelly; "The Girl I Left Behind Me," with Robert Edeson; "The Walls of Jericho," with Edmund Breese; "The Idler," with Charles Richman, and "Life's Shop Window," with Claire Whitney and Stuart Holmes.

The William Fox offices are undergoing a heavy spring bombardment by exhibitors demanding Fox features.

The Portola Theatre in San Francisco played "Kreutzer Sonata" and "A Fool There Was" for three crowded weeks each. It is the same old story from the East to the West Coast.

COLONEL SELIG CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

William N. Selig, who has accomplished so much in perfecting the motion picture drama, recently observed his fifty-first birthday. One of his most impressive productions, "The Coming of Columbus," brought to him a medal from Pope Pius X.

He was the first to make long historical photodramas and was the first producer to introduce wild animals in dramatic action in photoplays. He realized the value of the motion picture film in its early development.

He made many inventions in the photographing processes, necessary to secure effective films. He financed the expeditions of Prof. Frederick Starr to Africa, Korea, Japan and the Philippines, those of Dr. E. B. McDowell to China and India and that of Emmett O'Neill to the Amazon River.

FRANK DANIELS FOLLOWS BECK OF PICTURES

Frank Daniels, of comic opera fame, was initiated into the mysteries of motion picture production and acting for the camera at the Vitagraph studios last week, when he began work in the four-part comedy "My Uncle Bob," written expressly for the popular comedian by Paul West.

The theme of "My Uncle Bob" is that of mistaken identity, in which Mr. Daniels is seen as an escaped jailbird and in which he is given opportunity to "put over" in his own peculiar style the subtle mannerisms that have caused countless audiences to laugh. "My Uncle Bob" is being produced under the direction of Jay Williams.

KENNEDY NEW PRESIDENT OF KRITERION

A reorganization has taken place in the personnel of the Mica Film Corporation, distributor of the Kriterion program, with head offices at 600 Broadway.

Aubrey M. Kennedy, who has been general manager of productions, succeeds J. Auchincloss as president, Arthur Butler Graham succeeds C. Whitmore as vice-president and treasurer. Mr. Graham is an attorney who has been prominently identified with motion picture interests for several years. The other executives remain as before. The change in no way affects the company's distributing offices nor its policy.

SELIG COMEDY RELEASES FOR APRIL

The Selig Polyscope Company is unusually happy in its comedy releases for April. "At the Mask Ball," "The Strength of a Samson," "Mrs. Murphy's Cooks" are among the laugh provokers.

VIKING FORMED TO FILM FAMOUS NOVELS

A new concern has entered the motion picture field to make adaptations of novels by famous authors. It is the Viking Film Company, William Forsyth, president.

Detroit Man Promotes Concern for Direct Bookings

Mgr. Blankmeyer of the Grand Circus Theatre Organizes the Michigan Theatres Corporation for $5,000 to Get Features Straight from Makers

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, March 30.

WHAT its promoters claim will be the "biggest thing in the moving picture industry" is a new organization, styled the Michigan Theatres Corporation, just incorporated for $5,000, par value $10 per share, the sole object of which is to secure feature films direct from the makers instead of getting them through a distributing agency or film exchange.

The corporation consists of exhibitors who are in a position to show the highest class of motion picture films. There will be more than a dozen members located in Detroit, the balance being scattered all over Michigan. At present the organization has a membership of forty, but it is believed that this number will be easily increased to 100 inside of thirty days.

Each member will be privileged to purchase not more than five shares of stock, so that nobody will be in control, and everybody will be on an equal basis. The members feel that through co-operation along the plans outlined—dealing direct with the producer—they ought to be able to save money and get their feature films for less money than they are paying at the present time.

A. W. Blankmeyer, proprietor of the Grand Circus theatre, Detroit, is the man who originated the idea. He has been elected president and general manager of the organization, and temporarily all business will be transacted from his office at the theatre.

A. Arthur Caille is vice-president, and A. Warren, of Wyandotte, is secretary, while A. Stocker is treasurer. On the board of directors will be found such well-known men as August Kleist, of Pontiac, William Klatt, who operates a chain of about eight theatres in Detroit, and Henry J. Guthard, of the Maxine theatre, Detroit.

Mr. Blankmeyer says he hopes to see other exhibitors organize before long for the same purpose, that of dealing direct with the producer. He contends there should be three or four organizations or "circuits," as he terms them, to be represented by exhibitors who want only a special class of features, such as the classics, the sensational, &c.

If the scheme works out successfully, Mr. Blankmeyer will send organizers to Ohio, Indiana and other nearby states, to work up similar circuits there. He says the idea is not for one state, but is national in its scope, the one principle being to get the exhibitor and the producer on closer business relations, and to a great extent eliminate the "go between" or film exchanges.

The association has arranged with one of the Detroit banks for $10,000 credit, which places it in a position to pay cash for all film which it may buy.

Balboa Seeks to Prevent Walthall from Leaving

Company Asks Superior Court in Los Angeles to Restrain Actor from Appearing in Films of Any Other Studio—Majectic Wants Him in 3 Reelers

Los Angeles, March 29.

THE Balboa Amusement Producing Company has filed a petition in the Superior Court at Los Angeles asking for an injunction to prevent Henry Walthall from appearing in film productions other than made by the Balboa Company, and the case has been set for hearing on March 29 before Judge J. P. Wood.

The officers of the Balboa Company maintain that Mr. Walthall entered into a contract with them to remain in their service until January, 1916, at a salary of $250 per week for the first six months and $350 per week for the second six months. It is alleged that he left their employ on March 13 and has refused to return.

Mr. Walthall states that he never made a contract with the Balboa Company other than a contract to make a contract, and that the promises made to him have been violated in several instances.

He reported at the Majestic studio during the past week and has been assigned the principal part in "The Yankee from the West," an adaptation from the story of Opie Reade, to be filmed in three reels for Majestic release, from scenario prepared by Mary O'Connor.

Mr. Walthall has made a contract with the Majestic and Reliance companies and it is the intention of these companies to feature him in three, four and five reel subjects. The result of the suit is awaited with considerable interest.

Denver Men Organize to Protect Small Exhibitor

One of the Objects of the Organization Is the Use of Features by Small Houses Without Paying for Regular Service—Will Adjust License Tax

Denver, March 29.

AN organization of the neighborhood moving picture houses of Denver has been perfected, for the special purpose of protection and mutual benefits to the small exhibitors. About thirty-five houses have joined the organization, The Denver Motion Picture Exhibitors League. George A. Killam, of the New York theatre, located on Capitol Hill, was elected president; J. R. Claypool, of the Ozz theatre, was elected secretary and treasurer of the new league.

One of the prime objects of the organization is the use of features by the small houses without having to pay for regular service at the same time. The neighborhood exhibitor feels that his patrons as well as the downtown people are entitled to the best pictures obtainable.

Efforts of the organization have recently secured the passage of a new city ordinance adjusting the license tax according to the seating capacity.

PATHE'S NEW HOME A FINE ESTABLISHMENT

Offices of the Producing Company, Pathe Freres, and the Distributing Firm, the Pathe Exchange, Inc., at Twenty-five West Forty-Fifth Street, Are Models of Dignity, Beauty and Efficiency—The Only Film Firm in Their Building—Gasnier Now at the Helm

AT 25 West Forty-fifth street, New York City, less than a stone's throw from Fifth avenue and only about twice as far from Broadway, are the new and impressive offices of one of the oldest motion picture companies in America, probably the world's greatest firm—Pathé Frères.

Pathé Frères, which is the producing end of the business in this country, and the Pathé Exchange, Inc., the distributing end, occupy the whole eleventh floor of the big, new building. They are the only motion picture company in the building, and, by the terms of their lease, no other film company can get space in the building.

The Pathé floor has been arranged most carefully and artistically. The visitor's first stop is the projection room. This room, which carries about a thirty-foot throw, seats about forty spectators. It is the only private projection room in New York to have the seats rising in rows as they do in a theatre. At one side is a phone booth where the man who must needs utilize the phone can do so and still keep his eye on the picture. A ten-foot picture is shown, projected on a white plastered wall.

Four Machines in Operator's Room

In the rear of the projection room is the operator's room, large, spacious and airy with four machines and plenty of room for four operators and a large clothes closet. Two of the machines shoot into the big projection room. The other two project, in the opposite direction, two four-foot pictures on two screens. This is for screen examination of foreign and domestic subjects and all occasions when it is necessary to see as much film as possible in as short a time as possible. The color scheme of both the large and small projection rooms is a deep shade of red, which is expected to ease eyestrain.

In front of the projection rooms, on the west side, is the office of Mr. Ramirez-Torrez, the assistant managing director. Like all of the private offices, its furnishings give an atmosphere of dignity and solidity.

Across the front of the floor is the space allotted to bookkeepers, typists, stenographers and the many persons necessary to the detail work of a large organization. Just to give an idea of the work handled it is worthy of note that two men are kept busy all day opening correspondence. This space occupies at least half of the floor and gets sunshine over every inch.

Along the east side of the floor come the other executive offices. In front is the directors' room where the problems of the company and its policies are threshed out. Back of that is the office of P. A. Parsons, who occupies the chair of manager of advertising and publicity.

Others whose offices gird the eleventh floor are L. Wessel, auditor of the two concerns; J. K. Burger, comptroller of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., and R. T. Furman, director of exchanges.

The Pathé New York exchange is not at 25 West Forty-fifth street, but is at 115 East Twenty-third street, where Jule Burnstein sits as manager.

Louis Gasnier Now at the Helm

Back in the rear are the large offices of Charles Dupuis and Louis Gasnier. Mr. Gasnier is managing director of Pathé Frères and Mr. Dupuis is vice-president and technical director. Mr. Dupuis spends most of his time at the Pathé Freres studio in New Jersey and is responsible for the technical excellence of the pictures produced there. Mr. Gasnier only recently returned from Italy and is in active charge of the producing end in this country.

Most important of all, of course, is the office of Charles G. Pathé, head of the international firm of Pathé Frères and undoubtedly the largest factor in the motion picture industry of the world.

It is noticeable that the line of demarcation is sharply drawn between Pathé Frères, the producing company, and a branch of the international concern, and the Pathé Exchange, Inc., the American distributing company. The concerns have separate forces, offices, quarters, cashiers and are kept distinct at all times.

The New Pathé offices are impressive from many angles, most important of which are business efficiency and convenience. From them all the executive work of Pathé Frères in America and Pathé Exchange, Inc., is conducted and, as new quarters of an old firm, they are of considerable interest.

NEW COSTELLO-VAN DYKE COMBINATION

An important announcement by the Vitagraph Company that will be of interest to moving picture patrons is the lately rejoined Maurice Costello-Van Dyke Brooke combination, in which Mr. Costello will be seen in pictures directed by Mr. Brooke.

Mr. Costello is giving up directing that he may devote all his time to the interpretation of characters. It is two years since these two gentlemen worked together in such Vitagraph successes as "My Old Dutch," "The Adventures of a Retired Army Colonel," "A Romance of Wall Street" and "For the Honor of the Family."

RUTH STONEHOUSE GUEST OF IOWA THEATRE

Ruth Stonehouse spent two days at Fort Dodge, Ia., as the guest of the Magic theatre management. She appeared on the stage both at the afternoon and evening performances, where the Essanay drama, "The Wood Nymph," in which Miss Stonehouse stars, was displayed. She talked to the audience on her work in motion pictures. At a special matinee for children she gave a short talk and distributed photographs of herself. Miss Stonehouse also spent a day at South Bend, Ind., as the guest of the management of the Auditorium theatre.

TO ENLARGE AMERICAN PLANT IN CALIFORNIA

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, has closed a deal for the purchase of a plot of ground adjoining the present holdings of the American studios at Santa Barbara, California.

The property covers a quarter block to the north of the studio and will be improved at once to meet the growing demands for increased facilities. By the purchase of this property the American Film Manufacturing Company has become the largest individual taxpayer in the city of Santa Barbara.

KIRKWOOD TO BEGIN PLAY FEATURING HAZEL DAWN

James Kirkwood has returned from the Los Angeles to the New York studios of the Famous Players Film Company, where he will immediately begin direction of the next Famous Players subject, starring Hazel Dawn.

During his stay at the Coast studios of the Famous Players Mr. Kirkwood directed several Mary Pickford productions, the names and nature of which have not yet been announced.

Lottie Pickford Selected for "Diamond" Lead

Sister of "Little Mary" Will Play in the $20,000 Prize Photo Drama for the North American Film Corporation—Cummings to Take Opposite Role

LOTTIE PICKFORD, sister to "Lovely Mary," will play the lead in "The Diamond from the Sky," the $20,000 prize novel now being picturized at the "Flying A" studios for the North American Film Corporation.

Miss Pickford, the exact type wanted by the author, was selected after more than twenty-five of the best known women of the screen had been under consideration for the part. Working opposite Miss Pickford, in a dashing young heroic role, will be Irving Cummings.

To the part Mr. Cummings will bring an abundance of heroic masculinity and a wealth of real dramatic ability. He has a part that a matinee idol on the speaking stage ought to play for nothing—one of those swashbuckling lover's roles so needful to the best of melodramatic situations.

This, coupled with Miss Pickford's sympathetic appeal, makes a wonderful combination for the two leads, who will be given the strongest supporting cast thus far offered in a serial production.

Imagine Charlotte Burton and William Russell, for instance. They are recognized leads. Miss Burton is admittedly one of the best "heavies" on the screen, and to those who know and admire her work, the strength she will lend to the dramatic action will be readily apparent.

LOTTIE PICKFORD, LEADING WOMAN IN "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

Mr. Russell's giant physique is well known to motion picture fans. He is one of the biggest men physically working in pictures, and this bulk added to an unusual ability to interpret even the most subtle situations has made him a dominant factor in the many feature productions in which he has appeared for Famous Players, Lubin, Thanhouser and other big companies.

To Eugenie Forde has fallen a most remarkable characterization. She was engaged especially for this role, that of Hagar, a gypsy mother. Miss Forde, with George Periolat, acknowledged to be one of the greatest character actors on or off the screen, will lend a touch of character work of tremendous import to the story.

Mr. Periolat is an old Mutual favorite, although when engaged for the cast of "The Diamond from the Sky" was leading man to J. Warren Kerrigan. Lillian Buckingham in a role offering a peculiar setting to her talents, Orra Humphrey in a serio-comedy part, and W. J. Tedmarch in an eccentric role, complete the cast of principals which will carry "The Diamond from the Sky" to the country's motion picture fans.

Jacques Jaccard is the producing director in charge of the production. While this $20,000 prize photoplay will have many thrilling situations it will not be, as many of its predecessors have been, a mere collection of stunts.

It will present a story of genuine heart interest with the thrills so logically interwoven that they will give a legitimate emphasis to this stirring narrative of today. This picture will have its first release May 3.

"Stoning" Brings Forth Strong Praise from Censor

Mrs. Jeanie Noble Whaley, Impressed with Lesson Taught in Edison Three-Reel Feature, Sends Unsolicited Letter of Congratulation to Producers

THE Edison three-reel feature, "The Stoning," in which Viola Dana, lately the Broadway child star, is featured, is exciting much comment. The power of the message contained in a story of a village girl, lured to ultimate self-sought death, leaving nothing out of the reality of the drama from which it is drawn in actual life, promises to set a wider and freer standard for the screen in depicting the really gripping simplicity of everyday life.

The following unsought expression from Mrs. Jeanie Noble Whaley, of the National Board of Censorship, perhaps gives a sidelight—and a refreshing one—during the campaign against certain kinds of censorship which considers not the motive that actuates the presentation of scenes which might, ordinarily, be thought objectionable:

"Nearly a week has passed before I have had one moment to tell you how much and how deeply I felt and enjoyed the perfect picture from the Edison studio, 'The Stoning.' It surely will carry a lesson to hundreds of people—harsh fathers, thoughtless mothers, young, foolish, untaught girls—and more than that—show evil men and unjust people what havoc can be made by their acts—no human being could see that film without being deeply and lastingly impressed.

"The simplicity in telling the tragedy made its tremendous strength. The cast is in perfect harmony, each lived his part. I don't remember ever having seen a story visualized which touched me so deeply. My heart ached for the dear little girl, and swelled with indignation against the cruelty of her neighbors. Please congratulate Mr. Plimpton.

"It is the story he told me long ago he wished to put before the public—it is done and it is perfect. Murder can be committed without hand or weapon, as is plainly shown. No guilty conscience will escape if there be one in an audience. Believing the film will have a long successful run and a reissue, and with thanks to each one who helped make it, I am most sincerely."

VIOLA DANA

"The Stoning" is from the story by James Oppenheim with the scenario and production by Charles Brabin. Besides Miss Dana, who played the little girl, Robert Conness, Helen Strickland and Charles Sutton were in the cast.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—X

Edwin Thanhouser, Back at the Head of a Producing Corporation After Three Years' Absence from the Field, Finds Foolish Expenditure a Prime Weakness of the Business—"Every Dollar Spent Should Show on the Screen," Is His Motto—Spend All That's Necessary, But Only That

EDWIN THANHOUSER is a man well fitted to make a comprehensive survey of the motion picture business. In November, 1908, he started the Thanhouser Film Corporation in New Rochelle. April 6, 1912, he sold out to C. J. Hite and associates and promised to stay out of the film industry for three years. Then he started on a leisurely trip around the world, moving on only when fancy dictated. This was brought to an end sooner than he expected by the outbreak of the European war.

When Mr. Thanhouser returned to America he spent several months giving the motion picture business a thorough looking over through eyes experienced by years of practical work as the head of one of the pioneer firms. Eventually he returned to the company which bears his name as president and general manager, but "that is another story," as Kipling would say.

The point of the tale is that Mr. Thanhouser, who knows the motion picture business from camera to projection machine, spent a long time sizing things up. So his estimate of business conditions as they are today carries considerable weight and comes from a man who knows.

Folly of Careless Expenditure

"The greatest weakness of motion picture producing firms, in my opinion," said Mr. Thanhouser, "is careless expenditure. That is to say—they spend money without getting proper returns. Every dollar that is necessary to make a good picture should be spent on a production, but every dollar that is spent should show on the screen.

"American producers have been too busy trying to out-do each other in the matter of getting stage plays and theatrical stars without stopping to see if the stars or plays were fitted for motion picture work. I have heard, and I can well imagine that the reports are true, of a producer buying a Broadway play simply because it had been produced on Broadway and was obtainable cheaply. He turned it over to his scenario department for adaptation and about a week later found that it was utterly unsuitable for motion pictures.

"He hadn't paid much for the play, but what he had spent was a total loss and the loss would have been greater if he had tried to go ahead and put it out as a picture whether or no.

"Any producer who spends money without getting any return is spending it foolishly and that is just what is happening right along. Naturally the producer who spends money foolishly puts himself in a position where he must get out of a picture more than it should have cost him to produce it. It's hard enough as it is to get the legitimate cost of good pictures back without adding any foolish expenses.

"This matter of foolish expenses creeps in through other channels than trying to lift plays and players from the speaking stage without regard for their suitability. Improper expenses occur through lax studio management.

"For instance, I know of one concern which started to produce features. Studio space was hired and the costumes for some big scenes were rented by the day. Those costumes were hired and permitted to lie around the studio for two weeks before they were used and for several days after they were used. And they were paid for by the day. The result was that the company paid for three weeks' use of the costumes and only used them for three days.

Good Shows Cost Money—Make Money

"But not one word of this must be construed as a diatribe against proper expenditure. My past experience as a practical showman taught me that good shows get the money. To make good pictures the producer must spend money—lavishly at times. The only thing is that he should get results for what he spends and not spend it foolishly.

"I have always made that my policy—the sensible expenditure of money. It showed results from the start. When I entered the motion picture business in November, 1908, the independent producers were indeed few in number compared to what they are today. David Horsley was making Nestor pictures. My friend Carl Laemmle was making Imp pictures. Kessel and Baumann were making pictures. My first picture was entitled "The Actor's Children." At that time there were no settled releasing channels open to independent producers. So I made prints of the picture and sent them out, on approval, to the exchanges handling independent films.

"Most of the exchanges returned the prints, saying they had their supply of films for that week, but would be glad to see my next release. "St. Elmo" came next. Every exchange to which I sent a print of "St. Elmo" bought it and many of them also ordered a print of "The Actor's Children." From that time on the sailing was easier.

"It seems to me that trade conditions in the motion picture business have suffered through the entry of many persons and concerns hitherto unacquainted with the business. Many of them don't know how to make pictures and use very poor judgment in the matter of players, plays and expenditures. Then they inaugurate a price-cutting campaign in the distributing end and make things bad all around. They make a picture which costs them twice as much as it ought to and try to market it at about half what they ought to get. Then they wonder why they don't make money and why the other producers, whom they affect by their price-cutting activities, grumble.

Unstable Ones Must Go

"These men and the concerns which they have formed are buying experience and that we all are helping them pay for it. The trouble is that in many cases the cost of experience is greater than they can pay and so I think the unstable members of the new companies will be weeded out. That will leave the business on a more solid footing for those who remain."

Fully to appreciate the strength of Mr. Thanhouser's words a little commentary on the man and his methods by another well-known producer, who started about the time Mr. Thanhouser did, may not be amiss.

"Mr. Thanhouser was a real showman," said the other. "When he was making pictures he spent more money and used better judgment than any other producer. He was first to recognize the value of established titles for his productions. Every other release of his was a well known subject. He gave the people what they wanted. He gave them their "East Lynnes," their "St. Elmos." He gave them plays and novels in picture form before anybody else did and he wasn't afraid to spend money. This was the policy that enabled him to make enough money in three years so that he could afford to sell out and retire, a comparatively rich man. Now that he is back in the business I feel that he will make his presence felt as an important factor very shortly."

These words, coming from a man whom recognized Mr. Thanhouser's ability through the stern experience of competition, and later through business association with him, mean something.

Mr. Thanhouser, on his return to the business, assumes control of a plant which has grown considerably. Under his direction the Thanhouser Film Corporation is making a two-reel drama, a single reel Princess comedy and a two reel installment of "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery" a week and an extra single reel picture and an extra feature every five weeks.

BRADLET, ASSOCIATED WITH "NEWS," DEAD IN PHILADELPHIA

John M. Bradlet, for several months a member of the staff of MOTION PICTURE NEWS is dead. The end came suddenly at the Windson Hotel in Philadelphia.

Thus passes one of the "old guard" of the motion picture industry. Mr. Bradlet had spent the last fifteen years of his life working for the uplift and betterment of the business. As an exhibitor and as an editor he always worked, in a practical way, for the elevation of the art which meant so much to him and to which he gave his best years.

John M. Bradlet had a host of friends, real friends, in the business and, though a man who stuck to his ideals despite the cost, no enemies. He was known from coast to coast as a square, upright, conscientious and honorable man. He will long be remembered as a champion of the best in the motion picture industry, a fearless contender for the right at all times, with high ideals and honor and truth foremost and uppermost in all things.

Berst Completes Inspection of Three Selig Studios

Vice-President Satisfied with the Pacific Coast Organizations—Says That More Big Features Are to Be Made Than in the Past

J. A. BERST, vice-president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, has just completed his first official inspection of the three Selig studios on the Pacific coast.

As a result, Mr. Berst states that more features are to be made than in the past, and new stars are to be engaged.

"Not only will we put out even more pretentious features than in the past, but Selig strength in all releases will be made greater. We are after more quality and will attain it," he declared. "The remarkable facilities at hand at our coast studios are astonishing. I had no conception of the beauty and completeness of the Mission studio at Edendale or the locations, equipment and splendid acreage of the Selig Jungle-Zoo, which adjoins beautiful Eastlake Park.

"The Western studio at Glendale is also very complete. With such studios and a country round about which seems created for motion picture purposes, we certainly will be able to advance our products in every way."

No details of the plans of Mr. Selig and Mr. Berst for the immediate future were given, but indications are that the three Selig studios of the Pacific colony are going to become unusually busy places henceforward.

The Chicago studios of the Selig Company are also very active. In the past few months some elaborate pictureplays have been produced, among them being "A Texas Steer," "The Servant in the House," "Whom the Gods Would Destroy," "The Quarry," with the "Millionaire Baby" in course of screen production. Other than these great multiple reel features there are ready for release, "The Circular Staircase," "The Carpet from Bagdad," and "The Ne'er-Do-Well" is being carried to completion on the Pacific coast.

In order to accommodate the constantly increasing business of the Selig Company, an addition to the Chicago plant is being rushed to completion. This structure will accommodate the developing and printing department, et cetera.

The Chicago stock company has been added to and such versatile stars as Harry Mestayer, John Charles, Grace Darmond and others are assuming leading roles in Selig spectacular specials. Irene Wallace, Harold Howard and other well-known artists have been added to the Pacific coast stock companies.

The million dollar Jungle Zoo at Los Angeles will be formally opened in the near future. A special train of Pullmans to be called "The Selig Movie Special," will carry motion picture exhibitors, newspapermen and other friends of the Selig Company to the coast.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Company, expects to leave soon for Los Angeles, where he will personally superintend the final artistic touches to be put on this beautiful institution, which is said to house the finest privately owned collection of wild animals in the world. The zoo is a city landmark.

Colonel Selig put over another of his shrewd business moves when he engaged Mr. Berst and his assistant, Herbert C. Hoagland, to help guide the destinies of the Selig company. Mr. Selig needed rest and relaxation after years of arduous labor which has resulted in building up the Selig Polyscope Company to one of the most important and artistic enterprises in the world, and he secured the best men in Filmland to aid him in its future management.

New offices of the Selig company will be opened in the Garland building, Chicago, Ill., early in April. Particulars will be forthcoming later.

They will be commodious and convenient and much larger than the executive offices now occupied.

Four General Film Companies to Book Own Features

While Lubin, Vitagraph, Essanay and Selig Have Decided on This Arrangement They Will Continue to Release Program Pictures Through General

DEFINITE announcement comes from the Lubin Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, through Ira M. Lowry, general manager, that this company will release its big, special feature productions direct to exhibitors.

This announcement follows close upon the heels of a similar announcement by the Vitagraph Company of America and is seconded by a well supported rumor that the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company and the Selig Polyscope Company will follow suit. However, all these companies will continue to distribute their program pictures through the General Film Company as heretofore.

Officers on the seventh floor of the Mecca building, 1600 Broadway, at Forty-eighth street, New York City, have been leased by Vitagraph and Lubin and will be ready for occupancy in about four weeks. At the same time distributing offices will be opened in other large cities.

The Lubin Company has a number of important productions, in which distinguished stars are featured, ready for release as soon as distributing plans are arranged in detail.

Among these are "Eagle's Nest," by Edwin Arden, in which Arden and Romaine Fielding are featured; "The Sporting Duchess," Cecil Raleigh's comedy drama with Rose Coghlan and Ethel Clayton and supported by George Soule Spencer; "The Valley of Lost Hope," a spectacular drama by Shannon Fife in which Romaine Fielding is featured; "The District Attorney," Charles Klein and Harrison Grey Fiske's well known drama, with George Soule Spencer and Dorothy Bernard; "The College Widow," George Ade's sparkling comedy, featuring Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer; "The Evangelist," Sir Henry Arthur Jones's powerful drama in which Gladys Hanson is starred, supported by George Soule Spencer, and "The Climbers," by Clyde Fitch, in which Gladys Hanson will be featured and supported by an all star cast of Lubin players.

Among the other big features now in the making or shortly to be produced are "The Light Eternal," by M. V. Merle; "Mrs. Dane's Defense," by Henry Arthur Jones; "The Great Divide," by William Vaughn Moddy; "The Woman in the Case"; "The Truth"; "Captain Jinks," by Clyde Fitch, and a number of other famous plays.

Pathe "News" Scores Two Scoops on Live Events

Camera Men of the Company Get First Pictures of German Cruiser at Newport News and the Launching of the Battleship Pennsylvania

NEWPORT NEWS has been living up to its name lately, for several important news events have "broken" there which have enabled the Pathé News to score two scoops over its rivals.

No single event for some time has attracted the same amount of attention in the daily press as has the unexpected arrival at the Virginia port of the German cruiser Eitel Friedrich with 300 prisoners aboard, among whom were a number of Americans, the crew of the Americal vessel William P. Frye.

Almost before the newspapers had printed the story Pathé cameramen had clamberd aboard and were photographing everything in sight, including Capt. Kiehne of the ill-fated Frye. These pictures were shown on the Saturday of that week—two days ahead of the closest competitor.

Another scoop of the Pathe News was the launching of the greatest American battleship, the Pennsylvania. This took place at Newport News at noon on Tuesday, March 16, 500 miles from New York. Two Pathé cameramen whose positions had been carefully chosen days in advance, took the pictures.

Just as soon as the ceremony was over the camera men were speeding to New York where they arrived at one o'clock. They were met by a motor car and their negatives taken straight to the Pathé factory in Jersey City, where a staff of developers were waiting. By four o'clock in the morning the negatives were dry, and the processes of cutting, making titles and printing under way. To save valuable time the launching pictures were printed on Pathé non-inflammable stock so that they could be sent by mail as first class matter. The films were then rushed to the general post office in New York by special automobile, and there mailed to all Pathé exchanges throughout the country.

CAMERA HEAD OF VITAGRAPH BACK

Walter Arthur, the head of the Vitagraph camera department, has assumed his place at the studio after a long siege of illness.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

PERSONAL ATTENTION GETS RESULTS

ONE of the elite residence houses is the Washington under the proprietorship of A. H. Brown and the house management of Robert A. Babbitt, in Washington, D. C. With a capacity of 350, attractive exterior and interior decorations this house ranks among the first in the resident section to impose a ten-cent show and get the patronage.

Situated among the homes of the members of Congress, the Washington has a clientele of such families, many of whom are nightly visitors.

"It is personality that counts in the motion picture theatre business," commented Mr. Brown, "personal attention to your house, personal contact with your patrons, and an adherence to their personal wishes.

"Your truest critics and censors are your own spectators. Secure their confidences and make them realize that you are running your theatre for them and they will assist you more in conducting your own business than the manufacturer or the exchange or even yourself.

"In the spirit of good fellowship, they will give you many a valuable and timely hint for your improvement."

Mr. Brown has his week's program so scheduled with big features, double-reelers and single reels as to appeal to all desires, and even the wishes of the children. Refinement is the keynote in the selection of pictures.

YOUR PROGRAM CAN BE A MONEY MAKER

TOO little attention is paid by exhibitors to the program as a source of revenue. The sooner the majority realizes that it can be made a gold mine the more satisfactory will the program situation be. Many managers complain that programs have proved a fixed charge, eating heavily into their receipts.

This should not be the case. The program should and can be made a good source of income. Many managers have worked out this problem for themselves and found the right solution. The program is now a source of profit, and does not put figures on the wrong side of the ledger.

As an instance of this successful situation, the case of the Strand theatre, New York, stands out as a bright and shining light. The management of this, the largest and most important motion picture house in the country, is now issuing a fourteen-page program full of advertising from large firms in practically all lines of business.

An idea of the range of trade represented may be obtained from the following concerns: Storage warehouses, steam laundries, electro-medical institute, tailoring establishments, high class restaurants, jewelers, drygoods stores, musical instrument dealers, picture framing shops and camera stores. This by no means exhausts the list, but these few will give one an idea of the possibilities of the program.

In smaller centers, where the personal relations of the exhibitor and the merchants are closer, the chances of keeping a program filled with a large amount of diversified advertising should be greater.

There is an advantage in the maintenance of a program carrying considerable advertising which should not be lost sight of. The exhibitor can please his patrons by an appeal to their artistic sense. A program printed on a fine quality of paper and prepared with the purpose of giving an audience something considered good enough to keep as a souvenir is good business policy. Anything a person will take home acts as a constant reminder in favor of the theatre realizing the importance of this fact.

Make sure that you give your audience the best pictures, be sure to use the right kind of posters and other forms of effective advertising—but remember that in your program you have a medium which can also be made a strong business getter for yourself if it proves a business getter for the merchants in your vicinity.

LIVE WIRES IN OMAHA

MANAGER HARRY W. COWDUROY, of the Elite No. 2 motion picture theatre at Omaha, Neb., co-operated with the juvenile officers and charity workers one evening last week and entertained 500 boys from the social settlements of the city at a free show. He had secured films that would be specially interesting to the youngsters. He gained considerable favorable publicity and established himself firmly in the hearts of many future patrons.

Manager Adkins, of the Besse theatre in South Omaha, Neb., made a live-wire hit by showing the photoplay, "The Life of Our Savior," as a special Lenten attraction. He widely advertised it and gained considerable free publicity through the newspapers. Timely subjects such as that are a specialty of his, and he says they pay big returns.

MIDNIGHT MATINEE IS A SUCCESS

IN Missoula, Mont., they started a midnight matinee at the Empress theatre that created more discussion than anything that has happened in that city in many a day. Ray Bagley, manager of the Empress, is the one who is responsible for the innovation. When the directors of the Missoula Amusement Company, who control the Empress theatre, were told that there was to be such a thing as a midnight matinee, they thought that their manager had gotten softening of the brain.

He maintained that the reason people went home Saturday nights was because there was nothing else for them to do. They packed the Empress with the midnight matinee to see the World Film feature Lew Fields in "Old Dutch," and the midnight matinee on Saturday nights is bound to become a permanent feature.

WOMAN MANAGER SEES THINGS THAT ESCAPE THE MEN

MRS. H. C. GIVEN has assumed the management of the Regent, Washington, D. C., one of the pretty resident houses that is offering an excellent ten-cent program. A feature forms a part of the daily program supplemented with single reels, including a comedy.

Though working against odds, Mrs. Given is building up a house that is worthy of the best patronage. "Woman-like, I am very particular about the films for the Regent," remarked Mrs. Given. "More than this, I am very particular about the cleanliness, sanitation and conduct of my house. Details of comfort will always appeal to a woman manager, where a man might overlook them. The big points will demand attention themselves."

ANNUAL PASSES FOR GUESSING CONTEST

TEN annual passes to all of its houses were the prizes hung up by the Fichtenberg enterprises in New Orleans during the "Black Box" contest. During the run of the film a tiny black box was handed patrons, in which was one word.

At the end of the fifteenth week the theatre-goer is invited to patch the different words together and form the correct sentence. As many sentences can be formed from the fifteen words, only those with facsimiles of the sentence to be flashed on the screen of the Plaza Theatre at the end of the fifteen weeks will be awarded the prizes.

METRO PROGRAM FILLED UNTIL JULY

The Metro Pictures Corporation, distributing medium for manufacturers, among which are the Popular Plays and Players Company and B. A. Rolfe, now have under contract, option and advisement, sufficient screen material, original and adaptations, to fill the program until July.

The stars already under contract include Orrin Johnson, Adelaide Thurston, Thomas Jefferson, Jane Grey, Olive Wyndham, Helen Case, S. Miller Kent, Edmund Breese, Lionel Barrymore, the eminent star, William Faversham and Olga Petrova.

The first release of the Metro corporation occurred this week when Orrin Johnson in "Satan Sanderson," a B. A. Rolfe production, was given its initial showing in thirty different cities.

Next Monday The Popular Plays and Players Company releases "The Shadows of a Great City" with Adelaide Thurston and Thomas Jefferson, and the following Monday Olga Petrova in "The Heart of a Painted Woman" will be sent forth.

This constitutes a great variety of subjects and diversity of stars and themes and should more than please the exhibitors who keep calling for variety.

Colonial Comedies Are Now on Program of United

Company Enlarges Its Studio, Which Is Under the Guidance of T. Hayes Hunter—Uncle Dudley Series Scheduled for Immediate Release

NEGOTIATIONS which have been carried on for some time between the United Motion Picture Producers, who supply the program for the United Film Service, and the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation, have resulted in the signing of contracts which will place the Colonial comedies on the weekly program presented by the United.

The Colonial, which started its career as a producing company by screening an elaborate dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel "The Seats of the Mighty" as a large spectacular feature, has remodeled its spacious studio at 226 West Thirty-fifth street, New York, and engaged a stock company of well-known players for the purpose of staging high-class comedies.

T. Hayes Hunter, formerly of Majestic, Imp and Biograph fame, and also remembered as producer for Klaw & Erlanger, Cohan & Harris and other leading theatrical producers, is head producer for the Colonial, while Charles France, equally known in the field of motion picture directors, is in charge of the Colonial comedy players.

Several comedies to be known as the Uncle Dudley series have already been completed by the Colonial, and will be scheduled for immediate release on the United program under the brand name Cameo.

Harry Kelley, too well known to theatrical audiences to need any introduction, heads the Cameo comedians and is surrounded by a strong company, including Millicent Evans, Dan Mason, Eddie and May Abbey. The Author of the Uncle Dudley series is A. Van Buren Powell, who is also the head of the Colonial's scenario department.

By adding the Cameo comedies to their program the United Film Service has taken another important step toward making comedy an unusually strong feature of their output.

The Heinie and Louie comedies, featuring James Aubrey and Walter Kendig under the Starlight brand, the Superba comedies staged by Joseph A. Golden with Charles De Forrest in the leading roles, and the Luna comedies featuring Dot Farley, are all regularly released on the United at the present writing.

Selig Begins Releasing Athletic Series April 5

First Reel Shows Bicycler Egg, Billiard Championship Between Cutler and Japanese Player, and Wrestling Match Between Roller and Dalkus

THE Selig company has started a decided innovation in motion pictures with its athletic series, which will be released every Monday, starting with April 5. It is their aim to supply in each reel several interesting contests participated in by expert wrestlers, runners, bicycle riders, physical culture exponents, billiard players, et cetera.

The first release of this series proves the great entertainment possibilities that lie in athletic contests for motion pictures. The reel is divided into three parts

First—Oscar Egg, winner of the six-day bicycle race at Chicago, breaking the world's indoor record by riding a mile in 1.44. Egg is a Swiss, and has an international reputation as a bicycle rider. He rides upon rollers directly in front of the camera with dials to indicate both the distance traveled and the time in plain view.

Second—Championship billiard match between Koji Yomada, the Japanese billiard champion, and Albert Cutler, of Boston, the Yankee champion. These two players are conceded by experts to be among the greatest exponents of the game now before the public. Excellent photography brings out every shot.

Third — Heavyweight championship wrestling match to a finish, between Dr. B. F. Roller, of Seattle, and Frank Dalkus, the Lithuanian champion. Roller enjoys an international reputation, having won contests in practically every city in Europe, as well as in America.

Dalkus won the heavyweight championship of Finland, before his arrival in America, and since then has shown himself to be a capable wrestler who will improve with experience.

"The Eternal City," Famous Players, Opens Astor

Broadway Theatre to Be Given Over to Features Beginning April 12—Admission Prices Range from Twenty-five Cents to One Dollar

"THE ETERNAL CITY," the Famous Players Film Company's motion picture version of Hall Caine's novel, will open at the Astor Theatre, New York City, on Monday, April 12, when "Hello Broadway," the current attraction, concludes its run

"The Eternal City" is considered one of the most pretentious and artistic features ever made by an American producing company Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford took a company, which included Pauline Frederick, to Rome and to England for the exterior scenes and many of the interiors. The admission prices will be twenty-five and fifty cents with a few seats at a dollar.

The deal for the metropolitan opening was arranged through the Select Film Booking Agency, of which Al Litchman is general manager, with offices in the Times building. This company will handle "The Eternal City" and the more expensive and pretentious Famous Players productions before they are turned over to Paramount Pictures Corporation.

"The Eternal City" is now having a successful run at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, where it opened about six weeks ago.

STELLA HAMMERSTEIN WITH FOX

Stella Hammerstein, who will be recalled as having created the character of Vice in "Everywoman" and who more recently starred in vaudeville in a playlet which she wrote, produced and booked, "Getting the Goods," has joined the ranks of the Fox Film Corporation.

Miss Hammerstein is the first of that famous theatrical family to yield to the lure of the screen and it is understood that some stormy sessions with papa Oscar preceded her first plunge into the screen drama.

Miss Hammerstein appears in an important part in the Fox Film Corporation's production of "Anna Karenina," Count Leo Tolstoi's play, which will be released shortly.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, March 29.

DIRECTOR REGINALD BARKER last week played the role of a judge of a baby show in real life for a scene in "The Reward." Advertisements of "Fifty Babies Wanted" were carried in newspapers, and proud mothers flocked to the New York Motion Picture Company's studio and made life a real task for Mr. Barker for one day.

William S. Hart has just completed filming "The Darkening Trail," a four-reel subject for the Mutual Master Pictures program. Mr. Hart also plays the star part in this production, appearing as an Alaskan miner. The story is one of love, revenge and justice of the men of the Far North, showing there is no place for the unfaithful man, not even in the far corners of the world.

The filming of "Rumpellstiltskin," an adaptation in four parts from Grimm's Fairy Tales, which was taken up months ago by Raymond B. West at the New York studios and finished with the exception of several reels, is now being completed for release on the Mutual program

A story of the sea, "The Shoal Light," in two reels, was a Kay-Bee Domino or Broncho subject being made last week. The story pertains to the romance of a young sea captain who saves a girl from drowning and later is saved from shipwreck by the girl flashing signals from the lighthouse.

Walter Edwards, the Inceville actor-director, appeared in a dual role last week in a slum-life picture entitled "The Human Octopus." Mr. Edwards is supported by Howard Hickman, as the reporter, and Clara Williams as the daughter with whom the reporter is in love. All of the exterior scenes for this were made in the slums in and about the Chinatown district of Los Angeles.

Rhea Mitchell is being featured in a Western story, "The Operator at Big Sandy," she appearing as Nell Oakley, who is forced to leave home because her father insists that she shall marry to satisfy his gambling debt. The operator befriends the girl; she learns to use the key, and later is instrumental in protecting the man who befriended her.

Two Weeks' U City Celebration

It has taken fully two weeks for the Universalites to complete their celebration of moving to the new city, but now all companies are at work and there promises to be new records made in the matter of production, both as to quality and quantity.

The animal quarters of Universal City were almost deserted last week as a result of the "Under the Crescent" and "Black Box" series companies both going to near Oxnard, California, to make desert stuff. The two companies went in a special train and took with them all the horses and the six Universal camels. They both expect to remain on the desert about two weeks.

Joker company No. 1 went to San Diego last week, where they made a number of comedies in and about the exposition grounds.

The Rex Brand company is home from spending two weeks at Calabasas, where the two-reel subject, "The Prophet of the Hills," was filmed. In this Mark Robbins is featured.

George Collins, general manager of Groman Feature Films, Inc., which company is conducting Filmland on the Zone at the San Francisco Exposition, spent a portion of last week at Universal City. He reported to President Carl Laemmle that the average daily attendance at Filmland, where Universal pictures are shown exclusively, was about two thousand.

The first hot days of spring have caused several of the Universalites to be afflicted with the baseball fever and plans are now being made for the formation of a film league, each team to play at least one game a week. It is planned that there shall be eight teams, representing Los Angeles studios and those of the immediate vicinity.

Billy Riter, of the 101 Bison company, was selected captain of the U team and Lee Lawson, technical director of the city, was named as manager. Harry Hoff, late southpaw artist of the Oakland Pacific Coast League, will do the twirling for this team, and Lee Moran has been assigned the post of shortstop.

One of the features of the entertainment afforded the film exchange and exhibitor visitors at Universal City was the showing of the six-reel subject, "The Campbells Are Coming," which has just been completed. This carries a story of the Sepoy rebellion, and a number of big scenes are those depicting the Battle of Lucknow. The film men who crowded the Universal City theatre to see this picture were extremely complimentary and declared the battle scenes to be the most remarkable shown on a screen.

Show "Campbells Are Coming"

So well were the thousand men used that as they march away the line extends as far as the eye can see. Those viewing the picture believed the great armies now massed in Europe must have been used for these scenes.

The wonders of Universal City are to be shown to the world in an Al Christie Nestor comedy, entitled "A Day at Universal City," which not only shows the many improvements there but gives a very enlightening presentation of how motion pictures are made.

The subject begins with the arrival of the Nestor players, Director Christie, Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde. Christie first secures a script from the scenario department, calls on the general manager and consults the script for "Getting a Square Meal."

This decided upon, the director and company read it through, costumes are selected and the sets are ordered. While the stage hands are paving the way for the interiors, the players are making up. Then the real photoplay of the picture is filmed. The process of developing, printing, cutting and projecting is shown, and finally the film is turned over, a finished product.

In addition to this subject, the Nestor companies have completed "Two Hearts and the Ship," "Her Friend the Milkman," and "Eddie's Awful Predicament," all made under the direction of Eddie Lyons, and "His Nobs, the Duke," produced by Al E Christie.

U Animals in Bison Picture

The Henry McRae 101 Bison Company has been using the U animals for the past two weeks in the making of "The War of the Wild," being the story of the adventures of an American circus man, Rex D. Rosella, and his daughter, taken by Marie Walcamp, together with a trainer, Sherman Bainbridge, in Africa, where they meet an English hunter, taken by Wellington Playter.

Robert Z. Leonard has written and is now producing an unusual story dealing with hypnotism. Ella Hall plays the part of a girl under the influence of the hypnotist, a doctor, placed in charge of the physician by her father, who feared she was mentally unbalanced.

The doctor, finding her a very susceptible subject, desires to retain her, and by his power induces her to kill her father with a paperknife. The girl's sweetheart, an attorney, learns of this and with the aid of detectives and scientists is able to solve the mystery of the murder.

The Big U company is making "The Taming of Bess," a pastoral drama of one reel, in which Doris Pawn plays the name part.

This company has just finished the making of "The Sagebrush Girl," also of one reel, from scenario by Earl Hewitt. This is of a Western type and depicts life on the frontier. Mining scenes of the early days form an interesting part of this subject, and unusual luck in a gambling hall brings about a happy climax.

Jack Kerrigan is featured in a two-reel subject, "The Venial Sin," from a scenario by W. M. Caldwell, in which Kerrigan appears as an artist. The scenes depict life and conditions in the Latin quarter of Paris.

Strong Immigrant Play

"The Jew" is the title of a scenario by James Dayton being filmed for the Laemmle brand. It pictures the arrival of immigrants, their battle against odds in a strange land, and affords an excellent opportunity for characterization. The temptations that befall foreign girls in this country are shown and the unscrupulous acts of tradesmen depicted.

"Nabbed" is a two-part police story just completed by the Francis Ford-Grace Cunard company. This shows the battle of the new chief of police to enforce the redlight abatement act. In this sixteen members of the Metropolitan Squad of the Los Angeles Police Department took part, serving without pay; the only remuneration received was their lunches.

A one-reel comedy for Joker brand, "No Soup," featuring Ernest Shields, Jane Bernaude and Queenie Rosson, is being made this week. Roy McCray has been selected as director of this company to succeed Archer McMackin, who is now with the American Company at Santa Barbara.

The B. A. Rolfe players were aided last week in the filming of a fire that destroyed a shirtwaist factory, by thirty-five Los Angeles mounted police, two fire companies and one hundred and twenty-five other extra people, for scenes in the photoplay of the Harrison Gray Fiske drama, "The High Road," featuring Valli Valli.

Karger in Los Angeles

The Rolfe players, producing "Cora," took possession of the Republic theatre Thursday evening and there made a number of scenes, using the audience for "props."

Max Karger, general manager of the B. A. Rolfe Photoplay, Inc., arrived in Los Angeles last week for an extended stay with B. A. Rolfe. He brought the news that the third Rolfe company is now at work, a studio in New York having been leased and Edwin Middleton placed in charge of production of five-reel subjects featuring Olive Wyndham and Lionel Barrymore.

"F-F-F" is soon to be used as a trademark for Figman Feature Films, to be produced by the company of the same name now being formed by Max Figman, star of Lasky and Masterpiece productions. This company, according to Mr. Figman, will begin the production of plays in which he has appeared on the speaking stage and adaptations from well-known popular books, within the next few weeks.

J. A. Berst, general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, has been in Los Angeles for a stay of several weeks and may remain until after the opening of the Selig Jungle Zoo on April 21.

A Majestic company, headed by Jack Conway, playing the name role in the adaptation from the Richard Harding Davis story, "Captain Macklin," is spending several days at San Diego, where scenes depicting revolutions of Latin America are being filmed. This subject will be of four reels and is for release as a Mutual Master-picture.

Director William Christy Cabanne is now engaged in filming "The Absentee," a Majestic feature featuring Robert Edeson. This story called for some big scenes of the nature of strike riots, and Cabanne now tells the story that Edeson forgot that he was an actor in one scene and went in to clean up the bunch.

The script called for the leading actor to be beaten back by the mob, and consequently the scene had to be retaken. This subject is of a psychological nature and is in four parts; it has a prologue of an allegorical nature.

Edeson here appears as Power, the absentee, and this character is surrounded by Might, Evil, Ambition, Contentment, Innocence, Justice, Happiness, Age, Vanity and Foil. The story was written by Frank E. Woods and Mr. Cabanne.

Jefferson in "Fencing Master"

Thomas Jefferson is now being featured in the name part of the two-reel Majestic subject, "The Fencing Master." The locale of the story is in Paris, which made necessary the building of a number of very expensive sets. An exceptionally strong cast has been selected for this subject.

"Sheriff" Arthur Mackley is producing for the Reliance release a two-reel photoplay, "God is Love." This is the story of a young wife who neglects her home for society, which brings about a separation in the family. The child of the couple being lost adds misery to both, and her recovery, brought about by a series of coincidents, marks a happy climax when the couple are reunited.

A two-reel Reliance railroad melodrama, "Station Content" has a very realistic scene as a result of a number of cars being purchased and blow to pieces by dynamite.

Charles Clary is being featured as Lord Strathmore, a powerful and wealthy man with few friends, in "Strathmore; or, Wrought by His Own Hand," adapted from the English novel by the same name. The subject is being filmed in three reels as a Majestic release, from scenario prepared by Chester Withey. Mr. Clary is supported by Francelia Billington, Irene Hunt and Wilbur Higby.

"The Light in the Window" is a one-reel Reliance photoplay dealing with country life and hinges about a wealthy father failing to supply his son with spending money and clothes, and brings out the desire of youths for pleasures their acquaintainces may enjoy.

"The Highbinders," a drama of San Francisco's Chinatown before the fire, has just been completed in two parts at the Majestic-Reliance studio. The main theme of this deals with the intermarriage between members of the Caucasian and Mongolian races. In this Billie West appears, first as a beautiful young daughter and later as an old hag. Signa Auen is the daughter of a Chinese merchant, and Walter Long a brutal Irish saloonkeeper. A number of local Chinese will play in the subject.

Director R. A. Walsh is filming "A Man for All That" for Majestic release. The theme of this deals with a released convict who refrains from wedding the woman he comes to love because he fears he will stain her name. Later, by a chain of circumstances, his name is cleared and he weds the girl.

Spring tales are rife at the Keystone studio. Syd Chaplin and Charlie Avery are home from spending two weeks at Catalina, where they made two one-reel subjects, with a story that they broke the season's record for total weight of fish caught in one day.

Chester Conklin, formerly a circus clown, has to watch his step every time he hears a band play.

New Faces at Keystone Studios

Among the new faces to be seen at the Keystone are: Polly Moran, English comedienne, who united with the Mack Sennett forces following a tour over the Orpheum circuit; Harry Brooks, a vaudevillian who closed his work on the Orpheum circuit here, is also doing it before the camera.

"The Trials of an Auto Shopper" may be expected in Keystone films soon, for Hampton Del Ruth, scenario director, has been pestered for the past two weeks through the mails, over the phones and personally, all because he strolled into a local auto agency and told the man he considered buying a car.

The members of the Kriterion Producing Company at Santa Barbara Monday celebrated the first release of the Kriterion program in California by a dance on the stage of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company plant. On this day subjects on this program were first shown in Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Long Beach, Pasadena, Oak Park and other cities. The film people at Santa Barbara attended the production at the Argus theatre in a body and then went to the studio where the dance began.

Maybelle Heikes Justice, the Long Island builder of scenarios, while paying a visit to the West Coast expositions, is spending several days of this week at the Selig Jungle Zoo, where the first of the series of one-reel comedies, "Chronicles of Bloom Center," prepared by Miss Justice and William Lord Wright, is being filmed.

The cast for this series will appear in all numbers and includes William Hutchinson as Constable Plum, John Lancaster as Ezra Pash, Ralph McComas as Jenny West, the reporter, Irene Wallace as Margaret Tate, Martha Mattox as Selina Tubbs, Lyllian Brown Leighton as Mrs. Plum, and Lee Morris as Phil Pickle.

New War Armament in Drama

While the company producing "The Hideous God, War," a three-reel subject, with W. H. Stowell, C. C. Holland and Lyllian Brown Leighton, were waiting for sets to be made, work was taken up on filming a one-reel subject by W. C. Clifton, entitled "A Soldier of Fortune."

This is a romantic melodrama written about two imaginary principalities, the kingdom of Etruria and the empire of Basmark. Some recently invented instruments of war will be introduced in this subject. This company will next take up the filming of "The White Witch," in which Bessie Eyton will be featured.

The fourth Selig company is preparing the filming of a one-reel animal picture, "The Hand of Mahawee." William Stowell will appear as Mahawee, an Indian bandit. Exteriors will represent India jungle scenes.

A farewell dinner was given James Kirkwood Monday evening, by Mary Pickford and Al Kaufman, manager of the Famous Players studio, at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The guest of honor was introduced as a parasite from the Irish bog by W. E. Wing, who served as toastmaster, and during the dinner the waiter made numerous mistakes.

The cocktails proved to be worthless; fruit was served Kirkwood before it was cut and he was not supplied with tools; the oysters were all closed and in this instance in the whole shell. The dinner course consisted of corned beef and cabbage. Altogether, it was not a real sumptuous meal.

Among the guests were Allen Dwan, Gertrude Robinson, Owen Moore, Donald Crisp, Dorothy Gish and others. Since coming to the West Coast Mr. Kirkwood has completed two Mary Pickford subjects. Neither title has been announced.

Allen Dwan is now filming "Mayblossom," from the Belasco speaking stage success, with Gertrude Robinson, Donald Crisp and Marshal Neiland in the leading parts. This subject will in all probabliity be finished within the next two weeks, and the Famous Players company expect to return East within the next five weeks. They will return to Los Angeles in the fall and make this a permanent producing place.

American Company Completes 4 Reels

A special feature company of the American studio at Santa Barbara spent several days in Los Angeles last week making scenes for a four-reel subject now nearing completion. Harry Pollard is in charge of the direction of this subject, which features Marguerita Fisher and Joseph Singleton.

Jacques Jaccard, who recently joined the American forces, is now progressing with the production of the thirty-episode serial, "The Diamond from the Sky." The first episode, consisting of three reels, has been completed and by the end of the week the second episode of two reels will be on the way to New York.

May Allison, late of the Lasky stock company, has been engaged as leading woman for this company, and the male leads are played by William Russell and Irving Cummings. The camera work is in charge of George Hill, late of Bosworth, who filmed the vision scenes for "Hypocrites."

An out of the ordinary single-reel subject is being made at the Majestic studio entitled "A Story of a Story." The scenario is by Russell E. Smith, and the picture will show the dream of an author after completing a book which was true to life but one he feared to put on the market because of its character. The dream causes the author to burn the story. Eugene Pallette appears as the author and Miriam Cooper as the daughter.

Nick Cogley is a new director at the Reliance studio, his initial effort being "Rose Leaves," a single-reel subject written by J. A. Saxon. Virginia Kirtley, recently of American Beauty brand, Lucile Young and Ray Myers appear in the cast. One of the beautiful California rose groves serves as exterior scenes. Mr. Cogley has been with the Keystone company for the past three years.

Number 21 of the "Bill, the Office Boy" series, entitled "Ethel's New Dress," was made last week. In this the absence of the very conspicuous gown of the past twenty subjects of this series is very noticeable, as Ethel of the film discards the stripes when she is invited to a reception for a countess; but the countess fails to put in an appearance and Ethel plays the part of her ladyship.

"The Come-Back," an adaptation from a story of the same name in a recent issue of a popular magazine, is being filmed for Majestic two-reel release by R. A. Walsh and players. In the cast are Billie West and Ralph Lewis.

"HYPOCRITES" BREAKS RECORDS IN CRESCENT CITY

New Orleans, March 28.

"Hypocrites," the Bosworth feature attraction at Pearce's Tudor Theatre last week, met with the approbation of men and women in New Orleans. All previous records for attendance in one week at the Canal street showhouse were broken.

J. E. Pearce, general manager of the Pearce interests, said Tuesday, that never before in the history of motion pictures in the Crescent City has a picture met with greater popularity than has the screen production of Lois Weber's most famous story. Efforts were made by the Pearce management to secure the several reels for a longer stay, but this was found impossible, owing to the great demand all over the United States for the Bosworth feature.

JACK TUCKER JOINS LUBIN AS A STAR COMEDIAN

Jack Tucker, comedian, writer and artist and a member of the famous vaudeville team of Williams and Tucker, has joined the Lubin players and has gone to the Lubin Southern studio at Jacksonville, Fla., where he will be featured in a number of his own comedies.

Tucker will long be remembered as the creator of the slang classics "Skinney's Finish" and "Driftwood," two playlets that were enormously popular in vaudeville.

SANGER AND JORDAN GET RIGHTS TO 400 SUCCESSES

Sanger and Jordan on behalf of the Authors Film Company announce that they have closed a deal through their foreign connections, whereby they have advanced about $35,000 for the foreign rights to over four hundred well-known successes, the American and Canadian rights to which they already control.

Popular Favorites Join Kriterion Studios on Coast

Elsie Cort Working with Director Davis—Joe Massey, Known for Eighteen Years on the "Legitimate" Stage, and Veronica Larkin Also with Forces

ELSIE CORT, now with Director J. Davis at the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, releasing on the Kriterion program, is one of the cleverest screen stars in the business.

Before joining A. M. Kennedy's forces, Miss Cort played the lead opposite to Jack Kerrigan in "Smouldering Fires." Her work has received favorable comment and Mr. Kennedy lost no time in adding her to the Kriterion releases. Miss Cort is an athletic girl and rides, rows and holds the record for the Ladies' Handball Championship of the Southland.

Joe Massey, for eighteen years an actor on the legitimate stage, is now working with the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company under the direction of William Robert (Bob) Daly in the support of Fritizi Brunette and Edward Alexander.

As a juvenile actor, Mr. Massey has no equal. His long and varied experience with Murray and Mack, the Cook-Church stock company and the Baldwin-Melville stock places him in the front rank as a juvenile, and his work with the Santa Barbara Company will be another strong link in the chain that holds the Kriterion program.

Another popular film favorite has joined the ranks of the companies releasing for the Kriterion program. The latest acquisition is Veronica Larkin, who recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York. Miss Larkin, during the last three years, has been appearing with Lubin and with the Imp, playing with King Baggot and appearing in most important roles.

Her home is in Philadelphia, where she has played with the Orpheum stock company, prior to her joining the ranks as a screen actress. Miss Larkin will be seen shortly in dramas to be produced at Santa Barbara for the Kriterion program under the direction of A. M. Kennedy, who is enthusiastic over Miss Larkin's work.

N. Y. Motion Signs Farnum, Warner and Woodruff

Contracts with Three Actors Completed the Same Day—Players Will Appear in Elaborate Multiples Under Ince Direction

Los Angeles, March 29.

THOMAS H. INCE, in charge of production of the New York Motion Picture Corporation studios, has made contracts with Dustin Farnum, H. B. Warner and Henry Woodruff to appear in elaborate multiple reel subjects to be made for the Mutual Master-Pictures.

All three contracts were consummated in one day, and after it was all said and done, the producer of the motion picture village by the sea considered it the biggest day's work he had ever accomplished. The directors who assist Mr. Ince in his production are all up stage, to use the studio vernacular, at the prospect of directing these eminent men of the profession.

This is merely carrying out the plan adopted several months ago by Mr. Ince to engage prominent stars. The first was William S. Hart, then George Beban, and later Bessi Barriscale, who was co-star with Edward Connelly in "The Devil."

Others now at the studio are Louis J. Cody, Rhea Mitchell and Arthur Maud. The titles for coming productions which Messrs. Farnum, Warner and Woodruff will appear in have not as yet been announced.

Producer Ince is now engaged in cutting "The Sign of the Rose," and so far has succeeded in reducing it from 40,000 feet to 16,000. This production, which is to be a combination of the silent and spoken drama, will not have its premier showing until April 5, at Clune's Auditorium.

The picture and players presenting the thirty minutes closing scene were originally engaged for March 15, but the run of "The Birth of a Nation" has been so much greater than the anticipations of the managers that it was necessary to prolong the first engagement.

The Griffith marvel will complete its eighth week at Clune's 3,000 seat house on Saturday evening, April 3. Up until the first of this week seats were sold out for one week in advance.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

HOLDERMAN IN CHARGE OF UNITED EXCHANGE IN NEW YORK

GENERAL MANAGER J. C. GRAHAM of the United Film Service has secured the services of W. F. Holderman, who has just taken up his duties as manager of the New York distributing office of the United program.

Fred Holderman is a pioneer of the film business, having been identified with different exchanges in Manhattan since the early days of motion picture history.

For several years he was connected with the Twenty-third street branch of the General Film Company, dating back to the Actography Company, of Seventeenth street, which was finally absorbed by the General. Mr. Holderman was transferred to Twenty-third street as a necessary part of the Actograph equipment and has been active in film circles from that address ever since.

His friends in the world of filmdom are legion and are vying with each other to wish him well in his new managerial capacity.

Jacques Spiegel, former manager of the United's New York exchange, is perfecting plans to establish an exchange business of his own, about which he will have an interesting announcement to make in the near future.

DUSTIN TO MANAGE PICTURE PLAYHOUSE IN ST. LOUIS

E. W. DUSTIN has resigned as manager of the Eclectic Film Exchange, which he opened at 3210 Locust street, St. Louis, a year ago, and has accepted the management of the Picture Playhouse Corporation's offices at 3431 Olive street.

Mr. Dustin is well known to the motion picture trade throughout the country, and for many years has been identified with amusement enterprises, and in theatrical circles generally. He is one of the few exchange managers who is familiar with all phases of the film business.

He has produced, directed and promoted motion picture enterprises of all kinds, and as an exhibitor was first to open a large theatre to an exclusive picture program. Dr. Dustin made a net profit of $55,000 in eighteen months for the owners of the Hopkins theatre in Louisville, Ky., with an all picture program.

AMONG QUAKER CITY EXCHANGES

THE Tri-State Star Feature Company, formerly in the Forrest building at Fourth and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, has removed its offices to 229 North Twelfth street, quite near to the recognized film district. W. R. Binns is president, and S. C. Simpson manager of the Tri-State.

J. W. Pierce, formerly manager of the Continental Feature Film Corporation, has accepted a position with the Famous Players Exchange and will represent the latter throughout the State.

Henry Bryan, who has recently become manager of the Metropolitan Booking Office at 1316 Vine street, has fitted up his place in fine style. He says business on the extra special "features" handled by his exchange such as "Cabiria," "The Jungle," etc., is eminently satisfactory. The Metropolitan is the Philadelphia branch of the New York All Star Film Rental Company. Mr. Bryan has just made arrangements with Catherine F. Carter to give in the near future a private screening of her high class educational and scientific subjects.

GALLAGHER OPENS OFFICE IN DETROIT

JOHN C. GALLAGHER, of Minneapolis, has opened a branch in Detroit of the Mid-West Feature Film Company, which he controls. The Detroit office is in charge of I. Schlank. It is located in the Goebel Building.

The Fox Film Corporation, of New York City, announces that it has opened Detroit offices at 407-408 Henry Smith Building to handle its Michigan business. A complete stock of film will be carried.

The office is under the management of Mayer B. Schlesinger, who has been associated in an important position with the Mark-Brock Amusement Company, of New York. He was also at one time manager of the Academy theatre in Buffalo. Mr. Schlesinger has been in the moving picture business for the past sixteen years.

The Standard Film Service Company has opened a Detroit branch at 411-412 Henry Smith Building, in charge of Bert Diener, who is well known in Michigan, having been connected at different times with the Mutual, General and Universal film exchanges.

He has the reputation of being the first man to specialize in the booking of moving pictures in this state. Recently he has been handling the business affairs of the United Feature Film Company in Toledo.

ELLIOT FINDS UNUSUAL DEMAND FOR FOX FILMS

P. B. ELLIOT, traveling representative for the Fox Film Corporation, was forced to return to Milwaukee on account of the unusual demand for the Fox attractions.

Mr. Elliott reports conditions most promising in that section of the country.

FABACHER SAYS COUNTRY TOWNS WANT FEATURES

P. H. TAYLOR, the Fullerton, La., exhibitor, in New Orleans recently arranged for the United Program Film Company's weekly service for his theatres.

Big features and comedies are what the live wire country exhibitor wants, according to Joseph Fabacher, special representative of the United Program Film Service Company of Louisiana.

Mr. Fabacher has just turned in a gratifying bunch of country contracts. In an interview, Mr. Fabacher stated that exhibitors in the small Louisiana towns are crying for big features, and more of them, and they are willing, too, to pay good prices to get them.

MUTUAL FEATURE DEPARTMENT IS OPENED IN ST. LOUIS

FRED A. KELLER, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation at Thirteenth and Pine streets, St. Louis, announces the opening of a special feature department, which will handle the big feature productions of studios making up the Mutual group of producers.

"The Quest," an American production, released March 22, was the first to be handled under the new plan. Others following were "The Lost House," a Majestic; "The Outcast," a Reliance, and "The Devil," by the New York Motion Picture Company.

NEW MUTUAL EXCHANGE IN PITTSBURGH

EXHIBITORS in the Pittsburgh territory will learn with pleasure that on April 1, 1915, the Mutual Film Corporation opened a branch exchange at 420 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. The exchange is under the management of Sydney E. Abel. It will handle Mutual releases exclusively, beginning with the issues of April first and thereafter.

The Mutual Film Corporation invites the patronage of all exhibitors and pledges them and their interests the same loyal care and attention in this territory that exhibitors have been accustomed to receive throughout the country.

2 FOX MEN SHOWN SOUTHERN CITY BY EXHIBITORS

S. T. STEPHENS, New Orleans manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Maurice F. Barr, traveling representative for the World Film Corporation out of the Crescent City, were recent visitors in Montgomery, Ala., and were shown over the city by progressive exhibitors of Montgomery. The visitors were pleased with their reception.

STEVENS OPENS QUARTERS FOR FOX IN NEW ORLEANS

ARRANGEMENTS have just been completed by the Pearce interests of New Orleans, with S. T. Stephens, Crescent City manager of the Fox Film Corporation, whereby the Pearce syndicate theatres in New Orleans will present all the Fox features, including "The Celebrated Scandal," followed by William Farnum in "The Nigger," and other extraordinary photoplays.

Mr. Stephens has opened up permanent headquarters for the Fox company in the Weis building.

DRUM SUCCEEDS IRVINE IN WASHINGTON

BEN E. DRUM has succeeded W. H. Irvine as manager of the Washington, D. C., exchange of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Drum comes at present from the Denver office of this same corporation. He has had half a dozen years' experience in the film business, as an exchangeman, roadman and an exhibitor.

He has also seen much activities in the newspaper field and is therefore well equipped for the responsibilities of the Washington office of the World Film Corporation.

MEETING OF WESTERN PARAMOUNT EXCHANGE MEN

M. L. LEWIS, manager of the Progressive Film Exchange, of Los Angeles, has just returned from San Francisco, where he attended a meeting of managers of exchanges in the West which market Paramount pictures.

This was a get-together which lasted one week. Those present were: J. R. Cummock, of the Seattle Exchange; Lon Marcus, of the Notable Film Company, Salt Lake City, and Herman Wobbur, manager of the San Francisco Exchange.

CHANGES IN SAN FRANCISCO

THE new manager for the United Film Service at San Francisco, J. L. Warner, for some time manager of the San Francisco office of the United Film Service, is now devoting his entire attention to the recently organized Standard Film Company, and his former position is being filled by George J. Ekre.

Mr. Ekre arrived there a short time ago from New York and at once took up his new duties.

SIMMONDS VISITS APEX IN NEW ORLEANS

JOSEPH SIMMONDS, of the Apex feature service New York offices, was in New Orleans recently for a three-day visit to his brother, Meyer Simmonds, manager of the New Orleans offices of Apex.

WAGNER TAKES WERNER'S PLACE IN ST. LOUIS

G. WAGNER, secretary of the Swanson-Crawford Film Exchange at 14 North Ninth street, St. Louis, has assumed management of the exchange since Sam Werner has been in charge of the United Program's offices at 3628 Olive street.

First Terris Feature Nears Completion in Jamaica

Title Withheld for the Present, But Indications of a Good Film Are There—Lionel Pape, Rienzi De Cordova and Others in Company

THE date of the first release by the Tom Terris Feature Film Company, recently formed, is soon to be announced. Members of the company to the number of twenty-five, headed by Mr. Terriss, have been in Jamaica, West Indies, for the past three or four weeks busily engaged in the making of the organization's initial photoplay.

Advices received in New York from time to time are to the effect that the picture is "shaping up" in splendid fashion and will soon be ready for the market. The title has not yet been announced, following a policy which Mr. Terriss believes to be a good one. But it may be said that the picture will be an adaptation from one of the big dramatic successes of established worth for which the well known Dickensian impersonator holds the rights.

Among the people mentioned as supporting members in the Terriss company, who have already established themselves as favorites, are: Mildred Deverez, Ethel Mitchell, Reinzi De Cordova, Lionel Pape, Rodney Hickok and Charles Mather.

KRITERION EXCHANGE OPENS IN FRISCO

DAVE BERSHON, who for several years was connected with the Universal California Exchanges, and, until the first of January manager of the Los Angeles branch, has been appointed manager of the San Francisco office of the Kriterion Service, and is now in charge of opening the exchange.

The plans for all branches are along the lines of the Los Angeles exchange, which has many distinct features and is a model in completeness. The desks of the booking clerks and salesmen occupy a portion of the front part of the room, enclosed by brass railings.

Back of this is a private office for Assistant Manager Arthur Bard and General Manager Cole. Immediately back of the private office is the shipping department, then the poster department and inspection room.

At the extreme rear is a projection room with a seating capacity of twenty-five, fitted with a Simplex machine in a fireproof booth. A vault for the storage of all films, and having a capacity of 2,500 reels, is being built in the rear of the building occupied by the exchange.

A decided feature is the manner of displaying paper. Permanent frames have been placed along the open wall extending the full length of the room.

In these will be shown all the different one, three and six sheets made.

The furniture throughout is of mahogany, and every effort has been made to give the visitors comfort and conveniences coupled with efficient service.

Through an error last week, Messrs. Cole, Bershon and Bard were represented as being with the Universal.

HYBAR EXCHANGE GOES OUT OF BUSINESS

THE Hybar Film Corporation, which had offices for several weeks in the Weis building, New Orleans, under the managership of Louis Dolhonde, recently retired from that field.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Captive" Is Second Blanche Sweet Lasky Film

"THE Captive" is the name of the second production in which Blanche Sweet is to be seen under the management of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

BLANCHE SWEET IN "THE CAPTIVE" (Lasky)

It will be remembered that her first appearance under this management was in the successful Lasky-Belasco picturization of "The Warrens of Virginia."

As was the case in that instance, her leading man is House Peters and the production has been made under the personal direction of Cecil B. De Mille, director general for the Lasky company. The release date is announced as April 22.

In addition to Miss Sweet and Mr. Peters, the cast of "The Captive" includes Theodore Roberts, Jeanie MacPherson, Gerald Ward, Page Peters and Billy Elmer.

The scenes are many and elaborate, ranging from the interiors of a resplendent Turkish castle to the hut of a peasant, and the battle episodes are produced with much attention to detail and supreme realism.

"The Captive" is based on the play of the same name by Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie MacPherson.

SCENE FROM "HOUSE OF SECRETS" (Road o' Strife No. 1—Lubin, April 5)

FIRST INSTALMENT OF "STRIFE" HAS STRONG SCENE

The first installment of the "Road o' Strife" bids fair for a very interesting and dramatic series. The story is evidently woven around the early experiences of Alene, a girl who has been brought up in a very mysterious manner by an old recluse, who has never permitted her to see anything of the world, outside of the dingy old house in which they live.

Arriving at maturity she unconsciously feels a longing to escape from the dominion of her guardian and the mystery of her surroundings. In an unguarded moment she wanders forth and meets Robert Dane, a worthy man, that opens up to her simple mind a new existence. To him, however, she appears to be demented, and he takes the girl back to her home.

There she encounters a gruesome sight—her guardian lies upon the floor covered with blood. She sees no assassin, but grasping the portieres from the outside she sees a hand on which is a strangely designed ring. She flees back in horror to Robert Dane, who with her investigates, but finds that the body has been removed and no signs of the perpetrator of the crime.

The cast of this first episode includes Crane Wilbur and Mary Charleson. The story is written by Emmett Campbell Hall.

WHITESIDE IN "THE MELTING POT"

Walker Whiteside, the Broadway star, has but recently been lured away from the footlights to play the leading role in "The Melting Pot," a new special feature, which is being produced at the Centaur Film Company, Bayonne, New Jersey, by the J. Cort Film Company.

"The Melting Pot" met with great success some years ago at the Comedy theatre, New York City, where it played for one season.

"CLEMENCEAU CASE" READY FOR RELEASE

"The Clemenceau Case" has just been completed by Herbert Brenon, for the Fox Film Corporation. The picture, based pretty faithfully upon Alexander Duma's novel, contains several exceedingly novel effects and scenes, the nature of which has been closely guarded. While Mr. Brenon was making it at the William Fox studios nobody, except those actively engaged in the picture, was allowed across the firing line. Theda Bara, who startled the country with her Vampire Woman in "A Fool There Was" and repeated the performance in "Kreutzer Sonata," is the bright particular star of "The Clemenceau Case," and is said to have been cast in a part even more suited to her exotic talents than either of the roles named.

A big python from the Bronx Zoo was used in the production and figures as Iza's (Miss Bara's) pet. Supporting the pantherlike French actress are William E. Shay and Stuart Holes, well known actors.

CONNOR NOVELS IN UNIVERSAL PICTURES

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has bought the film production rights to Ralph Connor's novels, "Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail" and "Corporal Cameron." This is the first time any of the famous author's books have been produced in moving pictures.

J. Clarence Harvey, novelist, poet, dramatist, actor and scholar, has started on an important mission to the Far East for the Universal. He bears credentials from Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal.

VIOLA ALLEN TO BE SEEN IN ESSANAY PICTURE

Viola Allen, the famous actress, after years of success on the legitimate stage, playing leading classical, Shakespearian and comedy roles, has decided to make her debut in photoplays.

She has been engaged by Essanay at an enormous salary and soon will start the production of "The White Sister," the novel by F. Marion Crawford. The dramatization of the novel will be filmed by Essanay at the Chicago studios.

Viola Allen is declared by photoplay experts to be an excellent photographic subject, and with her beauty and genius in acting, there is no question but that she will make a phenomenal success in photoplay work. "The White Sister" will be one of Essanay's great multiple reel special features and bids fair to surpass any drama yet screened.

Miss Allen needs no introduction to the public, having had a long and successful stage career. She made her debut in Boston in "Esmeralda" at the age of 15. She played leading roles with Joseph Jefferson, Lawrence Barrett, Tommaso Salvini and William J. Florence. She starred in Hall Caine's "The Christian" and "The Eternal City," Later she took up Shakespearian plays, reviving the old English classics.

"ILL STARRED BABBIE" SECOND BALBOA—ALLIANCE FILM

"Ill Starred Babbie," with Jackie Saunders in the title role, will be the second Balboa release on the Alliance program.

The film is an adaptation of Will H. Whalen's novel of the same name, which has been one of the best sellers during the past few years and has gone through repeated editions.

The scenes are laid in the rugged coal regions of the Alleghenies, and tells the story of Babbie, a coal miner's daughter, who was born under an unlucky star. In his novel the author added an intensely human creation in the character of Babbie, to present day literature, and none of the charm and vivacity of the original has been lost in Miss Saunders' screen interpretation.

Work on the last reel is nearing completion, and in the course of next week the negative will be sent East.

SECOND SELIG ATHLETIC RELEASE READY APRIL 12

The second release of the Selig Athletic series will be made Monday, April 12. Willie Ritchie, the light weight boxing champion, will be shown in training and physical culture exercises.

LeVilla, the trick bicycle rider, will be presented in feats of skill. William Demetral, the Greek wrestler, will meet William Borve, the Russian giant, in a match to a finish. The second release is even more interesting and instructive, if that were possible, than the first.

The training demonstrations given by Willie Ritchie.

VIOLET MACMILLAN IN INCE PLAY

Violet MacMillan is seen in a fine characterization in "The Artist's Model," a forthcoming release of the New York Motion Picture Corporation on the Mutual Program.

Miss MacMillan plays the title role and under the able direction of the veteran Jay Hunt made a profound impression upon Producer Ince by her work.

VIOLA ALLEN, WHO HAS JUST BEEN ENGAGED BY THE ESSANAY COMPANY TO STAR IN A SCREEN VERSION OF "THE WHITE SISTER"

CATHERINE COUNTISS IN "GRAY NUN OF BELGIUM"

Catherine Countiss, whose work in "The Avalanche" and other recent film successes made such a favorable impression, is the latest addition to the galaxy of the Alliance stars.

Miss Countiss will appear in the title role of "The Gray Nun of Belgium," which is now nearing completion at the studios of the newly organized Dramatic Producing Company at Los Angeles.

Several well-known players appear in the support of the star, while David Proctor, an excellent actor, essays the leading male part.

The picture will be finished in the course of the next few weeks, and will be released on the Alliance program.

COSMOS WILL PRODUCE "FINE FEATHERS"

The announcement that the Cosmos Feature Film Corporation is to present Miss Janet Beecher in the photoplay version of "Fine Feathers," by Eugene Walter, will undoubtedly prove of interest to exhibitors and photoplay goers throughout the country. Janet Beecher is so well known to theatregoers that an introduction is hardly necessary.

The Cosmos Corporation have acquired the services of David Powell to play opposite Janet Beecher. This is by no means Mr. Powell's first screen appearance, as he worked with Pathé in London and also with Mary Pickford in "Dawn of a Tomorrow."

VITAGRAPH TO FILM "PLAYING DEAD"

The Vitagraph Company has acquired from Richard Harding Davis the rights to picturize his story, "Playing Dead," which appeared recently in one of the popular magazines.

"Playing Dead" will be made into a Broadway Star Feature that will be from four to five thousand feet in length. The picturization for the screen will be made by Sidney Drew, who will be seen in the principal character, supported by Mrs. Drew.

He expects to start work, immediately and finish the picture inside of a month.

BAY STATE ATTEMPT TO LIMIT FILMS FAILS

An attempt to limit by statute the length of a motion picture film to twenty minutes, and to compel managers of motion picture houses to introduce a five-minute act between each two pictures, has failed in the Massachusetts Legislature.

The bill, which was promoted by those who believe a picture longer than twenty minutes is harmful to the sight, was adversely reported from committee and this report was accepted by the House, on March 23. The bill carried a maximum fine of $50 or a maximum imprisonment of six months. The same bill is expected to come up again next year.

Censorship of motion pictures by the district police is asked in another bill which has not yet been acted upon. The district police chief under this bill could appoint three inspectors at a salary not yet determined upon, whose duty it would be to exclude from exhibition all "immoral or indecent pictures," or any tending to degrade the public.

No picture could be exhibited unless passed by this inspector. The penalty provided is a fine ranging from $10 to $300 for each offense.

SUNDAY OPENING PRIVILEGE IN BOISE BY MAY

Sunday opening of the motion picture ouses is soon to be asked in Boise, 'aho, by the managers. It is expected ıt by the first of May a concession l be granted by the city council perting motion picture shows on Sunday. he city election will be held here ·il 6. A mayor and two councilmen to be elected. Three of the candies have expressed themselves favor·y for Sunday opening and two candiıtes are known to be against it.

As Boise is a city which is visited on ınday by people from outside points, ınday ˌpening here would mean a great ing for the picture houses and the maners are now planning an active camgn to secure favorable action.

NO CENSORS FOR DETROIT

'ıe council committee on parks and vards, Detroit, Mich., refused to allow ›propriation asked by the recreation ssion for the purpose of putting on a ›f film censors.

ommittee felt that there was no need censorship of moving pictures, e estimates for film censors were ·iled.

Alberta Censorship Will Remain the Same

THE legislature of the province of Alberta, Canada, will not under any consideration meddle with the motion picture censorship as at present constituted, is the decision arrived at by members of the legislative assembly now in session in Edmonton. This sets at rest the possibility of two women's organizations which proposed drastic changes in the motion picture censorship legislation.

At various times during the last year two Alberta women's organizations—the Local Council of Women and a branch of the Federated Women's Clubs—protested against what they termed a "one man" censorship, the club's proposal being to place the censorship of films in the hands of two others besides R. B. Chadwick, the present censor, whose services are generally considered highly satisfactory.

Before the session of the legislature opened last month numerous threats were made by two women's organizations concerning the proposed drastic censorship measures which were the outcome of lively discussion over a certain kind of war films depicting alleged atrocities in Belgium. The fair club members had just been refused any concessions on their pet equal franchise scheme by the premier, so they turned to other diversions, among them being the motion picture censorship. They button-holed their favorite legislators and lined themselves up in formidable battle array.

Now comes the information that the Government is so busy making its position on railway construction programs clear that the entire session will be required to adjust and readjust railway guarantees to suit the Conservative Opposition, and such trifles as motion picture censorships cannot be considered.

With the informal repudiation of anything resembling motion picture legislation in this province this session meddlesome organizations which try to adjust the laws for exhibitors will not have another opportunity to present their claims against the Alberta censorship for two years.

Manitoba Theatre Tax Practically a Certainty

GREATLY modifying their first proposed bill, which provided that every theatre and moving picture house in Manitoba would be taxed two per cent. annually on their gross receipts, the law amendments committee of the provincial legislature at Winnipeg has passed a bill providing that all theatres, including moving picture houses and film exchanges, must henceforth be provincially licensed in order to operate, and the license is only issued after the tax is paid.

The act also provides for an inspector or inspectors, to be provided by the lieutenant-governor-in-council, and power is given the provincial treasurer to revoke licenses, where revocation would be in the public interest.

Penalties for non-compliance with the act are a fine of not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars, with six months imprisonment in default. Under the proposed new bill, and it is just about a surety, as a bill passing the law amendments committee usually passes the legislature itself, all the picture houses throughout the province will be taxed twenty cents for each seat. In the case of a film exchange, the license will cost two hundred and fifty dollars.

Before a license is granted, application must be filed containing a statement under oath showing:

For theatres.—The name of the proprietor or manager, the location and name of the theatre, the seating capacity and the nature of the public entertainments, shows or performances carried on or to be carried on.

For film exchanges—Name of proprietor, lessee or manager, and name and location of the exchange.

SUNDAY OPENING IN INDIANA TOWN ASSURED

Clifford Cole, manager of a picture theatre, at Elkhart, Ind., was acquitted by a jury in that city last week of a violation of the Sunday closing law on the tenth ballot. The early ballots stood four for conviction and eight for acquittal.

Following Cole's acquittal proprietors of Elkhart moving picture theatres arranged for the opening of their houses on Sunday in the future. They agreed on a censorship by a board consisting of the mayor, prosecuting attorney, editors of the Elkhart newspapers and other competent persons. It is expected that the Law and Order League of Elkhart will take steps to bring the matter before the grand jury to obtain a conviction.

SEEK TO ENJOIN SUNDAY CONCERTS IN MILWAUKEE

The Milwaukee Exhibitors' Association formally went on record at its last regular meeting against the holding of the semi-municipal concerts in the Auditorium in that city.

These concerts, which are given by a symphony orchestra of forty pieces, are held at popular prices, an admission of ten and twenty-five cents being charged. They have been drawing enormous crowds, from six to eight thousand people attending every Sunday.

The result has been that the Sunday afternoon business of the exhibitors has been rather badly cut into. The object of the local exhibitors in going on record against these concerts was to back up the effort of certain of the downtown theatre managers and exhibitors who are bringing suit through Bart J. Ruddle to prevent the holding of these Sunday concerts. Among those whose names appear as complainants are: J. R. Freuler, J. E. Saxe, Thomas Saxe, O. L. Ries and J. B. Olinger.

REVERSE SUIT AGAINST VITAGRAPH

The Philadelphia court decision by which Louis M. Swaab, an exchange man, was awarded a verdict of $20,424 damages against the Vitagraph Company of America has been reversed by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Justice Von Mosenzisker handed down an opinion which held that the plaintiff failed to prove either a general or a specific conspiracy against him and that the plaintiff should receive damages for only a nominal sum and costs owing to the fact that the Vitagraph company's lawyers filed their writ of replevin a day too early.

The action dates back to 1911 when Swaab was handling licensed films and his license was cancelled. He refused to surrender films in his possession and the Vitagraph company took them by a writ of replevin.

How the Manufacturer Can Help the Exh[illegible]r

Only Pictures of Superior Quality, Properly Advertised Through the Best Ch[illegible] Bring Results, Declares R. E. Woodward, Former Selig Publicity Manag[illegible]

IN order to exploit motion pictures with success a manufacturer must make the best films within his power, and they must be advertised properly. There is a lot of talk about the market being glutted with pictures, but they are not the right kind of pictures. The exhibitors do not want them because they know that their patrons will not care to see them.

There is always a good market for the good picture, the picture that fills the bill and therefore fills the till. Then comes the question of marketing.

First you must reach the exhibitor. This can be done effectively by sending him direct your advertising and publicity matter, or advertising your picture in a recognized trade publication. The exhibitor will be impressed with the fact that your advertisement appears in conjunction with the announcements of the leading film concerns and this fact will give him a certain confidence in your statements.

Posters, in color, are an important factor in the exploitation of pictures. They brighten up the theatre lobby and convey information in detail to the patrons of the theatre. In fact, in the large cities particularly, the people on the street generally make their decision as to which theatre they will attend by a glance at the posters.

The safest plan is to play strongly to the exhibitor. He has his regular patrons or a systematically transient trade.

It is he who selects the pictures, whether unknown or widely advertised, and it is with him that the business is transacted; you get the money from him. Unusually effective pictures, advertised in an aggressive manner and widely exploited, can be introduced and exhibited where pictures were never shown before, in the big cities.

But the bulk of the business is done in the smaller cities where the moving picture theatre is a regularly established entity and the people go to see the pict[illegible] without being informed in advance of wh[illegible] they are to see, except as they observe the announcements made in front of the theatre.

If the theatre has the reputation of showing desirable pictures the people will attend it. If such is not its reputation, a new man generally comes in to run it before long.

Different conditions require different methods, but the big condition in the making of motion pictures is that the picture must have the "punch," that it must be properly called to the attention of the exhibitor, and the exhibitor must find it profitable to run the picture in his theatre.

A great feature picture should be handled like a great theatrical production and exploited in the same way while the regular program should be handled in about the same way as vaudeville is managed.

Motion pictures are taking the place, very largely, of both, and there will not be any material change in the manner of handling.

Still it is simple. Make the right kind of a picture; advertise it to the people that are in a position to use it, and the thing is done. If you make a picture that is not wanted, or if you do not advertise that which you have for sale, the effort is ineffective.

Millions of dollars are thrown away every year in the motion picture business because of misdirected effort. Many big concerns think that so long as there is plenty of money coming in, it is not of importance how much is spent in ineffective advertising, so long as enough remains to pay fat dividends.

The Life Photo Film Corporation has made application for a $25,000 accident insurance policy on the life of Mary Nash, late star of the Belasco forces, and now leading woman in "The Unbroken Road," the five part feature in the course of production at the studio of the Life Photo Company.

The scenario of the photoplay embraces scenes that call for hazardous work on the part of Miss Nash, particularly a scene wherein she is clinging to a spar in mid-ocean, and permits herself to be dashed on rocks projecting out of the ocean, away from any main land.

VIRGINIA PEARSON BACK IN PICTURES

Virginia Pearson, well known for her excellent work in several Broadway productions in recent seasons, has returned to her first love, and become a member of the Vitagraph forces.

Miss Pearson made her first appearance on the screen in several Vitagraph productions, and she has rejoined the players of that company to appear in a number of new roles. Miss Pearson plans to create several difficult parts.

Filming of Scenes Solving "June" at Hand

Final Episode, the Fifteenth in Two Reels, Will Be Completed on Arrival of Reliance Players in New York—Company Royally Entertained in Bermuda

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Bermuda, W. I., March 29.

"RUNAWAY JUNE" has run away home, and all the young subalterns of the British garrison here, as well as the "winter boys" at the hotels, are in mourning. During the five weeks of the company's stay on these beautiful islands they were the life of the place.

They organized all sorts of athletic contests and unique entertainments, and not the least interesting things they did were contained in the five episodes of the big George Randolph Chester photoplay serial which were produced here. These included all sorts of thrilling incidents.

When the steamer Bermudian pulled out of her pier it was aglow with the red dress coats of the officers, and as the merry Juners waved their farewells a great cheer went up from the military men and the guests of the hotels. The actors are thoroughly tanned from their constant exposure to our tropical sun.

The last notable social event was the entertainment of the "Runaway Juners" by Captain Grant-Suttie of the Queen's Own in his sumptuous residence. It was a brilliant affair—a dinner of forty-seven covers, supplemented by a dance.

The final or fifteenth episode in two reels will be produced immediately upon their arrival in New York on Monday. It will contain the solution of the many baffling mysteries in this interesting comedy-drama of the screen. There you will learn why June, the runaway bride, was so relentlessly pursued by Gilbert Blye, "the man with the black Van Dyke," why she and the other members of Blye's party did so many amazing things, and why poor Ned Warner, the deserted husband, was kept in the dark as to the motives of all concerned.

HORSLEY HOLDS RECEPTION IN LOS ANGELES

President of Centaur Company Greets Thousands of Prominent People at Opening of the MinA Studio with Rousing Speech—Facts and Figures Which Show Wonderful Growth of the Industry—200 People Engaged in Business on Coast in 1911—Now There Are 10,000

Los Angeles, March 29.

ON Sunday afternoon David Horsley gave a reception at Horsley Park in Los Angeles, where his new MinA studios are being built, to the prominent people of the film world whose interests are now represented in Los Angeles, Cal.

The function turned out to be one of the most important that has ever been held in the history of the industry. Intended as an informal gathering of the fraternity to signalize the return to the scene of his former triumphs of the man who opened the first studio in Hollywood, it developed into a highly significant business meeting—the first of its kind that has ever been held between the principal employers of both the licensed and independent interests, their department heads and leading actors.

Mr. Horsley's speech, which was distributed in printed form, started a general discussion which has since spread throughout the trade. It follows in full:

"Having been somewhat closely identified with the making of moving pictures during the past three or four years in Los Angeles, I feel that there is a certain amount of excuse for expressing my views upon the trend of the business, and I take this opportunity of doing so.

"When I first came here in October, 1911, there were less than 200 people engaged in producing motion pictures, while today there are over 10,000 employed in the various branches of production in Los Angeles.

"In 1911 there were only two or three established companies, who had been here but a short time, the most important of which were Selig's and the New York Motion in Edendale.

Decided on Hollywood

"After looking the ground over, I decided upon Hollywood as being the best location for a studio, it being convenient to the city and the mountains, as well as being on the way to the ocean.

"I located my studio in Hollywood, which has since grown to be the largest institution of its kind in the world, and it gave me a great deal of satisfaction to be present on March 15 at the opening of Universal City, which is the outgrowth of my original studio in Hollywood.

"The eastern manufacturers, who in 1911 doubted the wisdom of my move, have since that time opened and are maintaining studios here in California, where they are making the bulk, if not all, of their product. In fact, 80 per cent. of the world's production of moving picture negatives is being made in California, and I think it is only a question of a short time when practically all of the negatives made in this country will be made in California.

"In view of this enormous growth of picture production in California during the last few years, a certain amount of recognition is due the industry from the municipal and state governments, not as a favor but as a matter of right. When you stop to consider that the moving picture industry is bringing into the State of California over five million dollars every year in cash, and is taking absolutely nothing out of the State, we can safely point to it as the most desirable industry the State possesses.

"When people come here and invest money in oil wells or mines, or even farming, they are exhausting the natural resources of the State, and it is only a question of time when they will have taken away fully as much as they brought, so that the State gains nothing in the end.

$5,000,000 a Year Spent on Coast

"With the moving picture industry it is different. We are pouring five million dollars a year in cash into the State, and all we take out of it are same strips of celluloid which we send here to be exposed through the camera to the California sunshine, and we do not deplete any of the State's natural wealth.

"When you stop to figure that 10,000 are drawing salaries, and with those salaries they are buying land, building homes, or renting houses, buying food, clothes, paying taxes, and are law-abiding citizens whose average standard of life and morality is as high, if not higher, than that of any other classes, they are a very desirable addition to any community.

"Another thing that should be pointed out is that the making of pictures calls for a high grade of intelligence, and there is no doubt that California benefits by having in its midst the intelligent class of people that are engaged in picture-making. The entire business community of the State receives the full benefit of our industry; the railroads, the street cars, property owners, and the automobile and other industries have received a very large share of this wealth that we bring into the State every year.

"The moving picture, as we all know, pays good salaries, and I believe in maintaining good wages for good work.

One Element of Danger

"There is only one element of danger that I can see at the present time, and that is the tendency to reduce the remuneration of the people taking the smaller parts in the pictures, known as "extras." There has been during the past year a tendency to take in people for these scenes that have had no training, either in picture or stage work, on account of the low rates at which they could be obtained.

"This is a mistake, and we should endeavor to maintain a better quality of product in this respect, by engaging only people who have had stage or motion picture experience, and to pay them sufficient money to live properly.

"The motion picture industry today is paying salaries that have never been equaled either on the stage or in any other line of endeavor. This, of course, applies to the more prominent members of the profession, and I am in favor of high salaries for high-grade work; but I think we should give more attention to the problem of the "extras" and people who are only occasionally employed, and that they should have every possible opportunity of coming to the front and advancing themselves in the public eye, as well as in the matter of salary.

"It shall be the policy of my new venture to pay as liberal salaries as the commercial possibilities of the business will permit.

"I consider myself very fortunate in being able to obtain the wonderful Bostock collection of trained animals, together with the trainers who have been with Frank C. Bostock for many years. With these animals and trainers in my organization, and the thousand of trained picture performers in Southern California, I think I shall be able to make pictures that will startle the world; but being a believer in the "safety first" propaganda, I have perfected a camera which will enable me to do things in pictures that have heretofore been impossible, owing to the risk involved on the part of the players.

"The actors in my pictures will not be permitted to risk their lives at any time, and in scenes requiring the use of animals, I shall permit only trainers who are thoroughly familiar with the animals that are being used, to enter the arenas, as I think too much of human life to risk it needlessly when more thrilling things can be done mechanically and without the risk of human life, as I believe that the life of an "extra" man is as valuable as mine.

Complete Studio

"On the property to the south of the Park I am going to erect studios that will be complete in every detail, revolutionary in character and design, in such a way that the efficiency and time-saving possibilities will be marvelously advanced.

"I shall also erect arenas for the animal scenes that will be very much in advance of anything now in use, both in the matter of time saving and the safety of performers.

"A few years ago it was the fashion for people connected with the motion picture industry to apologize for being connected with it. This, no doubt, was due to the fact that the art was in the early stages of its development, and it attracted certain undesirable elements which time has eliminated, and of the many thousands connected with the industry today I do not know of one person who is not proud to say that he is connected with motion pictures.

"I bid you welcome to the performance we are giving this afternoon, with the hope that you will enjoy it and that you will leave here at the close of the performance with the ambition and determination to advance the art of motion pictures by greater and more serious effort, and to help the standing of our business in the community by maintaining the present high standard of conduct that is now acknowledged by press and public."

BREESE IN PICTURIZED ALASKAN POEM

Edmund Breese, until recently starring in the big dramatic success, "Today," left New York a few days ago for Saranac Lake, New York, in company with the members of the organization composing the Popular Plays and Players, where work was immediately begun on the production by that concern of a feature based on Robert W. Service's poetic classic, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," a poem founded on events coming under the observation of the author in Alaska.

Mr. Breese, one of the foremost dramatic actors of the day, has already made his appearance in motion pictures in the production of his former stage success, "Master Mind" and was enthusiastic over the prospect of his forthcoming vehicle.

"The Shooting of Dan McGrew" in poem form, has been the basis for many vaudeville acts. Its recital, no matter by whom, was the cause of tense, active attention and great applause. It is, without the shadow of a doubt, the most virile poem, emblematic of Alaskan life.

Every line in the twelve long stanzas will be graphically carried on the screen by the producers.

Life Photo Raises Output to Two a Month

Exchanges Handling Features of the Company Send Representatives to Conference in New York—Contribution of $49,000 Asked to Finance New Release Plan

A CONFERENCE was held at the offices of the Life Photo Film Corporation last week at which most of the exchanges handling the Life Photo productions in the United States were represented, and at which time such exchanges joined in a request that the Life Photo Company increase its output to two five-part features a month, adaptations from stage plays with legitimate stage stars in the lead, upon terms calling for contribution by each exchange in advance of a sum of money, making a total contribution of $49,000, such advance to be returned to the exchanges in four equal monthly payments; the additional production to be released to the exchanges upon the same terms as applies to the present release of the Life Photo Film Corporation.

The exchanges not represented at the conference have been communicated with, setting forth the plans for such increased output, and replies are being received by the Life Photo company, heartily endorsing the project.

Work is already under way for the manufacture of such additional feature, the play having already been purchased. The director and cast have not as yet been chosen, this being deferred until the manuscript of the play has been placed in scenario form.

It is determined, however, that the cast will proceed to Arizona where the plot of the play is laid.

Jesse J. Goldburg, secretary and general manager, when interviewed, stated that the request of the Life Photo exchanges is further proof of the success of the plan of his company in marketing its output on contracts by the year, with reputable exchanges for definite territorial allotments, rather than tying up the output with any single parent exchange for the entire country.

In order to accommodate this added output, additions to the studio of the Life Photo Film Corporation and the laboratories of the Commercial Motion Pictures Company, Inc., an allied corporation with that of the Life Photo company, are being made.

MURIEL OSTRICHE WITH VITAGRAPH COMPANY

The newest addition to the forces of the Vitagraph Company is Muriel Ostriche.

Miss Ostriche will be seen in a number of roles that are distinctly different from any work she has done previously. Her first appearance for the Vitagraph Company will be in a three-reel feature.

Miss Ostriche recently was stricken blind while at work on a film, and for a time it was feared that she would never recover her sight, but she is now prepared for active work.

Miss Ostriche has made quite a reputation for daring, among her feats of bravery before the camera being a climb across a twenty-five-foot chasm, three hundred feet in the air on a narrow strip of board.

INA CLAIRE IN "A WILD GOOSE CHASE"

Ina Claire will make her photodramatic debut in an elaborate Lasky photodramatic production entitled "A Wild Goose Chase."

This play may be described as a comedy with a strong romantic interest, and is founded on one of the most successful legitimate plays written by William C. De Mille.

THE SMALLEYS BACK WITH UNIVERSAL IN FEATURES

Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley) are again members of the Pacific Coast producing forces of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, a telegraphic communication to that effect from President Laemmle having been received at the Universal's head offices in New York on Tuesday last.

The Smalleys will resume their old place on the Universal program, and will be seen in features only.

The deal for their return was consummated by President Laemmle, Vice-president R. H. Cochrane, and Treasurer P. A. Powers, who took enough time off from the festivities coincident with the opening of Universal City to reach an understanding.

Thus there returns to the Universal a brilliant combination of personality, directing, playing and scenario-writing genius. Mr. Smalley is an excellent leading man and producer. Lois Weber is one of the very best scenario writers and a competent leading woman. She has written a script a week for three years.

After six months with Reliance, five with Kalem, and eighteen with Gaumont, the Smalleys joined the Universal five years ago, playing at the old Rex studio in New York City. Four years ago they went to the Coast and have not been East since then, with the exception of a flying trip made by Mr. Smalley a year ago last Christmas.

A few months ago they became connected with Bosworth, Inc., and made several features, most conspicuous of which was "The Hypocrites," written and directed by Lois Weber. Now they will be members of the Universal family for at least two years, according to the contract just signed.

"THE COST," BY MONG, RELEASED THROUGH UNITED

William V. Mong, who entered into contract with the Pike's Peak Company several weeks ago, has succeeded George Gebhart as assistant manager of the Western company's studios.

Immediately on Mr. Mong's arrival at the Garden of the Gods studio several weeks ago, he took charge of the company's scenario department and began writing two-reel Westerns. His first picture will be released by the United under the Lariat brand on April 10 under the title "The Cost." George Gebhart, Edwin Cobb, Josephine West and Mr. Mong will play the leading parts.

GADEN JOINS LIFE PHOTO; NAGEL AS "PROPS"

Contract was entered into last Wednesday between the Life Photo Film Corporation and Alexander Gaden, late star of the Universal Company, whereby Mr. Gaden will assume the juvenile leads in all future productions of the Life Photo Company, to January 1, 1916.

George H. Nagel, formerly head property man of the Eclair and Peerless Companies, has been engaged by the Life Photo Film Corporation as head property man. Howard Tobias will remain as assistant head property man.

Censor and Film Men Deadlocked at Hearing

Breitinger Insists Upon Showing Nothing but Cut-Outs to Legislature at Harrisburg, and Pennsylvania Exhibitors Refuse Him Use of Projection Machine Unless He Exhibits Entire Film in Fairness to Them—Representative Wilson Finally Declares Hearing Adjourned—Breach Widened Between the Two Parties

Harrisburg, Pa., March 31.

THE hearing before the Judiciary General Committee of the House of Representatives Tuesday on the Stein bill to repeal the law under which the present state board of motion picture censors operates ended abruptly in a heated dispute when J. Louis Breitinger, the chief censor, insisted on displaying "cut-outs" from films his board had censored without also showing the context.

The joint legislative committee of the exchange men and members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which is fighting for the repeal of the law, declined to permit its picture machine, which had been set up in the hall of the House for the evening, to be used for this purpose by Breitinger, although expressing entire willingness and in fact challenging Breitinger to show the complete pictures from which the censored parts have been culled.

Breitinger refused to show the complete pictures, with the uncensored context, and a deadlock resulted, which, after a long wrangle, came to an end when Representative William H. Wilson, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Judiciary General Committee, declared the hearing adjourned.

Breach Widened by Discord

This unexpected termination only served to make wider the breach between the picture interests and the chief censor. Members of the picture men's committee took the attitude that it was unfair to display mere cut-outs from pictures, contending that often parts of pictures, which standing by themselves might appear improper, could be shown to be absolutely proper when used in connection with whole films teaching a moral lesson.

Samuel F. Wheeler, a Philadelphia lawyer, who acted as one of the spokesmen of the picture men's committee, jumped to his feet just after the chairman had declared the meeting adjourned and, appealing to the sense of fairness of the big audience present, managed to get a hearing as to the committee's attitude in refusing to let Breitinger use the exhibitors' machine for the purpose that he proposed. He immediately got the attention of the whole assemblage and shouted with great emphasis that even portions of the Bible or of Shakespeare, if taken apart from the context, could be construed as immoral, but when taken as a whole were absolutely essential to the teaching of great moral lessons.

W. Stephen Bush, also speaking for the exhibitors, got the floor and said:

"We do not decline to let Mr. Breitinger use our machine to show any picture he may select if he is willing to show it as a whole. We would welcome it, and, in fact, we challenge him to show the whole pictures from which the 'cut-outs' are taken. This he has refused to do."

Hearing Starts Before Crowded House

The hearing started at 8 o'clock. The hall of the House was crowded, considerably more than half the membership of the House being at their desks. George W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the joint committee of film men and exhibitors, introduced the men speaking in their behalf. He first introduced Mr. Wheeler, who argued that there is no more reason to censor motion pictures than to censor the newspapers and magazines. He said state censorship is unnecessary and referred to a Pennsylvania law passed in 1911 which gives the courts the right to impose penalties of fines up to $1,000 or imprisonment for one year or both on any theatre man giving immoral or obscene shows in his theatre.

J. H. Butner, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania manager of the Mutual Film Company, said that unnecessary censorship had cost his firm at the rate of $6,000 a year, including the $2.50 fee charged for each film examined and the cost of running the projecting rooms for such examination. He added that the total cost per year to all film exchanges in the state was $60,000.

Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, the Pennsylvania vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, gave statistics as to the number of persons dependent upon the motion picture business for a livelihood in Pennsylvania, placing the number at 10,000. He said the industry cannot live if what he termed the present unjust methods of censorship are permitted to continue.

Arguments Advanced in Support of Censors

Mrs. Semple, of Pittsburgh, president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, pleaded for the retention of censorship on the ground that it eliminates pictures which, while perhaps not immoral, are at least suggestive. These she thought had a harmful effect upon children. After a few words in rebuttal to Mr. Carpenter were spoken by Mr. Wheeler, Chairman Wilson announced that pictures would be thrown on the screen, alternating between those offered by the exhibitors and those offered by the censor.

The first picture, offered by the exhibitors, was a harmless one that had been approved by the censor. The members of the House committee ruled that there was no light thrown on the controversy by displaying such pictures, although Mr. Bush, for the picture men, contended that the picture taught a moral lesson and the displaying of it before the committee served to show what a power for good the picture screen can be.

This contention was overruled by Chairman Wilson, who directed the exhibitors to show a picture that had been censored, with the censored parts left in, so that the committee might judge whether the cut-outs were justified. A comic picture, offered by the exhibitors, was then shown, including a part in which a burlesque policeman hit a comedian over the head with a mallet. It was explained that it was the mallet part of the picture that the censor had ordered cut out when he passed on the film. Several committeemen expressed the opinion that there was no reason why the mallet incident should have been eliminated.

Breitinger Refuses to Show Complete Films

It was then Breitinger's turn to show a film and he offered a series of "cut-outs" that he had banned, taken from several different films. It then developed that the exhibitors objected to these detached parts being shown, and as they had the only picture machine in the building, they declined to permit Breitinger to use it for the purpose the chief censor had in mind.

There was a long parley, in which the exhibitors pointed out that several weeks ago, when the censor arranged an exhibition of films in the hall of the House, he used detached parts that had been censored, which, obviously, the film men said, presented the film makers in an unfair light. The exhibitors said under no circumstances would they stand for the use of their machine for a repetition of that sort of an exhibition.

Chairman Wilson and other members of the committee of lawmakers took the attitude that the picture men should yield to Breitinger and that he should be permitted to have his way, but when no agreement could be reached adjournment was announced.

Breitinger's Compromise Bill Introduced

A new bill designed to repeal present censorship act was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Daix, of Philadelphia. It creates an entirely new board of three, instead of two members offered for Breitinger, chief censor, and endorsed by the governor and attorney general. Three censors are to be appointed by the governor for three-year terms, the chairman to get $3,000, a woman censor $2,500, the third member $2,400.

A fee of $2.50 is provided for examining 1,200 feet or less and $1 for each duplicate, if applied for at same time. Films over 1,200 feet will be charged $5, and $2 for duplicates. The penalty is fixed at $50 to $100 first offense, $100 to $200 second offense, and in default of fines, jail for 10 to 30 days. The bill provides salaries for twenty subordinate employees, from $1,500 down to $480, the chairman to appoint additional employees subject to governor's approval. Extra employees' salaries are not to exceed $5,000.

"FROM THE VALLEY OF THE MISSING"

(Fox Film Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS is an adaptation of the novel by the same name from the pen of Grace Miller White. The works of Miss White, who also wrote "Tess of the Storm Country," make good material for picture production.

They contain plenty of plot. In fact, the only trouble with "From the Valley of the Missing" is that it contains too much story, if such a thing be possible. So the action has to go ahead by long leaps and bounds. This result is that the connection between several scenes is not too clear. But that is because of the power and sweep of the story, which, if picturized in detail, would take much more than five reels to tell.

HORACE SEES FLEDRA WITH HER FAMILY

The Brimbecombs adopt a waif who grows to manhood in stature, if not in character, as Everett Brimbecomb. The Brimbecombs are neighbors of Floyd Vandecar, district attorney and later governor. The Vandecar children, Floyd and Fledra, are kidnapped by Lon Cronk, a squatter, to get revenge for the term for which Vandecar sent him to prison.

The twins grow up as two squatter children, "Flea" the girl and "Flukey" the boy. When Flea is a lovely young woman the twins run away from Cronk's inhumanity. They are taken in and adopted by Horace Shellington and his sister Anne.

Everett, the adopted son of the Brimbecombs, covets the girl, as does Lem Crabbe, a friend of Cronk's. Cronk, Crabbe and Everett all endeavor to get possession of the girl. Their plans are thwarted by Horace Shellington, who wins the girl, and the twins are restored to their parents, the Vandecars.

That is only a skeleton of the plot. The action contains much that is interesting, including a circus and county fair, court scenes taken in a real court room and several fights. The fistic battle between Everett Brimbecomb and Lem Crabbe is a corker.

More than a word is due the players. The Brimbecombs and the Vandecars are from "society," the Cronks and Crabbes are squatters and outlaws. Both factions look, breathe and live their parts. The interplay of the contrasting characters is very interesting.

So many players are prominent that no one can be called a star. Vivian Tobin as "Flea," the girl twin, is most prominent.

W. N. "Bill" Bailey does some very good dramatic work as the unlovable Everett Brimbecomb. William Riley Hatch and Robert Cummings are perfect types and good players as Cronk and Crabbe. Kate Cummings plays Cronk's wife and Arline Hackett is Crabbe's wife.

Clifford Bruce and Catherine Calhoun are Mr. and Mrs. Vandecar. Harry Spingler and Jane Miller are pleasing as Horace and Anne Shellington. The other twin is played by George Tobin.

By the way, the twins of the picture are real twins.

"PRETTY MRS. SMITH"

(Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

FOR its first release the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company presents Fritzi Scheff in her most recent stage success. That is enough, in itself, to add to the value of the picture. Miss Scheff has always been called "the little devil of comic opera" and threatens to become known as quite a cut-up on the screen. She and Owen Moore are the mainstays of the picture, though ably aided and abetted by several lesser co-stars.

"Pretty Mrs. Smith" is a comedy-drama, more comedy than drama, with its action laid in "society." Miss Scheff plays Drucilla, the pretty Mrs. Smith of the play, and also of three husbands, all of them Smiths.

The first was a missionary whom she married to please her mother. But she couldn't stand life among the cannibals, and a second Smith, a poet, won her, on her return to civilization, by his impetuous manner. Number two proved an habitual inebriate. She left him and her heart was won by Smith number three and his manly prowess. He won a rowing race and rescued her chum, Letitia Proudfoot, from drowning right under her eyes. Husband number three was much agitated when the first two husbands appeared at the hotel and all sorts of complications followed. But all was straightened out in the end.

Fritzi Scheff, in addition to being chief fun-maker, displays a stunning wardrobe. Her gowns alone should endear the picture to the feminine contingent. In her fun-making she is ably seconded by Leila Bliss as Letitia Proudfoot and by Letitia's eugenic sweetheart, name unknown. Louis Bennison, who was last seen in "Damaged Goods" on the stage, plays husband number one, the missionary. Forrest Stanley is number two, the inebriate bard, and Owen Moore is the third, last and lasting husband. Hobart Bosworth produced the picture, which was photographed by George Hill. It was taken in California.

DRUCILLA MEETS SMITH NUMBER THREE

BURR McINTOSH TO RELEASE THROUGH WORLD FILM

THE Burr McIntosh Film Corporation, of which Burr McIntosh, actor, war correspondent, lecturer and photographer, is president, will shortly enter the motion picture field, releasing through the World Film Corporation. The first picture will be a screen adaptation of F. Hopkinson Smith's story, "Colonel Carter of Cartersville." Howell Hansell, late of Thanhouser, will direct.

"An Indian Summer" is now being produced in motion picture form at the World Film studios in Fort Lee, N. J., under the direction of Frank Crane. In the cast are Vivian Martin, Robert Warwick, Barbara Tennant and William J. Roselle. S. J. Berman has been appointed Eastern district manager of the World Film exchanges.

"WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ON viewing the first few scenes of "When We Were Twenty-One," the immediate impression which the action conveys to the mind is one of comedy, for the opening scenes which furnish the picture its title, are of a laughable nature. But as the story progresses, after twenty years have passed, although there are comedy touches here and there until the termination of the picture, the dramatic element predominates.

This blending of the drama with praiseworthy touches of comedy, the combination of the sympathetic story with realistic humor invests the picture with a decided magnetism. It is obvious that everyone connected with the producing of the picture has put his whole heart into each scene and the results will speak for themselves, and they will speak, we believe, in whatever house the picture is shown in.

Leading the cast as Richard Audaine, otherwise known as The

"THE IMP" LEARNS HIS WIFE'S GAME

Imp, is William Elliott, the youthful star, who as the lawyer in "Madame X" won such praise, and who is now appearing on Broadway in "Experience." The Imp is an orphan, a variety of prodigal, who has one adoring guardian and an equally adoring triumvirate of self-named guardians to care for him.

Cabarets and burlesque queens are the Imps specialty, and wine appears as his friendly enemy. But the quarette of caretakers succeed after many trials and tribulations in bringing the young man to his senses. The best word that can be said in behalf of Mr. Elliott is that he brings out the pitifulness and pathos of the role, whereas a less accomplished player would be apt to accentuate the comic element.

Charles Waldron is Carew, the Imp's guardian, and his life-like performance is only equaled by those given by the Trinity, composed of Arthur Hoops, George Backus and Charles Coleman. Marie Empress is a wicked looking type for Firefly, the adventuress, and Helen Lutrell and Winifred Allen make an appealing pair of honorable women.

Those who have seen the works of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, will readily realize that this picture produced by them is constructed admirably well, all the players, even the extras, being handled effectively. As regards photography and settings, the five reels are excellent. The picture is based on the play of the same name by H. V. Esmond. It was booked at the Strand Theatre, New York, the week of March 28.

"THE CURIOUS CONDUCT OF JUDGE LEGARDE"

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE conduct of the judge is not the only curious thing about this picture, as all of the exteriors are actually studio scenes made indoors. This must not be taken to imply any inferiority in them. On the contrary, the result is eminently satisfactory, and much more effective than could have been the case had the conventional exterior been used. Almost the entire action of the play takes place at night, and the studio-set exteriors show many fine and realistic light effects.

"The Curious Conduct of Judge Legarde" was written as a play by Victor Mapes. The story has to do with a strange case of dual personality, which by a poetic justice, appears in a judge who had refused to listen to testimony of the same affliction as a cause of crime. The role of the judge is strongly played by Lionel Barrymore. The transitions from the law-breaking "prince" to the dignified judge are particularly well done.

Edna Pendleton is seen in the important role of Amelia Garside, who, owing to the construction of the story, is far more important a character than Agnes Caverly, the judge's fiancee. Miss Pendleton gives a charming portrayal of this attractive but unfortunate girl. Roy Applegate as Big Charles and William H. Tooker as Inspector Barton do good work in important minor parts.

Judge Legarde develops a dual personality as the result of a blow on the head. On frequent occasions he goes out at night and in the guise of "the prince" heads a gang of daring burglars. In the morning he completely forgets his acts of the nights and only wonders at his remarkable weariness. On one of these trips he becomes infatuated with Amelia, a former maid of his fiancee's, and at one time sent to prison by himself for a theft of which she was innocent.

So complete is the Judge's strange obsession that he plans a robbery of his own home. This ultimately leads to a discovery of his trouble and a cure by a brain specialist. Amelia's innocence is established, but she goes away broken hearted at the loss of her strange sweetheart. The other members of the gang are caught.

"THE STONING"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

DRAMAS which show innocence the victim of lust are legion, but the screen has seen few which are the equal of "The Stoning" in strength of appeal or harrowing realism. No debonair young hero appears just in time to save the girl. No maddened lover, brother or father avenge the terrible wrong done to her.

Instead, the unhappy victim is driven to suicide by the impossible choice between the streets and the despicable hypocrisy of her former friends. The beast who deliberately caused her ruin goes off without a care. In brief, cynical as it may sound, the picture is truer to life than those which show rescue or revenge.

The acting of the three principal characters is most effective. Harry Beaumont is seen as the seducer, an unpleasant part, but one which he plays with an effectiveness necessary to the success of the picture. Viola Dana is seen as the charming little country girl who loves too well. Robert Conness is impressive as the clean-minded, forceful young minister who fights a vain fight for the girl's life with hyprocisy as his enemy.

The story opens with the familiar situation. A pretty little village girl who has just graduated from high school is picked by a hardened sinner as a prospective victim.

She is swept off her feet and in the bewilderment of loving, combined with a pitiful innocence, her ruin is accomplished. The horror stricken girl dares not return to her parents, but the minister in whose church she had formerly sung as a member of the choir finds her and induces her to come home, and face the future bravely. Sad as the case is, the clergyman little realizes the brutality of his fellow citizens. By helping her to plead her cause the minister induces the girl's parents to forgive her, if forgiveness can be offered to one whose only sin was the blindness of her virtue.

Filled with a new hope, the little girl even consents to return to her place in the choir. The villagers start trouble by cutting her on the street, and when the others in the choir, together with many in the congregation, leave on her appearance, her heart is utterly broken. The minister denounces the conduct of his parishioners, but it does no good. Next day the girl's body is found in the river.

THE SAD HOMECOMING

In righteous indignation the clergyman denounces the whole congregation, telling them that the word "murderers" is branded on every heart.

"The Stoning" is a tremendous arraignment of one phase of life as it is. It points a great moral. Until the millenium the seducer will always walk the earth seeking for his victims, but if parents would but show more intelligence in the instruction of their daughters the victims would be few and far between.

This is one of the few sex pictures which has a real purpose.

"THE GENTLEMAN BURGLAR"

(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is a drama of mistaken identity with the plot hinging upon the resemblance of Jim Draper, prominent society man, and Broadway Jim, a notorious gentleman burglar. Both parts are assumed by William Stowell, who plays the dual role very convincingly. Lillian Marshall as Irma Horn, a girl detective, is also good. It is a well rendered detective drama with many thrilling situations to hold the attention from start to finish.

Irma Horn, desirous of capturing the notorious Broadway Jim, one day runs upon Draper and thinks she has found her man. By intentionally spraining her ankle she forces him to take her home in his car, and is much surprised to learn that he is a prominent society man.

DRAPER'S IDENTITY DISCOVERED

A TEMPORARY FAREWELL

Broadway Jim also discovers his resemblance to Draper and decides to capitalize upon it. Attacking Draper on his way to the Trevaine reception where the Armadi heirlooms are to be exhibited, he steals his invitation and impersonates him at the affair.

Irma Horn has been engaged to guard the heirlooms, posing as a maid, and discovers Broadway Jim, whom she mistakes for Draper, in the act of stealing the jewels. In the meantime, the crook's accomplices are caught while making off with the unconscious Draper. Draper comes to life, and missing his invitation suspects what has occurred.

He hastens to the reception, where he arrives just in time to find the man thought to be himself accused of the theft of the heirlooms. The whole tangle is explained, and Broadway Jim is taken in hand by the police, and Draper escorts the charming girl detective to her home.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Five)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THESE first five episodes of "The Black Box" have brought forth substantial evidence that the works of E. Phillips Oppenheim are just as engrossing and fascinating on the screen as they are on paper.

Followers of the serial photoplay are sure to appreciate a picture of that class which combines the detective and mystery story, for most houses revel in merely the latter combination —that is when the picture may be completely viewed in one sitting.

Situations of a thrilling and unconventional nature are necessary to sustain the interest in a serial such as this, and to this end Mr. Oppenheim has plainly directed his efforts.

In this episode, entitled "On the Rack," the writer has caused the redoubtable Quest to be placed under arrest, charged with murdering his secretary and the Salvation Army lassie, and causing the disappearance of Mrs. Reinholdt's jewels for the second time. This event has the natural result of arousing an even greater amount of suspense and interest in the story, for now the miraculous detective must dodge the law as well as his other enemies.

However, after Quest has been in jail for a few days, Laura (Laura Oakly), his assistant, visits him; the two effect a quick change of clothing and the detective escapes.

In the meantime Lenora, who has directed her investigations against the suspicious appearing Craig, entraps him in the professor's garage and sends Quest a wireless, requesting him to meet her there. Then while she is standing guard over the place a pair of hands comes out and clutches her by the throat. When Quest arrives Lenora and Craig are not to be found.

Quest enlists the professor's aid and the rest of the last reel is devoted to several comedy scenes in which the two men bunco the police.

"THE UNAFRAID"

(Lasky—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

RITA JOLIVET makes her screen debut in a very entertaining romantic drama which contains several elements of the spectacular and exciting, much that is beautiful scenically and excellent acting by Miss Jolivet, the ever dependable House Peters, his young brother Page Peters and stern Theodore Roberts in a role all too small for an actor of his calibre.

Also "The Unafraid" introduces to the screen in a secondary part little Marjorie Daw, age fourteen, who ought to be a real screen star by the time she is sixteen. She has that elusive screen personality and beauty. She is another Mae Marsh—and pretty.

Rita Jolivet plays Delight Warren, an American heiress. Miss Jolivet is a French girl and is a trifle too frou-frou for the popular conception of one of the young women for whom the eagle screams, but histrionically she is fully up to the demands of her role.

Delight's heart is won by Michael Balsic (Page Peters) who needs her money to finance a revolution.

Unafraid she volunteers to go with him to his home to become his wife. En route she is kidnapped by the men of Stefan Balsic, the elder brother (House Peters). Stefan, to save her, makes her his wife, this being simply a legal formality to protect her good name, as she is captured and entirely in the hands of Stefan.

Then Michael shows his hand by attempting to poison Stefan. Delight thwarts the plot and then follows a struggle for possession of the girl which grows from a rousing fist-fight to a pretentious siege of the castle. Stefan wins in the end. Then he tells his bride that she is safe to return home. "I am at home here," she replies and then comes the happy ending.

"The Unafraid" makes a very pleasant and exciting romantic picture. The Montenegrin atmosphere is well carried out. The natural air of distinction of Miss Jolivet and also of House Peters add to the general effect. And don't forget that little Marjorie Daw, whoever she may be, is a real discovery and a comer.

WORLD COMEDY STARS AT HIPPODROME

PHILIP GLEICHMAN, president of the Comedy-Star, and S. J. Berman, manager of the New York office of the World Film Corporation, are more elated than ever over the results produced by the Comedy-Star releases.

Following swiftly upon the heels of the order from the Strand theatre to run the comedies, came a contract from the New York Hippodrome, also calling for the output. Inasmuch as these theatres are the finest in the United States, it is a decided compliment to the worth of Comedy-Star pictures.

The Hippodrome has lately turned its 4,500 seating capacity over to audiences that care for the finest obtainable in the photoplay world.

"THE BREATH OF ARABY"

(Vitagraph—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHILE the action of this picture takes place in the present time, the title and the general atmosphere of the entire production is reminiscent of the old tales of the "Arabian Nights." The characters, though modernly garbed, are otherwise exact replicas of mythical personages in those ancient tales, and the story itself, which is of the fantastical variety, completes the illusion.

The plot cannot be termed exactly pleasant; in fact, Clothilde, the leading character, will disgust rather than charm, yet the merit of the acting and the direction can hardly fail in its mission to absorb the onlooker.

Clothilde is the deceitful daughter of a sincere old aristocrat. She has set her heart on claiming the love of a married man. To this end she robs a rich Persian of the only remaining drop of the breath of Araby, a terribly potent love charm. Intending to use it on Thurston, she invites him to meet her at a notorious restaurant, but her father reads the letter and reaches the place first. Crazed by his daughter's actions, he takes poison and falls on a couch, clasping an unfired pistol in his hand.

The keeper of the place covers him with a curtain, and when Clothilde arrives informs her that the gentleman is waiting. Without discovering who the man is, she pours the last drop of the precious fluid over her dead father, and then Thurston enters. Horror stricken, she tears the curtain aside and pulls the body of her father on its back. She steps back and the man's dead finger closes on the trigger and the bullet enters Clothilde's back.

Helen Gardner is seen as this female enticer, who has a pretty shoulder to display in all scenes. Her performance is of the emotional variety and at times a little overdone, but it is gripping despite its distastefulness.

"THE RETURN OF RICHARD NEAL"

(Essanay—Three Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

IT is difficult to imagine a drama more typically suited to the histrionic abilities of Francis X. Bushman than "The Return of Richard Neal," which was written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr., and will be released on April 17 in conjunction with the missing paragraph story in the May "Ladies' World."

The portrayal by Francis Bushman of the character of Richard Neal, a psychological specialist possessing hypnotic powers, developed along scientific lines, brings out some remarkable acting. The high standard he sets is, however, lived up to throughout by the rest of the cast, which includes Nell Craig as Doris Blake, Bryant Washburn as Gideon Hall, Ernest Maupain as Count Nikola and Harry Dunkinson as Mr. Blake.

RICHARD NEAL IN HIS LABORATORY

Elaborate and appropriate settings and great care as to the minor points of the production make this picture not only a most interesting one, but realistic in every detail.

Gideon Hall, a reckless young man in love with Doris Blake, is saved from suicide by "Count" Nikola, a clever criminal with an original method. Nikola lends him enough money to cover a heavy gambling debt, asking in return that Hall introduce him into society. Hall agrees and in the course of time, Nikola is presented at the Blake home.

Doris feels a strange attraction for the man and feels she must go to him. It is the influence of Nikola's mesmeric mind over her will. After hynotizing Doris, Nikola tells her that at 3:13 she will get out of bed, go to her father's art gallery and steal the famous painting by Musee and will drop it out of the window. At 3:13 the family is aroused by a scream and they find Doris unconscious on the floor murmuring "3:13."

A doctor who is called, realizing that she is under the control of another mind, sends for Richard Neal, a specialist in psychology. Nikola sets her at another task, that of bringing a large sum of money to his house at a certain time.

Neal learns the secret from Hall, who is also under Nikola's influence, and sets a trap for him. The trap works, the two minds clash and Neal's stronger will wins. The girl is awakened, Nikola is exposed and arrested and Doris is restored to her family.

"RUNAWAY JUNE"

(Reliance—Instalment Twelve)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NED is now Blye's captive on the latter's yacht. He is informed that no harm will come to his wife, if he will but agree to cease his pursuit. But his proposition is met with little favor by the furious Ned, who angrily demands his wife and the reason why she is kept from him. This information Blye refuses to impart.

After this the main plot is dropped for the moment. A tragedy is enacted in which June plays an important part, but which as yet has no obvious bearing on the serial proper.

Durban, an artist, is taking a holiday in Bermuda for the purpose of painting one of his inspirations, "The Spirit of the Marsh." His model, who arrives for work, clad in some filmy gauze, fails to register the correct expression. Durham wishes her to give the appearance of being insulted, so he straightaway insults her.

His purpose is accomplished, but the model fails to comprehend his insult and runs away. He pursues and she in desperation leaps from a high embankment into the water below, and perishes.

The next day Durban is introduced to June, and seeing in her an excellent subject for his painting he invites her to pose. But the insulted expression is lacking and he tries the same process to procure it, with the result that June starts to defend herself.

In the struggle that follows, Durban steps into treacherous quicksand, and before help arrives he is swallowed in its slimy depths.

"THE MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROBERT WARWICK, the popular hero of so many World Film releases, is cast in the title part of "The Man Who Found Himself." As an ex-convict who discovers that the proposition of living down his past is an insurpassable difficulty, Mr. Warwick has been allotted a role which fits his personality remarkably well. It is, besides, a part which draws more heavily on the sympathies than most others, and for this reason, if for no other, the picture is practically sure of success.

James Clarke embezzles five hundred dollars of his employer's money, in order that he may send his sick sister to the country. His theft is discovered and he is sentenced to five years in prison, but he makes his escape, when a motion picture company journeys to the prison to take a few scenes.

Subsequently, he rises to hold a responsible position in a china plant, and becomes engaged to his employer's daughter. Then the inevitable occurs. An old prison mate turns up and events so shape themselves that Clarke reveals his past and returns to prison, first exacting the girl's promise that she will wait for him.

CATHERINE DISCOVERS PAYTON'S DECEIT

Frank Crane, who produced the picture, has made a decided success of it. Not only have the scenes been effectively arranged, the settings realistic and appropriately chosen, but small details often neglected have been carefully attended to.

"THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Fourteenth Episode)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

"THE RECKONING" is the title of this final chapter in the adventures of Elaine, Craig Kennedy and the Clutching Hand. It is a powerful conclusion to a serial of remarkable excellence. Not once throughout the fourteen instalments has the interest been allowed to drag, and at most points it was kept at the highest pitch of interest.

It is with real satisfaction that we look forward to the "New Exploits of Elaine," in which further adventures from the fertile mind of Arthur B. Reeve will be depicted. If the new series is half as good as the old it will hold any audience spellbound. There seems every reason to expect that the forthcoming pictures will be even better.

In the course of this instalment Sheldon Lewis is called upon for one of the most difficult sorts of acting. In the role of Perry Bennett his dual character has been learned.

THE CLUTCHING HAND AT BAY

The knowledge that Kennedy is fully aware of his identity causes a transformation from the smooth, polite young lawyer to the evil-hearted, blood-lustful wretch who has caused Elaine and Kennedy so many narrow escapes. Mr. Lewis' work in this and the rest of the picture is of the highest quality.

Long Sin, the Chinaman, does not tell Kennedy who the Clutching Hand is, but gives him a clue which enables the young detective to soon discover that he is no other than Perry Bennett, the man who has been his rival for Elaine's affection and who is supposed to be engaged to her.

Bennett, learning that he is discovered, attacks Elaine, but she is saved by Kennedy and Jameson. Taking refuge with Long Sin the criminal is given a potion which apparently causes death, but actually results in suspended animation. Long Sin then prepares to look for his hidden fortune. Meantime Elaine and Craig Kennedy have met and forgotten their troubles in the knowledge of their deep love for each other.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

MALSPELANI, who directed the Pathé production of "Les Miserables," is in this country. He will make features at the Peerless studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

J. E. Robin has resigned as sales manager of Simplex projection machines. He is succeeded by L. W. Atwater, of the Nicholas Power Company.

Ben Goetz has resigned as general manager of the Crystal Film Company.

John Hardin has resigned as manager of the Pathé Chicago office, and will take charge of Kleine's office in Dallas, Tex.

The publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation, of which Arthur James is the head, has been moved from 29 Union Square West to the fifteenth floor of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City.

Adele Lane, of Selig, and Mildred Adams, of the speaking stage, have joined the Universal West Coast producing forces.

Muriel Ostriche, ingenue lead, late of Thanhouser and the Charles K. Harris forces, is now with Vitagraph.

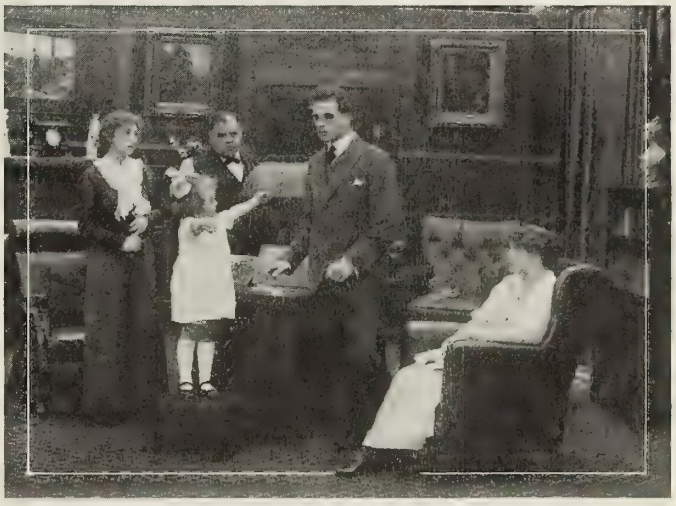
Sidney Bracey and Frank Farrington, characters and leads, are no longer with Thanhouser.

Roy McCray joins the Universal-Joker company, replacing Archer McMackin, who went to American.

Wilbur Higby, character leads, goes from Universal to Reliance.

"HIS BROTHER'S DEBT"

(American—Two Reels)



REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE plot of this picture, scheduled for release on April 5, is well conceived, and what is more commendable, it is removed from the beaten trails that have been so thoroughly worn by scenario writers in their efforts to supply the large demand for short productions.

The story is that of Arnold Downs, who sacrifices his own love for the daughter of his employer, to undo the wrong committed by his brother upon an innocent girl. The brother is killed in an accident the day before that set for the secret marriage, and the father of the girl, frantic at learning his daughter's condition, demands this sacrifice from Arnold.

For years it is a loveless marriage, and to make it worse the father of the girl to whom Arnold was engaged, not understanding the sudden marriage and blaming Arnold for jilting his daughter, is bent upon ruining him financially.

He is a competitor in the contracting business, and continually underbids Arnold's estimates. The reason for this is disclosed when the little child pieces together a torn letter, as she has been accustomed to do with picture puzzles. This information enables Arnold's wife, unknown to him, to double cross the dishonest rival, and render a bid that saves Arnold from bankruptcy. Arnold realizes that his wife has learned to love him dearly, and that he can live happily because of this love.

THE LOVELESS HOME

A good cast, headed by Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood, are instrumental in making this a consistently praiseworthy production. Not only interesting, but inspiring, inasmuch as it shows the rise of a young man through hard work and night study from a common laborer to a position of prominence.

"HEART OF MARYLAND" DRAWS HUGE CROWDS TO HIPPODROME

DURING the nine days "The Heart of Maryland" was at the New York Hippodrome, 138,209 paid admissions were attracted according to a statement from the offices of Messrs. Shubert. The picture is a Tiffany production.

Mr. Atwell, of the Shubert staff, in a statement sent to the New York newspapers, said, "Motion pictures at the New York Hippodrome was an experiment. It required great courage to attempt to convert that vast house into a photoplay theatre when the running expenses exceed ten thousand dollars a week, but within the nine days that 'The Heart of Maryland' played there just twice as many people paid admissions as in former days under the original policy of spectacles. The average weekly business drew about sixty thousand people."

"PARAMOUNT TRAVEL SERIES, NO. 1"

(Paramount—One Reel)

THE first of the Paramount travel series shows scenes taken by the Paramount camera men who stopped off for a few days at Palm Beach while en route for South America.

Scenes taken while flying over Palm Beach in a hydro-aeroplane form the most striking part of the picture. They give the spectator all the thrills of flying—from an orchestra chair, or even from the balcony. A corner of the plane is visible all though the flight. One scene shows the Royal Poinciana Hotel from above.

Palm Beach is well portrayed as the beautiful winter playground of the rich by other scenes showing stretches of beach, corners of the golf links, and the bicycle chair method of leisurely transportation. The rich semi-tropical foliage forms a striking background.

Florida orange groves are shown in interesting views, including the orange pickers at work and "close-ups" of the branches heavy with fruit.

Beautiful scenic views of the Florida rivers and Everglades are shown with the small passenger boats plying up and down. For atmosphere there are the alligators and tropical birds.

The film concludes with a comedy cartoon by C. R. McCauley, of the New York "World," showing "Skid, the Cameraman" trying to take a "close-up" of an ostrich. The bird kicks Skid and his camera into the river.

One notable feature is the fine tinting and double toning in many of the scenes. As a travel picture this and the coming issues of the series will form a valuable part of a well balanced theatre program.

SHEEHAN FINDS BUSINESS GOOD AT EXCHANGES

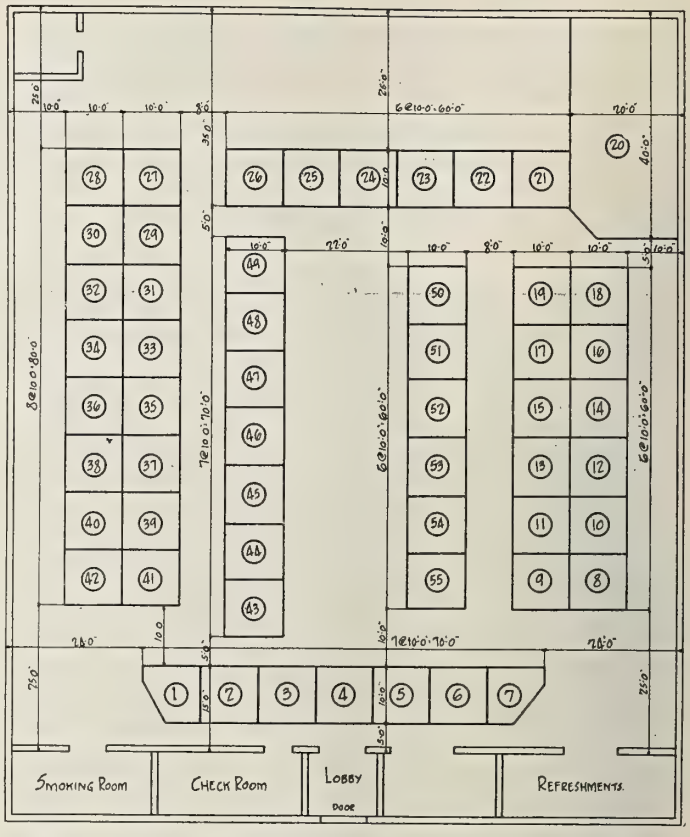
WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, William Fox, president, has just returned to his desk after a whirlwind trip through the Fox exchanges throughout the country which took him to the coast. There may be "blue" managers in the picture business, but certainly Mr. Sheehan, when seen on his return, fairly bubbled with optimism.

"This is going to be the greatest season ever," he declared. "Any pessimist about the future ought to make the same trip I have just completed. It is a sure cure for the doldrums. Confidence is in the ascendant everywhere. Exhibitors report box office receipts clambering up like the mercury in mid-August.

There is a big boom in the air. The demand is emphatically for features; big plays or books, picturized with big stars and given big productions. Serials appear to be rapidly falling off. People are more and more demanding the same standards they get in the theatre. 'Picture actors' and one and two reelers are fast losing their drawing power. Such at least is my conclusion, based on talks with more than a thousand exhibitors personally interviewed by me.

"One thing particularly struck me in my chats with exhibitors and that was that they are sick and tired to death of western scenes. Our audiences are wild for society dramas, such as "Kreutzer Sonata," "Samson" and so on, they told me."

"THE FUNNY SIDE OF JEALOUSY"



(Big U-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TAKEN from Jefferson De Angeles' old vaudeville sketch, "The Green Eyed Monster," by which many will remember him, this picture is really a fine farce, built around the able powers of its star for creating amusement and joviality.

The average husband, as outlined in many of the present pictures, is remarkably suspicious of every movement that his wife may make unknown to him, and this fact lays the foundation for not a few dramas. But here it is the main theme of a very entertaining comedy, one that has just enough action to keep the interest at the highest point, but never enough to cause it to be classed with those of the slapstick variety.

One reason which holds the picture back and will cause it to be classed with the stage productions, is the small variety of scenes that are introduced.

"THE KEY TO THE MYSTERY"

(Picture Playhouse—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

PRODUCED in Italy by an Italian company this picture has the fine light effects and elaborate settings which are always to be found in such films. There was a time when foreign pictures could be told from American ones at a glance by their superior photography.

This is no longer the case, but the settings in such productions are always characteristic. In "The Key to the Mystery" the makers have succeeded in giving the interior scenes an appearance of luxury which is in keeping with the ideas of the picture.

The cast is a good one, the acting done by all of the principals being effective without an undue amount of gesticulation during most of the picture.

The story is not as strong as has been the case with recent releases of the Picture Playhouse. It is built along rather conventional lines starting with the familiar situation of a foreign spy who is determined to obtain certain government papers which are in the possession of a trusted official.

In this instance the papers are ones which show the plans for moving part of an army, and their possession by the enemy will mean the loss of many thousands of men. The secretary is successfully robbed of them, but thanks to the pluck and activity of a faithful woman they are recovered. From the view point of neutrality it is perhaps unfortunate that the theft of the papers is accomplished by an agent of the German government.

WILLIAMSON UNDERSEA PICTURE PLAYS TO $4,200

THE Williamson submarine expedition pictures, released through the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, recently played the Tabor Grand Theatre in Denver at the twenty-five and fifty cent scale of prices to a gross business of $4,200 on the week.

The picture then left Denver and played Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Cheyenne and other points to gross business averaging four hundred dollars per day. Manager Peter McCourt, of the Tabor Grand Theatre, in Denver, rebooked the Williamson pictures for a return date, beginning Monday, March 22, and from telegraphic reports from Denver the pictures are again cleaning up at the twenty-five and fifty-cent scale.

"JACK CHANTY"

(Masterpiece-Alliance—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE fact that this is a story of the Canadian Northwest, but has nothing to do with the Mounted Police, is an indication of its refreshing quality. The producers have succeeded admirably in catching the spirit of the frontier, and this in itself is sufficient to insure a genuine interest.

"Jack Chanty" is an adaptation of Hulbert Footner's novel of the same name. It was produced in the Sierra Madre Mountains of California and along the Sacramento River. We are not over familiar with the scenery of Athabasca, but so far as we can judge California meets the demand just as it does for almost every other part of the world.

JACK CAPTURES THE FALSE INDIAN

In any case, the scenic effects are very fine, some of them being fittingly described as magnificent. The Indian villages and the trading post are convincing, and the interiors are well handled.

Max Figman, in the title role, is an honest attractive sort of hero. Mary Cranston, the quarter-breed heroine, is played by Lolita Robertson in a style which leaves little to be desired. Al Livingston is seen as the traitorous and criminal Garrod.

The others in the cast are for the most part effective. Sir Bryson Trangmar, the British Lieutenant-Governor, is perhaps a little too grotesque, but the comedy element which he and his friends provide is sufficient to justify this.

"Jack Chanty, really Malcolm Piers, has gone to the Northwest after the failure of his firm. His partner has stolen some trust funds and allowed the missing Piers to be considered the thief, although the absent man is quite ignorant of his unfortunate position. Jack is happy in the wilderness in the love of Mary, a quarter breed at the trading post. His partner comes to the place with the Lieutenant-Governor, but refuses to recognize him. The governor's daughter starts a flirtation with Jack, who is engaged to guide her father's party.

This causes Mary much grief. Later the Governor tries to jump Jack's valuable claim. These complications result in a thrilling series of adventures which end happily for Jack and his faithful sweetheart Mary.

Altogether a good story, and one which should entertain most audiences, especially those who like light melodrama, with some good comedy situations.

In and Out of Town

JAMES KIRKWOOD, who has been directing Mary Pickford in Famous Players features, is back in New York where he will continue to direct for Famous Players. Miss Pickford will remain on the Pacific coast.

Morris E. Spero and Harold A. Parker, president and treasurer of the Crown City Film Company, of Pasadena, Cal., are in New York at the Hotel McAlpin.

W. C. Toomey, special representative of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, is back from his business trip abroad.

Ingvald C. Oes, American representative of Great Northern, is on a trip which includes Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Edgar O. Brooks, who has been representing the Universal in Canada, stopped over in New York en route to Chicago, where he will represent Cosmofotofilm.

George A. Magie, special representative of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is on a flying trip to New York.

"SHADOWS OF THE HARBOR"

(Ideal-United—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Ideal company is to be highly complimented for the general realism that this picture contains. As the title implies, the story deals with life among the people of the harbor. Gangsters, harbor police and perpetual habitues of water craft are the central figures of the semi-melodramatic plot which is offered in "Shadows of the Harbor."

Imagine one of the dingiest quays that you have ever seen, or even remember several of them, and if "Shadows of the Harbor" does not embody the most characteristic points of each one we miss our guess. It is this noticeable realism of the film combined with the sensational story that will cause the picture to meet with instant success before the lovers of a red-blooded, thrilling picture.

All the members of the cast have succeeded in adapting themselves to their parts. Norbert A. Myles makes a heroic figure out of Officer Ryan, while Edna Payne appearing as Peggy, the skipper's daughter, a girl who has spent most of her life on the water, is very good. H. Stanley is fine as the reformed gangster, and Henry Aldrich, the leader of the gang, is typical of the role. Clara Horton appears as a "newsy."

PEGGY RETURNS GOOD FOR EVIL

There is sufficient action in the picture for the most exacting. Gang fights of a realistic order, chases, rescues and manly self-sacrifices unite to make the picture extremely exciting at all times. For a sensationally exciting picture this one may surely be ranked with the best of short length films.

FILM PLAY BASED ON LIFE AMONG MORMONS

INTERESTING light will be thrown on the practice of polygamy in a film play based on life among the Mormons, which is to be released soon by the United Film Service.

Ruth Kauffman has prepared the scenario for this unusual production. She is the author of a history of the Mormons entitled "The Latter-Day Saints," which was published in 1911 in England. It is accepted as the last word on the subject. Ruth Kauffman utilized first-hand facts in writing the book, having herself lived for many years among the believers in plural marriage. The play is to have as its background the actual scenes woven into the plot.

"PAGEANT OF SAN FRANCISCO"

(Pageant-Alliance—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE "Pageant of San Francisco" puts before us an outline of the history of the city, from the time that it was an unnamed spot on the Pacific coast until the present day.

Extending over so many generations, the producers have made no attempt to weave any particular story into the film. The picture is, however, more than mere historical facts. It has been put together with a keen eye to dramatic values as well as the tabloid facts of historians. Touches of comedy appear frequently and such pleasing characters as usually are found in fiction have been given prominent places in the five reels.

The picture is divided into three epochs, the first embraces the period in which Don Gasper de Portola first set his eyes on the present site of San Francisco, and subsequently the settlement of the virgin country.

Then the intervening years are passed over until the days of '49, when the discovery of gold brought many thousands to the West.

After this comes the San Francisco of the present, starting with the earthquake and fire of 1906, a few scenes of which are quite well depicted.

It is a credit to the producers that the picture seems very interesting and not at all tiring. Its educational value is great, and the introduction of familiar types is a clever idea. On the presumption that it is accurate, Native Sons should go wild over it; that is all except the fire and earthquake part, but the average motion picture audience is sure to like it, as besides being instructive it offers a welcome change from the usual five reel feature.

Photographically the picture is good throughout. Some of the most pleasing light effects have been obtained. The first epoch in which the Spaniards are the prominent figures is noticeable for its attractiveness in the manner of scenes and the aspect of the characters.

PRODUCING COMPANY FOR NEW ORLEANS

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, La., March 29.

A NEW producing film company for New Orleans seems assured following the resumption of heavy stock taking in the United Photo Plays Company, Inc., of Louisiana, with offices at 607 Whitney-Central Bank building.

The company has been here since November 1, with plans for a maximum capital of $500,000, a minimum capital of $15,000. Close to the latter figure has been reached, according to P. J. Prosser, Jr., the secretary, and several desirable motion picture factory sites have been looked over with a view of building in the near future.

E. S. Clemens, manager of the Keystone theatre, is one of the directors of the company, and is bringing to it his varied experiences as an exhibitor. The officers are: E. S. Clemens, president; P. J. Prosser, Sr., treasurer and P. J. Prosser, Jr., secretary. Included in the company's plans is the studio, to cost $38,000.

HORSLEY ZOO A WEATHER BUREAU

THE Bostock animals recently purchased by David Horsley are now being trained daily to become regular motion picture actors. It is a very difficult task to make these animals go through their different roles with a motion picture camera being cranked in front of them, and this difficult feat is only made possible through the ability of Mr. Bonavita, who seems to have an uncanny influence over the animals.

Since they have been in Los Angeles the lions have developed "barometric inclinations," and have become dependable weather prophets. In fact the people of Los Angeles depend more upon the forecasts of the lions than they do upon the weather man. A weather report is posted daily at the arena.

"THE CRIMSON CLUE"

(George Kleine—Three Parts)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS imported picture is fully up to the usual high class Kleine standard. The crimson clue refers to a blood test by which it is proved that a wanted murderer had a tubercular taint. Thus the nephew suspected of killing his uncle is freed at the trial, and let go free to his sweetheart's arms.

The picture has plenty of thrilling scenes, and many that are very beautiful. The acting and photography are excellent all the way.

Added interest is given to the plot by the fact that "Jimmy the Chink," whom the nephew had befriended, was the real criminal, led on to his act through his misguided belief that it would hold his friend. The dual thread of the story, the running down of the criminal and the vindication of the nephew, is well handled.

"THE BLACK ENVELOPE"

(Picture Playhouse—Four Reels)

SPEAKING in the strictest sense this picture is not a tragedy, although it closes with the death of one of the principal characters. Death in a true tragedy is always ignoble, but the death of the heroine in this drama is the reverse, even though she takes her own life. More important than an exact classification of the picture is the fact that it is a production which represents a high degree of dramatic excellence.

All the elements necessary in a strong play are in evidence, and so well is the story constructed that no hint is given of the climax until it is actually taking place. The development of the plot, aside from this, is so well handled that the picture might well be studied by many directors who fondly suppose their own ideas to be infallible.

A candidate for the office of mayor wins the place by means of $20,000 for campaign funds loaned to him by his sweetheart. During three months that she is away, immediately following the loan, he meets another woman and marries her.

On the return of the former sweetheart the mayor pays the loan and gets a receipt. The heart-broken woman readily listens to a proposal made by the unsuccessful suitor of the mayor's wife that together they ruin him. Going to Creelman's office the woman succeeds in stealing the receipt, which she gives to the man DeBussy. He is an editor and prints a statement concerning the loan in his paper. The mayor is a ruined man unless he can obtain the receipt.

Seeing his dire extremity his wife goes to the house of DeBussy, where she gets the receipt at the cost of her honor. However, she kills the wretch. Her woes are increased by her hard-hearted husband, who spurns her on account of her sacrifice. He realizes his folly too late, when he returns and finds his wife dead.

"ANNA KARENINA"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

BETTY NANSEN is the central figure and the most distinguished player in this adaptation of Count Leo Tolstoi's famous novel. Miss Nansen, of course, plays the unhappy Anna. Edouard Jose gives one of his usual forceful interpretations of Alexis Karenin, husband of Anna. He and Miss Nansen are two excellent exponents of the repressed emotion school of acting.

The story of "Anna Karenina" is that of a loving wife and a husband whose coldness and indifference kill her love. She is attracted by the handsome young officer, Count Vronsky. For him she deserts her husband and her good name. Her friends desert her. "Society" casts her out. At last she is suspicious even of her sweetheart. Life holds nothing pleasant in store for her so she casts herself under a train.

The denoument when Alexis Karenin makes sure that Anna loves the Count comes when Alexis tells his wife that the Count has been killed, when really the Count has only been injured.

The wife's grief gives her away. Then she finds that Vronsky lives and there is nothing to do but acknowledge her love for him. Miss Nansen is fully up to the emotional requirements of this scene, and lives up to her reputation as one of the very best emotional actresses. She has a face of rare intensity which compels attention.

Though the scene of the action is laid in Russia, the picture is plainly produced in this country.

UNIVERSAL TO HAVE STATE BEAUTY CONTESTS.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made and are being made with a leading paper in each state in the Union to conduct in conjunction with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, a nation-wide beauty contest whereby the most beautiful girl in each state where the selected paper is published will be chosen by popular vote, coupons being published in the paper for this purpose.

When the most beautiful girls are selected, they will be given a Grand Prize of a trip to Universal City, Cal., the home of the Universal Pacific Coast studios, where they will be entertained for one week. They will also be given side trips to the San Diego and Panama-Pacific Expositions. Every expense will be paid by the Universal.

The following newspapers already have agreed to conduct the beauty contest for the Universal: New York "World"; Boston "Herald" and "Traveler"; Oklahoma City, Okla., "Oklahoman"; Minneapolis, Minn., "News"; Phoenix, Ariz., "Gazette"; Salt Lake City, Utah, "Herald-Republican"; Fort Smith, Ark., "Times-Record"; Philadelphia, Pa., "Telegraph"; Indianapolis, Ind., "Indiana Times"; Cleveland, Ohio, "Leader"; Buffalo, N. Y., "Enquirer;" Wilmington, Del., "Star"; Louisville, Ky., "Post"; and Washington, D. C., "Times."

"THE WHITE GODDESS"

(Kalem—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS is the first of the three-reel pictures which the Kalem company is preparing for release on the regular program. For the initial offering of this class Alice Joyce has been selected as the head of the cast. Miss Joyce is easily the most popular of Kalem players, and her work as "The White Goddess" is fully up to the standard which she has set in less pretentious subjects.

The principal fault of the picture is its extreme improbability. The idea of a girl going to India alone with a Hindu to meet her parents is unlikely enough in itself without adding the fact that she had never heard a word from the supposed parents directly.

At the close of her college course the girl is engaged to a classmate, but goes to India with the high priest's servant. Her sweetheart distrusts the man and sails on the same steamer. The Hindu succeeds in throwing the lover off the track, and taking the girl to the temple of Larmar, delivers her to the high priest, who compels her to take part in heathen religious ceremonies, which chiefly consist of worshiping her as the white goddess. No one is allowed to look at her, but the servant disobeys and has his eyes burned out. He becomes a beggar, and is recognized by the girl's lover. This leads to the rescue of the girl after an exciting battle in which the young American braves an entire mob of fanatical worshippers.

FALSTAFF WILL BE NEW THANHOUSER BRAND

THE Thanhouser Film Corporation, beginning Friday, April 16, will inaugurate a new brand of single reel comedies. They will be released under the designation "Falstaff."

A single reel comedy bearing the Falstaff brand will be released every Friday in the Mutual program, and will replace the Princess dramas, formerly a Mutual Friday release. The Princess brand will be discontinued until further notice.

The name of the first Falstaff release is "The Actor and the Rube," a quaintly amusing farce with a distinctly clever and original turn in it. It will be followed on Friday, April 23, by "The Handicap of Beauty."

BERNSTEIN RESIGNS FROM UNIVERSAL

Los Angeles, Cal., March 29.

ISADORE BERNSTEIN has resigned as general manager of Universal City. His withdrawal has been accepted here by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. It is generally understood that Mr. Bernstein will produce motion pictures and that a company has been formed for that purpose.

Rumor names George A. Magie as his most likely successor. Mr. Magie has been special traveling representative of the Universal, with headquarters in Chicago, for about two years. He is now in New York, making his offices at the Universal's head offices at 1600 Broadway.

A new method of supervising productions went into effect last week at Universal City whereby four men, instead of one, as formerly, will have charge of the producing activities. The general manager will supervise the production of the Al Christie Nestor Feature comedies, the Francis Ford-Bison Company, the Western Bowers Company and the Robert Z. Leonard-Ella Hall-Rex Company. Don Meany, who came to the coast as a special publicity man, will supervise the back stage, where the Henry McRea 101 Bison Company, the Big U Company and the two Joker companies are working.

Stanley Twist will be in charge of the special feature company, and the Rex and Gold Seal brand producers. Marshal Steadman will supervise the Gene Gauntier, Laemmle brand and Kerrigan-Victor companies.

It was found the management of all of the producing companies was a great task for one man, and it is believed by the officers that the efficiency of the plant can be greatly increased by this innovation.

Two new companies begin work the latter part of this week. One is under the direction of Hobart Bosworth, late producer of Bosworth subjects, who will make features here.

Mildred Adams, late of a Denver stock company, has been engaged as leading woman.

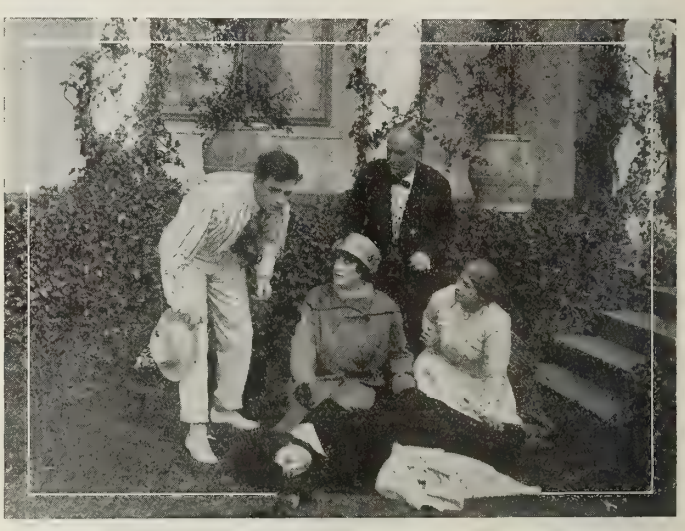
Gene Gauntier, together with her director, Jack Clark, has arrived at the Universal studio and will first take up the filming of a story of the Canadian Northwest. This company will depart for Bear Lake Valley for the exterior scenes.

FILM "PLUNDERER" IN IDEAL LOCATION.

TAKE it from William Farnum, star of the William Fox forthcoming production of "The Plunderer." Dahlonega, Ga., where the outdoor scenes of the pictures are being made, is indeed "way back o' beyond."

Dahlonega is twenty-five miles from Gainesville over a "tote" road and is a deserted mining community from which much gold was once taken. In a letter just received at the Fox home offices, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, Mr. Farnum said:

"This is sure some hotel we are stopping at. It is really a big log cabin and on chilly nights 'the stormy winds do blow' everywhere. There is a bathtub but it leaks, and there is no running water. The few natives regard the bathtub, the only one in Lumkin County, which is so mountainous it stands on end, as a curiosity.



"'If you want a thing done do it yourself.' We chop our wood and draw our own water. The other day another discomfort developed. I was sitting on a sun warmed ledge of rock and the camera was merrily clicking when I heard a hissing sound and a noise like dry peas rattling in a bladder.

"I've been West often enough to know I was sitting right on top of a den of rattlers just coming out of their torpid state. I gave a yell and a jump and got out of danger. This is a splendid place to take 'The Plunderer.' It is all big mountains, deep canons and abandoned mining shafts and machinery."

"ANCESTRY" HAS FAITHFULLY REALISTIC SETTINGS

"ANCESTRY" is a two-part Mutual program drama made by the American-Mutual company at their Santa Barbara studios, and the settings are, for the most part, Italian. The greatest care has been exercised in order to make them realistic, and faithful to every available historic detail, and the producers are rightfully congratulating themselves on the success of their efforts.

Director Henry Otto, who made the production, kept his staff busy an entire month securing the necessary effects to reproduce the furnishings which would have been in vogue in a ducal palace in the Middle Ages.

VITAGRAPH BILL FOR EASTER OFFERS CONTRASTS

TWO decidedly interesting pictures, diametrically opposite in theme and treatment, will constitute the feature part of the Vitagraph theatre program for Easter week, commencing Sunday, April 4.

Of special interest will be the appearance of Sidney Drew in a domestic drama, "Between the Two of Them," by Shannon Fife, and produced under the direction of Mr. Drew. Supported by Mrs. Drew, Paul Scardon and Courtlandt Van Dusen, Mr. Drew will present one of the most virile, interesting and clean-cut dramatic screen stories yet seen.

The second feature, "The Return of Maurice Donnelly," is a powerful preachment against capital punishment and visualizes the story of a man who through circumstantial and perjured evidence, was sentenced, electrically executed and brought back to life. Leo Delaney is seen in the chief role.

Of the shorter pictures "His Phantom Sweetheart," the story of a dream girl, produced by Ralph W. Ince and presented by Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, will attract the most attention, although "Strength," a drama by the Western Vitagraph Company, and the comedy "The Love Whip," in which Lillian Walker will be seen in a congenial role, are characteristic Vitagraph pictures.

MINUSA PUTS SCREEN IN HIPPODROME

NOBLE ONE OF FIRST FEATURE DIRECTORS

Exhibitors who are looking forward to showing "Satan Sanderson," the first release on the new Metro program, will be interested to know that the film was directed by John W. Noble, an ex-officer of the United States army, and a man who is rapidly coming to be looked upon as one of the most careful students of the art of motion picture directing.

Mr. Noble was one of the first men to direct what are called features in this country, and he has been at it ever since, except for a short time when he directed the "Mutual Girl" series, one of the biggest successes of the business commercially.

When the B. A. Rolfe Company began to look about for a man to direct the features contemplated for production, Jack Noble was picked as the man. He put on "The Three of Us," with Mabel Taliaferro for that company, and found he had produced a pronounced success.

Then he began work on "Satan Sanderson," in which Orrin Johnson is starred, and finds himself honored that his picture is to be the first release of a pretentious program.

Now he is out in California putting on "The High Road" with Valli Valli in the leading part, for the Rolfe company.

ADVERTISING MATTER FOR "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

Different from any other publicity stunt yet seen is the advertising matter sent out by the "Flying A" in regard to the serial "The Diamond from the Sky," the first chapter of which will be released in three reels on Monday, May 3, to be followed by a two-reel instalment on following Mondays.

The novel advertising matter, when unfolded, is more than two feet square and printed in two colors. It is mailed out in triangular shape, the longest side of the triangle being one side of the square. It forms an attractive and striking announcement.

For the production and exploitation of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American Film Corporation has been formed with offices at 222 South State street, Chicago. John R. Freuler is the president of the new company.

PHILBRICK LEAVES TWO-A-DAY FOR DRAKO PICTURES

The Drako Film Company, New York City, has signed Will Philbrick, a well known vaudeville headliner who left United time to appear in one-reel comedies, "Ding Bats," founded on cartoons familiar to all newspaper readers in the metropolis.

Will Philbrick has made thousands laugh from coast to coast, and his large following in the vaudeville theatres will welcome him in pictures.

The Drako company will also feature Crimmins and Gore, headliner vaudevillians who played on United time, and appeared in numerous Broadway hits.

JACKIE SAUNDERS IN "ILL-STARRED BABBIE" (Alliance Program)

Lasky Coast Studios Number Many New Stars

Fannie Ward, Charlotte Walker, Brian and Mann Soon to Leave East for California —Ina Claire Already in Hollywood—Selwyn Begins Work on "The Arab"

A WONDERFUL season of spring producing at the studios and on the ranch of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in California is just now being inaugurated.

Ina Claire is already at the Lasky studios in Hollywood, Cal., and Mr. Selwyn, who is also already on the ground, is dividing his time between the studios and the ranch, making preparations for "The Arab." Miss Claire's play, which may be described as comedy with a strong romantic interest, is named "The Wild Goose Chase," and it is a picturization of one of the most successful legitimate plays by William C. De Mille. Cecil De Mille, director general for the Lasky Company, reports to the main office that Miss Claire "screens" beautifully, and that he believes she is destined to make a remarkable hit in photodrama.

Fannie Ward, whose vehicle will soon be announced, is still in New York City, but is already making her preparations to depart and begin posing. It has been determined that she shall begin the actual posing for her Lasky debut on April 26.

Charlotte Walker, who will leave for the West before Miss Ward, is to be the star in a photodrama based on the great dramatic hit, "Kindling," which ran for an entire season in New York and for four seasons on tour.

Mr. Brian and Mr. Mann will also soon leave for the coast, where preparations are already being made to have everything in readiness for their arrival.

Work is progressing for the third Blanche Sweet release under Lasky management. The name of the production is "Stolen Goods," and the photodrama is taken from a successful stage play by Margaret Turnbull, whose book, "Keeping up with Sandy" is proving to be one of the best sellers this season.

West Coast Number Wins Quaker City

Philadelphia, March 29.

It was certainly very gratifying to hear on all sides expressions of decided approval about Motion Picture News of April 3.

Exhibitors and exchangemen vied with each other in praise of this splendid copy of up-to-date trade journalism. Said one:

"It is the best paper I ever saw; far ahead of all competitors." Another volunteered:

"The 'News' always was my favorite, and now my partiality is more than justified."

The attractive green cover struck a chord of popular fancy.

MOORE DIRECTING FLORENCE LA BADIE IN 2-REELERS

W. Eugene Moore, who directed the production of "Joseph in the Land of Egypt" and "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward," whose specialty is long photodramas, is now overseeing the two reel Thanhouser-Mutual plays in which Florence La Badie is starred.

Moore is a Canadian by birth, and when he was an actor on the legitimate stage, his work attracted favorable attention from the critics. None of his old force has deserted him, though now he confines himself mostly to directing.

He is an Elk and an officer in his local lodge which is situated near his home on Bank street in New Rochelle. Between his library and his club, where he is very popular, he divides such time as does not find him hard at work at the studios.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Sister's Solace." (Biograph. Mon., March 29.)—In this picture is presented a grotesque romance of a lover who overcomes his grief at the death of his sweetheart in his new love for her twin sister. Augusta Anderson and Charles Perley are the principals.

"The Americano." (Biograph. Tues., March 30.)—A story of Spanish America during the early nineteenth century. The Americano is the leader of a band of freebooters, but he saves Isabella de Ortega from his own men, and with her as an inspiration adopts an honest life. After several deeds of bravery he is allowed to marry Isabella. Alan Hale plays the title role, while the haughty maiden is depicted by Louise Vale.

"Just a Lark." (Biograph. Thurs., April 1.)—In spite of its improbability this is an interesting story with plenty of excitement. A girl camping out in an old prairie schooner takes an artist for an escaped convict. Later the real convict turns up and forces the artist to change clothes with him. The girl hides him from the sheriff, but he is captured. Fortunately the real bandit is found in time to save trouble. Isabel Rea and W. J. Butler are the principals.

"The Sheriff's Dilemma." (Biograph. Fri., Apr. 2.)—A fighting parson of the West is the hero of this fast moving but impossible story. He is dismissed in disgrace, but the mistake is cleared up and all ends well. In the cast are Claire McDowell, Harry Carey and Charles H. West.

"Destiny Decides." (Biograph. Sat., Apr. 3.)—The old, old plot of an innocent man arrested for murder because he happens to be found at the side of a slain man. The antiquity of the idea mars the interest. Isabel Rea and W. C. Robinson are the principals.

"The End of the Play." (Biograph. Mon., April 5.)—The familiar story of a playwright who meets an actress in the guise of a country girl at the farmer's house, where he has gone to seek a quiet place for work. Later they meet in the city and the actress' diary furnishes the plot for a romantic play, while they enjoy their own very real romance. Charles Perley and Augusta Anderson are the principals.

"The Bridge Across." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., April 6.)—This is a conventional southern romance with the regulation wealthy Northerner, the beautiful Southern girl who is in love with him and her father who thinks the Civil War is still being fought. Naturally everything comes out well in the end and the old Colonel realizes that the North turns out good men after all, something which his daughter has long known. Marie Newton and Jack Mulhall are the lovers.

"The Vindication." (Biograph. Thurs., April 8.)—The time worn story of an innocent man disgraced because of a charge of theft. The usual death bed confession clears his name. Mary Malatesta and Joseph McDermott are seen in the leading parts.

"The Miser's Legacy." (Biograph. Fri., April 9.)—This is a crime story in which a crook by an almost impossible coincidence tries to steal what turns out to be his own fortune. He is killed and the money goes to his poverty stricken family. Harry Carey and Claire McDowell are seen as the crook and his wife.

"The Brooding Heart." (Biograph. Sat., April 10.)—A husband restores his disconsolate wife to happiness after the death of her daughter by obtaining for adoption a little girl waif. Frank Newburg and Isabel Rea are seen as the young couple.

"Won Through Merit." (Edison. Mon., April 5.)—This film was produced in co-operation with the United States Civil Service Commission, and is intended to show that the faithful among the government employees are rewarded with proper advancement.

It makes an interesting story, and doubtless is in accordance with conditions, but the promotion of a boy from a $900-a-year clerkship to $3,000 per annum in the space of one year seems rather like holding out too tempting a bait.

Gladys Hullette is seen as a girl employee in the Congressional city who helps the boy in his outside study, and later becomes his wife. The U. S. Civil Service Commission appears in one scene. A novel and very effective panorama of Washington is introduced to show the course of a telephone conversation.

"A Clean Sweep." (Edison. Tues., April 6.)—This is a Wadsworth and Housman comedy of excellent quality as a laugh producer. A girl hides her caller in the fireplace when she hears her father coming. A chimney repair man is cleaning the soot from the flue above the caller, with results that are startling and hilarious. The fun is added to by father's efforts to take down the stove for the season. Gladys Leslie is seen as the girl.

"Snap Shots." (Edison. Wed., April 7.)—Herbert Prior appears in this comedy as a man who is an ardent amateur photographer. He is seen buying a photograph gallery which appears to be doing a big business taking the pictures of pretty girls. As soon as the sale is completed the girls all disappear and nothing but trouble follows. In the end the whole transaction turns out to have been a dream.

"An Unpaid Ransom." (Edison. Sat., April 10.)—This is a good detective story. A girl is kidnapped on her arrival from Europe by a man posing as the secretary of her father, who is ill. By some clever work her fiancee finds her in spite of the elaborate scheme worked out by the kidnapper to prevent the taxi driver from knowing that he had a feminine fare. The $10,000 ransom demanded is saved, and the father is spared the pain of knowing that anything has happened to his daughter. Augustus Phillips and Bessie Learn are the principals.

"The Other Woman's Picture." (Essanay. Mon., April 5.)—A friend of a married couple tries in vain to save the husband from his infatuation for another woman. He succeeds, however, in keeping the wife from learning the truth until after her husband's death, when she discovers both her husband's duplicity and the unselfish loyalty of her friend.

"The Lady of the Snows." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., April 6.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of April 3.

"The Fable of the Busy Man and the Idle Woman." (Essanay. Wed., April 7.)—This George Ade comedy played by Harry Dunkinson, Lillian Drew and Betty Scott shows the hard working business man slaving at his office at 9:30 a. m.

He answers a couple of letters, stocks up on food for the afternoon, and decides he has done enough work for one day. He recuperates from his labors at the club, and takes a taxi home where he meets his idle wife who has fired the cook, attended several sales, a suffrage meeting, afternoon tea, etc. She wants to go to a dance, but the tired business man rebels. Moral: Woman is the weaker vessel. Yes, she is!

"Sophie's Fighting Spirit." (Essanay. Thurs., April 8.)—One of the Snakeville series in which an attempt to borrow some vinegar arouses the jealousy of two wives. The result is a rough and tumble fight between the two, which is thoroughly enjoyed by their husbands until their wives forget their differences and turn upon the husbands.

"An Opal Ring." (Essanay. Two reels. Fri., April 9.)—A bet that an opal ring will buy a kiss from the first girl he meets, starts Livingstone on a strange adventure, in which he is mistaken for a detective and protects a beautiful girl from the attack of five ruffians, thereby gaining not only a kiss, but the girl's love. She later turns out to be the queen of a small Balkan state. Albert Roscoe and Beverly Bayne appear in this picture.

"Andy of the Royal Mounted." (Essanay. Sat., April 10.)—G. M. Anderson is featured in this picture as a trooper in the Canadian Mounted Police. He wins the love of a young school teacher from another trooper, who goes to the bad when he is rejected. Later, however, while escaping from the authorities, the trooper saves the school teacher's life in a runaway. Out of gratitude she prevents Andy from arresting him.

"The Thumb Prints on the Safe." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., April 7.)—The girl detective continues her rather mild exploits in this film with Cleo Ridgley in her regular role as the feminine sleuth. A wealthy gem collector discovers that his choicest rubies have been stolen from his safe. The thief's confederate is injured by him, and in revenge tells the girl detective who stole the jewels. He is arrested and confesses, thus supplying a tame story with an equally tame conclusion.

"He Was a Traveling Man." (Kalem. Fri., April 9.)—This is a slapstick comedy in which the only approach to humor is an unending succession of punching, slapping and general roughhouse. It will appeal to audiences who like the most extreme of this sort of thing, with nothing else in the picture.

"The Girl on the Trestle." (Kalem. Sat., April 10.)—Most of the episodes in the Hazards of Helen railroad series have been very good, and this is no exception. When a trestle towards which an express is rushing is blown up by an accidental discharge of dynamite, Helen reaches the other end by coasting down the grade on a freight car. She then makes her way across the burning bridge in time to run around the curve and flag the express. There are the usual fine railroad views, and the scenes showing Helen crossing the burning trestle are particularly thrilling. Helen Holmes is seen in her regular role.

"The Second Commandment." (Kalem. Three reels. Mon., April 5.—This is the second of the series of dramas which are intended to drive home the force of the Ten Commandments. In order to present a modern story introducing the second commandment, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," a situation has been created which is so forced and improbable as to rob the picture of most of the force which it might otherwise have.

The first part deals with the grandfather of the characters seen later, and following it a period of seventy years elapses. All of this is unnecessary. The story has to do with some sun worshippers in this country, and the experience of a very devout girl with one of them. Although well acted it is a dull film. Dorothy Bernard and Guy Coombs are seen in the leading roles. Robert Walker is the successful suitor.

"Ham's Harrowing Duel." (Kalem. Tues., April 6.)—This is an amusing picture of the Ham comedy series. During a quarrel with her husband a wife hits Ham, who is outside the window, with one of the missiles intended for her spouse. She tries to make up for it by giving him food, and then plans to have him help her make her husband jealous. Meantime Bud takes a hand and some very amusing incidents follows.

"The Thief in the Night." (Lubin. Fri., March 26.)—A man who through financial losses has turned burglar, brings to justice the man who ruined him when he learns that his sister's sweetheart has also been swindled in a like manner. The story is well constructed. Earle Metcalfe as the burglar is easily the most prominent in the cast. Ormi Hawley, Kempton Greene and Herbert Frontier lend effective support.

"The Siren's Reign." (Kalem. Three reels. Fri., April 2.)—This picture is a rather pointless production in that it presents a familiar situation in a purely conventional style. It is the old story of a man who disregards the quiet affection of a fine girl to marry a frivolous actress with whom he is infatuated.

Several years later, after the woman has wrecked his life, the husband gives up in despair and shoots himself. Not until then does he realize the other woman's affection towards him. When he does he places his little daughter in her care. Alice Hollister plays the part of the faithless soubrette. Harry Millarde is seen as her husband and Anna Nilsson as the unhappy girl whose worth is realized so late.

"The Gentleman Burglar." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., April 5.)—Reviewed at length in another section of this issue.

"Getting a Start in Life." (Selig. Tues., April 6.)—A Tom Mix Western comedy from a scenario written by James Oliver Curwood. The niece to whom old Si Spunk wills his cabin and acres in Montana turns out to be a charming young girl, and not an ugly old maid as the cowboys suspected from a photograph. So, instead of trying to frighten her out of town as they had planned, they all start to woo her. When they find she is already married, they are literally taken off their feet.

"Aunt Mary." (Selig. Wed., April 7.)—A drug clerk, a mercenary suitor of Hester, steals the life savings of her Aunt Mary. His guilt is later discovered, and he loses both the drug store he had purchased with the money, and all chances for the niece's hand. A traveling drug salesman is made manager of the drug store that Aunt Mary finds she owns, and becomes engaged to Hester. This is an entertaining picture produced by Thomas Santschi.

"Man Overboard." (Selig. Fri., April 9.)—A persistent suitor gains the hearty approval of the girl's hitherto unfriendly father, when he jumps overboard and rescues the father's wig. A good comedy produced by Novell MacGregor with some laughable situations.

"His Jungle Sweetheart." (Selig. Sat., April 10.)—In this jungle zoo picture Edith Johnson does some remarkably daring work with wild animals. Geils Warren directed it, and it is a thoroughly praiseworthy production.

"Mr. Jarr Takes a Night Off." (Vitagraph. Mon., Apr. 5.)—The fourth of the Jarr Family stories from the facile pen of Roy McCardell shows the adventures of the family when the head of it buys tickets to a benefit. The party is for the Human Freaks who have been hurt in their business by moving picture shows. The situations are clever and there is some good slapstick work.

"The Timid Mr. Tootles." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Tues., Apr. 6.)—The regeneration of a timid man and a lonely boarding house slavey is shown in this entertaining comedy drama. Tootles saves a child from an accident and the result is that he feels himself a man for the first time. Sidney Drew is seen in the title role with his wife as the girl.

"Easy Money." (Vitagraph. Wed., Apr. 7.)—A small boy, Bobby, substitutes some counterfeit money which is intended for stage use for a real roll of bills. Two crooks steal the counterfeits on a sleeping car, and when they present one after the dinner which they hold in celebration they are promptly arrested. A fairly entertaining comedy. Bobby Connelly is seen as the boy. James Morrison and Dorothy Kelly are in the cast.

"Her Gethsemane." (Vitagraph. Thurs., Apr. 8.)—The unselfish and remarkable love of a girl for a man grief stricken at the loss of his mother is told in this strong drama. After four years of happy married life she fears that her husband is interested in another woman, but she is soon made aware of her mistake, and the future seems brighter than ever. Anne Schaefer plays the role of the self-sacrificing woman.

"They Loved Him So." (Vitagraph. Fri., Apr. 9.)—This is an excellent comedy featuring Flora Finch and Kate Price. A middle-aged spinster engages Mike McCarty as a model for her painting of "Samson." All goes well until Mrs. McCarty learns of the fondness which the artist has been showing for her husband. Then she appears to be the only real Samson about the place.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Gussie's Day of Rest." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., Mar. 29.)—To attempt an adequate description of the riot which runs through the two reels of this picture is impossible. Sid Chaplin is featured. He has trouble with his wife in the park, and at the same time is attracted by a blonde-haired siren. The excitement starts immediately. It ends when the small auto in which the gay husband and the girl are escaping is buried in the dirt from a blast.

"Ambrose's Fury." (Keystone. Thurs., March 25.)—Ambrose is a matrimonial slave, so he readily consents to enjoy a little party with the married lady next door, who dominates her husband much the same as Ambrose's wife dominates him. Naturally things get mixed and an ending as uproarious as the rest of the picture follows. Mack Swain, Louise Fazenda nad Alice Davenport are the leads in this comedy, which will amuse all the way without giving the least offense. The supporting cast is just as capable as the chief fun makers.

"Bubbling Water." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., March 27.)—Catherine Henry is seen in the title role and Charles Gorman as her paleface husband. Learning that his daughter is in love with a man who does not meet with his approval a wealthy man takes her abroad for a year.

Her sweetheart drifts to the West, where he marries an Indian girl by the tribal ceremony. A year later he plans to visit his home in the East, and his dusky wife is heartbroken as she knows that once there he will never come back.

Her former lover, an Indian, learns of the condition, and by telling the white man that he is about to be a father induces him to return and brings about a complete reconciliation.

"The Old Chemist." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., March 28.)—A chemist and his nephew work in the older man's laboratory, but quarrrel so much that the youth decides to leave.

That day his uncle accidentally poisons a sandwich which he has made for himself. As he falls dead his head strikes a chair. On the testimony of a negro cook the nephew is arrested and charged with murder. A scientist is called in and discovers the remains of the sandwich. Working from this clue he easily clears the young man, whose sweetheart has been firm in her belief in him. Happiness follows. Thomas Jefferson is seen as the old chemist. Olive Adair and Frank Bennett appear as the girl and her falsely accused fiance.

"Mixed Values." (Komic. Sun., March 28.)—A wealthy young man and his clerk discuss their engagements with the mutual interest of all lovers. By accident they exchange engagement rings. When the rich man's sweetheart discovers that he has given her a cheap imitation she breaks the engagement. After much amusing trouble everything is straightened and happiness is restored. Fay Tincher is seen as the clerk's sweetheart, her lover being Elmer Booth. Chet Whitney plays the role of the rich lover. A good comedy well acted.

"The Jeweled Dagger of Fate." (Reliance. Mon., March 29.)—The young jeweler's clerk who suspects the character of the millionaire lover of his employer's daughter, succeeds in gaining a confession from his rival in a manner that is less conventional than the rest of the story. This was made by the Eastern Reliance Company, and is not as good as its predecessors. The antique shop is such a realistic set that it will surely be noticed. The story, however, and the acting are much below the average, and the climax is ineffective.

"An Image from the Past." (Majestic. Tues., March 30.)—A simple drama that is produced so well that it makes a big appeal despite its somewhat worn theme. The daughter marries against her father's wishes, and he is only reconciled by meeting his little grand children who are begging on the street. The situations are new in this. Wilbur Higby is the father and Signue Auen is his daughter.

"The Primitive Spirit." (Reliance. Wed., March 31.)—The man who in his earlier days has been brought up as a mother's boy turns out to be a disgraceful coward until when visiting his mine in the west he is bullied by his superintendent. At this the old fighting spirit of his father asserts itself, and he becomes a man in a minute.

This is a strong story which will surely please the most critical. It has been effectively produced by Joseph Belmont, who by his excellent handling of each scene of the reel and the picture as a whole has well earned the title of director.

"Mutual Weekly. No. 13." (Thurs., April 1.)—Scenes connected with the death of Lincoln Beachy are of unquestionable interest, while views of the baseball spring training camps will entertain the followers of the great American game. War scenes and a number of other timely topics complete this reel.

"His Brother's Debt." (American. Two reels. Mon., April 5.)—Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

"The Once Over." (Beauty. Tues., April 6.)—Tom picks up Bob's girl, and Bob is so broken-hearted that he make a bluff at committing suicide, which only serves to land him in the cooler. While he is there Tom hastily marries the girl, who turns out to be a widow with four children, so Bob is the one who laughs last. Virginia Kirtley is attractive in this comedy.

"The Schemers." (Princess. Fri., April 2.)—A neighboring bachelor and widow are irreconcilable until a young relative of each appears. The two young people fall in love and finally the old folks are brought together through a matrimonial agency. This reel has a number of humorous moments in it despite its apparent age. John Reinhard and Carey L. Hastings are the old people.

"The Life Worth While." (Thanhouser. Sun., April 4.)—Another version of the old Scrooge story. A stingy old bachelor reforms when an explosion causes temporary blindness, and he is fondly cared for by his poverty stricken relatives. Both the Thanhouser twins and the kidlet appear in this. Riley Chamberlain is the old man.

"The Cycle of Hatred." (Thanhouser. Tues., April 6.)—In which a widow tries her level best to win a young doctor's heart, which is already lost to another. Finally, being unsuccessful, her love turns to an equally passionate hate. She sends a bouquet of poisoned flowers to the man, but instead they fall into the hands of her little child.

After an awful tragedy has been narrowly averted the woman regains her senses. This picture presents a most unnatural appearance. It is unconvincing in some scenes, and there seems to be no obvious necessity for the introduction of Carey L. Hastings as the Hindu servant.

Flo La Badie and Morris Foster are the lovers and their acting is, as usual, good, but the woman who impersonates the widow overdoes her part. Helen Badgley is the child.

"Molly of the Mountains." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., April 7.)—The moonshiner's daughter is wronged by an engineer, but later he pays the penalty when he is mistaken for the moonshiner and is shot by the revenue officers. This is rather an old story, but several new twists to the plot cause it to be quite interesting. The picture, however, is not put together with the ease and skill which are obvious in most of the Ince pictures. The scenes are realistic and the photography good. Rhea Mitchell is the girl. The old moonshiner makes a sympathetic figure.

"The Touch of Love." (American. Wed., April 7.)—Vivian Rich, Harry Von Meter and Charlotte Burton appear in this drama of a mining camp. A big hearted woman sacrifices her love for a man in order that he may marry the girl he cares for.

"The Problem." (American. Fri., April 9.)—Another use is made of a dream to provide the plot for this story. Consequently a slight inconsistency or two cannot be criticised. The dream serves to show an ambitious mother the folly of asking her daughter to marry for money, and she consents to her marrying the man she loves. Ed. Coxen and Winifred Greenwood are featured in this picture.

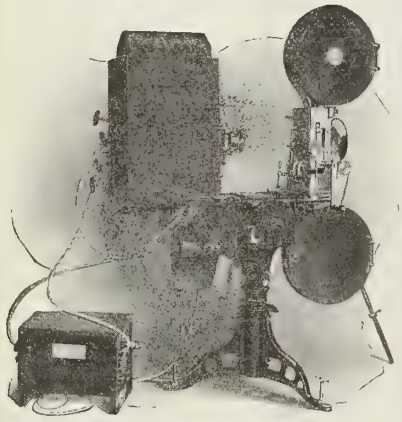
"The Winged Messenger." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., April 8.)—Two wireless operators are rivals for the hand of the same girl. The one who wins her takes a position as operator on a vessel, while the other is employed in a land station. The ship catches fire, and the operator sends for help. His message reaches the other's station. He destroys it, believing that then his way will be clear to marry the girl.

The captain of the ship and the operator are the only survivors, but they are rescued, and when they arrive home the perfidy of the other man is revealed. A very engaging offering, convincing all the time except for the act of the villain. Richard Staunton, Howard Hickman and Elizabeth Burbridge are the principals.

"The Rough Neck." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., April 9.)—In which a plain mine superintendent suddenly finds himself in charge of his former employer's two children who regard him as a rough neck and an up-start.

He has a difficult time convincing them of his honesty and well-meaning intention, but finally accomplishes it by showing up the aspiring fiancee of the girl. This picture boasts of no complicated plot, but at the same time is one of the best of the recent New York motion picture offerings. Its appeal is universal, and no one will be able to look at the picture without realizing its excellent qualities and the thoughtful work which was evidently put in it.

William S. Hart plays the title role, and invests it with all the requirements of the part, which suits him exactly. His facial expressions are as strong and significant as ever. Enid Markey plays opposite him in the role of the snobbish girl, who at first looks down upon him and then up to him, and finally forces his proposal.



UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 160." (Wed., March 31.)—One may always be sure of a worthy reel in the Universal, and this number is no exception to the general rule. The usual quota of war scenes are as interesting as ever, while domestic occurrences are not lacking in number or in interest.

"The Guardian of the Flock." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., April 5.)—The Spaniard whose affections have been refused by the girl, swears to be avenged on his successful rival.

But the sight of the child, together with a few smaller incidents, work on him so that the hatred in his heart turns to love. This was written and produced by Jacques Jaccard, and Warren Kerrigan is the Spaniard, while Vera Sisson and George Periolat complete the cast of principals.

"A MACHINE WITH THE WORRY TAKEN OUT OF IT"

"THE MASTER MODEL"

Mr. Harry Kabatchnick, with Ascher's Colonial, New York City, writes under date of March 23d:

"I am at present operating two of your MASTER MODEL machines. Besides being built like a battleship in construction to meet the heavy grind, it produces a picture equal to a painting on the wall. It's a machine with the worry taken out of it."

Some of the scenes have been drawn out because of their beauty, and would be more powerful if shortened a bit, but the picture is a good one for all that. The last scene, the cloud silhoutte effect is notable for its artistry, and reminds one of other Jaccard pictures.

"The Story the Clock Told." (Imp. Mon., April 5.)—The father who has refused his ward permission to marry his daughter, falls asleep in his chair and dreams some probable disagreeable consequences coming as the result of his groundless opposition.

The dream appears in the face of a clock, which lends a touch of novelty to the picture. Alan Holubar and Frances Nelson are the lovers, and Howard Crampton the father. The story was produced by Stuart Paton.

"Wedding Bells Shall Ring." (Joker. Mon., April 5.)—To avenge herself the maid who has received a severe scolding from her mistress sends a photograph of the lady to a matrimonial agency, with the result that madam is beset with many varieties of lovers. A policeman who loves the maid, ejects the suitors for the sum of five hundred dollars, which enables him to marry. Max Asher and Gale Henry are in this comedy, which has such an uproarious plot that well known faces are not needed to make it laughable. Allen Curtis directed and Clarence Badger prepared the scenario.

"The Mysterious Contragrav." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., April 6.)—This drama is written around a mythical invention called the contragrav, an electrical appliance which, when attached to a human being, will enable the wearer to resist the force of gravity.

Characteristic of Henry McRae's other productions, this one is constructed in a clear manner and worked out well. There are several thrillers registered in the course of the plot's development. The aeroplane exploded in midair will create a sensation, while the heroine floating about in the limpid atmosphere by means of the contragrav is an ingenious piece of technical work.

Another point of interest is that Frank L. Stites, the aviator who was recently killed during the opening exercises at Universal City, appears throughout the picture as the hero. Then Luel Warrington takes a daring leap from her automobile just before she plunges over a high cliff in full sight of the spectators. Sherman Bainbridge, William Clifford and Marie Walcamp are also in the cast. This feature is exciting at every moment, and will be heartily enjoyed.

"Putting One Over." (Big U. Tues., April 6.)—A conventional story forms the main portion of this reel, but a novel and totally unexpected finale changes the entire aspect of the picture from one of tiring similarity to refreshing originality. A murderer is caught by a detective, to whom he tells a story that would seem to justify his act.

The detective is on the point of relenting, when one of the murderer's pals is brought in. His words entirely discount the man's ruse and he is taken to jail. Murdock MacQuarrie has a strong character part as the burglar, while Agnes Vernon appears in his story.

"Eddie's Little Nightmare." (Nestor. Thurs., April 6.)—Eddie falls asleep while waiting for his fiancee, and dreams of being married and blessed with a goodly number of children, augmented by those of the neighbors, which drive him crazy when he is supposed to look after them. This comedy, written by Al Christie and produced by Eddie Lyons, is convulsively laughable from start to finish. Its situations are exaggerated but human, which is partly responsible for its success. Victoria Forde appears as the wife, while Eddie Lyons himself is the husband.

"The Captive." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., April 7.)—In the cattle rustler who has been stealing her grandfather's animals the girl meets her unknown father, who takes her prisoner. She is rescued by her lover, but only after the man has been killed. The first part of this picture is supposed to transpire in the east, and then the plot carries all the characters to the west, where it terminates.

The story is so constructed that it is interesting all the time, and good photography and scenes characteristic of the expansive west add materially to its artistic value. Frank Lloyd directed the picture, and is also seen as the heavy, a role which he is thoroughly at home in. Gretchen Lederer is his daughter, while Marc Robbins is the old man. Millard K. Wilson is the lover.

"The Fatal Note." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., April 7.)—The gallant swain is engaged to be married. At the breakfast before the wedding the defeated rival slips him a note under the table, thinking that it has fallen into the hands of the girl he still loves. Of course a grand rough house ensues ending in a house fight, in which some of the funniest scenes in the picture occur. Billie Ritchie and Peggy Pearce are the leads. This comedy ought to amuse, although nothing original is introduced until near its termination. Several rather risque scenes appear.

"The Heart Breaker." (Big U. Two reels. Thurs., April 8.)—A comedy showing the havoc which a carefree girl (Muriel Ostriche) brought on her own head and on those of a good many others while passing the time in boarding school.

The scenes in which the girl is enticing the old man by a shameless display of her nether limbs will in all probability be cut out; if they are not they ought to be. The photography is poor in several scenes, but aside from this the picture is good. Lorimer Johnson directed the work, while Charles Ogle is seen as the professor.

"In the Clutch of the Emperor." (Rex. Thurs., April 8.)—An engaging drama portraying the manner in which a young American protected a Russian girl from the pursuing police. Most of the action takes place on board ship. The climax is comical in nature, and there are little touches of comedy throughout the reel. Clem Eason produced the picture. In the cast are Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joseph Girard.

"The Butler's Busted Romance." (Sterling. Thurs., April 8.)—Ernest Shields and Louise Fazenda were directed by David Kirkland in this comedy, and succeeded in making a very excellent one. Its situations are well developed by the two principals and the supporting cast, and the dirty comedy has been left out, showing a wise move on the director's part. Learning that his master's wife-to-be is to arrive at the house, he takes off his master and the results are of course humorous.

"The Broken Toy." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., April 9.)—A pathetic story in which the child brings about the reunion of her father and mother, who have been separated for many years. The old plot, which is the basis of this picture, is made to appear unconventional by the manner in which the picture in produced, namely, the difficult straits in which the woman is struggling are shown first, and the rest of the picture follows as she dreams of the past.

The picture will draw on the sympathies, but it seems that it could have been produced better. The interest is not very well held and the acting could have been better.

"The Rustle of a Skirt." (Victor. Fri., April 9.)—The confirmed woman hater meets his Waterloo in the person of his partner's sister. She has to force his proposal, but once it's over, the man makes one exception to his antagonistic attitude toward the feminine gender.

Matt Moore and Mary Fuller play the leads in this comedy, which furnishes them an excellent vehicle to appear in. Lucius Henderson directed the reel, which will certainly be a credit to his name as it is of a nature that any audience will enjoy.

"The Baby's Fault." (Nestor. Fri., April 9.)—Mr. Newlywed repairs to a poker game and takes his baby along, too. Going home he forgets it and the complications follow, which are quite dry, chiefly concern the man, his wife and a friend, who, like all friends, makes a mess of things. Lee Moran, Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon were directed by Al Christie in this comedy, which will amuse in a few scenes.

"And They Called Him Hero." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 10.)—A Civil War drama put on by Francis Ford, relying for the most part on the gruesome realism of its battle scenes to maintain the interest. The love story is attractive in the scenes preceding the commencement of the war, but following it is almost hopelessly unfathomable.

The photography is good all the way through, the battle scenes have been effectively enacted by a collection of supernumeraries whose main idea of warfare is the dying part. One good panoramic view is given. The scenario was prepared by Grace Cunard, while Mina Cunard, her sister, and Francis Ford appear in the main roles.

"The Law of the Open." (Powers. Sat., April 10.)—The good-for-nothing leaves his wife and goes west to make a living, but here he takes to cattle stealing, and is hanged the day his wife arrives. The rest of the boys conceal the truth from her.

This picture is produced in a manner which is most effective and gripping, until the last few scenes, when the action appears unconvincing and so out of place that it is almost laughable. In its entirety the picture will appeal, and it will be a hit with those whose ideas of life are limited. Sidney Ayres produced the picture, while Val Paul and Doris Pawn play the principal parts. The scenes and photography are gorgeous.

"Fares Please." (Joker. Sat., April 10.)—The rivalry of the lovers is strong, especially when one has a trolley car and the other a Ford as enticements. Archer McMakin produced this comedy which contains a new idea, and many new situations which are bound to produce the desired humorous results. Ernest Shields, Eddie Boland and Queenie Rosson are in the cast.

IVAN PRODUCTIONS SIGNS MADAM LOBEL

IVAN ABRAMSON, director of The Ivan Film Productions, will shortly present for the first time on the screen a star of international fame, Madam Malvine Lobel, who is to play the leading role, Blanche Scott, that of a famous American actress, in a dramatic photoplay in five parts, entitled "The Unwelcome Wife," written expressly for her by Ivan Abramson.

Madam Malvine Lobel, in her recent tour of England and the continent, was heralded by the foreign press, and the American theatre-going public still remembers her conception and portrayal of the title roles in "Madame X," "Everywoman" and various Shakespearean characters.

"The Unwelcome Wife" contains another star part, Elsie Edmonds, for which part Mr. Abramson has engaged the services of Vivian Prescott, who with her brilliant interpretations has endeared herself in the hearts of the public throughout the world. William B. McNulty, who has played leads with Essanay, Biograph, Pathé and other producers, was secured for the leading male role, Martin Scott.

In the supporting cast of the drama are such artists as Edward J. McKim, Elizabeth, Pearl Ganz, D. L. Dunn, Grace Beebe

"DISTRICT ATTORNEY" A STRONG LUBIN RELEASE

THE Lubin three-reel picture entitled "The District Attorney" is a political story of an unusually interesting type. The principal events of the picture are founded on actual occurrences which have taken place in various cities under the control of a ring of political grafters.

The gang have a swindling scheme on foot, but some one is sure to be caught, and sent to jail. A poor clerk is hired to be the scapegoat, and is to get $50,000 and a pardon after a few months as a recompense. The gang prove traitors, and three years pass with nothing done about the pardon.

The prisoner's sweetheart then starts a vigorous campaign to get justice for her lover and put the grafters behind the bars. She is tricked, but succeeds after just avoiding failure. The innocent man is freed, and jail awaits the boss if he recovers from what appears to be a fatal illness.

Scene from "A DEADLY HATE"

Scene from "A WOMAN'S REVENGE"

The Finished Artist, Marc MacDermott

in a marvellous double-role characterization in

The 3-Act Feature, "A DEADLY HATE"

Released Monday, April 12th—3000 feet.

The sharp dramatic contrast between a criminal-minded, murderous epileptic and an honorable twin brother gives Marc MacDermott the opportunity to reveal his remarkable power in characterization. The dramatic tenseness is astonishing, as many of the strongest scenes are where Mr. MacDermott is playing against himself—done, of course, by some remarkable double exposures which are so perfect as to be the height of illusion. Ably supported by the new Edison leading woman, Margaret Prussing.

Miriam Nesbitt Scores Again as the Girl Criminal in "A Woman's Revenge"

Another play of bitter blood among the under world, by the author of the strong "Killed Against Orders"—Mary Rider. Miriam Nesbitt in the role of a clever girl criminal against whom a degenerate wealthy man does an injustice—she swears revenge. In this character shading, Miss Nesbitt places on the screen an original, resourceful and entirely fascinating woman with the best impulses welling up despite the rough exterior. Released Friday, April 16th—2,000 feet.

Forget the Blue Monday Dope!

Poetic Justice of Omar Khan

A Selig Pictureplay in two reels, released Monday, April 12. Amir Pasha dreams of a white woman for his harem — Omar Khan supplies the woman and avenges the honor of his dearest friend. Guy Oliver, Stella Razeto, Eugenie Besserer and other stars appear.

BLUE MONDAY will be transformed to a Prosperous Monday if you will book the Selig Program. Just get arm in arm with the honest-to-goodness gloom extinguishers put forth by the house of Selig and make Monday a gay day and a pay day. Mrs. Murphy's Cooks

"Mrs. Murphy's Cooks" is a Selig Western Comedy in one reel, to be released Tuesday, April 13. The story is away above the ordinary as a laugh-provoker. Mrs. Murphy conducts a boarding house in a small western town and has trouble in keeping a cook. Even Tom Mix tries his hand at baking biscuit. A strolling tragedian finally comes along—But see it and laugh!

Iole, The Christian

"Iole, the Christian" is a Selig drama in one reel, to be released Wednesday, April 14. It is a story of ancient Rome. We have placed more care and thought in producing this one-reel drama than do many manufacturers in producing multiple reel features of similar character.

The Strength of a Samson

Selig burlesque comedy in one reel, released Friday, April 16. A farce without a slapstick.

"IT'S SAN FRANCISCO!"

Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of America to Hold Fifth Annual National Convention in SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA!

JULY 13th TO 16th INCLUSIVE!

Exhibitors and Manufacturers Overwhelmingly Favor Selection of the Coast City!

CONDITIONS CONCERNING SELECTION OF SAN FRANCISCO BEST SET FORTH IN THE FOLLOWING LETTER FROM NATIONAL PRESIDENT PEARCE

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

OFFICE OF THE NATIONAL PRESIDENT, BALTIMORE, MD.

March 30th, 1915.

TO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY OF AMERICA:

Gentlemen:

In December last, I sent a communication to the Manufacturers, asking their opinion as to the city in which the next Annual Convention should be held. They were almost unanimous in their choice of San Francisco!

Being equally anxious to hear from the Exhibitors, to get their views on the same point, a coupon was recently published in the various Trade Journals, giving each Exhibitor an opportunity to name his choice of a city for the Convention.

Except for the smallest number imaginable, they voted for San Francisco and I want to express the sincere appreciation of the M. P. E. L. of A. to both Exhibitors and Manufacturers for their promptness in making known their choice.

I had hoped to make a personal reply to each and every one from whom we heard on the point, but when the replies increased, till they got into the thousands, this was simply a physical impossibility, and I am taking this means to attain the same end.

Full and complete arrangements for the convenience and comfort of every Exhibitor attending will be made in due time. This entire matter will be in the hands of a Committee from the San Francisco League, of which Mr. M. E. Cory, the Second National Vice President will be the Chairman.

Pending the time when more detailed arrangements can be made, let each man at least make up his mind to be present at this Convention, unquestionably the most enjoyable and really beneficial the League has ever held.

Very truly yours,

MARION S. PEARCE,
National President M. P. E. L. of A.

WHY SAN FRANCISCO SHOULD ATTRACT THE EXHIBITORS.

The choice of San Francisco for the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in July is a happy one. The reasons for the wisdom of such a choice are manifold.

The city is in the State identified with the greatest percentage of film production, and visiting exhibitors will have the feeling of being in the very atmosphere of the industry.

Then there is climate. While other parts of the United States swelter in the fierce heat of a July sun, San Francisco is blessed with cool winds and an equable temperature at this season. Delegates and visitors will be able to remain in the convention hall with comfort—not a slight consideration in the transaction of business which must be done with thoroughness and despatch.

The selection of San Francisco will appeal on another ground. History and romance envelop the spot as with a magic veil. The name alone, without the city's pleasant associations, its noble past and glorious, impressive future, exercises a peculiar fascination on those who hear it for the first time. Those who once walk the enchanting thoroughfares of the city always long to visit San Francisco again.

Any place that casts such a spell on its visitors must have attractions making it ideal for a convention gathering.

A Tremendous 3rd WEEK

The success of the 3rd Episode of the Black Box was so huge that if we were to tell you the actual facts you would hardly believe it possible.

In point of attendance, practically all serial records were smashed from one end of the country to the other. In point of interest and fascinating action, the 3rd Episode of the Black Box was a knockout.

We might call the insertion of this page ad. in Motion Picture News money partially wasted, for it is now unnecessary to persuade exhibitors to book the Black Box; it's getting to be so that much care is necessary in arranging booking dates, so huge has been the number of requests for bookings all over America.

Which all goes to prove that Universal Serials are not dead, in fact, they are very much alive; so much alive that where other serials have fallen sadly by the wayside, Universal Serials have won, are winning and will continue to win.

The public want Universal Serials—and the sooner All Exhibitors from one end of the country to the other, realize that there's big money in Universal Serials, just so soon will Exhibitors begin to insure themselves 15 week attendance records continuously.

If you failed to book the Black Box, get busy and book it for your House immediately. Wire your nearest Exchange and in the meantime, look out for a lot of hot air and bombastic claims of Feature Serial makers????? Hundreds of Exhibitors who have read and digested the immense quantities of "bull" in serial ads. and who have fallen for that "bull" are now sadder and wiser men. Play safe. Hook up with the BIGGEST IN THE WORLD. The Universal. This practically guarantees your success if on your side you will only use the brains God gave you. When the Universal does it—it's huge. When the Universal says it—it's true. The big money is in sight for you. A copy of the huge Advertising Campaign book is free for the asking. Send for it today, then book the Black Box for your House within the hour.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO TAKE A CHANCE ON CHEAPLY MADE MACHINES?

Read Mr. Smith's unsolicited letter.

The Motiograph will not wear out with its ground and hardened parts.

Mattawamkeag, Me., Mar. 20th, 1915.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO.

Dear Sirs:—Find enclosed 30 cents for two Film Tension Springs for my Motiograph Machine, 1909 Model.

I purchased this machine of you in May, 1909, and used it ever since, have paid out only 90 cents for repairs and have never lost a show on any account, consider it the best machine made.

Yours truly,

JOHN SMITH.

Mr. Smith's machine is worth $100.00 today. At that rate his machine has cost him less than $2.00 per month.

Can you afford to purchase a machine that will last 12 to 15 months and which will cost you 20 to 25 dollars per month when you can buy a machine at the cost of $2.00 per month that will project just as good and even better pictures?

When you install the MOTIOGRAPH in your booth your show is insured against machine trouble and the upkeep is small.

Don't take a chance on a cheaper made machine. Get the best, it is the cheapest in the end.

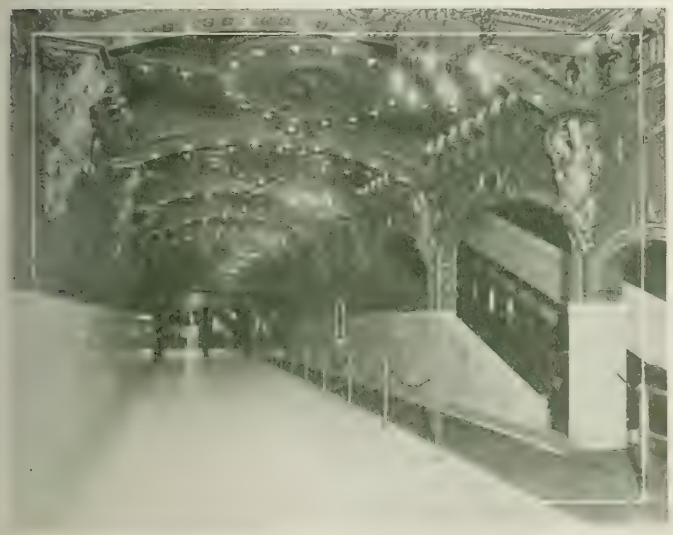
Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

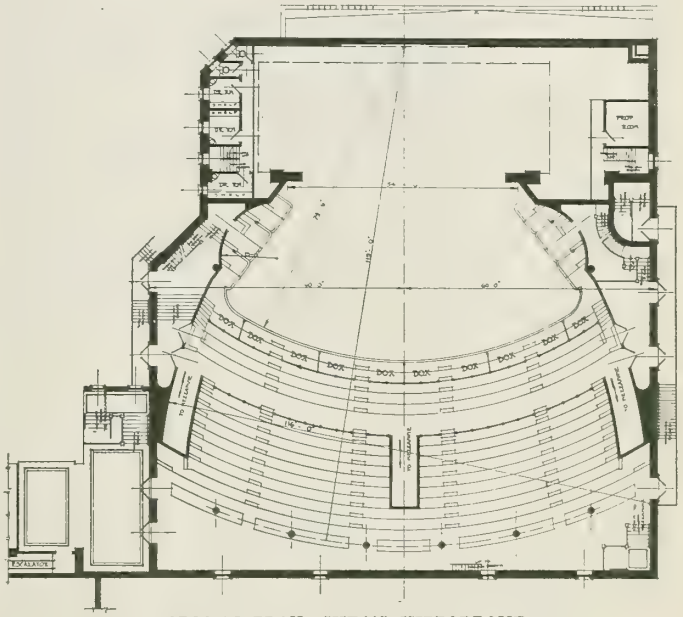


BUFFALO'S PHOTOPLAY THEATRE DE LUXE

SHEA'S HIPPODROME, in Main street near Chippewa, Buffalo, N. Y., which was opened August 31, 1914, is one of the largest and most palatial motion picture theatres in the country. The Hippodrome, which seats 2,250 persons, is located in the Buffalo business section. It policy is a continuous performance from 12 o'clock noon till eleven at night with ten-cent admission in the afternoon and ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents for the evening performance.

GROUND FLOOR PLAN, SHEA'S HIPPODROME, BUFFALO, NEW YORK

Six or seven reels are shown always including some meritorious feature.



LOBBY, SHOWING ESCALATOR, SHEA'S HIPPODROME

In fact, the Hippodrome is a splendid type of the better class of motion picture theatre and is a good representative of the many pretentious houses which are being built all over the country. It shows good pictures, well presented, in an attractive, big theatre with orchestra of fifteen pieces and an organ and withal the appurtenances, such as high class vocal and instrumental music and rich but tasteful decorations.

When Mr. Shea purchased the theatre site from B. F. Keith his plan was to erect a thoroughly up-to-date theatre. How he succeeded may best be told by a detailed description of the Hippodrome.

The theatre itself is constructed of steel, brick and concrete. The owner is the McNaughton Realty Company. Plans were drawn by Leon H. Lempert & Son, architects, of Rochester. Indirect lighting is used throughout.

BALCONY PLAN, SHEA'S HIPPODROME

The seating capacity is 1,250 on the main floor and 1,000 in the balcony, including the boxes. The 2,020 chairs were installed by the American Seating Company. Henry Marcus is the manager.

Two projection machines are used with a throw of 104 feet. four men constitute the operating staff. Music is furnished by an orchestra of fifteen pieces and a $25,000 orchestral organ, installed by the Smith Organ Works of North Tonawanda, N. Y. The theatre employees total fifty. Paramount features, and selected short subjects are shown.

The Hippodrome advertises in six daily papers and in addition uses about a dozen illuminated billboards besides other poster advertising.

Ablaze With Light

Entering the theatre one first sees the lobby, 112 feet deep and 21 feet wide, ablaze with 700 electric lights hidden in the beamed ceiling, and decorated in ivory and gold. The floor is of mosaic tile and a six-foot wainscot of English veined marble runs around the lobby.

Six display frames, prominently placed, show photographs of scenes from current and coming attractions.

Leaving the lobby one enters the foyer, which sweeps 130 feet to the exit beyond on Pearl street. This is carpeted in deep, rich

Making Clear Pictures With Alternating Current

LIVING in the atmosphere of incessant competition, the picture theatre manager has long since realized that to draw the crowd to his house he must make it attractive.

Not only must he have a well-ventilated auditorium, up-to-date lighting and advertising, an attractive lobby and, of course, good pictures, but he also must furnish a light that will show the film to the best advantage.

The outside attractions will bring the patron to the house, but if the picture and its presentation do not leave a pleasant impression he is not likely to return. Where alternating current is used for projection work, it is practically impossible to secure a satisfactory picture because of the unsteadiness and noise of the arc and the low intensity of the light.

Connections for Rectifier and Economy Coil With Two Motion Picture Machines

30 Seconds before end of reel throw Switch to Right

This has been overcome, however, as is generally known, by the use of a mercury rectifier into direct current, which gives a clear, steady white light especially adapted for projection purposes. Alternating current, in addition to the noise, low intensity and flicker, is said frequently to produce eye strain that is not only objectionable, but often so serious in its consequences that several states have formulated laws against its use for moving pictures.

The critical and exacting public of today has demanded that there be no appreciable interval of waiting between the end of one reel and the beginning of the next. The operator has promptly responded to this demand by furnishing two machines, keeping one "loaded" while the other is operating.

Where the size of the theatre and equipment only justifies the use of a single rectifier, the problem of making one reel blend into the other would seem to be without a solution. It has, however, been happily solved by some Philadelphia operators with a very ingenious but simple arrangement.

Westinghouse Rectifier

The only equipment used in obtaining this solution consists of a four-pole double-throw switch, a Westinghouse type AL rectifier for moving picture work, and a compensator or economy coil much as is generally found in a theatre using alternating current.

By means of this scheme, which, it will be noted, involves the use of practically no additional apparatus to that already available, a change can be made from one reel to another without its being detected by the patrons. The scheme will be easily understood by referring to the accompanying diagram.

The operator, we will say, is showing the first reel of a feature film on machine No. 1 fed from the rectifier, the switch being thrown to the left.

About one minute before the end of the reel is reached, he throws the switch to the right, starting the arc on machine No. 2 through the rectifier, while machine No. 1 is transferred to the alternating current circuit through the compensator, and the reel is completed in this manner.

This gives the carbons on No. 2 time to burn to their proper brilliancy, ready for beginning the second reel.

The process is repeated towards the end of the second reel on No. 2 machine. The procedure may be reversed if desired; that is, starting No. 2 machine on the alternating current and later throwing on the direct current. However, the first mentioned method will be found more satisfactory, as it takes a few seconds for the direct current to burn the carbons properly while the alternating current causes the carbons to splutter under all conditions, but less when they are already heated by the direct current.

Electrician Delivers Lecture to Operators in Edmonton

SECOND in the list of lectures being conducted for the benefit of the Edmonton Motion Picture Operators Union, I. A. T. S. E. Local No. 350, Edmonton, Canada, was given Sunday afternoon, March 21, when the entire membership was taken to the Alberta government power house by A. E. Todd, government electrician.

The object of the series of lectures and demonstrations is to impress upon the members of the local union the necessity of knowing all about electricity and to be conversant with the requirements of the provincial censor, both in the matter of clean films and equipment for the protection of patrons and house employes.

Patents Company Sues Five Concerns

THE Motion Picture Patents Company has begun suit under its Latham Loop Patent against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, the Universal Film Exchange of New York, and the Prague Amusement Company, and also against the Greater New York Film Rental Company and the William Fox Amusement Company.

The Universal Film Exchange of New York handles motion pictures produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and the Prague Amusement Company is one of its customers. The William Fox Amusement Company is a customer of the Greater New York Film Rental Company.

The complaint in the first suit was filed on March 18, and in the suit against the Greater New York Film Rental Company on March 29, both in the United States Court for the Southern District of New York.

The suits are in the usual form for an injunction restraining the further infringement of the patent and for an accounting of profits and damages, and allege that the defendants in each suit have been jointly infringing the patent.

Genter to Bring Out Fireproof Screen

THE plant of the J. H. Genter Company, Inc., Newburgh, N. Y., is one of the most completely equipped for the manufacture of screens in this country. The building itself is one hundred feet in length and six stories high. An underground vault running to the center of the street is the mixing department, and is sixteen feet below the sidewalk.

The concern is able to handle from ten to twenty thousand yards of coated metalized goods. The top floor of the factory is used for coating. It contains a machine capable of coating approximately two miles of cloth a week. This is a new machine designed by Mr. Genter. The extreme width of the machine is seventeen feet by forty-eight feet.

The factory is equipped to turn out a screen every fifteen minutes of the day, regardless of size. It is a common thing for the company to turn out screens as high as twenty-four by twenty-eight feet. The company has made many such shipments to England, China and Japan.

The firm also furnishes many other houses. Genter is supplying the Pathescope Company exclusively with its screens. It sold Pathescope 1,000 Mirroroides within the last twelve months. The present sales of the Genter people in the largest sizes are 8,418. Even in the dull season Genter ships twenty screens a week, and often ships as high as sixty screens a week.

In Newburgh, where the factory is located, a screen measuring twenty-two feet by twenty-six feet is in use in the Academy of Music. There is not a city or town in the United States where these screens are not known. The Genter firm employs no traveling agents, but has wholesale representatives in all the principal cities of the country and in most foreign countries.

Mirroroide is quality from the cloth up The material is 3,000 weight drill. This cloth is carefully examined. The cloth will not tear, and the company guarantees that no glue, whiting or starch is used in the preparation of the cloth.

Coating Does Not Crack or Peel

The coating is perfect glass mercury amalgam, which does not blister, crack or peel. It is applied by automatic machinery, and the process is known only to the manufacturers. The rapidity of applying this metalized coating will be noted when the statement is made that the company can coat two miles of cloth a week.

The company expects shortly to put on the market an absolutely fireproof screen, measuring approximately thirteen by fourteen feet. The matte surfaces are entirely different from that used by the firm in its other screens. The finish will be silver white, pale gold and silver flesh. In addition to this the company will produce a pure white enameled screen, likewise fireproof.

The Genter company has served notice on a number of concerns for alleged infringement of patents. Mirroroide is made under the basis patents pertaining to metalized cloth, namely, patent No. 890,101, granted June 9, 1908, which was applied for and filed August 15, 1907; also patent No. 1,128,867 and co-depend-

Rex Film Renovator Co.,

Gentlemen:

The Rex Film Renovator which you installed for us some time ago is the best thing the writer has ever come across in this line. It does the work so well that we call our films which have just been put through it "first run renovated." And aside from a very short distance from the beginning and the ending of the film it is indeed "first run" again. I can highly recommend this Renovator to any Exchange man who wants to have his cheaper customers satisfied. Our Exhibitors are now beginning to ask for "renovated" reels, and not for "age," as the Renovator almost entirely eliminates the age objection.

Every Mirroroide screen is guaranteed for five years against turning black, peeling or cracking. The company has on file a number of testimonials to the effect that the screens manufactured by it have been used a number of years in outdoor places, that they stand heat, cold, rain and snow, and are still in as good condition as the day they were installed.

St. Louis Airdromes Ready for Season

A NEW theatre and airdrome is being planned for early erection at Sixth and Hickory streets, St. Louis, by Alex Papadrikos. The theatre will seat six hundred and the airdrome twelve hundred persons.

A new theatre and airdome is being planned for early erection at Sixth and Hickory streets, St. Louis, by Alex Papadrikos. The theatre will seat six hundred and the airdome twelve hundred persons.

On April 1 the new theatre at 3520 North Newstead avenue, St. Louis, built by D. T. Williams and wife, will be ready for its initial bill. An airdome adjoining the theatre will be ready as soon as the weather permits of outdoor performances. The new house seats a thousand persons, has all the modern improvements and will run moving pictures and features.

The Echo Amusement and Building Company have purchased seventy-five feet of gound adjoining their theatre at the corner of Lillian and East Arlington avenues, St. Louis, which will be used as an airdome during the coming summer season. A bill of motion pictures and vaudeville will be maintained.

J. Rathheim, proprietor of the Hudson Theatre, Eleventh street and Park avenue, St. Louis, is compelled to abandon the Hudson Airdome on Hickory street on account of the new Mill Creek sewer which undermines the property in the vicinity of the airdome, making it unsafe for exhibition purposes. Mr. Rathheim is equal to the emergency, however, He is making seven large openings in the side walls of the Hudson, putting a huge skylight in the ceiling that can be opened or shut at will, and installing a special air cooling system that will make the theatre as good, if not better, than an airdome, since it can be used equally well in fair and inclement weather.

Changes in Western Photoplay Theatres

THE Hickory theatre, Hickory street and Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, which was recently purchased by Chas. F. Monnette, has been undergoing alterations that have increased the seating capacity by 100 and has moved the box office nearer the street, reducing the lobby somewhat in size, but making the auditorium easier of access to the patron.

Recent changes of ownership in downtown Spokane, Wash., picture houses has caused a shuffling of film services and several now are using new lines of pictures.

The Rex, Spokane, has gone back to Universal programs and is counting on making a big thing out of "The Black Box." The Francis Ford-Grace Cunard historical film of Lincoln's life, although received several weeks after release, was made a prominent feature. The Lyric has been given a straight bill of General Film pictures, replacing the Mutual service. The Majestic also has gone over to the General, although retaining the serial, "The Master Key," which has been running for several weeks.

Spanish Theatre Opened In San Diego

THE Superba theatre, at Third and C streets, San Diego, Cal., formerly known as the Grant theatre, has been taken over by the Broadway Amusement Company, which also operates the Broadway theatre. Commencing last Sunday the Superba began putting on the Pathé Service, having secured first run privileges for this city.

The playhouse formerly known as the Gaiety, located on F street, near Third, San Diego, Cal., has been given the name "Teatro la Mexicana," and will put on plays in the Spanish language. The house, under the new management, opened with a large attendance Sunday night. Senor Ignacio Yanez is director of the company.

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

Action of Mercury Rectifier

A. G. P., Memphis, Tenn.—Will you please explain for me the action of a mercury-arc rectifier? Is the direct current the same as the ordinary direct-current? How can the strength of urrent be varied?

ANSWER: The theory of the mercury-arc rectifier may be stated briefly as having three essential parts—the rectifier tube, the main reactance and a smaller reactance for adjustments.

The rectifier tube is an exhausted glass vessel in which are two graphite electrodes and one mercury electrode. The graphite electrodes are termed the anodes and the mercury electrode the cathode.

The connections of these electrodes are that the two anodes are each connected to a separate side of the alternating current supply, and also through one-half of the main reactance to the negative side of the load. The cathode is connected to the postive side.

There is also a small starting electrode connected to one side of the alternating current circuit through resistance, and used for starting the arc. When the tube is rocked, so as to form and break a mercury bridge between the mercury electrode and the starting electrode, a slight arc is formed.

This starts what is known as the excitation of the tube and the mercury electrode begins to supply "ionized" mercury vapor. This condition of excitation can be kept up as long as there is current flowing toward the cathode or mercury electrode.

If the direction of current is reversed so that the formerly negative electrode becomes positive, with the reversal of the alternating current circuit, the current ceases to flow, since, in order to flow in the opposite direction, it would require the formation of a new cathode. which can be accomplished only by special means.

Therefore in the rectifier tube the current must always flow toward the cathode which is kept in a state of excitation by the current itself.

Such a tube would cease to operate on alternating voltage after one-half the cycle, if some means were not provided to maintain the flow of current continuously toward the cathode. This is the purpose of the main reactance.

As the current alternates first one anode and then the other becomes positive, the current flows from the positive anode through the mercury vapor toward the cathode, thence through the arc lamp, or other load, and back through one-half of the main reactance to the opposite side of the alternating current source of supply.

As the current flows through the main reactance it charges it and while the value of the alternating wave is decreasing, reversing and increasing, the reactance discharges, thus maintaining the arc until the voltage reaches the value required to maintain the current against the counter e. m. f. of the load and reduces the fluctuations in the direct current.

In this way a true continuous current is produced with very little loss in transformation. The direct current from a mercury-arc tube is continuous but not as steady or as true as from a direct current dynamo. It may be said to be a pulsating direct current. By means of the regulating reactance any degree of current may be obtained within the size of the tube.

OURS vs. THE OTHER FELLOW'S MAILING LIST

Suggestions in connection with circularizing motion picture theatres.

The following, or a somewhat similar statement, is often made to me by a "prospect":

"Our solicitors cover our territory at frequent intervals, and advise us of theatre changes, etc., which are recorded in our office, and by this means our mailing list is kept complete and up-to-date."

The "prospect" no doubt believes this, but in most cases a careful examination of the mailing list data discloses the fact that it is seldom complete, and ofttimes portions of it are mislaid and not incorporated in the index. Changes take place rapidlly, and unless a solicitor has an index of all the theatres in a territory with him, he is likely to omit recording many of the changes.

I had a call from an advertising man a few days ago for a list of theatres. He said: "I have been loaned lists by ———— Co., and ———— Co., but could not use them to advantage because the list contained a greater number of scenario writers, 'dead' theatres, etc., which I cannot use."

Let me advise you regarding your list. FRED HAWLEY

Advertising Accessories for Exhibitors Provided by Lasky

THE Lasky company has recently made arrangements to provide oil paintings of Blanche Sweet to exhibitors at prices never before made in this country. The painting is a real work of art, showing Miss Sweet at full length, seated, and very attractively posed.

The size is sixty inches high and thirty-six inches wide; and the frame is of three-inch gold bronze oak moulding. In order that the painting may be more durable it is mounted on compo board and should last indefinitely. These paintings may be had by exhibitors all framed and precisely as described at the price of only $19.50 f. o. b. New York.

Besides this oil painting, Lasky has just provided a series of 14 x 11-inch photographs of all the leading members in the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. They are printed on Eastman carbon black paper and are genuine contact prints, not copies or gelatin work.

They are intended especially for permanent lobby display and decoration, and should be framed with a two-inch mat and black picture moulding, making the entire picture from sixteen to eighteen inches in height. These beautiful photographs are offered to exhibitors at only forty cents each.

The list of subjects includes: Blanche Sweet, Sydney Dean, House Peters, May Allison, Parks Jones, Billy Elmer, Betty Shade, Robert Fleming, Tom Forman, Mildred Harris, Tex Driscoll, Florence Dagmar, Gertrude Kellar, Theodore Roberts, James Neil, Jane Darwell, H. C. Carpenter, James Montague, Earnest C. Joy, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Raymond W. Hatton, Al. Ernest Garcia, Dorothy Abril, Larry Payton, Mabel Van Buren and Page Peters.

These new advertising accessories, which only foreshadow further developments of the same nature, are prepared by the Lasky Company, but must be obtained by exhibitors through the exchanges from which they get their film.

Chaplin Character Pennant Makes Hit

A VERY novel souvenir of Charles Chaplin, meeting with wonderful success on the Pacific Coast, and showing the unprecedented popularity which this eccentric comedian has achieved, is the Chaplin Pennant being put out by the Davis Brothers Poster Exchange in San Francisco.

It shows Mr. Chaplin in a very funny character pose on a colored, cloth pennant, 12 by 30 inches large. Not only the theatres but the general public are getting the pennants, and so great is the demand that most of the houses are displaying slides, announcing the sale of the pennants for twenty-five cents at the box office, which allows them a profit of ten cents.

They are also being used as prizes for lucky numbers, and given away to the holders of so many coupons, and other schemes, in addition to lobby display use. Pennants of Mabel Normand, Fatty Arbuckle and Chester Conklin are also handled by this firm.

New Fillmore Opens in San Francisco

THE New Fillmore theatre, located at Eddy and Fillmore streets, San Francisco, Cal., was formally opened on March 18 by Kahn & Greenfield, for whom it was erected. This new theatre has a seating capacity of about one thousand and is considered a model house, being of fireproof construction throughout and furnished with equipment of the highest order. The projection equipment consists of three of the latest Powers machines, with current supplied through a motor-generator set.

Theatres in Indianapolis Conflict With Commissioner

THE moving picture theatres of Indianapolis are not observing the building code, according to Jacob T. Hilkene, commissioner of buildings, who wrote a letter to the board of public safety, notifying the board of the violation of the code by the moving picture theatres. The letter was referred to Samuel V. Perrott, chief of police, who will co-operate in enforcing the ordinance.

Owners of moving picture theatres have been selling more tickets for admission than there were seats, according to Mr. Hilkene's letter specifically declared unlawful in the building code. He also called attention to the fact that owners of some moving picture theatres have been placing chairs and seats of other characters in the aisle.

In his letter to the board the commissioner of buildings also declared that vaudeville performances are being given in some of the motion picture theatres in violation of the building code. He said in his letter that some of the theatre owners sometimes lock the doors and permit the aisles and exits to become locked.

He also pointed to a provision of the building code which says that all theare doors must be equipped with devices which will permit their being opened when a little pressure is brought to bear on the door from the inside. He said some of the theatre doors in the city are not properly equipped with such devices.

The law is being obeyed at the Alhambra, according to an official of the theatre, who says safety appliances are on all doors, and as three shows are given each evening there is not much chance for overcrowding.

H. K. Burton, manager of the Lyric and Isis theatres, when told of the building commissioner's letter, said that the doors of both of his theatres are equipped with the required safety devices. He also said that only enough persons are admitted to fill the seats, and that others are required to stand outside until the seats are vacated.

$100,000 Feature Theatre Syndicate Under Way in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Ohio, is to be put on the special feature motion picture map and take equal rank with New York in the exhibition of costly feature film attractions, if the plans of a syndicate now being organized materialize. What is claimed to be the first move in this direction has been made by the newly incorporated $100,000 Alhambra-Doan Company, which has taken a ten years' graduating lease on the Alhambra theatre, 105th street and Euclid avenue, which has been controlled by the Harvey interests. Mark Greenbaum is president of the Alhambra-Doan Company; E. P. Strong, vice-president, and Fred. Desberg, secretary and treasurer.

This company took over the theatre on March 29, the rent for the first year being on the $12,000 basis, with increases each year thereafter. Several thousand dollars will be spent in redecorating and remodeling the playhouse.

Messrs. Strong and Desberg also are interested in the new $150,000 Mall Theatre Company, which is to enlarge that theatre, on Superior avenue, opposite Third street. Others in the Mall Company are Louis H. Becht, who has had charge of the theatre since it opened; Joseph Laronge and W. J. Hawley.

The Alhambra seats 1,100 persons and is one of the largest picture theatres in Cleveland. It is on a busy corner, as it is estimated that one-seventh of the entire population of Cleveland passes there daily.

Broadway Theatre, Detroit, Reopens

THE former Broadway theatre, Detroit, Mich., renamed the Broadway-Strand, will reopen April 11 under a new policy of high-class motion pictures and elaborate music. The front of the building has had two stores put in, with the theatre entrance between them, and the inside lower boxes have been taken out and the upper ones have had built into them a new fifty-stop pipe organ with 1,176 pipes.

This new organ will be equipped with a contrivance for producing sound effects to go with the pictures, such as running water, rustling leaves, bird calls and so forth.

The balcony stairway has been changed so that the entrance is at the bottom instead of the top. A fifteen-piece orchestra will furnish an overture and incidental music in connection with the picture program, and between films there will be an instrumental or vocal solo.

By combining the best of several news picture services, 500 feet of the most interesting will be shown to start each program and a one-reel comedy will follow the main feature, which will be "The Christian" for the first week.

A new electric sign with an accompaniment of chimes is another feature. Harry I. Garson will be the general manager of the Broadway-Strand Theatre Company, which has leased the building from David Stott, the owner. Edward T. Butcher, formerly of New York City, will be the house manager. The programs will be changed every Sunday. Performances will be continuous from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M.

Saenger Adds Another Southern Theatre

THE Saenger Amusement Company, of Shreveport, La., annexed another big photoplay house to their string when they opened the Hardin theatre in State street, Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

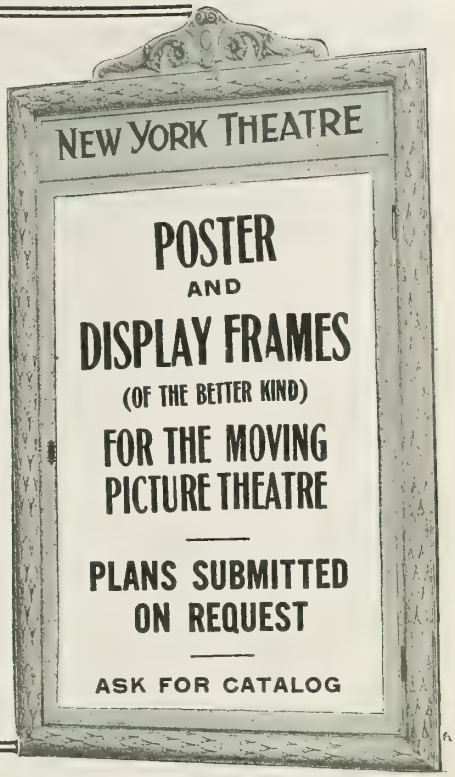
After the Hardin was taken over it took only three days for the enterprising Saengers to completely remodel it in time for opening Saturday, the 20th. The Saengers operate also three houses in Shreveport, two in Monroe, La., in addition to other prominent business connections.

Six men are interested in the new house: Julian Saenger, E. V. Richards, general manager; H. L. Swain, advertising manager; C. C. Stewart, chief electrician; George Ragan, chief mechanic, and Jack Manning, who will fill the position as Texarkana manager.

A new outfit has been installed, two new Simplex machines being put in the booth. These machines are direct from the factory and are identical with those used by the Strand theatre in New York City, the largest motion picture house in the world.

In addition the largest new Radium Gold Fibre screen is being installed in order that the pictures will be brought out in the clearest and brightest manner possible, in keeping with Saenger service. Believing that the general public will enjoy shorter pictures in a varied program than the long features, it has been decided to run the former.

Law Kink Prevents Punishment of Smoker Operator



THE Flint, Mich., motion picture houses are in very satisfactory condition as far as safety is concerned, according to E. A. Maynard, deputy state fire marshal, who has just finished an inspection of the theatres.

He says that only minor changes were ordered in a few of the theatres. Mr. Maynard's trip to Flint was of value to him, however, in that it enabled him to get acquainted with a wrinkle of the law relating to motion picture houses passed in 1913 that he never knew of before.

Mr. Maynard found that a young man who is an operator had been smoking in the operator's booth of a local theatre. He made complaint against the young man under the section of the act which prohibits smoking in the motion picture operator's booth.

However, after making the complaint he found out that the penalty for the violation of any section of the act provides for punishment of owners or managers of theatres only. As the owner of this particular theatre wanted the young man punished, and was in no way to blame himself, it was decided that there was no way in which the offender could be penalized. The complaint was therefore withdrawn for the time being.

Theatres Here and There

J. J. DE PRASSLIN, owner of the Princess, in Lage Charles, La., has established an exact duplicate of his house in Orange, Tex., and has put James Kitterman in as manager. The Princess of Orange is just the same as the Princess of Lake Charles, even to the excellent program Mr. De Prasslin always maintains.

Mr. De Prasslin packed 1,600 people in his Lake Charles Princess on March 11 at various performances, and this is going some, when you consider that the theatre holds only 246 people at a time. The attraction was "Mooseheart," and the audience was composed mostly of members of that loyal order.

Quincy, La., has a new theatre, The Dreamworld.

Airdomes Begin to Awaken in New Orleans

There is a healthy activity among New Orleans suburban exhibitors. With summer approaching, airdomes are beginning to get coats of fresh new paint; theatres are being remodelled and new programs are being put in. Many suburban exhibitors claim they can make more out of the business in the suburbs and at five cents than they can in a more expensive location.

Charles Asbury, manager of the Galvez Airdome, New Orleans, which has been a mint to him in past years, has taken over the Canal Airdome, five blocks further up the street, and is completely remodelling it. He is making a number of improvements, and hopes to have the theatre open by Easter Sunday.

The Gayety Theatre, Ursuline and Royal streets, New Orleans, which has been closed for some months owing to litigation against its owners, is under new management, which has taken hold of the showhouse and completely remodelled it inside and out, and put on an attractive program.

The Regina, at Esplanade and North Robertson streets, is to open Easter Sunday with many improvements installed.

There has been an unprecedentel demand for local suburban sites, too, according to Al. During, of the United Program Film Service Company of Louisiana, who claims his office has been besieged in the past few weeks with people wanting sites. A large number of Greeks seem to have become interested in the motion picture game, as this nationality was very much in evidence among the callers.

Opening of American, San Francisco, a Success

After a varied career extending over a period of almost eight years, the American theatre, on Market street, near Seventh, San Francisco, Cal., has at last come into its own and it remained for moving pictures to accomplish this. Since it was erected, immediately following the great fire in 1906, this house has been given over to almost every form of indoor entertainment, but without success. It was recently thoroughly renovated and a week ago opened under the direction of Edwin James, of Portland, Ore. The first week's business with the William Fox Attraction, "Kreutzer Sonata," was highly successful, and this success has been followed by "A Gilded Fool."

H. Arvidson, one of the owners of the Rex theatre at Berkeley, Cal., has purchased the Best theatre at San Leandro, a suburb of San Francisco, and will give this house his personal attention.

The West End Improvement Association, of Santa Ana, Cal., is having plans prepared by Architect J. F. Walker for a one-story brick theatre to be erected at that city.

Connors & Witt have opened a moving picture house at Crockett, Cal.

Work is still under way on the renovating of the Edison theatre on Powell street, San Francisco, but this will be completed at an early date and this house will then be one of the finest in the downtown district.

The new management of Brown's Opera House at Salinas, Cal., is making a number of improvements and has just installed a new Simplex machine in the operating room.

The new Golden Gate Family theatre has opened for business on San Pablo avenue, Oakland, Cal.

F. E. Smith, who conducts the Lyric theatre, at Marysville, Cal., is preparing to open a new house at Sutter City.

The Novelty theatre, one of the largest motion picture houses in the downtown district of Louisville, Ky., was reopened this week under the management of M. Switow. The house has been remodeled throughout, newly painted and decorated, and a new system of ventilation has been installed. The Novelty will use the Mutual service in addition to several big features weekly.

The Unique theatre, Paducah, Ky., opened last week. The management has contracted to use the productions of the World Film Corporation. "The Seats of the Mighty" was the opening feature. All seats are ten cents.

Thatcher & Waddle, managers of the Gem theatre at Somerset, Ky., have entered into a new five-year lease for this house with the owner, the Auditorium Company.

The Gayety theatre, Louisville, a legitimate house, has closed its regular season and will begin its spring and summer season April 4 with motion pictures. Admission to all parts of the house will be ten cents. There will be a change of program daily.

H. R. Calloway has become the sole owner of the capital stock and all of the property of the Gem theatre company at Frankfort, Ky., and has given notice of the dissolution of the company. Mr. Calloway will continue the business of the Gem under his own name.

P. G. Bernardi, of Humphrey, Ill., has let a contract for the erection of a vaudeville and motion picture theatre on Front street in that town.

Clarence E. Irvin has purchased the property and will erect a theatre building at 204 East Jefferson street, Bloomington, Ill.

Cole & Gerdes have purchased the Grand motion picture theatre at Sterling, Ill., from M. A. Maloney.

Harry Van Demark, Houston's playwright-author, one of the best known theatrical men in that Texas city, will become manager of the Isis theatre on April 1, it was made known by W. H. Gueringer, general manager of Herman Fichtenberg's big string of theatres, on his return to New Orleans.

Mr. Van Demark assumes complete managership of Houston's biggest and best motion picture theatre. About a year ago he took charge of the publicity work of the Queen, after several years of newspaper work as reporter and magazine editor. At one time he was in charge of the editorial departments of the "Texas Magazine," "Southwestern Electrician" and "Texas Tradesman."

Improving Alabama's Largest Theatre

Work is progressing rapidly on improvements at the Empire, Alabama's largest motion picture house, in Montgomery. When completed the improvements will work a complete change in the house. A neat open-work box office is being installed in the broad entrance to the theatre, leaving a passageway to the swing doors. Manager Farley has a number of brass frames, in various sizes, in keeping with the interior finish, and these stands add materially to the general attractiveness of things. When completed, the lobby promises to become even a more popular place of meeting for the public, and the conveniences for the public will be much more pronounced.

The Co-Operative Amusement Company at Erie, Pa., has purchased the Venus and Grand theatres in that town and will shortly begin work on improving the properties. The Venus theatre was purchased from S. S. Range while the Grand was bought from Mr. Frank Fairgrave.

The theatres stand side by side and it is said that the mangement has been thinking seriously of tearing out the partition nd making one large theatre out of the properties.

In case this is decided upon it is said the two houses will e closed so that the repairs and remodeling can be done as uickly as possible.

J. A. Brown, owner of two houses in Braddock, Pa., has old them to W. W. Spalding, and all that remains to be done n the deal is the formal transfer of the property. The theatres n question were the Rex and the American. The former ıouse has a capacity of 380 and the latter 250.

Mr Brown also owns two theatres in East Pittsburgh, which ne intends to retain, the Family and the Mutual. He has already prepared plans for remodeling and refurnishing them. The former has a seating capacity of 540 and the latter a capacity of 270.

News of the Michigan Theatres

Preparations for the erection of the Grand Boulevard theatre, 300 feet east of Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich., has started. It will be one of the finest theatres in the north end of the city.

An eight thousand-dollar theatre and store building is to be erected for August Thiel, of 1459 West Fort street, Detroit. It will be 25 by 50 feet in size, seating around 300.

Work is being rushed on the new Norwood theatre on Woodward avenue, just south of the boulevard, Detroit, Mich. The box seats will be in the rear. On the second floor will be rest rooms and a smoking room. The auditorium will seat about 600 persons, and the boxes and balcony about 300. It is expected that the theatre will be completed in April.

A $15,000 theatre for moving pictures is under consideration, plans for which have been completed and bids being taken by Joseph E. Mills & Son, Kresge building, Detroit, Mich. It will be 45 by 150 feet, one story high.

If the plans announced are carried out, Detroit will have another $350,000 theatre and store building, at the corner of Chene and Warren avenues. The project is being financed by the Scenic Theatre Company, of which Messrs. Cannell, Hupp and Thomas are the backers. The house will seat 2,200. It will be of steel and concrete construction with washed air for ventilation. The facing will be of terra cotta, and around the entire building will extend an illuminated marquise. There will be stores on the main floor, while the second and third floors will be for offices. A billiard parlor will be in the basement. It is one of the biggest projects announced in some time.

The Addison Amusement Company, operating the Addison Theatre, on Woodward avenue, near Watson street, Detroit, has capitalized at $15,000. Christopher E. Pudrith controls most of the stock.

Havlin Will Enter Picture Field

John H. Havlin, owner of the Grand Opera House and prominent in theatrical circles of the country, has announced that he will go into the motion picture business for the summer. His theatre during summers in the past has been rented to individuals or companies for the exhibition of features. Recently the management installed a projection machine and booth as a permanent fixture in the rear of the stage. Mr. Havlin has not yet determined what service or features he will use.

A steel and glass canopy is being constructed over the entrance to the Alhambra theatre, 146-148 West Fifth street, Cincinnati. This is the first step, according to Manager Charles Weigel, to enlarge his theatre and re-arrange the lobby and entrances.

J. P. Donovan, one of the best known motion picture theatre managers in Pittsburgh, is open to congratulations from his friends.

Mr. Donovan has been in charge of The Regent theatre in East Liberty, one of the finest, if not the finest, motion picture theatres in Pittsburgh. It is owned by Clark and Rowland and a recent promotion puts Mr. Donovan in charge as general manager of the string of houses owned by the above company.

Jerome Casper has been appointed to take the position just vacated by Mr. Donovan, as the duties of the latter will keep him on the jump at all times, as the theatres in the list owned by Clark and Rowland are scattered all over this section of the country.

CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

Music for "Neptune" and "Judith"

THE Universal multiple-reel feature, "Neptune's Daughter," seems to be quite the thing throughout the Middle West, judging from the numerous inquiries emanating from that locality and the requests for musical suggestions for this feature. There is no special score for this production save the one used at the Globe theatre, in New York City, where "Neptune's Daughter" had its first showing and phenomenal run.

From the Universal offices at 1600 Broadway, New York City, comes the information that this score can be secured from Carl Fisher, music publisher, Cooper Union Square, New York City, and is arranged for piano alone or for an orchestra up to ten pieces.

But for the benefit of those desiring something different we are appending a program as arranged by Reynold C. Peters (leader of orchestra) for "Neptune's Daughter," and used at the Lehigh Orpheum theatre, South Bethlehem, Pa., during the picture's run at that house:

First Reel

Overture "Ameer," Shubert-Liszt.
1. "Queen of the Nile," Eilenberg—through steamboat scene.
2. "Witches' Dance," McDowell—until Annette meets the king.
3. "Love's Melody Valse Tendre," Leo Daniderff—until end of reel.

Second Reel

4. "Love's Melody (Concluded).
5. "Hesitation Waltz," Valse June—until departure of guests for reception.
6. "Berceuse from Jocelyn," B. Godard—during scene with baby.
7. "Imam"—until end of reel.

Third Reel

8. Selection "Woodland," Pixley and Lauders.

Fourth Reel

9. Caprice "Flying Birds."
10. "Oh, What a Beautiful Baby" (twice).
11. Intermezzo "Naila," Delibes—through transformation scene to end of reel.

Fifth Reel

12. "Scarf Dance," C. Chaminade—until scarf dancers finish.
13. "Second Minuet in G," Beethoven—until finish of minuet.
14. "Douce Caresse," Ballet Waltz, Eduardo Sanches deFuentes.
15. "Alla Zingaresca," A. Tschetschulin—until end of reel.

Sixth Reel

16. "Herd Girl's Dream," Labitsky Trio—violin, flute and piano.
17. "Kubelik Pierrott Serenade," violin solo.

Seventh and Eighth Reels

18. "Down in the Depths," Kreutch.
19. "Canzonetta," B. Godard—until bear is taken from her.
20. Polka from the "Little Dutchess," R. deKoven.
21. Inflammatus "Stabat Mater," Rossini—until last death in scene.
22. Prayer after death of Rienzi, from "Rienzi," R. Wagner.
23. "Witches' Dance," repeated 3/8 tempo—during witch scene.
24. "Salut D'Amour," Ed. Elgar—start very pp. work to climax.

The following arrangement of numbers was submitted to the Biograph Company for their production of "Judith of Bethulia" and issued by them as a musical program suggestion for "Judith."

1. Open with "Maritana" (by Wallace) until Judith in prayer.
2. Then "The Rosary" (by Nevin) until she leaves woman with child.
3. Then back to "Maritana" until "The Army."
4. Then "William Tell" (by Rossini) the last movement. Play this to end of reel.
5. Then "Pique Dame" overture (Suppe) all through.
6. Then "Poet and Peasant" overture (Suppe) until "Water and Food Famine."
7. Then "Simple Aveu" (Thome) until "The King."
8. Then "Peer Gynt," Suite II, opus 55 (Grieg), until Judith has vision.
9. Then "Woodland Sketches 1 and 2" (McDowell) until she puts on fine clothes.
10. Then "Lament of Roses" (Sounakolb) until "The King."
11. Then "Peer Gynt"—Suite II, opus 55, until end of reel.

NO!! There is no Sonata by Kreutzer, but there is a "Kreutzer Sonata" written and composed by Beethoven for and dedicated to his friend Kreutzer.

Spokane, Wash., Engages Organ Instructor

HAVING expended their money upon fine pipe organs, Spokane, Wash., picture house magnates are making the most out of the advertising the musical attractions give them.

Organ soloists of the first water are being brought in to give recitals on the instruments. Sunday morning sacred concerts are another feature.

Recently the Clemmer and the Liberty staged rival attractions at the same time in a musical way. Dr. Ernest A. Evens, of Pullman, instructor in organ music at the State College of Washington, was brought here to play the Hope-Jones at the latter theatre.

Dr. Evens was formerly of the Royal Conservatory of Music, London, and a personal friend of the maker of the Hope-Jones instruments. Professor J. J. McClellan, organist at the Mormon tabernacle in Salt Lake City was the attraction at the Clemmer.

Bartola Sales Agent Leaves for the South

CHARLES A. Pyle, general sales agent of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, has left for a ten days' business trip through the South. He will visit Birmingham, Montgomery, Chattanooga, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Mobile and New Orleans.

The Family theatre at Davenport, Ia., has installed a Bartola Grand.

Goldberg & Reubens have installed a Bartola in their Lincoln theatre at Joliet, Ill.

The Co-operative Amusement Company, of Erie, Pa., has purchased a style A Bartola.

Ray McMullen is remodeling and enlarging the Colonial theatre at Joliet, Ill.

Chris Jackson, of the Scenic theatre, Bloomington, Ill., was in Chicago two days last week on business.

The Castle theatre, Bloomington, Ill., has just been condemned, and will at once be torn down. It is rumored that a modern motion picture theatre will be erected in its place. In the meantime the Opera House has been leased and will be used to show motion pictures.

red velvet. The wall is decorated with panels of old rose silk tapestry. This foyer runs along the entire width of the auditorium.

The effect of the auditorium itself is very spacious and rich. Between the ground floor and the balcony is a commodious mezzanine, reached by two nine-foot marble stairways, located at either side of the auditorium. From the mezzanine the patrons may enter the front of the balcony.

The main ceiling of the auditorium and the ceiling of the orchestra under the mezzanine are panelled with ornamental plaster work. The massive dome of the main ceiling is decorated with a painting "The Dance of the Hours," done in soft tints. Magnificent paintings are placed on both sides of the proscenium arch. The two sets of organ reeds are placed on either side of the auditorium over the boxes.

The balcony is thrown across the house on the cantilever principle, without a column to obstruct the view. In addition to the stairs which reach the balcony via the mezzanine, patrons may use an escalator located at the right of the lobby near the Main street entrance.

DETAIL OF THE BOXES, SHEA'S HIPPODROME

An immense promenade is found in the rear of the balcony, with floors of mosaic tile and wainscots of art marble with Numidian base.

Art Glass in All Windows

All the windows are of richly colored art glass, heavily leaded. One conspicuous feature is the absence of wood in the construction work. With the exception of the mahogany doors at Main street there is no wood in the house. The window cases and door jambs are of art marble and the interior doors are of kalomine, stained like mahogany.

The exits are numerous and wide. Doors open directly into Pearl street from the auditorium and into an areaway on the left. From the balcony, fire escapes lead into the areaway and, on the Pearl street side, a spacious, overhanging outside balcony leads into a fire tower with wide stairway that lands directly on the sidewalk.

Empire In Montgomery, Ala., Remodeled

BROWN & PAULSON are to open a new theatre in East Wilson street, at Batavia, Ill. They have taken the building formerly occupied by the Lyric theatre and plan several improvements.

H. C. Farley, manager of the Empire, Montgomery, Ala., the largest house in Alabama, has completed big improvements to his theatre, which included remodelling of the front in stucco work; elimination of the present box office in favor of a ticket office in the center of the entrance way, with a commodious vestibule in front and lobby between the vestibule and the actual entrance to the theatre. He has also contracted for Paramount, World, Fox and Alliance film features.

New U. S. Theatre Opens In Passaic

PRESIDENT FRANK G. HALL, of the United States Theatre Company, has added still another theatre to his large circuit of motion picture houses, having acquired the new Playhouse, in Main avenue, Passaic, N. J.

The new theatre has a seating capacity of 1,900 and is said to be one of the most beautiful theatres in the state. Mr. Hall is making extensive alterations to the interior, the redecorating and recarpeting of the entire house, the installation of new stage settings, new screens and other machinery for the perfect projection of the pictures being included in the plans.

The theatre will open on Saturday, April 3, under the name of the United States Playhouse, and the opening day will be marked by a special program of feature attractions.

Louisville Musicians Demand Higher Scale

UNION musicians in five motion picture theatres in Louisville, Ky., are "out" for the present because of a new wage scale which went into effect a few days ago. Nine men in all are affected, including musicians in the Norman, Ideal, West Broadway, Preston and Highlands theatres.

The old scale provided a salary of twelve dollars a week for a pianist, and where three or more musicians were employed, required a leader at fifteen dollars a week.

The new scale demands eighteen a week for each leader. Small houses employing but one musician, usually a pianist, must recognize this player as leader at a salary of eighteen dollars. The managements of the theatres say that there has been an unusual depression in business of late, and that they cannot afford to pay the new wage scale.

Prima Donna to Sing for Pictures

MME. SUZANNA LEHMAN, classed as one of the country's highest priced prima donnas ever appearing in a picture theatre, has been engaged by the live wire exhibitors of Louisiana —Saenger Brothers—for a two weeks' stay at the Saenger, Shreveport, La. Mr. Erneste Reams will accompany Mme. Lehman with selections on the Saenger pipe organ.

A remarkable feature of the program to be offered in addition to the moving pictures is the fact there is no change in price.

Arc Controllers in Hippodrome and Fox House

THE Speed Controller Company, Inc., New York City, has installed Arc Controllers in the William Fox Audubon theatre, Broadway and 165th street, New York City, and in the Hippodrome, Sixth avenue and Forty-third street.

Whartons to Produce Demarest Detective Stories

WHARTON, INC., announce the purchase of the picture rights to the Lloyd Demarest detective stories written by Fred Jackson.

These stories they will probably begin to film some time this summer.

VIOLA DANA, The Broadway Star

In the screen's most appealing and greatest characterization

The Feature—"THE STONING"

(Released in Regular Service, Friday, April 9th—3,000 feet.)

Although she won the hearts of the country's severest critics as the wonderful child-actress when starred in the Broadway success, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," that performance pales into a shadow when compared with the true touch of matured genius she exhibits in the heart-tearing tragedy of everyday life, "The Stoning."

The true power of "The Stoning" lies in the terribly faithful manner in which it depicts how the unsullied life of a sweet, innocent, village girl was smirched through her faith in the man she loved and trusted most—through the cruel, murderous code of morals against which a betrayed innocent battered her wings and fell—to death in the river.

Mrs. Jeanie Noble Whaley, of the National Board of Censorship, who can judge—if any one can—the power and appeal of a play, writes in an unsolicited letter: "No human being could see 'The Stoning' without being deeply and lastingly impressed. The simplicity in telling the tragedy made its tremendous strength. I don't remember ever having seen a story visualized which touched me so deeply. My heart ached for the dear little girl and swelled with indignation against the cruelty of her neighbors. The story is perfect. Murder can be committed without hand or weapon as is plainly shown. I believe the film will have a long and successful run and a re-issue"

Louis Reeves Harrison, the best-known critic in filmdom, writes: "'The Stoning,' the best three reel feature of the year, is imbued with the spirit of sincerity and truth. It will reach warm sympathies and through its very tenderness soften hearts and broaden minds. Next to its noble theme, it is this actuality which counts most heavily. Director Brabin has joined the band of those who know the secret of convincing realism."

Adapted by Director Charles Brabin from the story by James Oppenheim

Two authorities have spoken above. See for yourself, Mr. Exhibitor, and if you do not declare that "The Stoning" sets new heights for the Motion Picture—if it will not win new patrons to your theatre who never stepped in a Motion Picture Theatre before—then mother love is losing its hold upon the world.

How to Make Money

No. 12

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

One of the biggest feature plays of the year is Clara Kimball Young in "Hearts in Exile." It has every element of a great picture, with a wonderfully interesting story, thrilling action, perfect staging and direction. It contains some wonderful scenes—an exciting race across a vast ice field in which some of the pursuers break through the ice and flounder in the icy water.

The New York Hippodrome, the greatest theatre in the world, has the first showing of "Hearts in Exile" and will do more advance advertising for it than they have on any feature they have shown.

"Hearts in Exile" is one of the many pictures World Film has released, great enough to be specially featured in big theatres at high admission prices and for which we could in all justice demand a greater price than we get on World Film schedule.

The "wild cat" exhibitors who show "Hearts in Exile" will pay somewhere near the price than that feature is worth, but our regular contract customers will get it at their regular schedule rate, not how big it is as a production, nor how much more it costs than the average good feature.

That is why we say that the World Film yearly contract is for the benefit of the exhibitor as well as ourselves.

It insures you the biggest percentage of good features in the film field at the same price. It insures continued patronage from the people who want to see World Film, which insures the "good will," the most important asset in every business.

COMPLETE, COMPACT LIST FOR EXHIBITORS OF THE FOX ALLIES OF SUCCESS

THE NEW GOVERNOR. By Edward Sheldon. Based on his epoch-making drama The Nigger, the Century Theatre's greatest success, is a drama which handles unflinchingly one of the most important questions facing the people of every section of this country today. William Farnum, the $100,000 dramatic star, gives a sublime performance of the self-sacrificing hero Phil Morrow. Its recent engagement at the N. Y. Hippodrome smashed all records. Morrow has grown to manhood in the belief that the blood in his veins is the most aristocratic in the South. He is happy in the love of Georgiana Byrd, the belle of his native state. He is rich, young, and a power politically. "Clif" Noyes, a political boss and distiller of whiskey of the fiery brand manufactured for negro consumption, persuades Morrow to run for Governor. During the campaign one of Philip's negroes is lynched. The incident makes a deep impression on Morrow's mind, and upon his election he decides to sign a Prohibition Bill. Threatened with extinction Noyes visits Morrow and springs the trap. In rummaging in an attic he has found papers proving that Morrow has negro blood in his veins. Morrow faces the blow manfully. He confesses the taint to Georgiana and then determines to do the right boldly. Morrow, crushed, but not broken by the fearful revelation of his "nigger" ancestry, makes the Prohibition Bill a law, and to render his heroic self sacrifice complete, resigns his office to devote the remainder of his life to the uplifting of the negro.

ANNA KARENINA. By Count Leo Tolstoy. Tolstoy at the full sweep of his powers. The moving picture-play of the ill-fated passion of the beautiful Anna, played by Betty Nansen, is an absorbing one. Married without love to a man old enough to be her father, falling under the fascination of one to whom, under better auspices she might have been wed with happiness and honor, she is driven to desperation. Clashing climax succeeds climax till the suspense is almost too great to bear. At last, driven to bay, she takes the law into her own hands, in a scene that for sheer drama has never been equalled on stage or screen.

THE CLEMENCEAU CASE. By Alexandre Dumas. Marks brilliantly the capstone of his towering genius. Of Iza (Theda Bara), the pantherish heroine of this deathless drama he himself wrote: "I shall never create another such character though I scribble till Doomsday." Iza's sinister beauty and its fatal effect on the lives of two noble men form the main plot of THE CLEMENCEAU CASE. Pierre (William E. Shay), her husband, whom she casts off for Constantin Ritz (Stuart Holmes), she leaves with his career as a talented sculptor blasted forever. In turn she toys with the infatuated Ritz, shattering his hopes, ambitions and home life. But Pierre saves Ritz against himself. With heroic self-sacrifice, he allows himself, apparently, to fall once more under Iza's spell. As she presses her false lips to Pierre's, he stabs her to the heart, just as Ritz enters. "I have saved you for your wife," says Pierre calmly as he telephones for the police.

FROM THE VALLEY OF THE MISSING. By Grace Miller White, author of Tess of the Storm Country. Lost identities, to all seeming hopelessly tangled, form the basis of this striking play. From the first scene to the last it holds breathless suspense. The ending is as unexpected as it is powerful. The vivid scenes include the haunts of river pirates and mountain bandits, and the whole picturization "thrums" with action and life and color. The author wrote in From the Valley of the Missing a book that stirred the country. The film-play based on it is bound to create even more talk. All star cast.

THE CELEBRATED SCANDAL. By Jose Echegaray. Tells in a gripping, convincing way the story of the terrible effect of gossip and back-biting on the lives of innocent men and women. The "serpent tongues" of Don Severo and his wife, and the Marquis Alvarez, cause death and suffering. But in the end their malicious scandal-mongering is triumphantly set at naught by the slow grinding of "The Mills of the Gods." A wonderful drama on a theme matchless in power and conviction. Betty Nansen's superb art at its height.

SAMSON. By Henri Bernstein. From dock laborer to greatest financial power in the land. That is the story of the twentieth century Samson, Maurice Brachard, played by William Farnum. Brachard by natural shrewdness wins his way to the top and becomes a Colossus of finance. In the midst of his success he marries the daughter of a family of impoverished aristocratic schemers. She despises him for his low origin. They drift apart and "the other man" appears. Samson, to crush the scoundrel who seeks to destroy his happiness, wrecks the market. In the terrific financial upheaval that follows Brachard himself is ruined. But in his ruin he finds his wife's love and exclaims: "At last I have come into my own."

A GILDED FOOL. By Henry Guy Carleton. Chauncey Short (William Farnum) is left an orphan. He becomes clerk in a village grocery. One day a letter arrives. His uncle, who had refused to aid the lad's dying mother, has himself died and left Chauncey $5,000,000. Chauncey hits the high places and spends money like water. But one day he meets a girl—a banker's daughter—who becomes his good influence. Chauncey by dint of his natural good sense, helps the banker in a financial crisis. "The Gilded Fool" saves the day, exposes a rascal, and marries the girl.

KREUTZER SONATA. By Count Leo Tolstoy. Deals in an unflinching way with a social problem of the day. Miriam (Nance O'Neil) and Celia, the two foster sisters, become involved, through Celia's passion for Miriam's husband, in a skein of fate that has a tragic unravelling. The play reveals a woman's great soul and shows that self-sacrifice and noble immolation of a life's desire may not necessarily lead to happiness. In this play the nobility of an old man's love for his ungrateful children is shown with vividness that appeals and enthralls.

THE THIEF. By Henri Bernstein. Is conceded to be one of Bernstein's greatest dramas. It tells of a woman, who to hold her husband's love becomes a thief. Marie, pressed by debts and harassed by creditors, begins thievery in a small way. She grows bolder and carries on her peculations even under the noses of her husband's detectives. A young fool who loves her allows suspicion to fall upon him. But at last the truth is wrung from her in a terrific scene which calls for the highest exercise of Dorothy Donnelly's great powers.

THE WALLS OF JERICHO. By Alfred Sutro. In this great modern drama of fashionable life and society intrigue "the walls" are the ramparts of sham and fraud that surround the "400." Jack Frobisher (Edmund Breese), a clean-hearted young millionaire from the West, who has married a beautiful and titled wife finds to his horror that she is utterly frivolous. She becomes involved in a scandal and the man who tries to induce her to leave her husband plots against Frobisher. Frobisher triumphs over the scoundrel. Then he tears down "The Walls of Jericho" that have surrounded his wife and they begin a new and happier life.

A FOOL THERE WAS. By Porter Emerson Browne. Is the story of "The Woman Who Did Not Care" and "The Fool." The "Vampire Woman" (Theda Bara) lures "The Fool" from his home and, with sinister seduction, leads him on to his ruin and disgrace. His wife and friends try to tear him from her side, but "The Vampire" always succeeds in holding her infatuated victim. His will weakened by drink and drugs, he is still fascinated by his evil genius. At her slightest word he flings himself abjectly at her feet. At last the Vampire's work is complete. "The Fool" falls dead at her feet and with a terrible smile, she strews over him rose leaves that are red as drops of blood.

THE IDLER. By C. Haddon Chambers. Mark Cross (Charles Richman) and John Harding meet in the Far West. Mark, "The Idler," has left England for the mining camp after a quarrel with his father. Harding receives word one day that his father is dead. He returns to England and marries the girl who cast off Mark Cross when she learned of the chorus girl. Harding, before he left the mining camp for England, has accidentally killed a man. This man's brother swears a feud against him. Harding's Nemesis and Mark Cross follow to England. The dead man's brother tries to force a duel on Harding, Cross tries to induce Harding's wife to leave him. Ultimately "The Idler's" better nature asserts itself and the play ends with the sacrifice of his evil intentions.

THE CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO. By Israel Zangwill. The great, over-mastering love of an old man for his children forms the sympathetic theme of this great drama. Old Reb Shemuel (Wilton Lackaye) clinging in the midst of modern conditions to the God of His Fathers, bears blow after blow with unflinching resignation. His son is killed in a cabaret brawl, his daughter contracts a marriage that estranges her from him. His beloved wife dies. But in the end his gray hairs are comforted by the return of his daughter, and his simple and unwavering faith is rewarded in the sunset of his days.

THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. By David Belasco. Is as stirring to the blood as a trumpet call. It deals with life at a lonely army post beset by hostile Black Feet. A craven and cur among the garrison is discovered at the critical moment when the savage Black Feet have surrounded the post. A volunteer is wanted to ride for aid. It is "one chance in a hundred." Lieutenant Hawkesworth (Robert Edeson) takes it. He succeeds in his mission and also wins the girl he loves. A marvel of vivid picturization. Scenes on the actual ground of the story near Fort Assinaboine, Montana.

LIFE'S SHOP WINDOW. By Victoria Cross. The story of a girl's heart and the devious paths into which her love led her. The book created a tremendous furore when it was brought out. The screen-play is even more talked about. Every beholder of this masterpiece of picturization will be charmed by the appealing story and compellant drama of Victoria Cross's greatest and most famous book. During its run at the Academy of Music, New York, "Life's Shop Window" turned away thousands. It played to more than 200,000 in two days. Claire Whitney and Stuart Holmes.

COMING: "The Plunderer," a vivid, pulsating picturization of Roy Norton's brilliant romance of the lust for yellow gold; fairly throbs with the big pulses of life; William Farnum in a real Farnum part; Bill Matthews of the Croix d'Or Mine; a hero your audiences will go wild over. Big, breezy steel-knit Bill bests a band of twenty ruffians in a heart-quickening, bare-knuckle battle—the most terrific fist fight ever filmed. A double love story of great beauty threads pleasingly the powerful dramatic adventures and enhances the interest.

WHY THE LIGHTS WENT OUT!

BY EDWIN THANHOUSER

Horatio Flivver, the great film star, the idol and charmer de luxe of all beings in skirts, resigned from the Bingo Film Company, and the board of directors were having a tearful session. The sales on their other releases were very low, and Flivver's name was all they had to play on; true, even the pictures he appeared in were not so good, but Horatio's handsome face pushed them over. And now Horatio takes exception to the ingenue's remark about the length of his eye-brows and resigns—just like that!

So there's no use releasing only those other films on which the company is losing money, and that's what put the match to the Bingo! Also, it illustrates a big point I want to get over to you:

A chain is only as strong as its weakest link! Grasp that? A film must be powerful in every link and these links are story, action, cast and photography. A brand must be strong in every link, and that means every release, not a portion of them. Then it's bound to follow that the performers appearing in such a brand become great favorites, because all the other links that make good films are just as strong!

NOW! DO YOU SEE MY POINT? Just compare my idea of a film-making organization with the fate of the Bingo Company—then write me if I'm wrong.

If I'm right, you belong on my mailing list. You can't dodge that!

A TEST TALK

The real test of whether a service is good or not is the decision of one who views a great number of motion pictures.

There perhaps is not a class who sees more pictures than the reviewers on the various papers. These newspaper men speak in the highest terms of Kriterion motion pictures.

After viewing pictures day after day, as they do, it is really a great recommendation to have them tell you that they believe your two-reel subjects would make wonderful five-reel productions.

This means that there is no padding in Kriterion motion pictures. Every foot is pictures, no stalling, or filling, but PICTURES.

These reviewers for the newspapers consider the day they review Kriterion pictures, a relief from the monotony of looking at the everyday humdrum photoplays.

Kriterion is deserving of its slogan "Decidedly Distinctive." Not only do the newspapers acknowledge this, but also the exhibitors who are using Kriterion Service.

The tremendous strides Kriterion has taken and its great success is proof of this.

Get in touch with any of these exchanges and let them tell you about Kriterion Service.

MISSTATEMENT

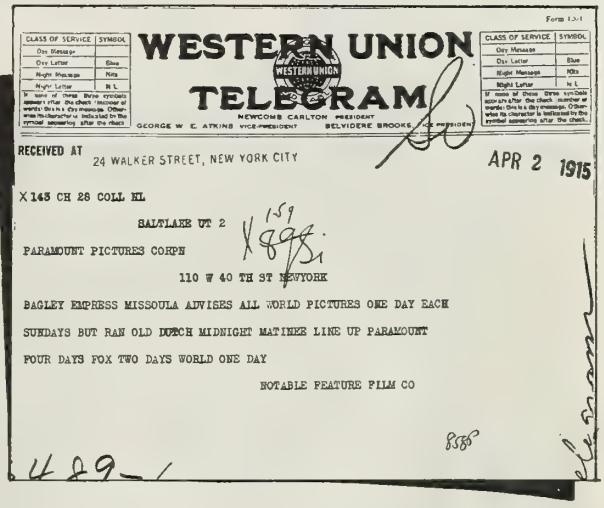
Missoula sounds like one of the small 2 x 4 towns where nothing happens, but the fact that live exhibitors are not always found in New York City is proven by some of Mr. Bagley's stunts with World Film.



The Empress Theatre runs programs of two other feature companies, giving a day to each one. He runs World Film two days.

The trade papers of April 10th carried the excerpt to the left in the advertisement of a film company

The truth about the matter is told in the accompanying telegram

Mr. J. S. Johnson,
Advertising and Publicity Dept.,
Paramount Pictures Corporation,
110 West Portieth St.,
New York City.

Deap Mr. Johnson:

RE- Newspaper advertising.

Some time ago we received a circular letter from you asking about the amount we spend for newspaper advertising--- please pardon the delay in answering same.

Our newspaper advertising will probably averggg $200. a month. In January it was $220., February was $177. and this month will go about $200. This amount, you understand, is for the emtire month our Paramount Program is for four days a week, which would make the Paramount average about $114. a month.

I have to admire you for your persistance in urging us to us the Paramount Cuts more than we do in our advertising. I dont know why we haven't done this---just neglect I guess. But your letters have done us good and you may rest assured that in the future we will follow your advice.

We have found that "Paramount" means something besides good pictures---you've got a great org nization. Your "follow-up" has got anything that I ever came in contact with. You are making EXHIBITORS out of men who have started a FLICKER SHOP. If an exhibitor cant make good with Paramount Pictures and the power behind them, he is letting the office boy open his mail.

Cordially Yours,

RB/R

Mgr. Empress Theater.

Mr. Bagley uses Paramount four days.

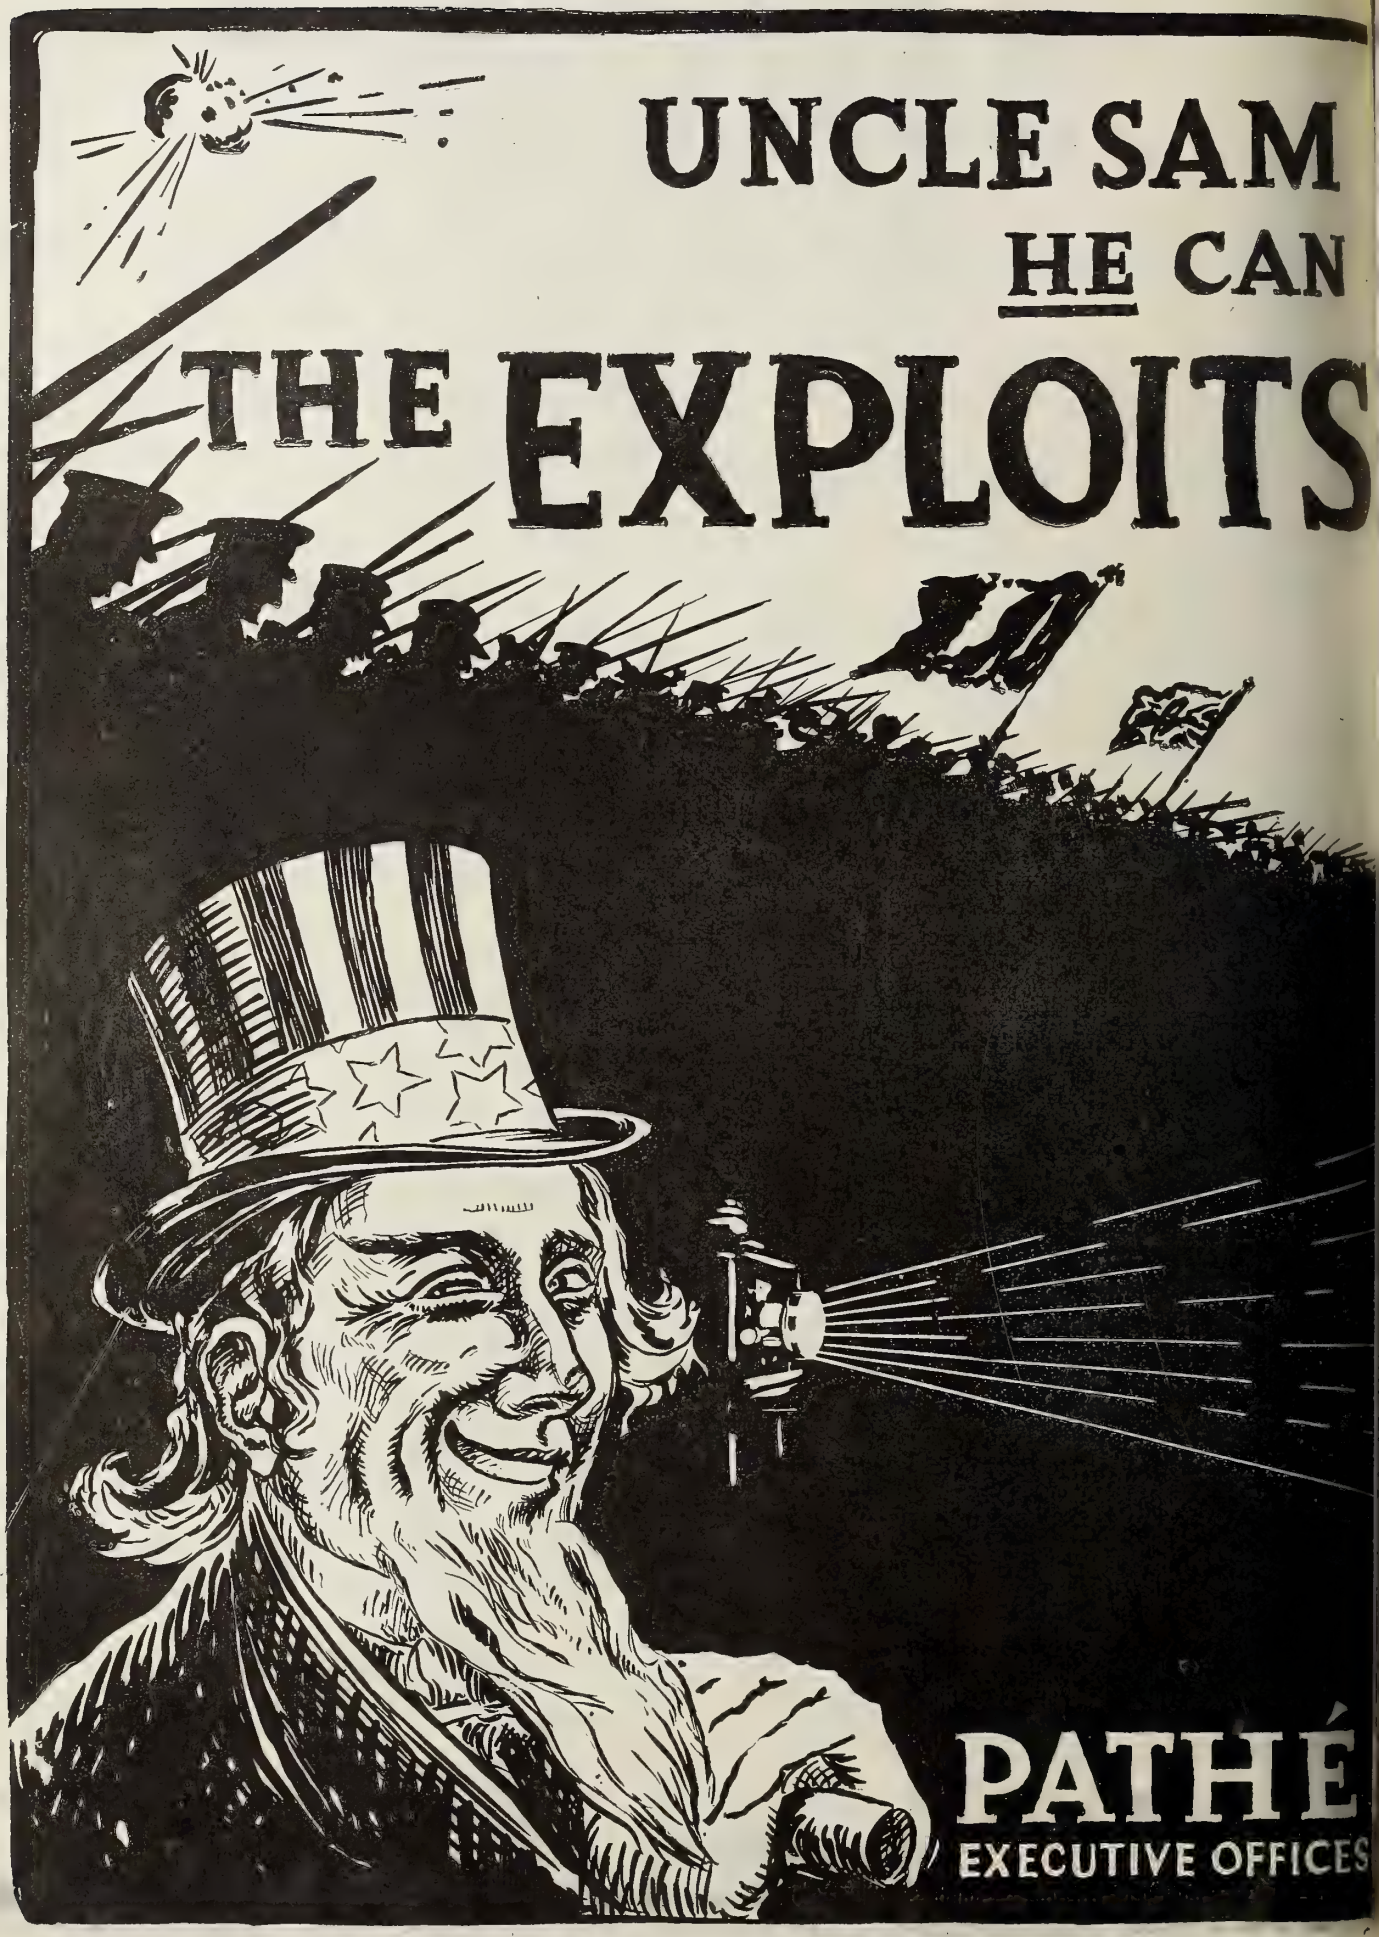
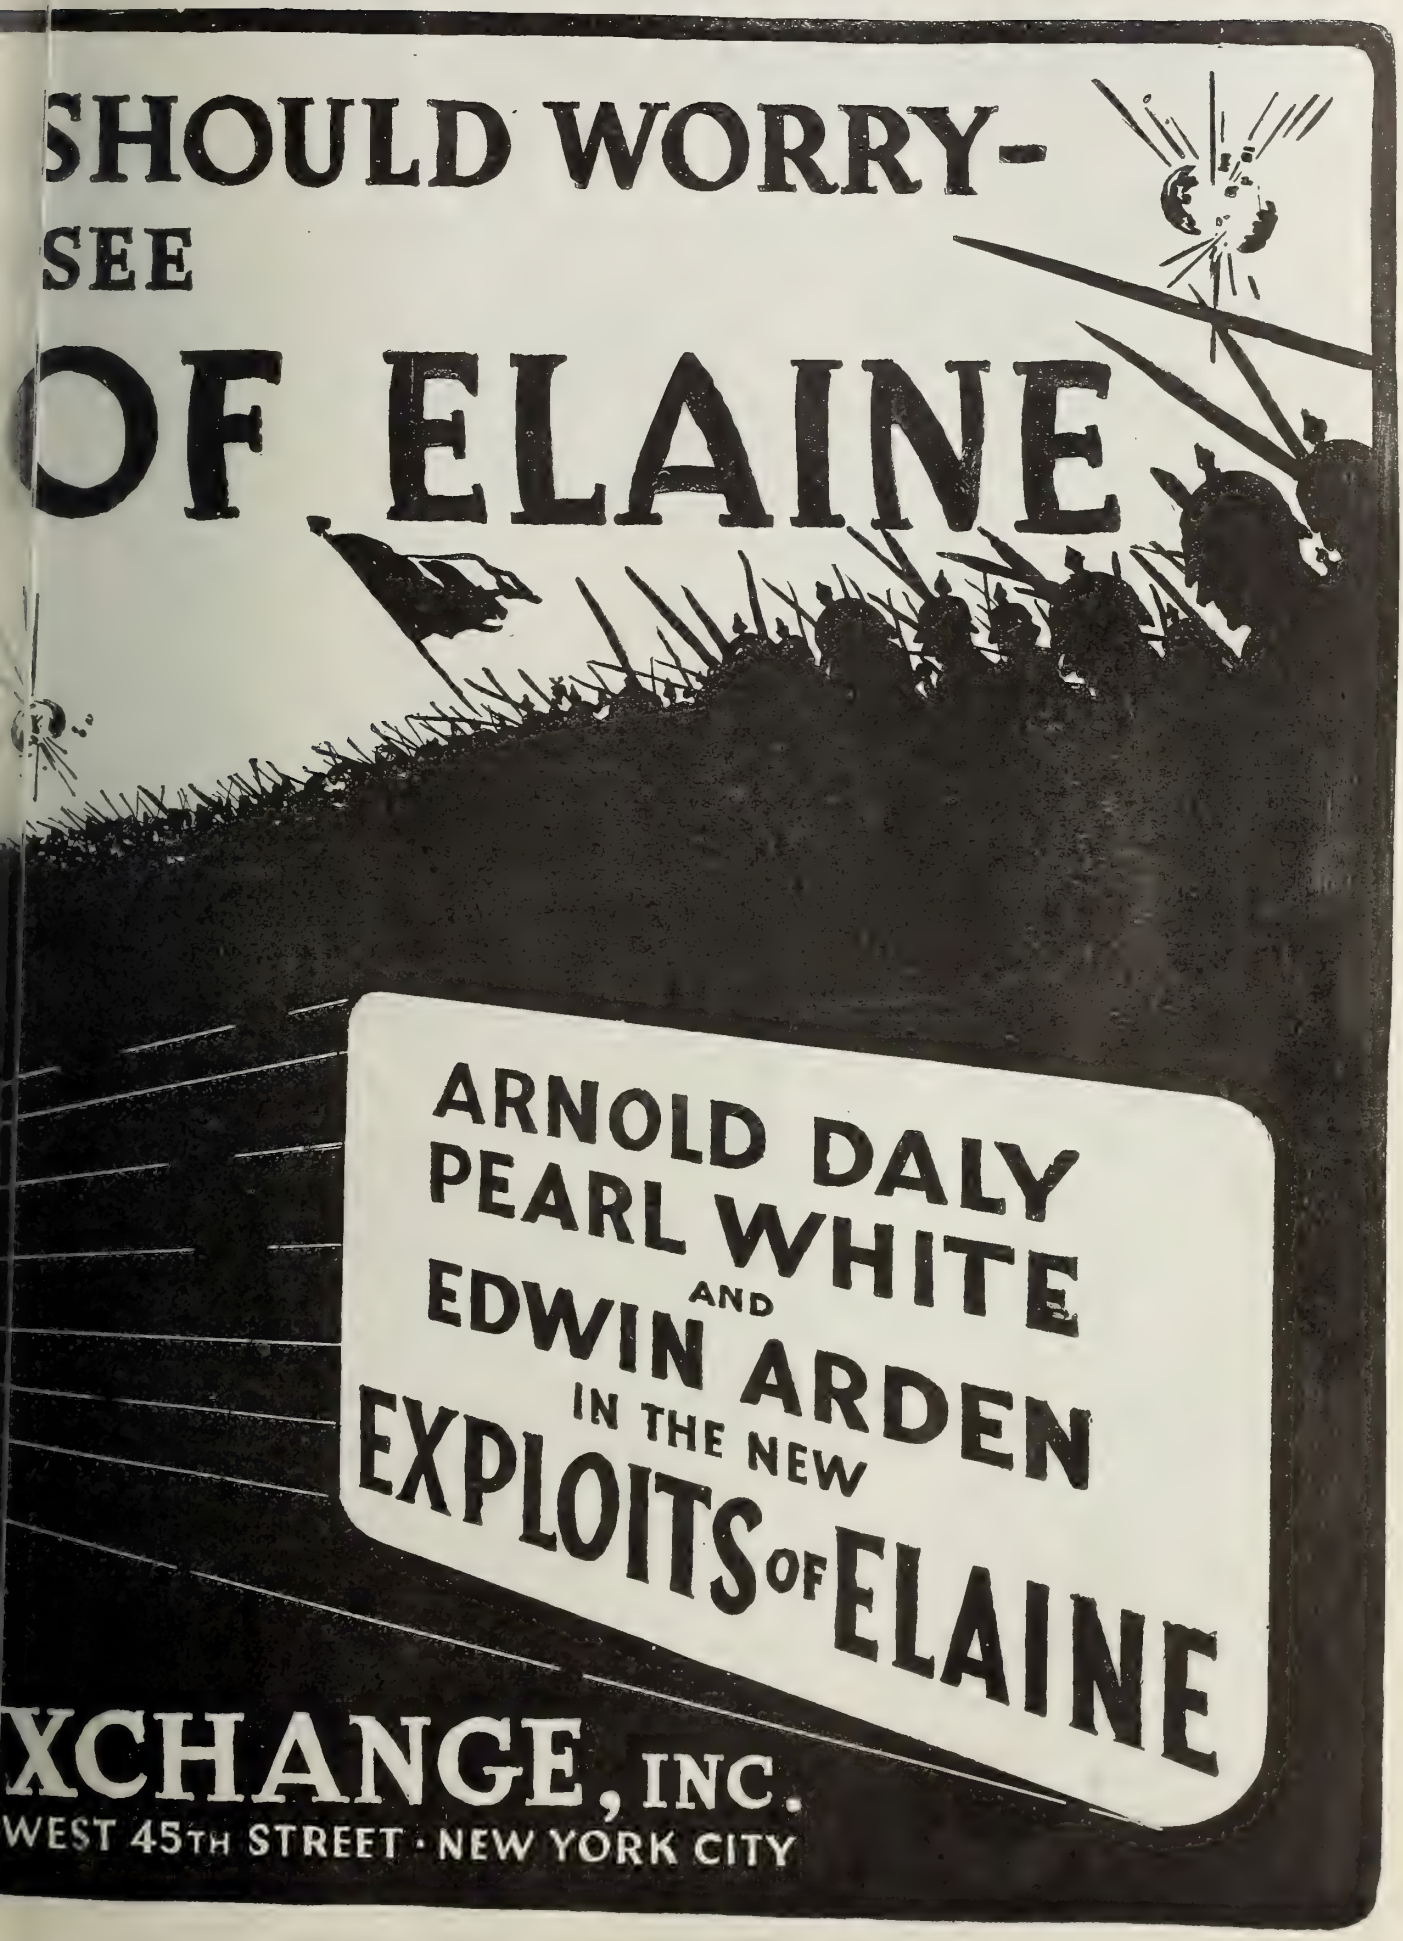
We regret the necessity for this correction, but—

The Paramount standard is to stick to the truth in small matters as well as big ones.



Exhibitors everywhere like this standard and are profiting by it.



If you wish to know about it, write our nearest exchange.

A Man and His Mate

Book AT ONCE

The Sky Pilot—The Road Agent—The Dancing Girl—and a "Skunk"

Miracles DO happen.

I have just experienced one—I have lived a miracle.

For one hour, while sitting in a comfortable chair in our little private theatre, my sight, my feelings, my emotions, my whole being has really lived through tense dramatic moments in the lives of men and women two thousand miles away from where I sat.

And the miracle was that I, the spectator, was also an actor in that wonderful Master-Picture—that I had loved, hated, schemed, triumphed with the characters as they played their parts before my eyes.

And, as the last scene of "On the Night Stage" faded, I realized that I and the millions of good folks who see our Master-Pictures do live in an age of miracles.

For one hour I had lived in Arizona.

The hot blue sky, nature's tumbled mountains, the color, the glare, the throb of the pitiless sun in the wild blood of man, the human scenes riotous with action—the best and the worst in us at war—with the love of a woman to sway the balance—but, I'm telling too much . . . . . .

You shall see and live this miracle as I saw and lived it—you will forget my enthusiasm in your own.

How you'll love it—if you've any of the boy left in you. And most of us have, praise be!

This is

ON THE NIGHT STAGE. It is the seventh of the Mutual Master-Pictures I promised you.

It was made by the New York Motion Picture Company under Mr. Thomas Ince's personal direction, and will be shown soon in a theatre near your home.

Were You Ever on the Spot when They Started to Lynch the Wrong Man?

When the picture flashes the ruggedness and blunt strength of the Golden West on the screen I seem to feel I'm booked for action — big, thrilling, red-blooded action—and a climax to satisfy the hungriest moving picture fan in the country.

That's what you get all the way through the four-reel Reliance production of

A MAN AND HIS MATE.

If you know the story—or if you have seen the play—you know what a vital, gripping subject it is

But you haven't seen it lived.

That's it—it's alive, terribly, wonderfully alive!

There is nothing more sinister than a mob bent upon the destruction of some human life, but when you know that the blood-thirsty crowd is going to lynch the wrong man, you just want to shout, to force your way through the throng, to fight to save him . . . . . .

Here I am, getting too enthusiastic — but the humanity of this picture gets me again, even as I write—and it will get you.

There's a climax to this story, a climax to "A Man and His Mate" that makes you glad you're a man—for what greater thing is there in all the world than to lay down your life for the woman you love?

Yes—these are two great moving pictures. You can see them sooner if you will Say to the theatre nearest you: "I want to see Mutual Master-Pictures"

Write me your views on moving pictures. First of all—what do you think of these, the Mutual Master-Pictures? They are made to please YOU, you know. Then—tell me the one thing you have ever seen in any moving picture anywhere you would most like to see again.

TO EXCHANGE MEN:
Canada and West of the Mississippi!

We offer the greatest opportunity in the film business. We are now operating successfully five of our own exchanges (see addresses below) in New York, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Chicago and Boston.

On account of the difficulty, well known to film men, of keeping proper supervision over exchanges located too far from the home office, we have decided not to open offices west of the Mississippi, or in Canada, but to allot that territory to film men of merit.

Renfax Musical Comedies, popular song - hits and playlets are well known in the East. They have not been exhibited, however, west of the Mississippi or in Canada.

A RARE CHANCE IS NOW OFFERED

We have now on hand 186 negatives all manufactured by us in the past six months, and we are releasing and manufacturing four new pictures every week.

PLEASE UNDERSTAND THAT THESE PICTURES ARE NOT USED WITH A SINGER, but are used in connection with a phonograph, which, by a simple patented attachment, synchronizes and keeps in perfect time with the film. This is not an experiment.

We are ready to show you by our own figures just what we are doing.
If you should be near any of our exchanges, call. You will see the number of exhibitors using our regular weekly program. These pictures are a proven success.

REMEMBER that this is an entirely new and novel form of entertainment. These pictures furnish the long needed break in the monotony of regular film service.

These films can be supplied to exhibitors at a surprisingly low price. They are without doubt the greatest drawing card yet offered.

For financial standing, see Dun or Bradstreet.

MAJESTIC AND KOMIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic and Komic releases)

THE LITTLE MOTHER. (1 Reel Majestic.) Release date Tuesday, April 6. A very interesting child story, telling how a little orphan girl at last finds a home with her baby sister.

THE FENCING MASTER. (2 Reel Majestic.) Release date Sunday, April 11. A well produced story of an old fencing master who regains the vigor of his youth, featuring delightful "Teddy" Sampson and lovable Thomas Jefferson.

BY FAIR MEANS OR FOWL. (1 Reel Komic.) Release date Sunday, April 11. A rural farce with Fay Tincher and Elmer Booth. Not quite up to Komic standard in story or production.

THE LITTLE MATCHMAKERS. (1 Reel Majestic.) Release date Tuesday, April 13. A delightful child love story featuring pretty Mildred Harris and Paul Willis.

THE HIGHBINDERS. (2 Reel Majestic.) Release date Sunday, April 18. A story of Chinatown with the real Chinatown atmosphere, showing how a beautiful half-caste Chinese girl was saved from slavery by a white man.

The Unconstitutional Surplus

A REAL flaw, which threatens to upset the entire constitutionality of the censorship laws of Pennsylvania and Ohio—even though the latter has been partially guaranteed by the United States Supreme Court—has finally been discovered.

And the discovery, strange to say, has been made first, not by the film men, nor their attorneys, but by the judges of the courts to which the motion picture producers have applied for relief.

Significantly enough, the feature that has aroused the interest of the judges is the size of the fee the censors are empowered to charge for the examination of pictures.

It has always been declared they were exorbitant; rarely, if ever, denied, and never disproved.

WE commented only a few weeks ago, in these columns, upon the decision of the Ohio Supreme Court, pronouncing the oil inspection law of that state unconstitutional on the ground that it levied arbitrarily a tax upon a special industry, because its fees were proven to be far in excess of what was necessary to pay for the execution of the law.

AT the Pennsylvania hearing last week Judge Von Moschzisker took up a line of questioning with the State Attorney-General's deputy, which indicated that he suspected there might be reason to criticize the censorship fees upon the same ground.

With two or three questions the court elicited from the attorney enough data to reveal that the total fees collected by the censor were likely, in a year, to be inexcusably in excess of the necessary expense for maintaining his office.

THE lawyer, realizing the dangerous ground beneath his feet, tried to extricate himself by suggesting that the surplus could be formally transferred to the state tax collections.

He was doomed to disappointment, however.

Judge Moschzisker hastened to assure him that license fees were one thing, provided by one kind of statute, and taxes something totally different. The two were under no circumstances interchangeable.

There the argument ended. But though it was only an informal discussion, the censors have suffered a decided check thereby.

It was probably intended as a hint. If, however, a word is not sufficient, the courts will probably lose little time in making their attitude plainer and more explicit.

THE censor's fee is obviously excessive.

We do not make this assertion because we believe the motion picture men can not afford to pay it.

We have much sounder and weightier reasons for declaring it unnecessarily high.

The censorship law is not a law to provide revenue for the state.

It is a law created for the avowed purpose of protecting public morals.

THE only excuse for exacting a fee is to provide money enough to support the officers or bureau charged with carrying out that law, without drawing upon the state treasury for funds.

The moment the total fees exceed the necessary expenses of such a force, the law is, from that moment and to that extent, unconstitutional. It becomes, in the words of the Ohio decision, an arbitrary levy of a tax upon a special industry.

EXAMINE the Pennsylvania law in this light. The attorneys for the film corporations appealing to the Supreme Court of that state placed the number of reels entering Pennsylvania weekly at 700. Those figures were given as a minimum.

The fee charged is $2.50 per reel, duplicates at the same price.

TAKING 700 reels per week as a basis, 36,400 reels would be examined every year by the Pennsylvania censors. For this they would collect $91,000 in fees.

The number of reels of pictures marketed every month is increasing rather than decreasing. It is therefore safe to place the censors' income, in round numbers, at $100,000 a year.

It scarcely needs to be said that $100,000 a year is not required to maintain the censor bureau of any state in the Union.

CONSIDER these facts, together with the significant colloquy between the Pennsylvania judge and the state's attorney, and there is every reason for predicting the success of a suit, brought against either the Pennsylvania or the Ohio law, upon that ground.

There is also every reason for urging the manufacturers to shift their attack to that quarter, obviously the weakest point in the censorship "line."

Vol. XI April 17, 1915 No. 15

NO stronger admission could be found—short of a positive confession—that the Pennsylvania law is wrong in that particular than the so-called "compromise" bill, introduced at Harrisburg at the instigation of Chief Censor J. Louis Breitinger.

The whole bill is an admission that the size of the fee is open to criticism.

But the remedy Mr. Breitinger proposes is as startling as it is characteristic, of Mr. Breitinger.

THERE is a reduction of the fee, first, on duplicates of single-reel subjects (that is, subjects not over 1,200 feet in length) to $1; second, on all subjects over 1,200 feet in length, from $2.50 per reel to $5, irrespective of length; third, on duplicates of all these longer pictures to $2.

THE second half of the bill, however, contains the real "joker."

It establishes three censors, instead of two, for three-year terms, at aggregate salaries of $7,900.

Further, it provides for a force of twenty subordinates, with salaries ranging from $1,500 down to $480, with power to appoint others as the Governor may approve.

IN other words, the surplus in the censors' treasury has made Mr. Breitinger extremely uneasy. It is an unanswerable fault of his present position.

He has an opportunity to remould the whole law nearer to his heart's desire. And he has accordingly determined that, once this "surplus" ghost is laid, it shall never rise to haunt him again.

If Mr. Breitinger has his way there will be a staff attached to the State Censor's office, large enough to dispose of any surplus that might materialize.

INSTEAD of cutting his income to meet his expenses, he will increase his expenses to conform to his income —a much pleasanter solution, it must be admitted, for Mr. Breitinger.

Meanwhile the question remains: Are the motion picture men, attracted by the "reduction" bait, going to swallow the hook?

A Convention That Will Be More Than the Ordinary Convention

OF all the exhibitors' state organizations, the Northwestern Exhibitors' Association is the one most capable of offering to the business at large an example of what a trade convention ought to be, and they have chosen an excellent time in the history of their own body for their next gathering.

The convention of May 3 to May 7, inclusive, will be something more than the usual assembling of exhibitors for an exchange of ideas, a further standardization of business principles, and a renewal of the spirit of co-operation.

This year it will be something in the nature of a jubilee, a proud retrospect of past performances for which the Northwestern exhibitors truly have every reason to be proud.

FIRST of all, the exhibitors who consider Minneapolis as their center have created an organization powerful, compact, and harmonious.

Beginning with the Minnesota group as a nucleus, they have successfully expanded until their membership now comprises six states—North and South Dakota, Iowa, Montana, and Wisconsin, in addition to the parent state of the organization.

SECONDLY, the exhibitors of the Northwest have demonstrated, during the session of the legislature, their ability to grapple, single-handed, with the problems that arose out of the numerous bills presented to the legislators, and to deal with them to their own advantage. It has been a gratifying and encouraging sight for the other harassed sections of the country, this brave defense and ultimate victory of the exhibitors of Minnesota.

With a league prosperous and growing as this is, its strength tested and approved, its usefulness to its members measured unmistakably by its record, there is every incentive to an overflowing attendance at Minneapolis next month, and the promise of great good and an inspiring outlook for every exhibitor upon its roster.

A New Variety of Legislative Persecution

THE recent action of a California State Senator in preparing a "Cruelty-to-Animals" bill for the Legislature, aimed chiefly at, and most seriously affecting, the motion picture concerns of the Coast which own and maintain extensive zoos, is as short-sighted as the motive is mistaken.

The measure, in the first place, is ill-founded. It originated in misrepresentation and has been pushed because of misunderstanding.

It is highly indiscreet, in the second place, for the State of California to tamper recklessly and in a meddlesome spirit with an industry of which she has at present an undisputed but by no means an indisputable monopoly.

Such an attitude as this on the part of the Sunset State legislators might make even so delightful a spot as California an unprofitable place of business for the motion picture people, and make other neighboring states correspondingly alluring. No one cares to outstay his welcome.

CENSOR REPEAL BILL KILLED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Action is Indefinitely Postponed by House of Representatives at Harrisburg on Stein Measure—Film Men Prepare Now to Fight Daix Bill, Providing More Drastic and Costly Censorship Regime Than the One Now in Existence—Breitinger and Governor Backing "Compromise" Law

Harrisburg, Pa., April 7.

A QUICK and effective quietus was put on the efforts of the motion picture interests of Pennsylvania to wipe out censorship entirely, when the Judiciary General Committee of the House of Representatives last Wednesday, the day following the public hearing on the Stein bill, providing for the repeal of the censorship law, votel to postpone action on the measure indefinitely. Individual members of the law-makers' committee are frank to state that this means the bill for absolute elimination of censors will repose in a pigeon hole for the rest of the session.

On the same day there was introduced in the Senate, by Senator Augustus F. Daix, of Philadelphia, the bill, mentioned briefly in the last issue of The Motion Picture News, which creates a new board of censorship with higher salaries and with a greatly increased number of subordinate employes This board, it is proposed, shall have three members instead of two.

Governor Backs Censor's New Law

Law-makers make no bones about the fact that the Daix bill was framed in accordance with the views of the present chief censor, who himself has declared openly that it meets with his approval and that it is endorsed both by Governor Brumbaugh and Attorney Brown, notwithstanding the fact that the attorney-general's department, at the direction of the governor, is now investigating the grievances which prompted the motion-picture men to call for the suspension of Mr. Breitinger from office on the contention that he has been remiss in the performance of his duties.

In fact it is freely admitted by the law-makers who are "in the know," that the Daix bill will be put right through the Senate without amendment, thus throwing the battle over its final adoption onto the floor of the lower branch of the general assembly. The bill is now in the hands of the Senate Judiciary General Committee, of which Senator Henry A. Clark, of Erie, is chairman, and early next week will be reported favorably and then railroaded through the upper branch.

Film Men Will Fight New Bill

Notwithstanding the unexpected sudden death that was meted out to the Stein repealer, the Joint Legislative Committee of exchange men and exhibitors have rallied again and intrenched themselves to give battle just as bravely from a new angle. It is understood that the committee has agreed to take a fresh stand when the Daix bill, which concedes very little more to the motion picture interests than does the present censorship law, reaches the floor of the house. The plan is either to present a new bill, providing for censorship—which apparently now cannot be escaped—but in a much less radical form than that proposed in the Daix bill, or to seek so to amend the Daix bill as to make it somewhat closer to meeting the wishes of the men in the motion picture business.

The committee of the film men and exhibitors will fight from now on for lower fees for examination of films; for a provision requiring the State and not the picture men to pay the costs of maintaining projection rooms and projection room attaches, and for the right to appeal to a court of justice from a decision of the censors—a right which is not conceded either by the present law or by the terms of the Daix bill.

The Daix bill, while it repeals the present censorship law, re-establishes most of the objectionable provisions of that law. By many it is believed to have been presented with a view to eliminating some of the constitutional flaws in the present statute which many lawyers believe make the latter quite vulnerable. In this connection it is pointed out that the Daix bill contains one especially significant section as follows:

"The several sections and provisions of this act are hereby declared to be independent of each other and it is the legislative intent that if any of said sections or provisions be declared to be unconstitutional, such section or provision shall not affect any other portion of this act."

Lawyers who have studied the bill say that the very evident intention of this section is to save the rest of the measure should a court declare any part of the proposed act in conflict with the constitution.

A Few Concessions Noticeable

While the Daix bill in principle maintains most of the features of the present objectionable law, there is evidence between the lines that the vigorous fight that the picturemen have been making has already borne some fruit, even if the picture men do not succeed in getting further concessions that they hope for in continuing the campaign While the fee of $2.50 charged for examining films is retained, the fee for examining duplicates of films which already have been approved is reduced from $2.50 to $1.00. Moreover instead of $2.50 being charged for examining each stereopticon view, the new bill makes that charge for each set of stereopticon views examined. Another apparent gain for the picture interests lies in the fact that, through provision for the employment by the State of so many more subordinates, some twenty as compared with two at present—it is concluded that it is the intent of the bill that the State and not the picture men hereafter shall stand the expense of paying the employees needed for the examination of films. It also appears to be the intent of the bill that traveling expenses and cost of maintaining projection rooms shall be paid by the State hereafter instead of by the picture men. This is indicated by a section which says:

"Each member and employe of the board shall be allowed all expenses of whatsoever nature actually and necessarily incurred by him or her in carrying out the provisions of this act," while another section says the State shall "Provide adequate offices for the Board in Harrisburg, and in such other cities of the Commonwealth as the Board may require" in carrying out the intent of the measure, and that the State shall "furnish to the Board all furniture, books, stationery supplies, machines and paraphernalia necessary."

Yet despite these more or less important concessions there remain many of the features that make the present law almost intolerable, in the opinion of motion picture men. For instance the Board "may adopt such rules as it may deem necessary," which is construed as giving the Board power to do practically anything it chooses that does not run afoul of the Constitution or that is not specifically prohibited by the terms of the act.

Another feature of interest in the bill is the fact that it gives the Board power to censor "slides" as well as films and stereopticon views. The present law makes no reference to "slides," and because it does not the exhibitors today are displaying slides calling on the people of the State to fight State censorship. Chief Censor Breitinger ordered these slides not to be shown, but exhibitors are going right ahead exhibiting them on the ground that Breitinger has no legal right to put the ban on them, inasmuch as the law makes no reference to them.

The Daix bill, however, makes it certain that if that measure is enacted into law there will be no possibility of the picture men using slides in future political battles unless those slides are first approved by the censors, which is not likely to be the case when the slides are aimed at censorship.

The $3,000 salary provided for the chairman of the proposed new Board of three instead of two censors, represents an increase of $1,500 a year over the salary of the present chief censor, Breitinger. The other two members are to get $2,500 and $2,400, as compared with the $1,200 the second censor now receives.

May Regulate Advertising Matter

The Board is given full power to "supervise and regulate the display of and exhibition of all banners, posters, and other advertising matter." The fees collected for the examination of films are to be turned directly into the State Treasury and are not to be used to help defray the expenses of examination of films as under the existing statute.

At the same time that the House Judiciary General Committee, of which Representative William H. Wilson, of Philadelphia, is chairman, applied the chloroform for the extermination of the Stein repealer bill, it administered the same dose to the bill of Representative Isador Stern, of Philadelphia, which proposes greatly to curtail the power of the censorship board and to reduce the fee for examination of films from $2.50 to 50 cents. This bill, which is said to have been introduced at the request of some prominent film manufacturers with the hope it would pass if the bill for absolute elimination of censorship should fail of passage, also was consigned to the land of Nod by the committee's decision indefinitely to postpone action on it.

V. H. Berghaus, Jr.

Monster Petition Against State Censorship Launched

Pittsburgh, April 7.

IT is estimated that more than 150,000 persons signed the petitions that were carried to the Pennsylvania capital by the delegation which went from this city to assist in the fight against censorship by the State. The committee left last Tuesday for Harrisburg, and it is said that the battle lines have been arranged in such a way as to make it possible to get the right kind of action by the legislators at this session so that the law will be repealed and the obnoxious censorship of pictures driven from this state.

That the law was put through in order that some few political debts could be paid by the past executives of the state seems evident from the fact that the chief executive seems to be lending his efforts to remove the law and make it possible for the movies to operate without all the strings attached as at present.

There are a number of other laws which affect the motion picture business in this commonwealth, and it is said that the committee while in Harrisburg will do its best to have them repealed.

CHARLOTTE BURTON IN "THE PROBLEM," AN AMERICAN PHOTOPLAY RELEASED APRIL 9

Pathé Camera Man Decorated for Work at Przemysl

Ercole Is Struck by Piece of Shrapnel at Siege of the City with the Unpronounceable Name—Films Rushed to United States in Record Time

IT'S a long, long way from New York to the place with the unforgettable, unpronounceable name, Przemysl, but it seems less when one sees certain fine pictures of the siege in the Pathé "News" and learns that the Pathé special correspondent, Ercole, who took them, has been wounded and decorated for bravery under trying conditions.

When it was learned that Przemysl was destined to become famous in spite of its name, the Pathé "News" sent its special war correspondent in Russia, Mr. Ercole, straight to the Galician front to the Russian army besieging the city. He was sent there to get pictures, and he did so. While he was turning his camera he was hit by a piece of shrapnel and painfully wounded, but he did not cease to turn and in consequence has been decorated by the Imperial Government of Russia with the Cross of the Order of St. George.

His films were rushed by way of the Pathé agencies in Moscow, Stockholm and London to the United States, so on the very day the newsboys were using their fifty-seven different ways of pronouncing Przemysl to tell the public that the Austrian fortress had fallen, in the Pathé "News" projecting rooms at Jersey City the editorial staff of the "News" was looking at some very fine pictures of the siege.

Majority of Lubin Comedies to Be One Reelers

Company in the South Includes Patsy DeForrest, Billy Potter, Johnnie Doyle, Charles Griffiths, Mary Hartwell, Amy Forrest, and Jack Tucker

THE Lubin Southern studio at Jacksonville, Fla., which has been undergoing extensive repairs and improvements during the past few weeks, is the scene of much activity these days, for Lubin has centered there a number of the best-known comedians in the country, and their ranks will be greatly added to within the next month. Arthur D. Hotaling, Lubin's chief comedy director, is in charge of the studio.

The Lubin Company has adopted a new policy in regard to its comedies. The majority of the new releases will be one-reelers. Even the burlesques and farces will have a purpose, rather than aimless slapstick contortions.

Heading the list of comedians is Billy Reeves, the English comedian, acrobat and pantomimist, who will long be remembered as "the drunk" in "A Night in an English Music Hall." Reeves has made his debut "under the Lubin bell," and his work so far gives promise of big things in the future. With him is a specially selected company, which includes Patsy DeForrest, Billy Potter, Johnnie Doyle, Charles Griffiths, Mary Hartwell, Amy Forrest, Amy Webb, Jack O'Neil, Bobbie Williamson and Harry Nelson.

Another strong addition to the Lubin comedians is Jack Tucker, of the famous vaudeville team of Williams and Tucker.

SINGLE REELERS ON MONDAYS DROPPED FROM EDISON

Beginning Monday, April 16, the single reel which Edison has for some time been releasing on alternate Mondays will be dropped from the program. This has been brought about through the adding to the studio's production a weekly three-reel feature upon which Edison is spending considerable effort to prove their contention that no play, no matter in how many reels told, can surpass the strength of compactness in the three-reeler which is well produced.

Every one of the Edison features is subjected to the most searching analysis and criticism of two boards of critics who have spent their life with the drama.

The three-reel features which Edison has been releasing on alternate Mondays will not be affected by this new Monday program. Manager Plimpton declares that one of the chief reasons for there not being a better class of plays at large was due to too many plays being turned out weekly by a studio. This change appears to be a practical application of that belief.

BALTIMORE PLANNING TO ATTEND FRISCO CONVENTION

Baltimore, April 7.

A Baltimore club is being formed to go to San Francisco this summer to attend the annual convention of the League of Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, the convention city having just been announced by President Marion S. Pearce.

Mr. Pearce and J. Howard Bennett, national vice-president for Maryland, are active workers in organizing the Baltimore contingent. From present indications 20 or 25 members of the league, with their families, will go to the Pacific Coast in addition to the regular elected delegates from Maryland.

ZENA KEEFE AND GOLLOMB BACK WITH VITAGRAPH

Zena Keefe, one of the Vitagraph favorites, who got a leave of absence for a year to go into vaudeville, has returned to the Vitagraph Company to resume her place in stock.

Joseph Gollomb, formerly of the Universal eastern scenario department, has joined the scenario department of the Vitagraph Company. Mr. Gollomb had been on the reportorial staffs of the "Evening World" and the "Evening Mail," and is a graduate of C. C. N. Y. and Columbia University.

CHAPLIN CROWDS DETROIT HOUSES

Detroit is "Charlie Chaplin" mad. Wherever there is a sign announcing "Charlie Chaplin today" the result is big crowds and packed houses. Even a slide thrown on the screen announcing "Charlie Chaplin Here Tomorrow" brings laughter and applause.

What has done more than anything else to popularize Mr. Chaplin was his work in "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS---XI

Blackton, of Vitagraph, Says that Producers Must Expect to Pay Large Sums for Pictures for Satisfactory Results—Overhead Charges of His Company Amounts to $70,000 a Week—Advises Against Hysteria when $25,000 Is Spent on a Film—How the Starring Policy Has Worked

VITAL and interesting statistics concerning the cost of conducting a large motion picture producing concern, lack of familiarity with which has been at least a contributory cause to the premature death of several companies, have been compiled by J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company of America. The Vitagraph Company, which releases from twelve to fourteen reels of finished pictures a week, is probably the largest producer of meritorious, artistic motion pictures in the world.

J. Stuart Blackton, as one of the triumvirate who constitute the Vitagraph Company, has had fifteen years' practical experience as a producer, during which time he and his associates have risen to their present position from the smallest start back in the days when the phrase "motion pictures are only in their infancy" was true.

"Of the weak spots in the motion picture business," said Mr. Blackton, "one which has done much harm is ignorance. That is, ignorance of what it means to enter the motion picture business. The past two years have seen many new firms spring up like mushrooms. Like mushrooms, many of them have had at best a short existence.

"Had the men who engineered these companies understood what they were doing, had they known where they were treading, they might not have been so eager to rush in.

"The Vitagraph Company of America, I suppose, is one of the concerns which has been pointed out as a glittering example when the occasion arose to dilate on the success of the older companies.

"But if the persons contemplating entering the motion picture industry knew the amount of money tied up in our various plants they would understand that they cannot duplicate in a month or a year what took us fifteen years to achieve, nor can they do it by spending at a stroke about one-tenth what the various Vitagraph plants represent today.

Everything Complete in Flatbush Plant

"The Vitagraph Company of America has its largest plant right here in Flatbush. Here we have a studio, which affords working room for a stock company of about 200 persons and 500 'extra people' hired as the occasion demands, property department, scenario department, a factory where the developing and printing of the pictures is done, publicity and advertising department, in short everything necessary for a self-contained motion picture company. We even manufacture our own cameras and printing machines. Here we have a capacity of about 1,500,000 feet of film a week.

"On the Pacific Coast we have another producing plant and a third in Paris. These are in addition to our foreign distributing offices and our American branch offices in New York City and Chicago.

"The sum total of capital invested is about $5,000,000. This is over and above real estate holdings worth about $1,000,000. There you have $6,000,000 sunk in a lump sum before a crank is turned.

"Operating expenses average about $70,000 a week. This is the grand total of the overhead. Of this about $38,000 is consumed in the regular payroll. The other $32,000 goes for properties, supplies, 'extra people' and so on. About 1,200 employees are on the regular payroll.

"The money spent on the average picture before the work of producing is started runs from $1,000 to $3,000. In a special feature, such as 'The Juggernaut,' for which a whole train was sent over a trestle into the water beneath, this expense may run up to $40,000 or more.

"All this money is spent without any undue fuss. We expect such expense, and when it comes we don't get excited. Yet I can not fail to observe that new producing companies often become wildly excited over pictures which cost $25,000, and act as if no one ever produced so expensive a picture before.

Money Must Be Spent

"The man who is going into the motion picture business should consider this expense as necessary before he takes the plunge. Then he will not be so shocked when the bills come in. If he is going to make good pictures he must have the plant, the players, the equipment and spend the money. I don't think we have made reckless expenditures, and the figures just quoted give a very fair idea of what it costs us to make pictures.

"In return for the expenditure and money invested, we are turning out weekly four single reel pictures, one two reeler, one three reeler and one special feature which may run from three to five reels, a total of from twelve to fourteen reels.

"The man who is looking things over should not forget that we did not reach our present position in a day, nor in a year. The Vitagraph Company of America was started some fifteen years ago. At that time we made one reel of film a week, and sold the prints as best we could. The cost of producing the single reel at that time may be estimated at $300. I'm sure it wasn't very much, for the possible returns were so small that we had to keep expenses down in every possible way.

Not Reckoning the Cost

"As time went on our output increased both in quantity and quality till today nothing is too big nor too expensive for us to undertake, and quality is the first requisite. 'If it's needed for the picture, get it' is what we tell our directors. Fifteen years is quite a period in so rapidly growing an industry as the motion picture business. The man who thinks he can compress fifteen years into a few months is going to find that he was sadly mistaken.

"But it is plain that not everybody feels this way when one sees the recent developments in the business. New concerns, in their effort to overhaul and surpass the older companies are sapping every possibility. They find that their efforts eat up money so quickly as to paralyze the investors.

"Then the investors become disgusted with the results and the constant demands for money and withdraw their support. The result is the finish of the company. This has happened, and I fear may again.

"The trouble is that many newcomers don't reckon with what it means to cope with present conditions in the motion picture industry. They don't reckon what it will cost them to establish themselves when they must start with no established patronage and no exchange circulation.

No Vitagraph Star a Failure

"The sooner that the men who are going into the motion picture business and those who are putting up the money come to a clear realization of what they are up against the better it will be for the whole industry and the fewer will be the failures. In closing I think that a word about the Vitagraph policy may not be amiss. The initiative and progressive policy of the Vitagraph company has been and is one secret of its success. But don't forget that the Vitagraph has the organization necessary to promote and sustain its policy.

"The Vitagraph company has always starred the Vitagraph players in all its feature productions with the result that not one has been a failure. The dramatic excellence displayed in Vitagraph pictures has been universally recognized.

"Many other companies have featured in their productions stars of the speaking stage who are naturally an attraction by reason of their stage success. This has been of value in arousing expectations. But contrary to expectation, many of these productions have been only mediocre as pictures and have fallen far below anticipation. True they have made some money, but they were not, artistically and financially speaking, great successes. In most instances these stars have appeared in reproductions of their stage successes.

"The Vitagraph company has now made arrangements with several of the best known and most prominent stars of the stage to appear in features, written and produced under the personal supervision of A. E. Smith and myself, together with the Vitagraph players. Thus we will give the exhibitor and public exactly what they want—the best and most celebrated players and the best pictures possible."

FAVERSHAM JOINS ROLFE NEXT MONTH

William Faversham will close his regular theatrical season about May 24 and will begin immediately upon his first screen production, which will be staged at B. A. Rolfe's eastern studios. The title of Faversham's first piece has not been selected as yet.

Northwestern Exhibitors Prepare for Convention

Delegation from Illinois Association Expected to Be in Attendance—Dyckman Hotel Made Headquarters for Visitors—Expect 1,500 Delegates

WITH two particularly obnoxious pieces of proposed motion picture legislation laid on the shelf for two years, the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Minnesota is getting set for the largest convention of exhibitors ever held in the West. It is likewise preparing to lose its identity and give up its name for the good of the cause.

The annual convention and exhibition will be held from May 3 to 7, inclusive, in the Arcadia rink, Fourth avenue S and Fifth street, Minneapolis. With the association will meet the motion picture men of North and South Dakota, Montana, Wisconsin and Iowa. A big delegation from the Illinois association will also come as guests and help along in the enthusiasm.

The Dyckman Hotel is to be the headquarters outside of business hours and the association is planning for at least 1,500 delegates.

When the hotel was first engaged the officers of the association believed they could have the exhibition in the lobby and in the balconies, but there has been a flood of applications for exhibit space and so the meeting place was transferred to the Arcadia rink, the largest single floor in the city.

The rink was built as a dance hall and the hall is in the center. Outside the hall is a promenade that makes an ideal exhibition avenue. The hall has dressing and retiring rooms, and everything needed to make the meeting a success.

The co-operation of the associations of the Northwest has resulted in much good for the film business in general. When obnoxious legislation was proposed in any one state, all of the exhibitors in all of the states fought it.

As a result the states which will compose the new Northwestern Motion Picture Exhibitors Association will be comparatively free from hampering laws. The association will wind up its business under the old name, enroll the memberships of the other associations and start a broader work.

It is the plan of the members to widen the franchise method of handling business,. This question referred to a committee at the mid-winter is to be the popular thing of the convention.

Under this method the association will help any exhibitor who is a member, to get a franchise if he is entitled to it on a fair basis. If after that there is not enough business for another theatre the association will help in the fight to prevent the issuance of another franchise.

The six states plan to form an efficient working body that will rank with any business men's association of similar size.

"Watch us grow and watch us go," is to be the motto.

Two of the bills which show some of the underlying unfairness toward exhibitors as a class were the North bill in the Minnesota legislature and the Sunday closing bill. Both these bills have been shelved.

The North law provided for a commission that would censor films for a fee, inspect and license theatres, enforce and make fire prevention rules, prohibit some kinds of apparatus and allow others to be used.

The Sunday closing law classed motion picture theatres with pool halls and required them to remain closed all day Sunday.

When the legislative committee was organized in the winter, these bills were expected. The exhibitors relied on the committee to stop them. Their confidence was not misplaced and their work has caused a great increase in the membership.

SELLING TICKETS FAST FOR DETROIT BALL

Tickets are selling fast for the first annual ball to be given at the Arcadia Dancing Academy, Thursday evening, April 15, under the auspices of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

Howard O. Pierce, chairman of the entertainment committee, says there will be at least a half dozen film stars in attendance.

WORLD FAIR PICTURES FOR RELEASE

The Pan-American Film Company, with offices in the Pacific building, San Francisco, is preparing to release one and two reel subjects of interest of the World's Fair. George F. Cosby, manager of the concern, promises some very interesting features.

The Pan-American Film Company has the exclusive state rights in California for the two six-reel features, "The Panama Canal from Aeroplane" and "The Life of Richard III."

CENTAUR ACTORS IN LEADS HAVE SMOKING ROOM

A modern dressing room is being built at the Centaur Film Company. This dressing room is for the exclusive use of the leading actors and contains all the modern conveniences which will add to their comfort.

Closely adjoining this apartment a small smoking room has been installed where the actors can go between "shifts" and take a quiet smoke without having to call on the fire reserves to stand guard.

Make Canvass in Berkeley, Cal., for Censorship

City Club of That City Agitating for Regulation of Films—Exhibitors Active in Preventing Interference—Proposed Measure Likely to Be Defeated

San Francisco, April 5.

THE proposition of establishing a board of censorship at Berkeley, Cal., is being discussed by city officials and by members of leading clubs and other organizations in the College City. The City Club, composed of leaders in civic affairs, has been taking a prominent part in this agitation and has been conducting a campaign of investigation which culminated in a public gathering one evening last week when those opposed to the idea were given an opportunity to present their side of the matter.

For several weeks a committee from this club has been visiting the moving picture shows presented in the theatres of Berkeley, and in addition to this survey has been sounding the children of the public schools on what they find of interest at these entertainments. Permission was secured from the school board to have the children write short papers on "What I Like Best in Moving Pictures."

At the public gathering held last week Thomas H. Reed presented the report of this committee, which indicated that each of the eight moving picture houses of the city had been visited. Several of the productions seen were enthusiastically endorsed, while a number were reported to be artistically bad, with the character of others very low.

A significant feature of the report is the fact that of all the comedies seen not one received the endorsement of all the members of the committee.

H. L. Beach, a prominent exhibitor of Berkeley, and president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of California, followed Mr. Reed and explained in detail the manner in which films are booked from the exchanges. Many of those present were of the opinion that the exhibitor inspected all of the films shown in his house before contracting for them and expressed surprise when told that such was not the case, except with the larger houses where features were shown.

G. E. Thornton, manager of the Oakland Photo Theatre, conducted by the Turned and Dahnken Circuit, vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Alameda County, and formerly manager of the Berkeley Theatre, spoke along similar lines, explaining many exhibitors had practically no choice in arranging their bills and were obliged to take what the exchanges gave them. He spoke of his three years' experience in Berkeley, and declared that in all of that time he had never been requested to stop a single picture.

It is believed that all agitation along a censorship line has been stopped. Any further attempts to secure censorship in any form for Berkeley will meet with bitter opposition, as the Alameda County Exhibitors League is a powerful body and two officials of the California State League operate houses in the College City.

DINNER IN HONOR OF MIRIAM NESBITT

Mary Rider, the writer, gave a dinner Monday evening, March 29, at the New York City Pen and Brush Club in honor of Miriam Nesbitt, Edison. A number of persons of note were invited to meet the Edison star, some of whom were Ida Tarbell, Miss Katherine B. Davis, Commissioner of Charities and Correction, New York City.

Miss Rider gave the dinner as a testimonial to Miss Nesbitt's work in two virile criminal scripts which Miss Rider wrote especially for her.

LASKY MOVES TO MORE SPACIOUS QUARTERS

New and Elegant Building on Forty-first Street, New York City, Will Be Future Home of the Concern—Rapid Growth of Business Necessitates Change—Significant Proof of Firm's Strength in Announcement of London Office to Follow Close of European War

DURING the coming week the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company will become established in its new and elaborate offices, 120 West Forty-first street, where this organization will occupy the entire fifth floor of one of the most beautiful new office buildings constructed in New York City.

The building is the first of its type erected in this city and is an example of what is known as the concrete cantilever construction. It contains special film vaults conforming with all the new rules of the fire department and also an automatic fire sprinkler system which is a marvel of its kind. The entire structure is of steel and concrete, with scarcely a stick of wood.

The suite occupied by the Lasky company, constructed especially to meet its needs, will take up the entire fifth floor and is divided into ten offices. There are no transoms and no glass doors, and this, combined with the entire absence of vibration, makes the offices absolutely sound proof. One of the special conveniences is an intercommunicating dictaphone system. The entire south side of the building is of steel and glass, and over the centre is a large skylight which provides light and air for all of the ten offices.

One of the unique features of the structure on the ground floor is a private theatre with one hundred and fifty seats. This theatre, which is beautifully decorated and equipped with every facility for projecting a perfect picture, is provided with a Wurlitzer Hope Jones organ and will be at the disposal of the Lasky company for the private showings of its new productions to the press and invited guests.

The Company's Growth

The establishment of the Lasky company in its new offices is typical of the manner in which the concern has steadily been growing ever since it began business about sixteen months ago. Samuel Goldfish has throughout this entire period devoted himself exclusively to the executive end of the business.

Mr. Lasky himself may be said to supervise the solution of those artistic and business problems which continually arise. Mr. Goldfish, as already explained, takes the executive departments under his immediate care. In the California studios of the concern, Cecil De Mille is supreme in his capacity as director general and has gathered about himself a staff of noted producers.

He has associated with him his brother, William C. De Mille, who is the chief of the scenario department, and who is assisted by Margaret Turnbull, an author of note. He also has the co-operation of Wilfred Buckland, for many years David Belasco's art director, who is now the supreme authority for settings of all the Lasky productions. Arthur S. Friend is the secretary of the company and takes charge of all legal matters. In New York City, at the executive end of the line, Mr. Goldfish has as his chief aide Carl Anderson, who is the office manager, and to whose efforts the perfection of the new quarters which the company is to occupy is undoubtedly due. The publicity department is in charge of H. Whitman Bennett.

No article concerning the advancement of the Lasky company would be even approximately complete without a special tribute to David Belasco, with whom this concern has the honor to be associated in the productions of the famous Belasco dramatic hits.

London Branch After War

Not only has Mr, Belasco given invaluable advice and assistance in picturizing those plays in which he holds a direct interest, but he has also on innumerable occasions gone out of his way and taken valuable time to give the Lasky company the benefit of his advice for other productions in which he had no interest whatever other than that of friendship for the members.

The expansion of the Lasky offices in New York City will be reflected in Europe, where, as soon as the war is over, this company will establish a special branch, not for sales purposes but for producing the foreign episodes of Lasky feature plays. The London director will have at his disposal artists and cameramen, and will simply use the London office as the centre from which he will travel with his company to the various "locations" required for the dramas in question.

Mr. Goldfish made definite preparations for this step when he was abroad last Summer, but the beginning of the war made it wise to modify the plans and to continue making foreign releases only as demand might warrant. However, the plans for the London Lasky producing branch have now been thoroughly mapped out and will be put into effect the moment the war is over and readjustment begins.

Scores of Screen Stars Going to Baltimore Ball

Francis X. Bushman of Essanay, Formerly of Maryland City, Lillian Walker of Vitagraph, Clara Kimball Young, and Miriam Nesbit Among Them

Baltimore, April 7.

RUTH BRYAN, a grandniece of secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan, will come to Baltimore to attend the screen dance to be held at the Lyric on Saturday evening, April 10. Miss Bryan is a member of the Lubin Company, and is becoming more and more popular among the enthusiasts of the screen drama.

Francis X. Bushman, who is a former Baltimorean, and the leading man of the Essanay Company of Chicago, will also come to Baltimore to attend the dance.

Lillian Walker, known as "The girl with the smile," a member of the Vitagraph Company, will also be among the prominent players to attend, as will also Dorothy Kelly of the same Company.

"Pop" Lubin, the dean of the motion picture fraternity, and president of the Lubin Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, has accepted an invitation to be present, and is expected to be among the liveliest of the dancers.

Others who have accepted are as follows: Miriam Nesbit, Marc McDermott, Augustus Phillips, Mabel Trunnelle, Viola Dana, Edward Earle, Herbert Prior, of the Edison company; King Baggot, Rosemary Theby, Harry Myers, Ben Wilson, of the Universal; Clara Kimball Young and James Young of the World Film Corporation; Wally Van, Kate Price, Flora Finch, Mary Maurice, Norma Talmadge, Edith Storey, Maurice Costello, James Morrison, Hughie Mack, "Bobby" Connelly, Tefft Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Vic. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company; Mary Charleson, Lilie Leslie, Florence Hackett, Howard Mitchell, Jos. Smiley, John Ince, Alan Quinn, Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe of the Lubin Company.

The dance at the Lyric will begin at 8 o'clock and will continue until 12 o'clock. During the dances all the players will appear on the stage and will dance in full view of everyone.

During the intermission the photoplayers will mingle with those attending the dance on the dance floor. There will also be a number of exhibition dances given during the intermission. In one of the smaller auditoriums a cabaret show will be in progress from 8 o'clock until 12 o'clock. At midnight a banquet will be held in the concert hall of the Lyric, at which an elaborate dinner will be served to the players, members of the committee and guests from Washington and Philadelphia.

A. S. Goldsborough will act as toastmaster and practically all the visiting players will make short addresses. Members of the committee are: J. Howard Bennett, chairman; Marion S. Pearce, Frank A. Hornig, E. B. McCurdy, M. Fait, Jr., Charles A. Hicks, Frederick Clement Weber, G. L. Wonders and Nat B. Keen.

FASHIONS IN SELIG "NEWS" POPULAR

There has not been a film innovation made in many years that promises to equal in popularity the Lady Duff-Gordon fashions that will hereafter appear every Monday in the Hearst-Selig "News Pictorial."

Feminine lovers of motion pictures are writing to the Selig company telling of how they enjoy the fashion poses, and urging that the fashion features be continued indefinitely.

REELS TO BE KEPT SEPARATE, SAYS BOSTON OFFICIAL

Motion picture houses in the Boston metropolitan district are now handling their films under new safety regulations issued by Fire Prevention Commissioner O'Keefe. These rules are the result of long study and investigation; they are drastic to a certain extent, but they are not regarded as unreasonable by the motion picture men.

Each reel or part must be kept in separate metal box, with tight cover, and after next January 1 in galvanized iron boxes approved by the commissioner.

These boxes must be kept in fireproof vaults ventilated at floor and roof.

Films to be exposed at one time limited to ten in one room; those in transit must be in non-combustible containers, not more than eight reels in each.

McDONALD WITH AMERICAN

William McDonald, who formerly played burlesque lover parts with the Keystone players during the last eight months, has been engaged by the American Film Manufacturing Company and assigned a part in the production of the coming four real American Distinctive Creation "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs," as adapted from the novel published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company. Mr. McDonald is also well known on the speaking stage.

Edwin Thanhouser Engages Versatile Trio

New Rochelle Manufacturer Signs Frederic Sullivan, Who Directed Blanche Bates and Rose Coghlan, with Lorraine Huling and George F. Platt

NOW the big announcements are beginning to issue from New Rochele. The long arm of Thanhouser is reaching out for material and the first additions are there, at work. They are Lorraine Huling, George Foster Platt and Frederic Sullivan, the former an ingenue, the two latter on the staff of directors.

THE NEW TRIO JUST ANNEXED BY THE THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION

GEORGE F. PEABODY LORRAINE HULING FREDERIC SULLIVAN

Lorraine Huling is best known to the pictures through her work with the Famous Players in "The Straight Road," "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch" and "Bachelor's Romance," with John Emerson and Henrietta Crossman. She is a graduate of the legitimate, however, having appeared in "Prunella," "Help Wanted" and other successes.

Miss Huling has been widely known in art circles for her accomplishments in conjunction with Charles Dana Gibson, Irving Wiles and Charles Penfield.

George Foster Platt comes to Thanhouser's straight from the position of stage director of modern plays at the New theatre, New York. At this institution he produced "The Bluebird," "Strife," "The Witch" and other plays.

Among the great artists with whom he has staged productions are Henry Dixey, Carlotta Nielson, Charlotte Walker and Margaret Anglin. It is a peculiar coincidence that he should join Mr. Thanhouser, for it was just about ten years ago that Mr. Platt was stage manager for the Thanhouser Stock in Milwaukee.

Frederic Sullivan's appearance at New Rochelle is really a re-engagement, for until about half a year ago he was a producer of Thanhouser films. Previous to that he was with the Reliance forces, and his stage experience is very much in support of the Thanhouser policy.

In the legitimate he has directed such stars as Blanche Bates, Rose Coghlan, Blanche Walsh, John Mason, Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon. A great many of his plays were under Liebler and Klaw and Erlanger management, ranging from musical comedy to the drama: "The Candy Man," "In the Bishop's Carriage," "The Truth Tellers," "The Two Wetherbys," and others, reaching a total of four hundred plays that cover only his experience with stock companies.

Mr. Sullivan is now one of the sure-fire film producers, and Edwin Thanhouser considers his re-acquisition another strong plank out of the speaking stage.

Wharton, Inc., Lease Forty-Five Acres, Renwick Park, a Well-Known Lakeside Resort in Northern Part of State—Sylvan Spots Adapted to Their Pictures

THE Pathé producers, Wharton, Inc., announce that they have leased with option of purchase Renwick Park, a well known lakeside resort at Ithaca, N. Y. The property has been used as an amusement resort for some years, and comprises forty-five acres of land situated at the head of beautiful Cayuga Lake and lying between the lake and the city. A city trolley line runs into the park and furnishes excellent service.

A number of large buildings, such as auditoriums, pavilions, etc., on the place need only a little remodelling to make them very well adapted to picture work. There are frontier settlement streets, log cabins—all the locations necessary to Western work, as well as a four hundred-foot pier extending into the lake.

Equally beautiful locations would be difficult to find anywhere in the East. Winding streams, waterfalls, tiny lakes and a virgin forest of the most magnificent trees are a few of the attractions. The park is widely known for the extraordinary number and variety of the birds to be found there. Louis Agassiz Fuertes, the well known ornithologist, uses the place as his study ground so remarkably rich is it in bird life. It is said that at some time or other during the year every species of bird known in North Eastern America visits the park.

Theodore Wharton is adding to the already long list of valuable contributions to science shown in the different episodes of Pathé's "The Exploits of Elaine." In the fourth installment of the new "Exploits" he shows a microscopic view of the African tick which causes the dreaded "Sleeping Sickness," so fatal to the natives in certain portions of Africa. This view is followed by others showing the microbes of the disease greatly enlarged.

Mr. Wharton secured these remarkable pictures with great difficulty. He learned that there was a certain scientist in this country who had made a study of the disease, and persuaded him to lend his great skill and unique data to the making of the motion pictures.

FOX PICTURE HAS BIG RUN

Cold figures and hard facts show conclusively that no attraction ever previously shown at the New York Hippodrome which has a seating capacity in excess of 5,000 beat the record set during the recent run of the much-discussed William Fox photoplay "The New Governor," adapted from Edward Sheldon's "The Nigger."

During its six-day run "The New Governor" attracted, in round numbers, 150,000 paid admissions, and the Box Office tally sheets show the receipts to have been $37,552.50. This is certainly "striking thirteen." The tremendous demand for "The New Governor" by exhibitors throughout the country has necessitated the engaging of an extra force in the offices of Manager Louis T. Rogers, in the Leavitt Building.

FAMOUS PLAYERS PASS THIRD MILESTONE

Anniversary Reached on April 12 with the Company Still Increasing Its Importance in the Industry—Beginning with "Thirty Features a Year" as a Policy, the Number Has Increased to Thirty-Six, This Year's Additional Releases Bringing It Up to Forty-eight

APRIL 12 marks the third anniversary of the Famous Players Film Company.

Founded by Adolph Zukor, Daniel Frohman, and Edwin S. Porter in April, 1912, this concern has steadily grown to a position of importance in the industry.

The success of Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth," the initial release of the Famous Players, was further extended by James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda." After these two productions, the popularity of the Famous Players was established and exhibitors asked for more frequent releases. At the expiration of this year, the Paramount Pictures Corporation was organized and the number of Famous Players releases was increased to thirty-six a year. And since the inception of the program, additional releases will bring the total number of subjects by the end of the fiscal year to 48.

What the Famous Players Have Done

Shortly before the advent of the Paramount Program the Famous Players effected affiliations with Charles Frohman and Henry W. Savage, whereby it obtained the motion picture rights of dramatic successes, several hundred in number, of these two prominent producers.

Among the more important subjects produced by the Famous Players Film Co. since its inauguration are:

Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth"; James K. Hackett in "The Prisoner of Zenda"; Mrs. Fiske in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles"; Mary Pickford in "The Bishop's Carriage"; Henry E. Dixey in "Chelsea 7750"; Lillie Langtry in "His Neighbor's Wife"; James O'Neill in "The Count of Monte Cristo"; Mary Pickford in "Caprice"; Carlotta Neilson in "Leah Kleschna"; "A Daughter of the Hikks."

Cecilia Loftus in "A Lady of Quality"; John Barrymore in "An American Citizen"; Cyril Scott in "The Day of Days"; Mary Pickford in "Hearts Adrift"; "The Pride of Jennico"; Mary Pickford in "A Good Little Devil"; "Clothes"; Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country"; William Farnum in "The Redemption of David Corson."

Screen and Stage Stars Mingled

Malcolm Williams in "The Brute"; Arnold Daly in "The Port of Missing Men"; "A Woman's Triumph"; Bruce McRae in "The Ring and the Man"; Hazel Dawn in "One of Our Girls"; Carlyle Blackwell in "The Spitfire"; Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate"; Jane Grey in "The Little Gray Lady"; Paul McAllister in "The Scales of Justice"; William Courtleigh in "The Better Man"; "Aftermath"; H. B. Warner in "The Lost Paradise"; Henrietta Crosman in "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch"; Mary Pickford in "Such a Little Queen."

Bertha Kalich in "Marta of the Lowlands"; Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower"; Maclyn Arbuckle in "The County Chairman"; Mary Pickford in "Behind the Scenes"; David Higgins in "His Last Dollar"; John Barrymore in "The Man from Mexico"; Gladys Hanson in "The Straight Road"; Tyrone Power in "Aristocracy"; May Irwin in "Mrs. Black is Back"; John Emerson in "The Conspiracy"; Marguerite Clark in "The Crucible"; William Farnum in "The Sign of the Cross."

Mary Pickford in "Cinderella"; Edward Abeles in "The Million"; Florence Reed in "The Dancing Girl"; Marie Doro in "The Morals of Marcus"; Mary Pickford in "Mistress Nell"; Gaby Deslys in "Her Triumph"; John Emerson in "The Bachelor's Romance"; William H. Crane in "David Harum"; "The Love Route."

Alice Dovey in "The Commanding Officer"; Marguerite Clark in "Gretna Green;" John Barrymore in "Are You a Mason?"; William Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-One"; "May Blossom"; Hazel Dawn in "Niobe."

It will be seen from this list that the Famous Players have introduced to the motion picture public not less than thirty-five prominent stars, many of whom, such as Marguerite Clark, Marie Doro, Hazel Dawn and John Barrymore, have through this medium also become international film favorites.

Under the management of the Famous Players, under which she has appeared exclusively since her return to the screen following her appearanc in David Belasco's production of "A Good Little Devil," Mary Pickford has attained the greatest distinction of her career.

Their Distributing Methods

In the distributing branches of the feature industry also Famous Players have been a potent factor. The presentation of the "30 Famous Features a Year" marked a departure from the feature booking methods then in vogue.

Recently, another important advance step in the distribution of important feature productions was taken in the creation of the Select Film Booking Agency, a national booking system, the purpose of which is to adopt accepted theatrical methods in the booking of special photoplay attractions, for indefinite engagements over a circuit of important theatres, and graduating into the regular program after individual theatres throughout the country have been played according to their relative importance in their territories.

By an odd coincidence, "The Eternal City," the Famous Players Film Company's greatest production, opens at the Astor Theatre for an unlimited engagement April 12, the third anniversary of the day upon which the concern was organized.

THE THREE LEADING SPIRITS OF THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

DANIEL FROHMAN ADOLPH ZUKOR E. S. PALMER

"BROKEN CHAIN" WILL FOLLOW "BLACK BOX"

Production of the second Universal serial to be made by Francis Ford and Grace Cunard will be taken up at an early date in Los Angeles. The title of this will be "The Broken Chain," and the scenarios have all been prepared by Miss Cunard, who will be featured with Mr. Ford as in the "Lucille Love" serial.

This will consist of fifteen episodes each of two reels and the first will in all probability be released on the Monday following the close of the "Black Box" series, now being made by the special feature company.

TWO POPULAR PLAYS FOR VITAGRAPH

The Vitagraph Company announces it has secured for picturization two of the most popular plays of the past decade: "The Writing on the Wall," which was originally produced by Olga Nethersole, and "Glorious Betsy," in which Mary Mannering starred with success.

Both plays lend themselves admirably to photo-drama production, and a strong Vitagraph cast is being selected for their presentation on the screen.

EDISON DIRECTOR STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

Austin Conroy, at one time assistant director to Director Richard Ridgeley, who has appeared from time to time in Edison films, was stricken while chatting with Edison players, standing outside the studio at Bedford Park, the Bronx, New York.

A physician was called, who pronounced paralysis from the waist down. Mr. Conroy was taken to his home. The physician could not then determine whether the paralysis would be permanent or not, but was hopeful because of Mr. Conroy's otherwise good condition.

Ten Companies Producing for United Program

Studios, Located in California, New York and Colorado, Noted for Stock Companies Capable of Turning Out Strong Subjects

WITH the addition of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation, the United Motion Picture Producers, Inc., now form a group of ten large motion-picture manufacturing companies, contributing weekly releases of one and two-reel subjects to the United program.

Of these ten studios, three are located in Southern California and produce the Premier, Luna and Ideal pictures. One is in Fort Lee, New Jersey, producing the Suburban pictures. One is in Yonkers, N. Y., producing the Starlight pictures; two are in Flushing, Long Island, producing the Empress and Regent pictures; one is in Colorado Springs, Colo., producing Lariat pictures; while Grandin pictures are produced in New York City, where the Colonial's big studio, producing the new Cameo pictures, is also located.

These studios, which have all perfected their organizations and built up the strong stock companies that are appearing on the United Film Service program each week, are in a position to increase their number of productions at any time, so that the United program will consist of from twenty-one to twenty-eight releases a week.

Among the players being starred or featured by the different studios are Ethel Grandin, Josephine West, Fred Church, Lillian Hamilton, Edythe Sterling, Marian Swayne, Joseph Levering, James Aubrey, Walter Kendig, "Alkali Ike" Carney, Harry Mack, Viola Brown, Dot Farley, Charles DeForrest, Dolly Larkin, George Larkin, Otto Kruger, Raymond Zell, William V. Mong and Harry Kelly.

The exchanges and branch offices, through which the United Film Service finds its way to the theatre, now number thirty-eight, with the recent addition of an office at Harrisburg, Pa., in charge of A. L. Branch and J. J. Amsterdam, and one in Davenport, Ia., under H. A. Kyler.

A large majority of the United exchanges were well established and had been doing business for a long time before changing.

Under the guiding hand of General Manager J. C. Graham, the United exchanges now form a splendid picture-renting organization. Among the United managers are found the following interesting names:

Fred Holderman, of New York; Fred B. Murphy, of Boston; B. Amsterdam, of Philadelphia; Harry Marsey, of Buffalo; H. A. Lande, of Pittsburgh; Sidney B. Lust, of Washington; W. McWilliams, of Cleveland; S. B. Kramer, of Indianapolis; H. M. Coffey, of Cincinnati; D. J. Chatkin, of Chicago; Robert M. Savini, of Atlanta; Paul L. Ford, of New Orleans; A. H. Kauffman, of Memphis; Sam Werner, of St. Louis; F. L. Kiltz, of Kansas City; W. L. Merrill, of Minneapolis; E. T. Peter, of Dallas; J. C. Woolf, of Denver; A. Walker, of Seattle; G. J. Elkre, of San Francisco; Nicholas Palley, of Detroit; A. H. Fisher, of Montreal; H. Fischer, of Toronto; L. J. Schlaifer, of Calgary; A. Weinfeld, of Winnipeg; W. B. B. Smith, of London; H. A. Kyler, of Davenport; Charles Moss, of Charlotte; J. L. Yates, of Baltimore; Nathan Offer, of Salt Lake City; J. W. Dumont, of Spokane; W. A. Stone, of Portland; A. B. Lamb, of Los Angeles.

Court Criticises Amount of Censorship Fees

"State Cannot Collect Taxes by Way of License Fees," Says Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice—Large Surplus in Treasury Demonstrated

Philadelphia, April 7.

THAT the question of the size of censor fees is likely to loom large in any decision rendered by the Pennsylvania courts on the constitutionality of the Pennsylvania censor law was indicated by a colloquy that took place between Justice Von Moschzisker, of the Supreme Court, and Attorney Wolf, during the hearing on the appeal from the lower court's decision concerning the constitutionality of the state censor law.

When Mr. Wolf told the court that the censors understood the act to mean that $2.50 was to be charged for the original picture and the same fee for every duplicate, Justice Von Moschzisker asked:

"How were the duplicates distinguished from the original?"

"The censors would not take the word of the producers that certain pictures were only copies, so they construed the act as giving them the right to charge $2.50 for each picture examined and approved."

"And what becomes of this surplus—the amount remaining after all expenses of the censorship are paid?"

"It will be paid into the State Treasury, but it has not been shown what, if any, large surplus will be produced."

"But is it not self-evident that if every picture examined produces $2.50 there will be an amount largely in excess of the expense account of the censors—would not the surplus be enormous?"

"If no charges are made for examining duplicates, the annual revenue would be about $25,000—more, if all copies are charged fees."

"Probably the cost per year of the censorship board would be $5,000 or $6,000—you can get some idea of the large balance possible," the court commented.

"But the court assuming that the two censors have no right to employ assistants, the State can take the surplus in the way of a tax possibly."

"No," corrected the Justice, "the State cannot collect taxes by way of license fees; they are two different things, provided for separately by the law."

Mr. Wolf then said if the revenue under the present method proves exorbitant, the State has the power by Legislature to reduce or limit the charges or even impose a tax instead of exacting a license fee.

St. Louis League Plans to Move Into New Quarters

Committee of Five Appointed to Locate Satisfactory Rooms for Association Whose Steady Growth Forces Such a Move on Its Members

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

St. Louis, April 7.

THE Theatre Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis has grown to such size and strength that the present quarters in suite 312, Benoist Building, are too small to hold all the members, which include ninety per cent. of all the exhibitors of St. Louis.

At a meeting held on March 25, a motion was made and carried to secure larger quarters for the association; a place that may be fitted up with the special needs and requirements of the organization, and that may be regarded as a permanent home office. A committee of five was appointed to investigate the suitability and convenience of a suite of rooms that is being considered for the purpose.

The meetings of the league, which are held every Friday at 10 a. m., are well attended by an enthusiastic crowd of managers and exhibitors, and already much good work has been done by the league besides much more being planned for the future. The right side of the ledger shows a balance that indicates a healthy financial condition, and each member is very proud of the order and what it represents to him.

All the members of the association are furnished with a booklet containing the by-laws, aims and intentions of the league, and a list of suggestions that are well worth remembering and applying.

The suggestions are:

Do not waste time criticizing your competitor; the exhibitor who attends to his own business is wise; always meet your brother exhibitor with a smile; pay him a friendly visit; invite him to your theatre; exchange of ideas is the source of education; when business falls off, don't lose your temper; and do not fail to attend meeting every Friday, at 10:00 a. m.

PEARL WHITE RECOVERS FROM PNEUMONIA

Pearl White, heroine of Pathé's "The Exploits of Elaine," has just recovered from an attack of pneumonia, contracted through exposure while working in outdoor scenes in bad weather.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

NOT THE TOWN—IT'S THE METHOD THAT COUNTS

THAT momentous question—why can one exhibitor succeed where another fails?—seems well answered by the following note from A. K. Pay, a live-wire exhibitor who has just opened a long season of Kleine features in his Sioux Falls, S. D., theatre.

Mr. Pay went into a notoriously poor show town and has made a genuine success by giving his people the best and telling them of it beforehand.

"First, we advertised 'Caesar' heavily in the local papers. Then we had the local bookstore make a 'Caesar' window with a set of photos, two one-sheets, framed pictures of Rome, and a marble bust of Caesar, as well as a set of forty volumes of Shakespeare, which we agreed to give for the best paper of five hundred words covering his life.

"We did not stop here, but had all the schools announce the coming of the picture and had the history teachers allow a quarter credit for every student writing a paper on his life. Of course, we ran a series of slides in the theatre advertising the bookstore and the books."

Little wonder that Mr. Pay can turn a "notoriously poor show town" into a live one.

MANAGER GIVES AWAY ROOSTERS

GEORGE MAPLE, manager of the Majestic theatre, Roseburg, Ore., uses at least one full program of Pathé productions each week, and the night which he presents an entire Pathé bill he advertises as "Rooster Night," giving away a live rooster.

He says it is the biggest and best he can procure, each time. He also gets out a little pamphlet which he calls "Rooster Cackles," in which he reviews the funny jokes he happens to hear, together with short, snappy film notes, from time to time, and always referring to "Rooster Night."

USES HEAVY CARDBOARD BILLS TO ANNOUNCE PICTURES

CHARLES SCHWARTZ has devised a neat program advertising the bills for an entire week for the two theatres he is managing, the St. Charles and the Broadway, situated almost opposite each other on St. Charles street, between Broadway and Sixth street, St. Louis.

The program is printed on heavy cardboard that is practical and a happy departure from the usual flimsy sheet.

MANAGER INTRODUCES CHARACTERS TO AUDIENCE

A MOST original and highly effective way of putting on Keystone comedies and introducing the stars has been devised by Otto Meister, of the Vaudette Theatre of Milwaukee.

The early part of last month Mr. Meister, together with his partner, A. L. Ries, paid a two weeks' visit to the Keystone studios at Los Angeles, and while there Mr. Meister, who is himself a former vaudeville actor, had made short leads of about eighty feet each, showing him introducing the various stars.

These pictures were made showing the players in straight and character, and are twenty-seven in number. They are the talk of Milwaukee, and give quite a local atmosphere to the Keystone comedies. For instance, on the Keystone release entitled "The Little Band of Gold," Mr. Meister had attached the three leads showing him introducing Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and Fatty Arbuckle, in make-up to his audience.

A bit of by-play has been incorporated in each introduction, Fatty Arbuckle lifting Mr. Meister's role of bills, Mabel Normand kissing him, and Ford Sterling becoming frightened when he sees him and rushing off the stage. In addition to having these leads made Mr. Meister worked in two pictures that were then being produced, and he is planning on showing them at his house in a few weeks.

While in Los Angeles Mr. Meister gave a banquet at Levy's cafe for the Keystone players. An impromptu vaudeville show was given after the banquet. Fatty Arbuckle sang several selections, Ford Sterling recited a German dialect story, Syd Chaplin gave a cockney dialect recitation, while Mabel Normand and Minta Durfee demonstrated the latest society dances.

Appropriate favors were at each guest's place, Mabel Normand being given a miniature diving Venus; Ford Sterling a stuffed doll; Roscoe Arbuckle a doll, representing a fat boy; Chester Conklin a saw and saw-buck; Harry McCoy a "snookums," his nickname among the players; Minta Durfee a kewpie doll; Mark Swain a miniature ambrose; Syd Chaplin an English chappie, and so on.

A dinner was given some nights later in honor of the two "Milwaukeeans" by Mabel Normand at her home.

GETS MORE FOR PICKFORD PICTURES

MANAGER WALTER L. HILL, of the Orpheum Theatre, Canton, O., has announced to his patrons that hereafter a minimum admission price of twenty-five cents will be made for the Mary Pickford pictures released to the theatre in the Paramount Picture Corporation program.

This is the first move of the kind for higher average admission prices made among the exhibitors at Canton recently.

OTTO L. MEISTER, OF MILWAUKEE, AND THE KEYSTONE COMPANY AT THE BANQUET MR. MEISTER GAVE TO THE PHOTOPLAYERS IN LOS ANGELES

"BIRTH OF A NATION" BEGINS FIFTH WEEK

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" starts its fifth week of unprecedented success at the Liberty theatre, New York, with two performances Sunday afternoon and night. The artistic scope and the astonishing details of this work, in which the master hand of Griffith is apparent at every turn, have impressed New York theatre-goers as nothing the season has provided to date.

The great battle scenes, the historic incidents of the war, the assassination of President Lincoln and the wonderful runs of the Ku Klux Klans are the high points of interest in the most absorbing drama of the decade.

The comprehensive and atmospheric manner in which the thrilling theme is presented and the enlargement of this appeal in the musical accompaniment of the big orchestral effects, so cleverly made a vital part of the story, are all further points of the most impressive kind.

SPECIAL JUVENILE FILMS FROM FEATURES IDEAL

The Features Ideal Company, which had its studios in Tucson, Ariz., is now making films to appear on the United program, at the new plant at Hollywood, Cal. The company will establish an unusually large juvenile department and will make a feature of juvenile pictures.

The pictures made by the Features Ideal Company will be classified under three heads, western dramas, melodramas and "Punch Stories," which will be directed by Webster Cullison.

Frank Beal will have charge of the films classed under the head of "domestic stories and refined comedies." Carl Leviness will direct the psychological and human interest stories.

FISHER LEAVES STAGE FOR VITAGRAPH FILM

One of the most popular of the old-time legitimate actors to capitulate to the lure of pictures under the Vitagraph Company management is Harry Fisher, who enjoys the distinction of having been associated with Harrigan and Hart for over twenty-five years.

Mr. Fisher's special forte is character and he is proving as exceptional a screen actor as when playing directly to an audience. The first picture in which Mr. Fisher appeared was "The Lilly of the Valley," with Lillian Walker, Earle Williams and Kate Price.

BUSHMAN BACK IN CHICAGO FROM PACIFIC COAST

Francis X. Bushman has returned to the Essanay studios in Chicago after two weeks spent at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, where he was the guest of the Panama-Pacific Motion Picture Exhibitors.

Mr. Bushman attended the mammoth ball held by the organization and greeted old friends in the West. He also paid a visit to the Essanay western studios at Niles, Cal., before returning to Chicago.

Essanay Decides on Chattanooga for Studio Site

Chicago Office Sends Fourteen Players, Headed by E. H. Calvert, to Southern City —Company Will Remain Several Months to Film Special Scenes

Special to Motion Picture News

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 5.

THIS city has been chosen for the temporary location of one of the Essanay Film Manufacturing company's studios. A troupe of fourteen Essanay stars, headed by E. H. Calvert as director, have arrived here from the studio of the company in Chicago.

They established headquarters at the Signal Mountain Inn. According to Mr. Calvert, they will be here for several months during which time a long list of scenarios requiring just such scenery as Chattanooga affords are to be filmed.

Lillian Drew, a leading motion picture star, is included in the personnel of the ladies in the party, and will enact the leading feminine role during the company's stay in this city.

"The Secret Price" is to be the first production. The Lookout mountain incline, one of the steepest inclines in the world, and Signal Mountain will figure prominently in this film play. Among the other early productions will be "Affinities," by Mary Roberts Rhinehart, and "Dain Justice," a five-reel feature.

Mr. Calvert brings Fred H. Wagner as special representative for the Essanay company, and Harry A. Zech, expert photographer.

The personnel of the company is as follows: E. H. Calvert, Lillian Drew, Harry A. Zech, Fred H. Wagner, Bettie Scott, Miss Skinner, Elsie Cardson, John Cossar, Grant Forman, Eugene Acker, Bertram Bates, John Meredith and Edward Buddymeyer. Mrs. Calvert and her son accompany the troupe and will spend some time here. The troupe carries an immense amount of baggage, much of which is material for staging scenes in the open. There will be many interior scenes.

Horsley Orders Special Show for Vice-President

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, Guests of Honor in Los Angeles Hotel, Where Centaur Head Was Specially Invited, Visit the Bostock Arena

A BIG reception was held last Thursday evening at the Alexandria Hotel, in Los Angeles, in honor of Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall, and was attended by the heads of California's leading industries. The motion picture interests were represented by David Horsley, managing director of the Centaur Film Company, who was present as a specially invited guest.

The vice-presidential party is enjoying the sights of California en route to Washington from San Francisco, where Mr. Marshall officially opened the Panama Exposition. Mr. Marshall is particularly interested in motion pictures, and at the invitation of Mr. Horsley paid a visit to the new Horsley studios and the Bostock arena and jungle, which Mr. Horsley also controls, in Los Angeles.

Mr. Horsley has been in California for some weeks supervising the opening of the new studios. The plant is a magnificent one, constructed on a big scale. The vice-president was deeply impressed with its completeness and massiveness and warmly congratulated Mr. Horsley upon his enterprise.

For the benefit of the distinguished visitors a special rehearsal performance was given by the wild animal performers of the Bostock arena and jungle, with which Mrs. Marshall was particularly delighted and so expressed herself.

Recently three baby lions arrived at the arena, and Mrs. Marshall graciously consented to christen them. The cubs now bear the respective titles of Bryan, the scrapper; Wilson, the obstinate, and Marshall, the gentle.

Jaccard Expects to Make Record Staging Prize Play

Company Will Work Day and Night in Santa Barbara Studio to Complete $10,000 Drama, "The Diamond from the Sky"—Lottie Pickford Reaches Coast

DIRECTOR JACQUES JACCARD now has all his "Diamond from the Sky" company in harness. Lottie Pickford, sister of "Lovely Mary" was the last of the all star cast to reach the "Flying A" studios at Santa Barbara and get into make up.

It will be a matter of working day and night from now on and all the principals are anxious to have Director Jaccard set a hard schedule. He has. This latest of big continued photoplays, the scenario of which brought the lucky author $10,000 will have a tremendously strong cast. Playing opposite Miss Pickford will be Irving Cummings, than whom no actor on the screen is better or more favorable known.

Then there will be "Big Bill" Russell, whose more polite name is William, Charlotte Burton, George Periolat, lately leading man to J. Warren Kerrigan, Eugenie Forde, Orra Humphrey, W. J. Tedmarsh and Lillian Buckingham.

Director Jaccard's watch word is "Let's go," and it is echoed throughout the company with the result that no camera ever was turned on a more enthusiastic aggregation of players than the one which S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company has put into this $20,000 prize picture novel.

In addition to the $10,000 for the scenario a similar amount will be awarded to the person who submits the best suggestion for a sequel to the present story This picture will have its first release May 3.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Captain Courtesy" Next Bosworth Release

As its next release, Bosworth, Inc., announces Dustin Farnum, the popular star of both the screen and the stage, in "Captain Courtesy," a thrilling drama of the early California mission days, by Edward Childs Carpenter.

A vast ranch was leased especially for the taking of the subject, which offered one of the most beautiful locations in the picturesque country among the mountains. So inaccessible was this location that quarters had to be built for the company in order to avoid the dangerous traveling on the adobe soil during the rainy season, and to waste as little time as possible.

Across the street from the main Bosworth studio a special stage, seventy-five by ninety-six feet, was constructed as a reproduction of an early California mission. The whole of southern California was scoured to secure loans from missions, of altar pieces, paintings, etc., and permission was asked in each case for the privilege of photographing in and around the misson. The entire string of horses and mules were supplied by and under the care of Winona Browne, the little champion cowgirl who has charge of the live-stock at the Bosworth studios.

The drama is laid in 1840, when California was ruled by the Mexicans, who robbed and killed the early pioneers to satisfy their own greed for gain. One of the important thrills of the play is presented when Dustin Farnum, mounted on a magnificent steed, plunges through a stained glass window of the ancient San Fernando mission to warn the old padre of a raid planned by the Mexicans.

Dustin Farnum is supported by a cast including Herbert Standing, who enacts the role of the padre of the mission; Courtenay Foote, as the spy; Winnifred Kingston, as Eleanor, the ward of the padre; Carl Von Schiller, as Jocoso, and Winona Browne as an Indian servant.

"Captain Courtesy" will be released on the Paramount Program April 19.

MARY FULLER FEATURED IN 3 REELERS

Julius Stern announces that Mary Fuller will be cast only in three-reel features written by famous authors. Although many well-known American authors have been signed by the Universal, Mr. Stern, manager of the Universal Imp studios, is not in a position at present to make public their names.

Selig Diamond Specials for Release on General

IN the near future, the Selig Polyscope Company will release a series of three-reel Diamond Specials, through the regular service of the General Film Company. These three-reel picture plays are elaborate in every way and they will undoubtedly be appreciated by exhibitors and their patrons.

"The Quarry" is a three-reel Selig drama adopted from the novel of the same name, written by John Moraso. It was arranged for the screen by Gilson Willets. It tells in dramatic fashion of "third degree" methods and of the futility of circumstantial evidence.

Miss Grace Darmond takes the leading feminine role and is supported by John Charles, Frederick Hand, William Wade and others.

"His Father's Rifle" is a Selig Jungle Zoo wild animal drama, in three reels, written by Joseph F. Poland. William Howard, Stella Razeto, Guy Oliver and other stars comprise the cast. Wild animals are featured and there is an unusually vital plot.

"Two Boys in Blue" is a Selig three-reel drama, written and directed by Tom Mix. There is a running fight with Indians, an attack on a stage coach, and other exciting and spectacular features, including some daring horsemanship.

"How Callahan Cleaned Up Little Hell" was produced in three reels, by Thomas Santschi, from the story by I. K. Friedman. It tells a convincing and exciting story of corrupt politics.

"Two Natures Within Him" is another unusually strong Selig three-reel drama.

These Diamond Specials will all be released in the near future.

NANCE O'NEIL IN ANOTHER STRONG FOX DRAMA

Nance O'Neil who made such a tremendous hit in "Kreutzer Sonata," one of the most successful films the Fox Film Corporation ever released, is to be seen shortly under the Fox management in another sensational screen drama, the title of which has not yet definitely been decided upon. Miss O'Neil is now under permanent contract to the Fox organization.

NANCE O'NEIL

Reports from exhibitors all over the country have it that Miss O'Neil's magnificent work in "Kreutzer Sonata," which, by the way, was the first picture in which she ever appeared has taken the country by storm. The secret of the next release in which Miss O'Neil will be starred is being guarded, but it can be stated that she will be seen in a part that even transcends in emotional appeal and gripping drama that of the ill-fated Miriam of "Kreutzer Sonata."

A cast including Stuart Holmes, Clifford Bruce, and Jane Miller, has been engaged to support Miss O'Neil, who will be under the direction of Frank Powell, the producer of "A Fool There Was."

PATHÉ ANNOUNCES NEW SERIES

The Pathé Exchange announces that beginning with April 17, it will release the first of a series of twelve three-reel dramas under the general title of "Who Pays?" These dramas are made by Balboa, and feature Ruth Roland and Henry King.

A new idea is followed out in this series and one that should make a hit.

SOME IMPRESSIVE EXTERIOR SCENES FROM FORTHCOMING AMERICAN-MUTUAL RELEASES.

Two Scenes from "The Poet of the Peaks" (Two Reels—April 12); "She Walketh Alone" (April 21); "The Wishing Stone" (April 14)

Each drama is distinct and complete in itself, and each deals with some one vital question of modern life.

Though not what could be called problem plays, each is calculated to make one think, to see the error of his or her ways, and to resolve to put the petty, the unworthy and the selfish away forever.

The "Who Pays" series has been syndicated, and hundreds of the best newspapers throughout the country will run the stories, which have been novelized by Edwin Bliss, well known for previous work along the same line.

WILBUR APPEARS IN "ROAD O' STRIFE" FOR LUBIN

Crane Wilbur, who recently joined the Lubin company in Philadelphia is now working in a new serial, "Road o' Strife," the scenario for which was prepared by Emmett Campbell Hall.

CRANE WILBUR

Mr. Wilbur's lengthy experience in the Pathé serial, "The Perils of Pauline," well qualifies him to assume the leading role in this recurrent picture which gives promise of being a tremendous success.

"MAY BLOSSOM" FOR RELEASE APRIL 15

The Famous Players Film Company is releasing, April 15, a sympathetic and realistic photo-adaptation of David Belasco's great American drama, "May Blossom," which will undoubtedly revive the interest created by the original stage production of this famous play.

Through an add coincidence, it was originally produced by Daniel Frohman when he was manager of the Madison Square theatre, New York, and during its engagement Mr. Frohman engaged David Belasco as stage manager of the house.

Previously, Mr. Belasco had been successful in San Francisco, and "May Blossom" was the first of his plays to be produced in the East. It was enacted at the Madison Square theatre with what was recorded as a great cast, the leading part being played by the late Georgia Cayvan, and the principal male parts by Joseph Wheellock, Ben Maginley and W. H. Crompton.

De Wolf Hopper, now famous as a singing comedian, was also a member of this company, graduating from "May Blossom" into the ranks of comic opera. The play ran at the Madison Square theatre for the entire year—an unprecedented record at that time—and continued on the road for three or four years more.

The film adaptation of this notable subject is interpreted by a cast including Gertrude Robinson, Russell Bassett, Marshall Neilan, Donald Crisp and Gertrude Norman.

FOX FILMS CORELLI NOVEL

The William Fox picturization of Marie Corelli's novel "Wormwood" which deals with the vagaries and fiendish tricks of the green demon popularly supposed to inhabit absinthe bottles has been almost completed at New Orleans, La., by Director Marshal Farnum, brother of the redoubtable William and no less famous Dustin.

Mr. Farnum says that he has been fortunate in having almost perfect weather and securing the co-operation of the city officials and the police department of New Orleans. Many of the quaint old streets of the Creole district lent themselves with splendid facility to the picturesque background of "Wormwood."

John Sanapolis plays the part of Gaston Beauvais, the terror-haunted, absintheur. Guidel, a part which is acted by Charles Arthur, is of equal importance. Mr. Arthur has appeared in support of such stars as Sothern, Robert B. Mantell, John Drew, John Mason, and other equally prominent actors. He has also appeared at the head of his own companies. The remainder of the cast is equally satisfactory. Sally McCombe plays the sympathetic part of the unfortunate Pauline. Edgar Davenport is the father of the miserable Gaston.

"WILD OLIVE" BEING MADE AT BOSWORTH

Oscar Apfel, who has just become affiliated with the Morosco-Bosworth forces, is now in the midst of a bustle of activity at the Los Angeles studios.

Mr. Apfel is at present at work on "Wild Olive," a romantic society drama by Basil King, which is being produced for the screen by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company. Myrtle Stedman, the pretty Bosworth star, will be presented in the chief role.

Among those supporting Miss Stedman are Thomas MacLarnie, Forrest Stanley, of the Burbank Stock Company, who has just made his debut in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," supporting vivacious Fritzi Scheff, and that sterling screen artist, Herbert Standing.

Other productions to follow "Wild Olive" in short order will be "The Jade Idol," "Judge and Jury," "This Is the Life," "Society Pilot," "The Half Breed" and "In South Car-liney."

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGES FORM BOARD OF TRADE

TIRED of being imposed upon by the "fly-by-night" exhibitors and realizing that a certain amount of protection is needed down South to successfully conduct the business of renting motion pictures, the exchanges of New Orleans have come together and formally launched the Motion Picture Board of Trade. Every exchange in the city came into the organization with the exception of one, and this one is expected to join before long.

The meeting was held in the offices of Paul L. Ford, manager of the Printed Program Film Service of Louisiana, 832 Gravier street, because Mr. Ford has been the prime mover in the scheme. He and A. G. Shear, manager of the Universal, were named a committee of two to draft resolutions which will be submitted for consideration at a meeting April 3. It is extremely probable that Mr. Ford will be named president of the Board when the election of officers is held.

As set out by Mr. Ford, the purpose of the New Orleans Motion Picture Board of Trade will be to better film conditions in the South, but particularly in New Orleans and the surrounding territory; to draw a distinction between the honest exhibitor and the dishonest one, who "gets into" the exchanges for amounts quite large; and to combat conditions that have arisen in the past and may arise in the future.

Further, it is to fill a long felt want—the need of getting together once in a while and talking things over, and letting one fellow hear the other fellow's story.

Just as important a mission is the social end, heretofore sadly missing. It is planned to give weekly luncheon meetings at which the eats" will be not the smallest part.

WICO BOOKING TWO GRIFFITH PICTURES

SINCE "The Birth of a Nation" has opened to such a phenomenal run in New York, it has been decided by the Wico Booking Offices to release two of Griffith's other masterpieces, "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Escape." With one or two exceptions, neither of these features have been released to exhibitors in New York, the Strand theatre and a few others having played "The Avenging Conscience," whereas "The Escape" has been successfully released at the Cort Theatre.

By releasing these films at this time the exhibitor gets the advantage of a twofold advertising medium, as the initials, D. W., have become as well known to the film world as "The Birth of a Nation" itself.

The Wico Booking Offices are handling the interests of this Griffith production and booking this film through the eastern territory direct to the exhibitor.

AMONG ST. LOUIS EXCHANGES

THE office force of the Kriterion Film Exchange, 3217 Locust street, St. Louis, report remarkable booking business since the exchange was established, a short time ago. J. J. Burke, formerly of Wichita, Kan.; S. S. Sherman and E. N. Woolf, representatives of the exchange in Missouri, Illinois and Kentucky, report good business in their territories.

J. D. Bone, formerly with the Yale Feature Film Company, has opened a poster mounting plant at 3931 Olive street, St. Louis. Mr. Bone's quarters are large and he is equipped to undertake extensive orders.

A special department for the handling of features has been established at the Mutual Film Exchange, 1311 Pine street, St. Louis, with Harry Hines in charge.

ELECTRIC THEATRE SUPPLY REDUCES SIZE OF OFFICE

THE Electric Theatre Supply Exchange, of Philadelphia, has reduced its Washington (D. C.) branch to an office only, all shipments of films, paper, etc., being now conducted from Philadelphia.

George W. Smiley still retains the management, with offices in the Bank of Commerce building, but the force has been greatly reduced. H. E. Reddish has severed his connection with the Electric Theatre Supply company and has affiliated with Pathé. Just how these changes will affect the service offered by this company remains to be seen.

MISS OLGA BROOKHAUS GOES TO KRITERION IN CHICAGO

OLGA BROOKHAUS, who has been connected with the Chicago Mutual exchange ever since that company was launched, is now associated with the Chicago Kriterion office.

Miss Brookhaus, while with her former employers, had charge of all their big serials and also the feature department. Mr. O'Toole, manager of the Chicago Kriterion Film Service, considers her a valuable acquisition. Tom Kress, who was formerly associated with the larger feature offices throughout the South, is now the special representative of the Chicago Kriterion Film Service.

MISS BOEMLER LEAVES LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE

EMPLOYES of the Los Angeles Golden Gate Film Exchange are both joyful and sad—joyful because of the purchase of a handsome touring car by Manager E. H. Emmick (after he had talked of it for more than a year) and sad because this is the last week Carla Boemler will be connected with the organization.

Sunday Miss Boemler, who has been in charge of the bookkeeping department since the opening of the exchange three years ago, becomes the bride of (name not known) a very fortunate man.

PATHE'S OREGON OFFICES MOVE

W. S. WESSLING, branch manager of Pathe's Portland office, has leased new quarters at 68 Broadway, as business has increased to such an amazing degree that the present quarters are inadequate. He expects to be thoroughly installed in his new offices this month.

A. B. Hager, manager of the Universal Film Supply Company's Spokane branch, reports that business has increased with them to an amazing extent, and that the outlook for the year is exceptionally bright.

PATHE OPENS NEW OFFICES IN NORTHWEST

P. J. WATKINSON, Pathe's district manager of northwestern territory, is busy opening up branch offices at Butte, Spokane, and other towns of corresponding size included in his territory. Miss McElhaney, for many years engaged in the film business, starting as stenographer, later working into the booking end of the game, has now been appointed branch manager in Seattle. Other appointments will be announced later.

OES VISITS EXCHANGES IN WEST

GENERAL MANAGER OES, of the Great Northern Film Company, 110 West Fortieth street, took a flyer to Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburgh last week to visit the exchanges controlling the output of his company in the respective territories, and to congratulate them upon the excellent results they are achieving. He returned to New York Saturday.

HUNTER IN CHARGE OF "DIAMOND" IN INDIANA

J. C. HUNTER, of the North American Film Company, will have charge of the new serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," for Indiana and Kentucky.

It will be released May 3. Mr. Hunter will have his headquarters in the office of the Mutual Film Company in Indianapolis.

Gleichman's Broadway Comedy Stars Prove Winners

Films Now Ready Featuring Lew Fields, Richard Carle, Tom Wise, Jeff de Angelis, Lulu Glaser, Paul Edwardes, Kathryn Osterman and Florence Tempest

THE theory of one-reel comedies featuring Broadway headliners, as formulated by Phil Gleichman, has become a fact, and is working out even better than expectation warranted.

The World Comedy Stars Film Corporation has been organized, with Mr. Gleichman in the office of president; a thoroughly equipped studio has been obtained; many of Broadway's best known comedy stars have been signed; and releases are already being issued through the well organized exchange system of the World Film Corporation.

Nothing has been left undone which might aid in the manufacture of superior film. Two releases have been made and many of America's foremost moving picture and vaudeville theatres have arranged to book the output.

Lew Fields, Richard Carle, Tom Wise, Jeff de Angelis, Lulu Glaser, Paula Edwardes, Kathryn Osterman and Florence Tempest have already been signed, and several comedies, beside the two already released, are now ready. The work of these artists needs no comment here, as they are known throughout the country as being among the leaders of their profession.

Richard Carle, whose work in such Broadway productions as "The Spring Chicken," "The Mayor of Tokio," "Ninety in the Shade," et cetera, has been greatly admired, played the stellar role in the inaugural release, "The Dancing Beetle," which was received with surplus commendation. Keeping well up with the excellent standard set by the first came Jeff de Angelis, remembered as the comedy star in "Fantana" and "The Beauty Spot," starring in "Health by the Year." Both these comedies were written by Mark Swan, the author of many legitimate successes, among which are "The Top o' the World" and "The Third Party."

Kathryn Osterman, who amused thousands in "A Persian Garden" and "Piff, Paff, Pouff," will enact the lead in the forthcoming release, "Housekeeping Under Cover." Thomas A. Wise will follow that picture in "The Magic Bottle." Mr. Wise has endeared himself to audiences all over the country with his exceptionally clever character portrayals in "A Gentleman from Mississippi" and "The Song of Songs." Lulu Glaser, famous as "Dolly Varden," "The Madcap Duchess" and "Dolly Dollars," will appear shortly in comedies written especially to suit her, as will also Florence Tempest, noted for her work with "Tempest and Sunshine," and Paula Edwardes, who as "Winsome Winnie" and "The Princess Beggar" is pleasantly remembered.

Of course, everyone knows Lew Fields, who is at present starring in "The High Cost of Loving," so it is useless to try to tell about him.

MARIE VAN VORST NOVEL IN AMERICAN FILM

President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Manufacturing Company, has purchased the motion picture right of the novel "The Girl from His Town," by Marie Van Vorst, from publishers, the Bobbs-Merrill Company, which will be produced as a multiple reel feature at the American studios, under direction of Harry Pollard, with Margarita Fischer in the leading role.

STOLEN GOODS THIRD BLANCHE SWEET PICTURE

Samuel Goldfish announces on behalf of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company that the third production in which Blanche Sweet will appear under this management is to be entitled "Stolen Goods."

This film drama is based on a successful play by Margaret Turnbull. In addition to Miss Sweet, the cast will include House Peters, Theodore Roberts, Sydney Deane, H. B. Carpenter and Cleo Ridgely.

Many Screened Novels from Fiction Pictures, Inc.

Film Version of Popular Books to Be Released Through Paramount Include a Large Number of Best Sellers, from "Beaucaire" to "The Private War"

MOTION picture versions of popular and famous novels by authors with established reputations made by Fiction Pictures, Inc., will soon appear on the screen, released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Louis Joseph Vance, the author, is the president of Fiction Pictures, Inc., which has its producing studios on the Pacific Coast, under the supervision of Wilfred Lucas, and offices at 33 West Forty-second street, New York City.

Fiction Pictures, Inc., has already produced "The Spanish Jade," by Maurice Hewlett; the picture featuring Betty Bellairs was released by Paramount April 8. "The Taming of Red Butte Western," a railroad story, featuring A. E. Anson, has been completed. In preparation are "The Spenders," by Harry Leon Wilson, and "The Conquest of Canaan," by Booth Tarkington.

While the policy of Fiction Pictures, Inc. —the production of big features adopted from well-known novels—is not a distinct innovation, the great belief of Louis Joseph Vance, the president, in the efficacy of good posters as a valuable business-puller for the exhibitor, is worthy of note.

Mr. Vance has paid as high as $500 for some of the artists' sketches for the posters and has endeavored to make them striking and artistic. Two kinds of one-sheets, three-sheets and six-sheets may be obtained with all Fiction Pictures releases.

Other coming features of Fiction Pictures, Inc., are "Beaucaire," by Booth Tarkington; "To Have and to Hold," by Mary Johnson; "Romance," by Joseph Conrad; "The Blazed Trail," by Stewart Edward White; "Penrod," by Booth Tarkington; "D'Arcy of the Guards," by Louis Evan Shipman; "Gideon's Band," by George W. Cable; "The Voice in the Rice," by Governeur Morris; "The Pilotfish,"," by Henry C. Rowland, and "Partners of Providence," by Charles D. Stewart.

Fiction Pictures, Inc., also controls the exclusive rights to the works of Booth Tarkington, Joseph Conrad and Louis Joseph Vance, whose novels include: "Terence O'Rourke," "The Pool of Fame," "The Brass Bowl," "The Black Bag," "The Bronze Bell," "The Bandbox," "The Day of Days," "The Destroying Angel," "The Fortune Hunter," "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," "No Man's Land," "Joan Thursday," "The Lone Wolf," "Sheep's Clothing" and "The Private War."

HART STARRED IN "THE TAKING OF LUKE McVANE"

William S. Hart, whose appearance in Western photoplay productions has been marked by astounding success, is again starred in a part that fits him well in "The Taking of Luke McVane," a heart interest story of the desert, to be released by the Kay-Bee-New York Motion Picture Corporation, April 16.

Mr. Hart plays the part of Luke McVane, a big, good-hearted miner, who stumbles into a gambling hall and is attracted by Mercedes, a beautiful senorita, while he plays cards with "Crooked Jim" Ashley.

"SHOOTING OF DAN McGREW" PROGRESSING

Work on "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," by the Popular Plays and Players Company, is progressing rapidly. The final scenes are being staged at San Antonio, Texas. The company of principals supporting Edmund Breese have traveled over seven thousand miles to the various locations; San Antonio being the farthest, however. Several trips were made to Canada, Lake Placid, in the Adirondacks, Saranac Lake and Augusta, Georgia.

KRITERION

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 4.

ANOTHER change, or rather addition, to the producing force of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has been made in the past week in the engagement of Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, who are to be feature directors and produce four and five-reel subjects with Universal stars as principals.

The first subject to be produced by these co-directors will be one featuring J. Warren Kerrigan, of the Victor brand. Later, Pauline Bush will be featured in one of the Weber-Smalley features. In some of the productions the directors will themselves appear in the stellar roles.

The business manager system, introduced a week ago, has proven so successful that additional managers, including Beverly Griffith, formerly of the Sterling Motion Picture Company, and Charles B. Henkle, have been added. This caused a change of the allotment of companies to each business manager, and all will be under the general supervision of the general manager.

Unusually Funny Nestor Comedy

The "Black Box" and "Under the Crescent" serial companies of the Universal are home from spending a week at Oxnard. Here exteriors for No. 10 of the detective series were made, and practically all of the horses of the Universal company were used.

The Henry McRae 101 Bison company, including Marie Walcamp, Wellington

"SKELLY THE PORTER" (Keystone)

Playter, Lule Warrenton, Rex de Roselli, Sherman Bainbridge, Clarence Hodge, Billie Reiter and others have gone to near Sanger, in Fresno county, to make exteriors for the two-reel subject "In the Wake of the Deluge."

Al E. Christie's Nestor comedy players are completing "Caught by a Thread," in which Mrs. Newlywed (Victoria Forde), in an effort to trace her husband who is gaining the habit of spending his evenings away from home, places a spool of thread in his pocket as he leaves, and holds onto the end. Lee Moran, as the husband, discovers this and gives the spool to a messenger boy with the instructions to keep going.

Wife has a long chase; husband makes a cleaning at a poker party, loses his coat with all the money in it, and the messenger boy, tiring of his job, slips the spool into the coat pocket of the thief. The end of the thread brings about a happy finale.

Another Nestor of the week is "Too Many Crooks," in which eloping couples are mistaken by a pussyfoot for diamond thiefs. A double chase results, and this leads over buildings, hills and into the harbor, where all embark.

The effort of a young husband to cure

himself of the drink habit forms the basis for the plot of "The Cure of the Hills," a one-reel Laemmle-Universal subject now being made. Many of the exterior scenes for this were made by the company while at Calabasas, Cal., where the exteriors for "The Prophet of the Hills," a two-reel subject for the same brand, was filmed.

The foothill scenery in the vicinity of Calabasas is particularly well adapted for pictures because of the many contrasting natural shades of the soil and foilage. "The Cure of the Hills" contains a pretty romance, in addition to the preachment that it is possible for one to break a habit if so disposed.

Hypnotism in Gold Seal Film

"Through Eyes of Truth" is the title given the three-reel subject being made for the Gold Seal brand, under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard, who appears as co-star with Ella Hall. Miss Hall plays the part of a girl who is sought by a hypnotist to act as his subject.

Another Gold Seal subject made last week is "The Whirling Disc," which secures its name from the instrument used. An assistant of a girl's father, in love with the daughter and knowing his suit is hopeless, decides to apply his new method of auto-suggestion by the introduction of a whirling disc, used to aid in hypnotizing.

The Joker comedy company, No. 1, now at San Diego, has made "Over the Bounding Waves," a one-reel subject, portraying the love of a sea captain who won the widow from Shultz, only to lose his position because he permitted the vessel to sail the sea in circles.

Joker company, No. 2, is making "Nothing Ever Happens Right," being the dream of a scenario editor, in which he attempts to win a ten-thousand-dollar prize offered by the Avalanche Motion Picture Company. This subject is said to contain all the melodrama blood and thunder situations over conceived.

Gene Gauntier's First Play for Universal

This company has just completed filming "Uncle Jeremiah in the City of Delusions," being a farce dealing with the experiences of a middle-west farmer, who, while attending the expositions, gets lost and wanders into the motion-picture colony of Hollywood.

Isidore Bernstein prepared the scenario for "The Faith of Her Father," an adaptation from the story of the same title by Bruno Lessing, which will be made in two reels. This is the story of a daughter of a Rabbi who becomes infatuated with a Christian missionary while nursing him, following his being attacked by a mob when he insisted upon conducting a Christian mission in the Ghetto of New York City.

Gene Gauntier is the author of her initial vehicle on the Universal program, "Hearts in Exile," which will be complete in two reels. This is a melodrama of the Canadian northwest, and the exteriors will be made in the vicinity of Bear Lake Valley. Miss Gauntier will play the lead, supported by Jack J. Clark, who will also have charge of the direction.

A Rex brand Universal subject, "When Love Is Love," is being made from a scenario by Ida May Park. This, in two reels, portrays the sacrifices of a girl for the man she loves.

Dark Side of Artists' Studios

An out of the ordinary story of artist life, which deals with an impostor who secures acquaintance with models and wrecks their lives, serves as a plot for "Diamonds of Fate," being made by the Big U. brand company. The scenario for this is by Calder Johnstone, and will require a number of very exceptional sets. Doris Pawn is featured as the artist's model.

"For the Honor of Bettina" is a two-reel Majestic heart-interest story, portraying life in the Italian quarter of New York. The title character is the granddaughter of an aged Italian, who makes plaster statues, and the child is his street saleswoman.

The pretty shores of the Pacific, near Balboa Island, southwest of Los Angeles, are serving as settings for the one-reel Reliance picture, "The Buried Treasure." This is a story of fisherman life, and Florence Crawford is being featured as the daughter.

"Checkmates" is the title given a one-reel Majestic subject, written by J. A. Saxon. In this the attempts of two friends to befriend a girl and save her inheritance from being squandered by a stock broker are successful. A thriller for this is a race between a motorcyclist and a Salt Lake Railroad train.

A change in the program of filming was made at the Majestic Reliance studios the latter part of last week, when it was decided that Henry B. Walthall should make his initial reappearance in the film version of Ibsen's "Ghosts," instead of in "The Yankee from the West," an adaptation from an Opie Read story. Mary Alden, who played the part of the wife in Griffith's "Battle of the Sexes" and the mulatto in "The Birth of a Nation," has been cast to play the opposite lead. Both of the leads will appear in dual roles, first appearing as young people and later as man and wife of mature years.

Completes Second Mutual Master-Picture

Director William Christy Cabanne has completed his second production for the Mutual Master-Pictures program, "The Absentee," in which Robert Edeson is featured.

A company of fourteen Majestic-Reliance photoplayers, in charge of Director Paul Powell, spent last week near Santa Barbara filming exteriors for the three-reel subject, "The Nun." The attractive missions in the vicinity of Santa Barbara furnish elaborate settings for this subject. The scenario for this photoplay was prepared by Russell E. Smith.

Majestic and Reliance players are not to be outdone. They insist on having a celebration along with others, and are planning to paint their city red when the word is given to move into the new dressing rooms. Then, too, they expect that the cafe manager will treat them well when the new eating place is opened in a week or so.

Wallace Reid has been selected to play the part of Billy Milford in the screen adaptation of the Opie Read novel, "A Yankee from the West," now being filmed at the M.-R. studio. Scenario for this was prepared by Mary O'Connor, and the direction is in charge of George Siegmann.

In addition to directing the production of "A Man For All That," R. A. Walsh is also playing the leading part in this Reliance two-reeler. One of the stunts needed for this film was a dive from a forty-foot cliff into the ocean, and Walsh performed this successfully, and also went through with a scene portraying a man drowning immediately upon coming to the surface. For this and similar daredevil acts Walsh has been named the "Rodman Law of the Films."

Fairy sets are to be seen in great numbers at the Keystone studio as the result of filming "Ambrose's Lofty Perch," in which the fairy king—as in days of old—summoned all the marriageable girls that he might make the best selection. This is a real beauty show and contains all the fair ones of the Keystone realm.

"When Love Took Wings"

Three love-sick youths, supplied with a bicycle, automobile and biplane, all attempt to carry away the girl they all three love in the Keystone comedy "When Love Took Wings," in which Fatty Arbuckle is featured.

The elopement is first tried by the bicyclist, and he loses the bride-to-be when the auto driver overtakes him. But the bird man proves the swiftest, and after a thrilling race reaches the home of the parson. Aviator DeLloyd Thompson was especially engaged for the making of this picture and made some wonderful loops and dives before the lens.

A comedy depicting the presentation of a play, both in front and in the rear of the wings and scenery, has just been completed by Mack Sennett's fun makers and given the title "A One Night Stand." This has to do with the fortunes and misfortunes of a theatrical troupe that brought disaster to a small town "opera house." Chester Conklin is featured in this.

Al Kauffman, manager of Famous Players, and Mary Pickford, have spent the past week at San Francisco, in company with Peter B. Kyne, in selecting a vehicle for Miss Pickford from the many good stories written by this Californian author.

The first production of the Dramatic Features Company was completed the first of last week, "The Grey Nun of Belgium." This was written and produced by Francis Powers and features Cathrine Countess, supported by David Proctor, Betty Pierce, Mae Wells, Katherine Griffith, Raymond Russell, Robert Dunbar, Harry Clements and James Spencer.

The production has been under the personal supervision of Frank L. Baum, manager of the company, and will be released on the Alliance program at an early date.

An allegorical play, entitled "Red Tape," showing that success comes to the successful, or that it is but necessary to make the world believe you are successful in order to succeed, is being filmed at the Ideal Features studio. This will be complete in two reels.

Producing "Was He Guilty?"

Frank Beal, late of the Selig and Kalem forces, has been engaged as director by Manager Robert Levy, and is now producing his first subject, "Was He Guilty?" a melodrama. The leads for this picture are Norbert A. Myles and Edna Payne.

Harry Edwards, director, and his L-KO comedy players, Billie Ritchie and Henry Bergman, are soon to be seen in "Father Is Neutral," which was completed last week at the Hollywood studio.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES SCENE IN "THE WOMAN" (Lasky)

MIRIAM COOPER AND A TYPICAL SCENE FROM "THE ARTIST'S WIFE" (Majestic—April 2) SIGNE AUEN IN "THE HIGHBINDERS" (Majestic—April 18) AND TOM WILSON IN THE SAME DRAMA

The thousands who see the fleeting scenes representing the House of Representatives in the Lasky film production of "The Woman," could not possibly conceive of the great trouble this several hundred feet of film caused the employment department of the Lasky studio, in charge of Ethel Powell.

Every man on the floor of the house in this scene was a type and it required several days of searching, pleading and begging to secure sufficient men who could well pose as representatives of the people in the lower branch of the National legislature.

Two photoplays from original scenarios are now being filmed at the Lasky studio. "The Wild Goose Chase," featuring Ina Clair, is by William C. de Mille, and will consist of five reels. "Stolen Goods," with Blanche Sweet in the principal role, was written by Margaret Turnbull and Mr. de Mille. The former is a comedy of the nature of a theatrical story in which a Shakespearean company, headed by Theodore Roberts, as Horatio Brutus Bangs, plays a very important part.

Edgar Selwyn has arrived at the Lasky studio, and within the next few days will make his first appearance before the camera in the filming of "The Arab." As a special added attraction for this number, Irvin S. Cobb, an intimate friend of Mr. Selwyn, has agreed to become a screen actor and will play the part of the tourist in this subject as a favor to the star.

Max Karger, general manager of the B. A. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., arrived in Los Angeles last week to spend a few weeks with B. A. Rolfe, who is here managing the production of the two companies making feature subjects for the Metro program.

Mr. Karger gave out the statement that William Faversham will arrive here about May 10, to play the star part in a film production of a well-known speaking stage play.

Orrin Johnson and Olive Wyndham will arrive within the next few days to appear in the Edward Rose war drama, "Fighting Bob." Other stage stars to play in Rolfe pictures in the near future are Robert Hughes and Lois Meredith, who will play in the American drama of capital and labor, "The Bridge," by Rupert Hughes.

Mr. Karger also stated that George Ade has just completed the scenario of his vaudeville drama, "Marse Covington," for the Rolfe company, and this will be filmed at an early date. In this Ed Connie is to be starred.

By the end of the week the two Rolfe producing companies will have completed the filming of "The High Road" and "Cora." For the latter a very sensational scene was made at Elysian Park, Los Angeles, when a perfectly good automobile, supposed to contain the star, Emily Stevens, dashed over a 150 foot cliff and was burned.

A one-reel comedy drama, "The Little Soldier Man," for Reliance brand, is being made at this studio. All the characters are taken by the children regularly employed by this company, including Bobby Fuehrer, Paul Willis and Mildred Harris.

Picture from Cabanne Scenario

Director William Christy Cabanne last week took up the filming of the third Mutual Master-Picture, "The Failure," from an original scenario by himself. This will be of four reels, and John Emerson has been selected as the star and will appear in the role of a newspaper reporter, who learns of the actions of a certain theatrical manager of the philander type and exposes him.

Chester B. Clapp, recently with the Biograph, has been added by Production Manager Frank E. Woods to the scenario staff of the Majestic and Reliance studios.

The Komic brand players last week produced "Home Again," a one-reel farce. To the regular company has been added Anna May Walthall, sister of Henry B. Walthall, until recently with the Balboa company.

The producing company of the Blazon Film Company has returned to their studios at Berkeley, after spending several weeks making snow pictures for a subject called the "Death Lock."

For this subject more than 16,000 feet of negative has been made, which includes all the northern and river scenes and about half the interiors.

For the epilogue the company will spend several weeks on the California desert. Kathleen Emerson, who appears in "Rule G," made by this company, is playing the lead in this subject, and will next be featured in a film version of the Rufus Steele story, "The Fencing Girl."

A company of Keystone players, headed by Mabel Normand, Roscoe Arbuckle, and in charge of Adam Kessel, Jr., spent a portion of the past week at San Francisco, making exteriors for an exposition comedy.

Margaret Gibson, for the past year or more with the Western Vitagraph companies at the Santa Monica studios, has signed with the New York Motion Picture Company, and will appear in Ince Mutual Master-Pictures and the Kay-Bee, Domino and Broncho brands.

New Hart Subject for Master-Picture

A new W. S. Hart subject of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, for the Mutual Master-Pictures program, "The Darkening Trail," was finished last week and is now on its way to New York. The story of this relates to the adventures of a cad who is killed by a miner, Yukon Ed, played by Mr. Hart.

The remaining scenes for "Rumpelstiltskin," the four-reel adaptation from a Grimm's fairy tale, were made last week by Director Raymond B. West, who had been waiting since early last fall for the proper natural lighting necessary to secure effects depicting the miller's daughter and the prince being whisked away to happiness on the magic carpet furnished by the Good Fairy.

Members of the company producing "The Reward," filmed under the direction of Reginald Barker, at Inceville, had the feast of their lives last week, as many of the scenes needed represent the interior of a New York City cafe. Bessie Barriscale is being featured in this, which will consist of four reels.

The plot contains the simple story of a chorus girl who attempted to remain away from the gayety of the "Great White Way." The cabaret scene for this is referred to by the technical force of the studio as the most expensive ever made at Inceville.

Santa Ynez, the name of the canyon west of Santa Monica, in which the New York Motion Picture Corporation studios are at present located, is to become famous, for the name is to be used for a Western photoplay, "Bad Buck, of Santa Ynez," which will be of two reels and feature W. S. Hart, who is producing the subject.

Director Charles Swickard is selecting a cast and arranging scene plans for the four-reel subject, "The Beckoning Fame," which is to be the vehicle for the initial appearance of Henry Woodruff in Mutual Master-Pictures from the studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. Production will probably be taken up the first of the coming week.

Lucas Films Lynde Story on Desert

Director Wilfred Lucas and company of Fiction Picture players are spending several days of this week on the Nevada deserts, making the last scenes for the five-reel subject, "The Taming of Red Butte Western," an adaptation from the novel of Francis Lynde, featuring A. E. Anson.

The second company will be added to the producing staff of the Fiction Pictures the first of the coming week, when the new studio of the company will be so far completed as to permit work there. The second company will be under the direction of Alphabet (O. A. C.) Lund, formerly of the World Film producing companies.

This company will be headed by Frank Mills and Winifred Kingston, who will play the lead parts in an adaptation of Harry Leon Wilson's novel, "The Spenders," which will be made in five reels.

With the arrival of the entire producing staff, Director General Wilfred Lucas will take up the filming of "The Conquest of Canaan," from the story of the same name, by Booth Tarkington. This, like the other productions of this company, will consist of five reels.

Bess Meredith, who has been ill in New York City, where she underwent two operations for appendicitis, is expected to arrive in Los Angeles the latter part of this week to take up her work as scenario editor of the Fiction Pictures organization.

E. D. Horkheimer is home from a very successful trip to New York City, where he spent several weeks looking after the interests of the Balboa Features, and disposed of a very large number of subjects to the Alliance Corporation, Pathé Exchanges, Inc., and other well-known releasing companies.

The Balboa studio is in its usual state of activity. The "Who Pays?" series company, with Ruth Roland and Henry King as leads, is now finishing the sixth of the series of twelve three-reel subjects, entitled "Today and Tomorrow," and Will M. Ritchey, head of the scenario department, has two additional subjects ready for the producers.

The hearing of the suit of H. M. Horkheimer, president of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, at Long Branch, to enjoin Henry B. Walthall from working for other producing companies and to induce him to fulfill an alleged contract, has been postponed, upon petition of the attorneys for the defendant.

The Luna comedy being filmed this week by the Albuquerque company, under the direction of G. P. Hamilton, is entitled "How Allopath Conquered Boneopath," and is a travesty on a correspondent school for teaching cure-all for the human family.

Dwight Whiting, of the Rolin Film Company, is expected home from a business trip to the East the latter part of this week.

Announcement has been made by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company of the purchase of the motion picture rights for "Barbara Fritchie." This will be filmed at an early date, with Marjorie Rambeau in the name part, under the direction of Oscar Apfel.

Olga Petrova Signs with Popular Plays and Players

Noted Actress on Speaking Stage Contracts to Appear in Sixteen Subjects and Will Be Associated with the Company for Two Years

OLGA PETROVA, now starring in her most recent dramatic success, "Panthea," under the management of the Shuberts, signed contracts with the Popular Plays and Players Company, last week, giving that concern exclusive services for a period of two years and calling for her appearance in sixteen motion picture productions during that time.

The first of the sixteen will be "The Heart of a Painted Woman," which will be released through the Metro Pictures Corporation on April 19.

Madame Petrova made her first appearance in pictures in the Popular Plays and Players production of "The Tigress," and efforts were made shortly after this picture was released to prevail upon Petrova to enter the field permanently.

The noted actress then declined, saying she considered her work before the camera merely a diversion. After seeing "The Tigress," and more recently "The Heart of a Painted Woman," Madame Petrova seriously considered the offer of the Popular Plays and Players, with the result that the two year contract was entered into last Friday.

Madame Petrova, who made her first appearance in America at the famous Folies Bergere, has, perhaps, attracted more attention than any foreign artist yet to come to America, excepting Bernhardt and Rejane. When the Folies Bergere closed its doors, Madame Petrova entered vaudeville and received a salary of one thousand dollars a week. Winthrop Ames and Lee Shubert visited the Palace Theatre one evening during Madame Petrova's engagement there, immediately went back stage, and after a ten minute conversation, agreed that she was the ideal actress for the leading role in "Panthea," which had been delayed in production owing to the inability of the managers to find the proper artist.

When "Panthea" opened, Madame Petrova was merely featured, but after a week at the Booth theatre, the billing was changed, at great expense, and Petrova became a star.

A series of highly interesting dramatic vehicles will be supplied Madame Petrova, giving her ample opportunity to display her emotional powers.

BROADWAY STAR OFFICES NOW AT 1600 BROADWAY

The Broadway Star Feature Company has opened offices at 1600 Broadway, New York City. All the Broadway Star Features are produced by the Vitagraph Company of America.

Those of four or more parts are released direct to the exhibitors through the Broadway Star Feature Company, where at their new offices, they will be distributed to the several branches throughout the country.

The General Film Company will continue to release, as formerly, all the productions for the regular service.

EIGHT BRONCHO BUSTERS IN HARTE FILM

Eight champion broncho busters, rope-throwers and rifle and pistol shots have formed part of the colony of actors and actresses at Boulder Creek, where the California Motion Picture Corporation for the last month has been filming the exterior scenes of the new Bret Harte photoplay, "The Lily of Poverty Flat," in which

BEATRIZ MICHELENA IN "THE LILY OF POVERTY FLAT"

Beatriz Michelena is starred, and which will be released by the World Film Corporation.

This group of eight cowpunchers, according to the claim of their leader, are the equal, if not superior, of any other eight cowboys in the United States. Johnnie Judd is the nine-time rope champion of the world; Johnnie Dobbins is a champion broncho-buster and "bull-dogger"; "Texas" George Briggs is the champion rifle and revolver shot of the world; "Curly" Fletcher, in addition to being a champion bull rider, is one of the few cowboy poets in the West; Heine Snow, "Mickey," Jack and Tom Melrick are all expert broncho riders and skilled hands with the lasso.

TERWILLIGER RETURNS TO PHILADELPHIA

George W. Terwilliger, the Lubin writer and director, who has been in Florida since the first of the year with a specially selected company of Lubin players, has returned to the main studio in Philadelphia. The company included Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Greene, Herbert Fortier, Mrs. Fortier, P. Thad Volkman, Mae DeMetz, Hazel Hubbard, William Cooper and Torliev Corneliussen.

Terwilliger produced a number of plays written by himself, including "The Telegrapher's Peril," a two-reel melodrama; "The Last Rebel," a two-reel civil war drama, minus battle scenes; "The Man of God," a two-reel drama of the castaway type; "Destiny's Skein," a three-reel drama, and "The Insurrection,"

In addition to these plays, Terwilliger completed Emmett Campbell Hall's play, "Such Things Really Happen," an expose of fake scenario writing schools.

PORTLAND, ME., WANTS PICTURE THEATRES REGULATED

The committee on ordinances of the Portland, Me., city council is considering a petition for an ordinance regulating motion picture theatres. The measure will compel managers to provide seats for all persons in the audience, and prohibit the use of the second floor of any building as a theatre where there is a garage underneath or where gasoline or explosives are stored. The petition also asks that aisles and passageways be kept clear of people during performances.

But one person represented the proponents of the measure at a hearing called for the purpose by the committee. Managers Reeves of the Strand theatre and Blumenberg of the Portland theatre were present with an attorney and an attorney represented Manager Greeley of Greeley's theatre.

Statements made by the attorneys before the committee show that Portland, Me., managers have taken all precautions necessary for the comfort and safety of their patrons. Officers are stationed in the auditoriums and the aisles and passageways are amply wide to facilitate emptying the theatre quickly in case of an emergency.

The Strand theatre is located above a garage, but it was pointed out that the only gasoline stored there is in the latest type underground tanks and the danger is remote from that source.

VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES NOT TO MINISTERS' LIKING

In a report, recently issued, the Ministerial Union of Omaha, Neb., attacks the custom of motion picture exhibitors adding vaudeville acts to their shows. The report names several theatres in the lower part of the business district and recommends that the city commissioners take steps to stop such vaudeville entertainments.

"If they put such shows on in legitimate theatres, they would close the show house," said one of the ministers, speaking of the report. "A motion picture theatre manager, charging five cents admission, cannot afford to put on a vaudeville entertainment worthy of the public's patronage. This will be included in our further work to close such places."

The commissioners have received the report, but are withholding their action until they can give it more careful consideration.

To Test Sunday Opening in Warren, Ohio

Is Warren, O., to have blue laws? That is the question stirring residents of that city, following the arrest of the managers of the four local picture houses for running shows on Sundays. According to Prosecutor Archer L. Phelps the arrests were made because the managers and their employees performed "common labor on Sunday." Local legal lights say that the arrests will establish a precedent, and picture theatre managers of Ohio have their eyes focused on that city.

Last Sunday the theatre managers kept their houses open, allowing persons to enter free of charge, in an effort to make a test case of the State law. At Niles the picture houses are open on Sunday and have not been molested. Houses in Cleveland, Cincinnati and other big cities give Sunday shows, and there has been no attempt to enforce the Sunday closing laws in any of these cities.

The State law reads thus:

"Sabbath Desecration, Chapter 12, Section 13,044, of the Ohio General Code—Whoever, being over fourteen years of age, engages in common labor or opens or causes to be open a building or place for transaction of business, or requires a person in his employ or under his control to engage in common labor on Sunday, on complaint made within ten days thereafter, shall be fined $25, and for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not less than $50, nor more than $100, and imprisonment not less than five days nor more than thirty days."

Those arrested included Manager W. W. Dunnayant, Dreamland theatre; R. L. Hawkins, Crescent theatre; James A. Reeves, Duchess theatre, and John J. Murray, Opera House. Employees who were taken in charge by the minions of the law included Mrs. John J. Murray, Mrs. Hattie Wheeler, Mrs. Inez Coe, Frank Andrews, John Shore, Nick Mascio, Charles Gaither, Charles Wannamaker and Robert Wieder.

The four managers declare that they will close every business place and store in Warren on Sundays. Popular opinion here is that the operation of picture shows should be left to a vote of the citizens. A municipal election would be satisfactory to both sides in the controversy, and the managers say that they would be willing to abide by the vote of the majority, no matter which way it went.

The Supreme Court of Missouri handed down a decision on March 31, that the City of St. Louis can not prevent motion picture shows from being operated in tents.

The controversy over the tent shows began in 1907, when James Smith, who was then building commissioner, notified all owners of tent shows that it was a violation of the law to conduct such shows in any building but one of the first class. The question was taken up by the city counselor, who decided that a tent was not a building.

Many efforts were made to amend the ordinances so as to specify that picture shows could not be conducted in tents, but the bills were defeated. Then the license commissioner refused to issue a license and a mandamus suit was filed against him, which was decided in favor of the city.

Under this ruling, in July, 1913, Mayor Kiel summoned all persons having a license to operate a picture show in a tent to show cause why the license should not be revoked. Attorney Taylor R. Young and Edward W. Foristel, representing the exhibitors, reached an agreement with the mayor that the order should not be carried out until the matter was passed upon by he courts.

A test case was made. Michael Nash was tried and acquitted on being arrested for operating a tent show, in the Court of Criminal Correction, and the city appealed to the Supreme Court.

Judge John C. Brown, who made the decision, holds that a tent does not come within the building restrictions within the "fire limits" of the city, at least not under the ordinance on which the city proceeded against Nash. City Counselor Baird and Assistant Young represented the city, and they will file a motion for a rehearing.

"THEIR ONLY SON" CORRECT NAME FOR KRITERION FILM

In the Kriterion advertisement which appeared in last week's issue, the picture listed under the Trump brand as "The Only Son" should have read: "Their Only Son." This was a typographical error.

One of the reasons for the success of the recent Gustave Frohman picture, "The Fairy and the Waif," which was released on the World Film program, was the presence of Mary Miles Minter in the featured role.

The little star is again to appear on the same program in the Charles K. Harris feature, "Always in the Way," being produced by the Dyreda Art Film Corporation for World Film.

In this picture she has a part that differs greatly from that allotted her in her first screen appearance, but her cleverness and undestanding assure her another success. The producing company has just returned from the Bahama Islands where "Always in the Way" was being filmed.

RUBINSTEIN NOT EDITOR OF "FILM FANCIES"

Inadvertently Leon J. Rubinstein was mentioned in an article in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of March 27 as editor of the old "Film Fancies."

Mr. Rubinstein was editor of the "Film Index" and later of "Film Reports." Hector Streychmans was the editor of "Film Fancies," which was one of the leading motion picture publications of its day.

Fox Director "Discovers" Star in Photo Show Case

Brenon Sees Beautiful Face in Broadway Photographs and Decides that the Original Is Just Suited to Fit Particular Type for Emotional Play

ONE of the most winsome and dainty actresses recently seen upon the screen is Jean Southern, a discovery of Herbert Brenon, the director of some of the big William Fox successes. Miss Southern appears in "The Hunchback," which Mr. Brenon is now making in Montreal under the direct supervision of William Fox. There is a rather interesting story connected with the way in which Miss Southern was "discovered."

At the corner of Forty-sixth street and Broadway, not far from the home office of the Fox Film Corporation, is a photographer's showcase, in which are displayed many types of feminine beauty.

Mr. Brenon had spent more than two weeks interviewing scores of actresses whom he thought might be suited for the particular part he finally engaged Miss Southern to play. In passing the photographic display he happened to notice Miss Southern's picture. It was the very type that he required.

But inquiries at the photographer's studio failed to reveal Miss Southern's identity. However, the director was determined, and several William Fox "scouts" were assigned to try and discover the identity of the original of the photograph. All their efforts, however, resulted in failure.

One night, in company with Mr. Fox, he visited the William Fox Riverside theatre, Ninety-sixth street and Broadway, New York City. The vaudeville portion of the bill was in full swing.

The feature act was billed as "Jean Southern." The instant she came upon the stage, in front of the "drop," Mr. Brenon exclaimed, "There's the girl I've been looking for for three weeks."

Mr. Brenon predicts that she is destined to become one of the popular photoplay actresses of the country. Besides her good looks and dainty personality she has a decided gift for emotional work, and Mr. Brenon will cultivate her ability in characterizations of this type.

Gertrude Berkeley, the well-known actress who appeared in support of Nazimova in the latter's war-time vaudeville sketch, "War Brides," has also been engaged to appear in "The Hunchback."

Miss Berkeley has appeared in support of practically every noted star in the country, and has also been at the head of her own companies at various times during her career.

CAPITAL EXHIBITORS DISCUSS TRADE EVILS

Big Meeting of the Newly Organized League of District of Columbia in Crandall's Theatre—Moorehead Protests Against Charge Made for Posters by Exchanges in Washington—Prices Asked for Unmounted Paper Considered Exorbitant—Exchanges Complain of Advertising Matter Carelessly Handled

Washington, D. C., April 7.

FROM the interest evidenced at the second meeting of the newly reorganized Exhibitors' League of the District of Columbia, held at Crandall's theatre, it is believed that a great deal will be accomplished within the next few months towards placing the motion-picture industry in the National capital on the plane on which it rightfully belongs. The reorganization of this local was completed when the following officers were elected:

President, Harry M. Crandall; first vice-president, Joseph P. Morgan; second vice-president, Thomas Eastwood; secretary, H. P. Moorehead; treasurer, Robert H. Campbell, Jr.; sergeant-at-arms, C. J. Bedell; and William P. Herbst, Maurice Davis, A. F. Fox, Jr., Mrs. Cora Brame, and Fulton Brylawski members of the board of directors.

Considerable time was spent in a discussion of present day conditions in the motion picture business, and Mr. Moorehead urged that the exhibitors get together on the subject of prices. He said that a number of exhibitors on the outskirts of the city were in favor of making a ten-cent admission universal in the residential sections, it having been rumored that Crandall's theatre and Moore's Garden theatre would willingly raise their prices to fifteen cents if the others favoring a ten-cent admission would take the initiative. He declared for better prices and a higher standard for the houses and the pictures.

Mr. Moorehead also protested against the action of certain of the local exchanges in charging for posters. He said that films could not be very well used without advertising paper, and this being the case, it was up to the exchanges to so furnish the exhibitors.

Careless Handling of Paper

He also spoke of the deplorable condition of some of the paper sent to the theatres, referring particularly to those using late service. "The man who uses thirty-day-run pictures wants the same quality of paper that is given to the man using first-run pictures," he declared, "and if we must pay for paper, I do not agree that we should; the price should be along a sliding scale."

Mr. Tracy told of having been forced to pay eight cents for unmounted paper, and had been put to an expense of $40 in having boards put up at the Savoy theatre, in order to take care of it.

Ninety per cent. of the exhibitors cannot take care of unmounted paper and the price asked in any event is exorbitant. The cost of the paper necessary in advertising a feature runs up into dollars and makes the price of the feature far too high.

Mr. Eastwood urged that some action be taken along this line and that the exchanges be made to feel that they are working an injustice on the exhibitors, who are facing enough by reason of competition.

Dr. Herbst arraigned the exhibitors for the carelessness displayed in many cases in the handling of the paper supplies by the exchanges, stating that when this subject was first called to his attention he took it up with the exchangemen, who told him that if everyone would handle the paper as it should be handled, sending it back in the proper condition, in all probability there would be no need for taxing the exhibitors for its use.

He said that very often in the case of express shipments the reel box would be returned wrapped up in what was previously a new six-sheet.

"We have to be as fair with the exchanges as with ourselves," he said. "We do not always stop to think that there are others after us who must use these same posters. They cost money, and I believe if every exhibitor will agree to return them to the exchanges in first class condition, or accept a charge when they damage them, that we will again get our posters free of charge.

"The exhibitors throughout the country must be more reasonable and treat the posters as if they were their own property, not to do so is unfair to the exchanges. There are two sides of this question and we must be honest in the matter."

President Crandall was requested to get into communication with other league cities to find out how the paper question is being handled. Following the receipt of this information a plan will be agreed upon and the matter presented to the exchange managers for the necessary action.

Evils of Bicycling

The taking out of the service of feature films for exhibition at otherwise legitimate theatres, and the practice of at least one film man in endeavoring to "bicycle" a feature between a motion picture and a stock theatre, was disapproved of by the members.

While awaiting the preparation of the ballots, the Northeast exhibitors, a half dozen or more in number, gathered together for a discussion of conditions exsiting in their neighborhood, this showing that the reorganization has already done some good.

The following were among those present who took an active part in the meeting: W. H. Shippam, Thomas Eastwood, Harry P. Moorehead, Harry M. Crandall, Joseph P. Morgan, W. S. Wickham, James Wickham, W. A. Marceron, Mrs. Cora C. Brame, Sadie P. Cohen, H. P. Tracy, William P. Herbst, J. Young, Robert H. Campbell, Jr., Fulton Brylawski, Mr. Bedell, Norman Luchs, Max Byron, David Byron, Jacob Byron, Samuel Greenberg, Maurice Davis, A. F. Fox, Jr., and Mr. Schultz.

Reliance Plans Patrons' Popularity Contest

Exhibitors Showing "Runaway June" Will Receive Liberal Aid Through Advertising by the Company in Women's Magazines of General Circulation

AFTER encountering perils of the deep, the "Runaway June" Company, headed by Norma Phillips and J. W. Johnston, is back in New York, hard at work again for the Reliance. The trip up from Bermuda on the Bermudian was a stormy one.

The storm followed Director Oscar Eagle's band of players almost from start to finish of the forty-eight hour voyage. At times the seas were so high that water was flung over the tops of the smokestacks. There were three hundred passengers aboard.

Having recovered a trifle from the effects of the voyage, the company is now at work at the Yonkers studio on the fifteenth episode of the Reliance serial.

While the company was absent in Bermuda preparations were being completed in New York for the great "Runaway June" contest. Advertising material and aids to the exhibitor were sent from New York, over the country. This week finds the contest well under way in many of the leading photoplay theatres in the country and the idea is taking well with the public.

The national campaign of advertising in the leading women's magazines has found response in the imaginations of the women of the country. Letters by the hundreds are being received at the Reliance offices, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, in which the writers ask individually for information.

Exhibitors, too, are writing letters to the Reliance. They feel that the contest will be a big business builder, and that it is on safe ground. If the voting was only to determine the most beautiful woman in the theatre, they feel that jealousies would result, but since the contest is a test of real popularity they think that this element of strife will be eliminated.

A Philadelphia exhibitor is so enthusiastic over the contest that he has determined to give prizes of his own. To the leaders in each he will give a prize, and to the young woman who has the largest vote in all of his theatres he plans to give a bigger prize. He has asked the Reliance for permission to pay out of his own pocket the expenses to California of this winner, and to have her travel to the Pacific-Panama Exposition and the San Diego Exposition on the Reliance special train.

MACE GETS FIGHT FILMS

Word comes from Fred Mace in Havana that he has secured successful pictures of the Willard-Johnson prize fight. Mr. Mace took the pictures for H. H. Frazee and Lawrence Weber.

CHAPLIN TAKES PORTLAND, ORE., BY STORM

Charlie Chaplin has taken Portland, Ore., by storm. Manager Winstock, of the National theatre, holds an exclusive first choice contract with the General Film Company, of this city, so all first-run Chaplin pictures are presented at the National theatre.

Each picture is retained at least a week, although the rest of the program is changed four times a week. But the oftener they see Chaplin the better they seem to like his work; in fact, most of the patrons laugh much harder on a second or third visit than on their first viewing of the film. The smaller houses are copying the National to some extent, it would seem, and are featuring Chaplin not only in the new Essanay films but have resurrected every Keystone possible, no matter how aged, and run same.

One of the pleasurable assignments that occasionally falls to the lot of motion picture workers resulted in Captain Harry Lambart, Vitagraph director, Betty Gray and Frank Currier, Vitagaph players, and the cameraman, taking passage on one of the ships that ply between New York and Norfolk, Va., so that two scenes in "The Mystery of Mary" might be filmed, of a moving vessel with Fortress Monroe in the background. "The Mystery of Mary" will, when completed, be a Broadway Star feature in three parts.

CUMMINGS MADE SPECIAL POLICEMAN

Irving Cummings, leading man of "The Diamond from the Sky," the $20,000 prize photoplay now in the making at the "Flying A" studios at Santa Barbara, Calif., has been made a special policeman in his adopted home town.

IRVING CUMMINGS

Mr. Cummings and his racing car have caused the local police an endless amount of worry. In fact, Mr. Cummings and the police were together so much that it saved everyone's time to make Irving a member of the force.

FLORENCE TEMPEST, THE VAUDEVILLE FAVORITE, NOW ENROLLED AMONG THE WORLD COMEDY STARS, PRODUCING COMEDIES FOR WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

"THE PLUNDERER" LOCALE COMPELS HORSEMANSHIP

Since he assumed the directorship of William Farnum in "The Plunderer," a picturization of Roy Norton's romantic novel of the same name made for William Fox, Edgar Lewis has become almost as accomplished a horseman as Buffalo Bill himself. But this end was not attained without the cost of many blisters.

The immense distances which had to be covered in the mountainous regions of Dahlonega, Ga., where the most striking scenes of this mining romance were made, rendered it necessary for the director, and in fact for every member of the company, to adopt horsemanship in order to reach the locations.

"SPENDTHRIFT" FOR EDISON RELEASE

Porter Emerson Brown's successful play, "The Spendthrift," is now being translated into photoplay form by the well known director, Walter Edwin, for some years with the Edison Company.

"The Spendthrift" is Mr. Edwin's initial production for George Kleine, and it is the fifth of the Kleine American features. Most of the leading actors have been recruited from the "Song of Songs," the popular drama that is now playing at the Eltinge Theatre in New York.

In the lead parts Miss Irene Fenwick and Mr. Cyril Keightley are playing with their accustomed ability.

President Pearce and M. E. Cory in New York City

Officers of National Association Visit Metropolis on League Matters—Mr. Cory, Vice-President, Chairman of Committee in Charge of All Arrangements

MARION S. PEARCE of Baltimore and M. E. Cory of San Francisco, national president and vice-president, respectively, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, are in New York this week on business connected with the national convention and exposition which is to be held in San Francisco July 15 to 26.

Mr. Cory has been made chairman of the committee in charge of all arrangements. He will be assisted by a committee of San Francisco exhibitors. The other members of the general executive committee are: President Pearce, Secretary W. R. Wilson of Columbus, Ohio; Treasurer P. J. Jeup of Detroit and A. P. Tugwell of Los Angeles. Judge Tugwell will have charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors while in Los Angeles.

Mr. Cory has been successful in getting the Selig company to alter the schedule of its coast special to arrive in San Francisco on the morning of July 13. They will remain the entire time the convention is in session, including the grand ball with which the convention closes Friday night, July 16.

Headquarters of the convention committee will be established in the offices of the California Exhibitors League, Room 306, Mechanics Bank building, Market and Mason streets, San Francisco.

There will be a general information bureau maintained and hotel reservations and all other matters will be gladly attended to for anyone who will address the committee.

Full information will be published in this paper as the plans of the committee are completed.

Manufacturers of pictures and accessories and supplies are urged to take advantage of this opportunity of placing their business personally before large numbers of exhibitors who have never been able to attend any of the national conventions that have been held in the East. You will miss a golden opportunity if you are not at San Francisco with a big exhibit. If you have an exhibit at the Panama Pacific Exhibition, it is especially to your interest to help get the exhibitors to attend the convention. You can maintain simply an information booth, distributing invitations to visit your exhibition, and giving its location.

BLACKWELL IN "POST" PLAY

Carlyle Blackwell has returned to the coast from a trip east, and with his director is now making arrangements for the next production of the Favorite Players, "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," from the recent "Saturday Evening Post" serial, in which he will appear as Richard Lane.

The scenario for this is being prepared by Richard Willis, who is also in charge of the publicity department of the Favorite Players' studio organization.

SALISBURY ANIMAL FEATURES WONDERFUL WILD LIFE PICTURES

The most elaborate set of films depicting the natural history of North American animals and birds is easily that belonging to Edward A. Salisbury. There are in all over 200,000 feet of this film, entirely devoted to scenes of animal life taken with such care and accuracy as to constitute valuable additions to the scientific life histories of the subjects shown.

Four selected portions of this film will be shown at the Strand theatre as a part of the regular program for the four weeks beginning April 18. The parts to be shown at the Strand will be taken from eight remarkable reels of film which have already been shown privately in this city and which were reviewed in Motion Picture News some weeks ago.

All of these pictures will be released under the title "Salisbury Features," by a company of that name, to be organized shortly. Several prominent film men are identified with the concern, but for the present prefer to remain anonymous. Various educational institutions have already placed orders for copies of portions of the film. The Biological Survey at Washington is most enthusiastic about them, because they bring home the value of conservation of wild life, and the work that is being done in that direction far more forcibly than any printed reports can do.

Mr. Salisbury is a determined foe of the market-hunter and "game hog" and parts of the films show the deadly work of these undesirable citizens among the wild geese, and with other game. Ruthless slaughter is still carried on in many localities. In California the showing of the hunting scenes carried the election for the candidates opposed to market hunting in every district where they were shown.

The terms "scientific" and "educational" have so often been synonymous with dull and uninteresting pictures in the minds of exhibitors that the Salisbury films should be a most pleasant surprise. They are of a sort which will appeal to all but the most ignorant and unappreciative audiences.

More definite information as to the plans of the new company.

WILL PHILLBRICK (Dra-ko)

HATCH JOINS FOX STARS TO APPEAR IN "PLUNDERER"

William Riley Hatch is the latest addition to the long list of William Fox star players. Mr. Hatch, who is one of the best-known character actors on the American stage, plays the important part of "Bully" Presby in the William Fox production of "The Plunderer," an adaption from Roy Norton's famous novel.

Mr. Hatch is a distinct acquisition to the silent stage. Every theatregoer in the land will recall his splendid work in "Paid in Full," in which he took the part of the sardonic old skipper, Captain Williams. Mr. Hatch is probably as versatile a thespian as could be found.

He has been in turn an artist, a church singer, a concert singer, a musical comedy comedian, and an actor of heavy character parts. He has played all the character leads with William Gillette, Lewis Waller, W. J. Florence, Augustan Daly, and E. J. Henley. His work as Captain Hatch, in "The Bird of Paradise" is also memorable.

INTERSTATE WILL RELEASE THROUGH PLAYHOUSE

Kenneth MacDougall, vice-president and general manager of the Interstate Feature Film Company, with headquarters in Middletown, Conn., was in New York a few days ago, and signed a contract with the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., of 71 West 23rd street, to release the productions being made by his company through them. The first picture is a four reeler entitled "Bulldogs of the Trail."

Sydney Shields, leading lady in the first release, spent all of last season at Providence, R. I., as leading lady with the Albee stock company. The Interstate people plan to make two features a month.

"GARDEN OF ALLAH" RIGHTS GO TO SELIG

The Selig Polyscope Company has obtained the motion picture rights to "The Garden of Allah," the spectacular play made by Mary Anderson and Robert Hichens from Mr. Hichens' novel.

The royalties paid by Mr. Selig are said to be the highest ever paid for a motion picture play. William N. Selig plans a production befitting the spectacular nature of the locale, and it is planned to make it the peer of any film drama ever made.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA IN "A PHYLLIS OF THE SIERRAS"

The newest California Motion Picture Corporation release in which Beatriz Michelena will be seen is "A Phyllis of the Sierras." This production will be released through the World Film Corporation on May 31 and will be the fourth of that noted Western organization's features to be released through the World Film Corporation.

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS SELECT CONVENTION HALL

Reading, Pa., April 7.

Rajah Temple has been engaged as the place for holding the next convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which was organized in the convention in Harrisburg last month and which has applied for a charter in the national league.

The convention is to be held here June 7, 8 and 9, and delegates will be on hand from the nine locals created in the Harrisburg convention. The work of enrolling members for these locals is being pressed vigorously, and there is every reason to believe that when the June convention opens here the new state league, the foundations for which were so harmoniously laid in the Harrisburg gathering, will be on a very strong working basis.

COSMOS SIGNS HELEN WARE

Arthur H. Jacobs, president of the Cosmos Feature Film Corporation, has signed Helen Ware to appear in one or more feature pictures. Miss Ware's remarkable work in "The Third Degree," "Within the Law" and "The Price" will leave no doubt in the mind of any theatregoer to Miss Ware's right of being styled one of America's foremost emotional actresses. The play in which Miss Ware will make her first screen appearance will be announced soon.

WILD ANIMALS IN SELIG "EXPERIMENT"

Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton never undertook more sympathetic character delineations than in the Selig two-reel play, "The Great Experiment," released in April. A number of wild animals from the Selig Jungle Zoo also add realism to the plot.

Dallas Welford, English Comedian, Joins Edison

Actor Starred in England for a Number of Seasons—He Has Played with Edna May in This Country, and Was With Frohman

EDISON has augmented its string of comedians by securing, for his first appearance in motion pictures, the services of the noted English comedian, Dallas Welford.

DALLAS WELFORD

Mr. Welford has been starred both in this country and in England. This new convert to motion pictures hails, originally, from Scotland, his family being well known in theatrical history and his father owning a theatre in Aberdeen, his birth place.

He played child parts innumerable and then for seventeen years appeared in many of the famous old dramas and melodramas popular in that period. Although he had earned his name in serious roles, nature had made him a natural comedian and when Charles Hawtrey was attracted by his work Mr. Welford naturally followed the course of nature and appeared in principal parts for three years with his distinguished associate.

Kitty Loftus—not "Cissy" by the way—sought his aid to make her musical comedies funnier, though she stands for the highest in English musical comedy. With Edna May, Mr. Welford made "Colonel Marchant" famous on two continents. He was later starred in the farce "Brown of Brighton." Mr. Welford made such a success in "Mr. Hopkinson" in England that he was brought to this country and in that title role enjoyed a phenomenal success here for three years in that play.

He then joined the forces of Charles Frohman and has appeared in hefty fun roles in "Twenty Days in the Shade," "Madame Sherry," and others. A. H. Woods guided his destinies for five seasons in "The Girl from Rectors." His swan song appearance on the stage was in "Adele" in which he played here, going to London with the production and later returning with that company.

The Shuberts then made him an attractive offer to stick to his early love, but Edison won him over to motion pictures.

Fritzi Brunette Is Valued Kriterion Star

Robert Daly, Santa Barbara Director, Instrumental in Obtaining Her for the Program—Edward Alexander Is Playing Opposite Her

FRITZI BRUNETTE, who has been attracting much attention in a few of the leading brands of the Universal films for the past few years, where her promotion has been very rapid, has been secured by the Santa Barbara Film Company, of Santa Barbara, Cal., to play leading roles in their brands. These will be released by the Mica Film Corporation on the Kriterion Program.

Robert Daly, who was formerly director with the Universal, and is now directing for the Santa Barbara, was instrumental in securing the services of Miss Brunette to work for his company under his direction. Big things are predicted of Miss Brunette and Mr. Alexander, who will play leads opposite under the direction of Mr. Daly.

Miss Brunette is sincere and convincing in any role she portrays. Her black hair, deep hazel eyes and a clear olive complexion combine a type of rare beauty. She is generally acknowledged to be one of the youngest and most beautiful leading women in the motion picture field.

A little incident which lends a touch of human interest in the life of Miss Brunette happened in Santa Barbara several days ago. She was approached by a little girl who told her that people said she looked like Miss Brunette, and that she wanted to know all about the films and how she could become a star. Miss Brunette was touched by the tot's sympathetic style, and took her along to the studio where she was shown the "inside workings" of a real factory.

Miss Brunette seems to take as much interest in the little one as she does in her own career. Through her pretty face and pleasant manner the little girl has become the pet of the whole company at the studio.

Contracts have been signed within the past few days between the Terriss Feature Film Co. and the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., 71 West 23rd street, New York, whereby the former company engages to make all of its releases for the United States and Canada through the latter.

AUGUST IN "WHEN IT STRIKES HOME"

Edwin August is at present working in the Charles K. Harris feature, "When It Strikes Home," which will be released May 10 on the World Film schedule.

Mr. Augsut is well known because of his associations with many of the best known manufacturers, and will have a very prominent part in this forthcoming Charles K. Harris feature.

In addition to Mr. August there will be seen Grace Washburn, the noted beauty who has just returned from London, where she has been appearing in the revue, "Come Over Here," and William Bailey.

BLACKTON PURCHASES BOX FOR ALLIED ARTS BALL

Commodore and Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph company, purchased a box for the ball of the allied arts to be given at the Astor Theatre, Thursday evening, April 8, for the Actors Fund of America. They entertained as their guests: Anita Stewart, Edith Storey, Lillian Walker, Norma Talmadge, Mrs. Sidney Drew, Dorothy Kelly, Flora Finch, Kate Price, Julia Swayne Gordon and Mary Maurice, all members of the Vitagraph Company of America.

J. W. JOHNSTON, WHO PLAYS LEAD IN "JUNE"

J. W. Johnston, who appears as Ned, the deserted husband in the Reliance serial "Runaway June," is making a name for himself in this part. His role is one which draws quite heavily on the sympathies, so

J. W. JOHNSON

Mr. Johnston has easily endeared himself to the many followers of the picture, and all will be pleased when at last he is reunited with his runaway bride, and allows a smile to creep over his face.

VITAGRAPH, LUBIN, SELIG, AND ESSANAY $500,000 FEATURE BOOKING COMBINE

New Concern Will Book Direct to Exhibitors Through New Exchanges Established, Especially to Handle Important Multiple Pictures—Step Marks a New and Significant Phase in the Progress of the Industry—Albert E. Smith as President, Siegmund Lubin, Vice-President, William N. Selig, Treasurer, and George K. Spoor, Secretary, Direct the Destinies of the New Combination

THE Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay Motion Picture Company was incorporated at Albany, N. Y., on April 5, and papers were filed in New York City on the day following.

The capitalization of the company is $500,000. Offices are at 1600 Broadway, New York City. The officers are Albert E. Smith, president; Siegmund Lubin, vice-president; William N. Selig, treasurer; George K. Spoor, secretary.

Thus is marked the definite formation of the reported union of these four companies, under the above corporate name, to market their more pretentious features direct to the exhibitor.

Only Special Features Marketed

Branch offices now in formation will be open for business within a week at Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas, Portland, Ore., Boston and Philadelphia. These will be entirely new offices; that is, no exchanges already established will be used.

The Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay Motion Picture Company will, of course, only market special features. The regular program pictures of these four companies will, as in the past, continue to be released through the branches of the General Film Company.

Until September 1 one feature a week will be released; after that date at least two features a week. A complete feature program will be furnished the exhibitor; if necessary, features will be bought and added to the program.

Combined Resources Very Large

"You may say," said Albert E. Smith, president, to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "that nothing has been spared and nothing will be spared to make this the best feature program in existence."

This combination, on a big feature basis, of four of the oldest, best-known and best-equipped producers in the world, is the most momentous happening in recent years in the film business."

All four companies have been for some time making special features, buying plays and engaging prominent stage stars. Some idea of the combined resources of the new company may be had from the admission of President Albert E. Smith, that his producing company, the Vitagraph, has a half million dollars' worth of productions upon its shelves now ready for immediate distribution. The Lubin, Selig and Essanay companies are similarly fortified, and together with Vitagraph have now in preparation many stage successes, with famous stars and many more under contract for appearance in early releases.

Distributing Machine Perfected

"Also," said President Smith, "we have been waiting for some time for the proper distributing channels. We now have such a distributing machine, our own, and direct to the exhibitor.

"We are fully satisfied. We shall, in every respect—in quality of feature and service—fill a long-felt want."

$1,000,000 Theatre to Be Erected in Cleveland

Palatial Playhouse Will Have Frontage of 65 Feet on Euclid Avenue—Emanuel Mandelbaum to Own and Operate House

Cleveland, O., April 7.

WHAT is planned by the promoters to be a palatial motion picture house will be located in the heart of the shopping district, Euclid Avenue, above Ninth and next to the hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio. It is estimated that nearly $1,000,000 is involved in the transaction and erection of the building will be started this year. Cleveland capitalists, headed by Emanuel Mandelbaum, a pioneer in the Cleveland motion picture field, will own and operate the theatre.

The site secured for the playhouse has a frontage of 65 feet on Euclid avenue and depth of 319 feet, and will be covered with the theater building and a commercial structure costing over $500,000. Plans are being prepared, and it is the intention to build the theatre part first. It is expected that the house, which will seat 2,500 persons will be open before next January 1.

The location is known as the Stillman place and will be the name of the house. The fee to the property, owned by M. B. and H. H. Johnson, was leased about seven years ago under a 99 year lease, of which Mr. Mandelbaum has secured the unexpired portion. The theatre building, on the rear of the lot, will be reached through a broad vestibule and lobby opening on Euclid avenue.

Mr. Mandelbaum, who is a director of the company operating the Strand Theatre, Broadway and Forty-second street. New York City, says the Cleveland house will be built along the lines of the Gotham house.

Mr. Mandelbaum, since the earliest days of the film business, when he established the Lake Shore Film and Supply company, has worked for the uplift of the picture business. He was an officer of the Film Service Association, the first organization of picture men in this country, and was an organizer and director of the Mutual Film Corporation.

He is interested in many picture houses in Cleveland, and the Knickerbocker, East Eighty-third street and Euclid avenue, best exemplifies his ideas he left Cleveland to head the World Film Corporation, New York. Recently he disposed of his interests in the Mutual in this direction. About two years ago and returned to Cleveland.

NEW LICENSE REGULATIONS FOR OAKLAND, CAL.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Alameda County, California, has drawn up a set of new license regulations that takes into consideration the seating capacities of moving picture theatres and hopes to have this adopted.

The measure will not be presented to the Oakland City Council until after the pending election, when a number of changes in the personnel of that body will be made. The proposed regulations call for a graduated license tax based on seating capacity and modeled on the Federal regulations.

FOR CENSORSHIP IN TENNESSEE

The creation of a Tennessee board of motion picture censors is the purport of a bill introduced in the State legislature at Nashville. The proposed board is to be patterned after the national board of censors.

The bill provides that each reel shown in the state must first be inspected by the board, which is to be composed of two men and one woman. They are to receive $1,500 yearly each. Before any film can be exhibited it must be preceded on the screen by a piece of film reading: "Approved by the Tennessee Board of Censors." The bill take effect ninety days after its passage.

JOSEPHINE EARLE PLAYS JENNIE IN VITAGRAPH FILM

Josephine Earle, an actress of note on the legitimate stage, is now a member of the Vitagraph forces.

Miss Earle is remembered for her success in the part of Beauty in "Everywoman," the modern miracle play, produced by H. W. Savage, which had a long run in New York City and on tour throughout the country. Miss Earle's work in the role of Jennie, the girl gangster, in "The Return of Maurice Donnelly," is attracting favorable comment at the Vitagraph theatre, New York City.

California Attempts to Stop Animal Shows

Sensitive Lawmakers, Dripping with the "Milk of Human Kindness," Want Ban on Animal Acts in Films Because of Alleged Brutalities to "Beasties"

SENATOR HERBERT SLATER, of Santa Rosa, and Assemblyman Harry Encell, of Oakland, Cal., have simultaneously introduced bills in the California legislature to "stop the torturing of the lion's den and the brutalities of the tiger's cage."

These legislators have been encouraged in their action by a San Francisco newspaper, which under flaming headlines, announces "Ban Proposed on Tamed Beast Shows. Fatalities and Manglings That So Many Times Attend Such Practices Inspire Two Bills. Are Likely to Go Through."

It behooves every journal devoted to the interests of the motion picture, every exhibitor who likes to please his patrons with wild animal comedies and dramas, every manufacturer who longs for variety and true entertainment for the motion picture programs to immediately prepare to combat this latest piece of "inspired" legislation. The art of cinematography is the target for all unjust legislation that can be conjured up in this day and age.

This latest legislative action, if it is not buried in legislative committee, will mean a terrific blow to the motion picture industry. It would seem that while times are hard in this country, while capital is in a state of fear, that attempts of some unknown legislator, inspired by a sensational newspaper to cripple a great industrial enterprise, should be checked.

Millions of dollars have been invested by motion picture manufacturers in the Golden State. The Selig Polyscope Company alone has invested a million dollars in a beautiful zoological garden which is not only utilized to film wild animal pictures, but is open for the pleasure and profit of the public.

If this bill becomes a law, the State of California will suffer along with the motion picture companies. It will mean the closing down of large industrial enterprises; it will mean the loss of employment to thousands; it will mean that all the Golden State has obtained through motion pictures, will be lost and that other localities will profit thereby.

USE OF VAUDEVILLE MAKES THEATRE AMENABLE TO FIRE LAW

Judge Audenried in Court No. 4, Philadelphia, handed down a voluminous opinion in which he refused to grant an injunction to The Lubin Palace Company for the Palace Theatre, 1214-16-18 Market street.

The company asked for the injunction to restrain the enforcement against it of the building laws required in the fire protection of all playhouses. The Palace wished to be exempt from the theatre laws, but as it uses vaudeville in addition to motion pictures, the Judge ruled that it must comply with theatre laws regarding license, construction and protection of buildings.

The decision also declares the law of 1913 passed in the interests of moving picture, vaudeville houses to be exempt from theatre laws to be a nullity while moving picture houses pure and simple are not within the scope of this decision, any place "for public entertainments where stage scenery and apparatus are employed" comes within the prohibition of the statute.

THREE NEW MEMBERS CHOSEN ON OREGON CENSOR BOARD

Mrs. E. B. Colwell, for the last five or six years serving on the Portland, Ore., board of censors, has been appointed as secretary of that board with a salary of $100 per month. Mrs. Millie Trumbell, also a faithful worker on the board, has resigned on account of press of other duties, and a new appointment has been made to fill her place.

Sol Baum, manager of the Star Theatre, and Wm. T. Norton, manager of the National Film Company, have been added to the board. This makes seven members in all, and carries out the desired plan of having an exhibitor and exchange man on the board.

SNAKE OWNER LOSES SUIT AGAINST THANHOUSER

Michael Schlesser, of 29 East 133rd street, New York City, who asked $1,600 damages from the Thanhouser Film Corporation for the death of a python, brought his case before a jury in the Supreme Court Tuesday, March 30. The jury found for the defendant.

Schlesser testified that he was employed to provide animals and reptiles for use in the pictures. He said the studio was not kept warm enough for the snake, which caught cold and died. James Durkin, who was then connected with Thanhouser, testified that the plaintiff was responsible for the care of the snake, and the jury agreed with him.

FIGHT FILMS BARRED BY FEDERAL LAW

Although Jack Johnson may have received a big sum for his work at Havana, neither he nor the winner will reap profits from the exhibition of the moving pictures of the battle in this country, it is declared. The federal statute, which was passed shortly after the negro defeated Jeffries at Reno, prohibits the interstate shipment of such films.

W. D. McGuire, Jr., secretary of the National Board of Censorship, said that he did not think it would be possible to ship the films by boat from Havana to New York and exhibit them in this state. He was positive that the board, though it has no legal powers, could prevent them from being shown.

ARREST EMPLOYES IN OHIO TOWN

Four motion picture theatre owners of Warren, Ohio, and twenty-two of their employes were arrested on March 28, Sunday, when they attempted to open their places of business.

This was the beginning of a crusade started by the county prosecuting attorney, who says he will not permit Sunday operation of moving picture theatres.

MRS. ERSKINE, "THE EDISON MOTHER," HAS BAD FALL

Mrs. Wallace Erskine, the "Edison Mother," fell down the full length of the elevated stairway at Twenty-third street and Third avenue, New York, not long ago, sustaining painful injuries to her ankle.

She was taken home in a taxi, but, despite the physician's orders, was on hand next day, riding back and forth in an auto and bravely taking her parts in an unfinished picture to save the company from suffering a delay.

"DEVIL" WELL RECEIVED IN SUNSET STATE CAPITAL

Special to Motion Picture News

Sacramento, Cal., April 5.

"The Devil," one of the Mutual Masterpictures, was recently shown at a special exhibition to seventy-five newspaper men, many exhibitors and members of the state legislature at the Strand Theatre, after the regular performance.

All the newspapers represented commented favorably on the production. The managers who saw it were so impressed that many repeat bookings as well as first bookings resulted.

"The Devil" is now playing to crowded houses on the Turner and Dahnken circuit.

ALEXANDER TO APPEAR IN KRITERION PICTURES

Edward Alexander is one of the latest acquisitions of Kriterion pictures. Mr. Alexander was widely known as a leading man in stock companies some years ago, the New England States being the locality where he was most popular.

For the past two years he has been playing leads with the Rex Brand, Universal pictures. He is now appearing as the lead in the dramatic company of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture, where he plays opposite Fritzi Brunette.

Detroit Faces Crisis in Blocking Unfa

Exhibitors Called Upon Exchanges to Refuse Films to Manager [illegible] System—Told That Compliance with Request Meant Violating Anti-T[illegible]

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, Mich., April 7.

SHOULD or should not the exhibitor have the right to dictate to the film exchanges in the matter of whom they shall sell? That is the question now being thrashed out in the city of Detroit.

For many months, exhibitors in Michigan have made a determined effort to wipe out the system of premiums, coupons, and the showing of more than three and five reels at five and ten cents, respectively.

In one particular up-state town, a large exhibitor, operating two houses, has continued to use the coupon system, believing that he has a full right to conduct his business as he sees fit. One of his competitors has also been using the coupon system.

Many Detroit exhibitors recently called on the manager of the Detroit film exchange, supplying this up-state exhibitor and demanded that he withdraw service. The film manager said the responsibility did not rest upon his shoulders, but that he would gladly write the New York office for instructions.

He did so and received a reply that as long as the man paid his bills and was willing to use the service, he should be supplied. That to acquiesce with the [illegible] troit exhibitors in cutting off his service would simply be in violence of the Sherman anti-trust law.

As a consequence, seventeen exhibitors in Detroit notified this film manager that after February 1 they would all drop using his company's service unless meanwhile he would accede to their demands. Again he refused, "standing pat," according to instructions from the home office.

When the time came, the exhibitors who threatened to discontinue carried out their ultimatum. But still the film manager "stood pat." A few days later, some of the exhibitors resumed service, and each day since, these exhibitors, with the exception of a handful, have applied for service.

In order to put himself in the right light, this particular manager, for obvious reasons, gives the following views on this subject:

"We take the stand that if a man has contracted for service and pays his bills we must protect him when a condition of this kind comes up. We exchange men do not believe in too many reels, yet we cannot in justice to ourselves dictate to an exhibitor the number he should run.

"This mater of price maintenance has come up in the higher courts time and time again, in every case the decision handed down being that no manufacturer or jobber of any product has the right to dictate at what price or under what conditions the retailer should sell it.

"I would very much like to see every Michigan exhibitor give only three reels for five cents and not more than five for ten cents, to cut out premiums and the system of coupons, but it is not up to me or any film exchange to dictate these things. We feel that to join with the exhibitors in cutting off the service of this up-state exhibitor, because of his giving coupons would be absolutely in restraint of trade.

This matter is one that should be handled entirely by the exhibitors themselves. It is purely an exhibitors' proposition and does not concern us. The exchange men should not be brought into their controversies."

Projection Machines in Constant Use at All Important Industrial Exhibits of Panama-Pacific Exposition—Selig Wild Animals on Exhibition

San Francisco, April 5.

THE importance of the motion picture in the industrial world today has never been as strikingly illustrated perhaps as at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, where no less than twenty-five projecting machines are in use every day throughout the grounds.

The Precision Machine Company has placed a very elaborate showing in the Palace of Education, where two models of its projecting machines are installed in a plate glass operating room, in connection with a small theatre. The display was installed under the personal supervision of J. E. Robin, sales manager of the company, and it is attracting attention by its complete equipment.

A. W. Atwater, sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company, has been at the exposition for several weeks superintending the installation of an exhibition by the company and supervising the installation of a number of machines in other exhibits. The exhibit of the Power company will be in charge of Mr. Horn.

"Filmland" is a concession on the Zone owned by Groumann Feature Players, Inc., where there is a motion picture theatre, studio, and miniature laboratories.

The Groumann organization, capitalized at $500,000, has the exclusive right for making motion pictures inside the exposition grounds, and a company headed by Jesse Dandy, original star of "The Prince of Pilsen," and recently with the Keystone Players, has been organized. This will be directed by Will Nigh, formerly with the California Motion Picture Company.

Comedies with exposition settings as backgrounds, and including scenes of big events and written around eminent visitors, will be made. The World Film Corporation has contracted for the exclusive rights to all of these pictures, and will release one each week.

Walter Griffith, late of the Universal forces, has been placed in charge of the twelve camera men employed by the company, and the general management of the organization and concession is in charge of George A. Collins. The officers of the company are D. J. Groumann, president; E. N. Walter, vice-president and treasurer; C. J. Ward, business manager, and L. M. Conklin, secretary.

Another concession of the Zone is the Selig Jungle and Arena, where wild animals from the Selig Jungle Zoo at Los Angeles, perform. The collection consists of seven leopards in charge of Princess Olga; Captain Hiltbrunner with seven trained tigers; Sultana, the educated horse and her school of six Shetland ponies, and four Selig elephants. This exhibition constantly draws huge crowds.

Motion picture projecting machines are used in the "Yellowstone Park" and "Grand Canon" concessions on the Zone, in all of the exhibitions by the dozen or more railroad companies, numerous State exhibitions, and are used in connection with the displays of Sweden, Argentina, Italy, Netherlands, Bolivia, Australia, Norway, New Zealand, Japan, and other nations.

STATIC CLUB BANQUET A SUCCESS

The second annual banquet of the Static Club, given at one of the most popular down town Los Angeles cafes Tuesday evening, March 30, was a most pleasant event, attended by a majority of the members of the club, who entertained as their guests some of the prominent studio people of the West Coast, including David Horsley, Isidore Bernstein, H. P. Caulfield, Carlyle Blackwell, Charles Swickard, Walter Edwards, Ken O'Hara, Raymond B. West, Al E. Christie, Reginald Barker, Charles Giblyn and others. The banquet was in charge of President Edward G. Ullman, S. S. Norton, Billy Pritz, Will Foster and H. A. Scott. The guests voted the occasion an enjoyable one.

Gotham Film to Feature Lightweight Champion

Willie Ritchie Signs Contract for $25,000 to Appear in a Stirring Picture Story Entitled "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan" Will Release It in Sixty Days

WILLIE RITCHIE, lightweight champion of America, has been engaged to play the lead in a new six-reel film to be released within the next sixty days by the Gotham Film Company, 225 Fifth avenue, New York City. The picture is entitled "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan," by Helen Van Campen, and the story has already appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post."

The scenario is being written by Junie McCree, and is to be produced by Mr. Mahony, late of the Mutual Film Company and various other well known concerns. Richie in the lead has been secured on an exclusive contract by the Gotham Film Company for $25,000 for this picture. The company, in addition to this, has exclusive options for his services for other pictures which are to be produced later.

The feminine lead will be played by Betty Marshall, late understudy to Stella Mayhew in "High Jinks," and now appearing with Trentini at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. Miss Marshall's theatrical experience reaches over a period of five years.

The Gotham Film Company is owned by M. W. Taggart and Bernard Levey. Mr. Taggart is president of the Brunswick Advertising Agency, of 225 Fifth avenue, and has had years of experience in the advertising and theatrical circles. Bernard Levey has been connected with the Western Vitagraph Company and The Jack Crosby Company, California, and has just returned from the coast, where he has successfully put on several large pictures.

The company has just closed a long lease on one of the well known studios, and is now making arrangements for an outside studio in the East.

The next release of the Gotham Film Company is to be a six reel baseball feature written by a well known sporting writer, featuring one of the best known baseball stars in the country.

In addition to this the company has about completed arrangements to undertake the production for a weekly serial of adventure pictures, featuring Miss Marshall in various sensational melodramatic situations.

The stories are taken from well known magazines, and the various synopses are now in preparation, and bid fair to outrival the various serial pictures heretofore shown.

Peter Posters Can Be Used with All "Mystery" Parts

Thanhouser Company Brings Out Paper Designed by Well-Known Artist for Use with Popular Thriller Featuring Marguerite Snow

THAT the Thanhouser Syndicate never neglects the trade aid so essential to the exhibitor is clearly illustrated by the new and novel line of paper this company is getting out in conjunction with "The $20,000,000 Mystery."

From the inspection of this picture it was decided to give the exhibitor a new line of paper far superior to any picture paper produced. Accordingly arrangements were made with George Peters, who is one of the best-known poster artists in the country, to do the sketches for this thriller.

Peters, it will be remembered, established a new era in posters when he entered the motion picture field, as it was he who first deviated from the old way of taking a still picture and made it do the work as a subject for a poster. His striking use of colors and the sensational manner in which he plays up his action without deviating from the subject in hand has made his signature, "GP" on posters stand for something. The exhibitor has come to know this as a sign of quality.

A striking example of novelty in the poster line is shown in the new six-sheet of the Thanhouser company, made up in conjunction with episode seventeen of "The $20,000,000 Mystery." The poster, contrary to the usual six-sheet, is not made up of one subject but instead has a grouping of six heads representing the stars in the production.

The artistic and striking arrangements of these heads of James Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Harry Benham, Sidney Bracy, Frank Farrington and Mary Elizabeth Forbes form a layout which is distinctly original and unique.

Another good feature of this striking poster is the fact that it can be used for all the succeeding episodes of the "Mystery," as it applies to the whole series as well as to the current release.

Thanhouser's "Falstaff" Comedies Appear April 16

A Plea for "Natural" Comedy as Against Slapstick, Says Producer in Explaining New Brand—First Release "The Actor and the Rube"

THE guns are now set in New Rochelle for the first release of Edwin Thanhouser's new brand, "Falstaff."

This is to be a one-reel release every Friday, and will always be a comedy.

"I maintain," says Mr. Thanhouser, "that comedy can be made which will endure in spite of all kinds of fads and crazes. I mean the natural comedy, the story that is more than an excuse for circus antics. That, to me, is the staple idea, and I am going to follow it out in the Falstaff comedies. I have always sympathized with the theatre man who plays up a picture on the reputation of a star without seeing the film, and then is forced to make explanations to his audience.

"I shall content myself, in Falstaff comedies, to entertain. I am not promising to throw audiences into convulsions, because I might do that only some times. I am only promising a real, amusing picture of high class that will always be welcome, never vulgar, and every release at least as good as its predecessor."

The first Falstaff release, "The Actor and the Rube," is scheduled for Friday, April 16. Others will follow at regular intervals. They will be different from the average.

ELLIS, OF MUTUAL SCENARIO, DIES IN HOLLYWOOD

"HEARTS IN EXILE"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

GENERALLY speaking, it is unsafe and unwise to be dogmatic in passing judgment on a motion picture, but one is quite within the bounds of good judgment in saying, flat-footed, that "Hearts in Exile" is a good picture. For it is based on a good story. There you have it.

After all, the story is the thing. One doesn't realize the importance of the story until he sees one of the very few pictures, such as "Hearts in Exile," which have a gripping yet original plot. The contrast between such a picture and the others which seemed good at the time they were séen is remarkable. The difference leaves a deep impression.

Of scarcely less importance is the appearance of Clara Kimball

HOPE AND PAUL IN SIBERIA

Young in the stellar role, that of Hope Ivanovna. The excellent work of the producer, James Young, furnishes Russian atmosphere which will pass muster.

Now here's the story, as adapted by Owen Davis from the book by John Oxenham, muchly condensed:

Hope Ivanovna, a veritable lily of the Russian snows, is coveted by three men, Serge Palma, a wealthy aristocrat; Paul Pavloff, a poor student and Count Nicolai, a police officer of high rank. The first two are in sympathy with Hope's life work, helping the poor. Hope accepts Serge that her work may not be hampered by lack of money.

The police chief, on trumped up charges, railroads the husband to Siberia for fifteen years and Paul to the provinces for five years. Paul and Serge meet on their way to their prisons. Paul, through his high, sincere love for Hope, exchanges identities and sentences with Serge.

Hope finds out where her husband was sent and makes the journey to join him. On her arrival she finds not her husband but her sweetheart. It would mean death to all if the deception was discovered so she remains in Siberia as Paul's wife. Paul, by the way, being the prison doctor, had a special cottage and privileges.

Paul and Hope, hearing that Serge is dead, secretly marry. Then Serge himself appears, having escaped from the provinces. When Hope and Paul protest that they believed him dead, Serge believes in their honesty and all three attempt to escape by sled. They are pursued by Cossacks and Serge is killed. Hope and Paul escape and live to lay a reverential wreath on the dead man's grave.

Many of the snow scenes have all the beauty and depth of painting. The dramatic values, strong as they are, are well brought out.

Most important in the supporting cast are Montague Love as the chief of police, Claude Fleming as Serge, Vernon Steele as Paul, and Miss Selwynne as Madame Romanoff, in love with the police chief.

Beautiful Clara Kimball Young is at her best as the high principled Russian girl, who escapes the houndings of fate and arrives at ultimate happiness.

"THE COLLEGE WI

(Lubin—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMA

"THE College Widow" on the screen will gain a prestige from the vogue enjoyed a few years back by comedy of that name written by George Ade. But the scenario of Clay M. Greene and the fine directing of Barry O'Neil will give the photo play a popularity all its own.

Appealing as it will to college spirit and football lovers everywhere, to say nothing of the love story with its thrilling climax, the picture must necessarily be of great interest.

The story of how Atwater College in despair at its loss of football prestige, adopts desperate measures to recoup its team and what came of this forms the main theme of the play.

Jane Witherspoon, daughter of Atwater's president, "The College Widow," urged by Jack Lanabu, Atwater's coach, uses her patent charm to win Billy Bottin from rival Bingham to Atwater's team. The plot succeeds too well, for Jane at last loses her heart to Bill, and Jack loving her madly himself is caught in his own trap, as he later discovers.

When the big game is over and Billy after turning defeat into victory is widely acclaimed the hero of the hour, he wants to tell Jane of his love but, learning of her duplicity is about to leave, when Jane convinces him of her real feeling.

Poor Jack manfully braces up and a little later shows true heroism. When the noisy hilarity of the victory is at its height all adjourn to a banquet in a nearby hotel. Here a fire breaks out and gains such rapid headway that the guests leap from windows, climb down perilous ladders, swing over to nearby trees and perform other daring feats.

In the confusion Jane is trapped on a burning stairway. Billy being injured himself cannot go to her rescue, but Jack, the discarded lover, in spite of vigorous protests that he is going to his death fights his way through the flames to rescue the girl he loves and give her to his rival. The burning of the hotel is full of thrills and one wonders how even the most persuasive director can get his people to take such risks. In this case many received injuries and several of the girls fainted.

Ethel Clayton as Jane, and Ferdinand Tidmarsh as Jack were rescued from real peril when the staircase gave away and they almost fell in the fire beneath them, kindled to give realism to the scene.

In the earlier scenes Ethel Clayton has only to act the vivacious college flirt, and when caught in the burning building a chance for good emotional acting is well done.

George Soule Spencer looks and acts the college hero to the life as Billy Bolten; Ferdinand Tidmarsh rescues his lady love in true heroic manner without resorting to melodramatic methods.

Rosetta Brice and Arthur Matthews have good character parts as the landlady's over-dressed daughter and the bashful country freshman. In fact, the long cast are all good even the minor characters being in capable hands.

This is to be one of the first big features which Lubin is to release direct to the exhibitors. It is bound to make an instant hit.

"PROHIBITION"

(Prohibition Film—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

"PROHIBITION," as its name implies, is a picture with a purpose. Unlike many other bits of screen propaganda it has a real story. This, together with the many striking scenes, the endorsement of the picture by the many notable persons who appear on the screen, and the very nature of the picture itself combine to make it a distinctive production and one which should appeal to the workers for prohibition and the practical showman.

Among the national figures who were specially photographed for this picture, most of them appearing in scenes of the story, are: Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, Senator Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama, and the following United States Senators: Shafroth of Colorado, Vardeman of Mississippi, Wesley L. Jones of Washington, Henry T. Ashurst of Arizona, Moses E. Clapp of Missouri, Morris Sheppard of Texas, and Works of California. Getting men of their prominence to appear in a motion picture is no small feat and there is no doubt but that their presence lends weight to the message of the film.

The story lies in the transformation for the worse by drink of William Irving and Lemuel Larkin and their subsequent regeneration and return to high position in society.

A counterplot tells of the attempt of Benjamin Larkin to make a drunkard of his brother Richard, to come between Richard and his sweetheart, Hattie Holmes, and to lay a murder at Richard's door. Two love stories add the gentle touch to the picture.

Several times during the picture Mephistopheles and the Demon of Rum suddenly appear to goad their victims on. The Angel of Prohibition and Intelligence prove stronger powers for the good, though. Among the striking scenes are the runaway horse with the human freight in grave peril, several realistic fist-fight scenes, the big court room scene when Richard is acquitted and the allegorical scenes showing the Drink Octopus sapping the blood of its grovelling victims.

IRVING, REFORMED, RUNS FOR GOVERNOR

The most prominent players are Thurlow Bergan as William Irving, David Wall as Lemuel Larkin, Virginia Westbrook as Hattie Holmes, Charles Trowbridge as Richard Larkin, Charles Dow Clark as Benjamin Larkin, and Mary Moore as Mrs. Lemuel Larkin.

Others in the cast are Roberta Paine, the Angel of Prohibition; Lila Barclay, Intelligence; Mario Maroney, Mephistopheles; Edward Nannery, the Demon Rum; Maude Westbrook, Abigail Holmes; Della Trado, Hattie Holmes at the age of twelve; Mae Georgine, Hattie's aunt, and Margaret Vollmer, Jane Jones.

When one takes into consideration the unusual nature of this picture, the prominent persons who are its sponsors and its excellence as a motion picture, which is the really important part after all, it is easy to see that it makes an attractive proposition for the real showman.

The picture was made by the Photodrama Motion Picture Company for the Prohibition Film Company. It looks like another "Traffic in Souls."

"THE COMMANDING OFFICER"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

A DRAMA of military life which will rank high among screen productions is "The Commanding Officer," an adaptation of a Frohman play which long held the boards in New York. The scenes are strong with tense action, and the plot, though apparently involved at first, is developed to a simple and satisfying conclusion.

The influence of children on the life of their elders pervades the story. Two helpless little tots suddenly become charges on their uncle, an army officer, whose bachelor mode of life is quite unsuited to bringing up children. Delicate comedy is introduced in scenes in which the distracted bachelor wonders what to do with the mischievous imps. They get into his things and make the poor man's room look as if it had been struck by a cyclone.

But their antics, except in one instance, are harmless and endear the chirping mites to the whole army post. Their curly heads, glad faces and artless laughter brighten the lives of everybody. Paternal feelings are even awakened in the breasts of hardened bachelor officers, who vaguely regret not having become staid family men—provided their children were like the little innocents sent to lighten the dreary monotony of prosaic days in a wilderness outpost.

The ingenuous play of the children furnishes one of the most dramatic moments of the film. They are in their uncle's room peering under tables and chairs, investigating the contents of closets, turning over papers and documents—in short they are fully embarked on a juvenile voyage of discovery so disconcerting to adults. The lad finds an automatic pistol, loaded, and little realizing the deadly possibilities of this curious, newfound plaything, points it at his sister. With breathless suspense the audience watches every move of the child, and the realism of the youngster's acting fairly makes the heart stop beating. Of course, the uncle arrives in time to gain possession of the automatic and prevent a horrible tragedy. Unconscious of the awful fate hanging over his sister in those few terrible moments, the child gives his uncle the pistol with smiling assent. A close-up showing the officer extracting the cartridges from the magazine of the weapon adds to the effectiveness of the direction in this scene.

The same sense of clever direction on the part of Allan Dwan is illustrated in numerous other stirring incidents. The children, Master Francis Carpenter and Mistress Olive Johnson, live up to the dignity of having their names printed on the program with the rest of the cast.

Alice Dovey's work as Floyd Bingham, the misunderstood wife, is impressive with its superb finish.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Six)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EACH week as "The Black Box" advances over two thousand feet of film, its nature becomes increasingly mysterious as it does more interesting. The terrible, hidden personality, as termed in this episode, "The Unseen Terror," continues to baffle even the quick wit and scientific devices of Sanford Quest and his assistants, and their ever increasing danger furnishes a source of constant agitation on the part of the spectator.

The prehistoric ape man which was introduced in the first few episodes is supposedly burned to death, yet the chances are that he is still alive, and that it is he who is bringing such dire calamity on the heads of Quest's faction. Then again, the guilty actions of Craig, the servant of professor Ashleigh, and the queer aspect of the professor himself, are both open to suspicion.

But whoever is the culprit, the unseen owner of the two clutching hands which are forever striking terror into the hearts of Quest, Lenora and Laura, his identity has yet to be revealed, and from all appearances his concealment is to be played upon to arouse excitement in the mind of the observer until the serial nears its completion.

Among the several important events that transpire in these two reels is the fact that Quest clears himself of the charges of murder which the police department brought against him. Then, at the servants' club, where he has gone to attempt to discover something about Craig, he is caught by a fire.

His escape from the burning building, via a rope and the telephone wires, is of a sensational nature. In the meantime Lenora has been rescued from her place of imprisonment by the police.

At Quest's home the detective himself finds another note in a mysterious black box, telling him to exercise a little intelligence in his search for Mrs. Reinholdt's jewels, and dropping the hint that they might be in a certain drawer of the desk.

Quest looks in the given place and the jewels which all thought were stolen are reposing there.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé Episode—Fifteen)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE Clutching Hand has disappeared from the life of Elaine, but unknown to her and Craig Kennedy, her fiance, his baleful influence still remains, and she is by no means as safe as she supposes. The beginning of fresh trouble is set forth in this thrilling instalment, which gives promise of adventures fully as exciting as those which have gone before.

KENNEDY OVERCOME BY THE DEADLY GAS

The cast of the new series is the same as in the original one, th two exceptions. Sheldon Lewis is no longer a member, but ere is an important addition in Edwin Arden, a widely known gitimate actor who will play the role of Wu Fang, the great inese criminal whose twisted but brilliant mind plans schemes en more startling than those of the Clutching Hand. Pearl White continues in her charming interpretation of Two [illegible] the co[illegible] stroll, and [illegible] Arnold Daly remains as Craig Kennedy, a role which h[illegible]oles qua[illegible] one of great strength and appeal.

Knowing that Bennett left a fortune concealed somewhere Kennedy and his friend Jameson look through his papers but fail to find anything more than a picture of a fireplace in a house formerly owned by him, but now the property of Elaine's Aunt Tabby. Long Sin, who has the paper for which they are looking, is under the control of the great criminal Wu Fang, but has as yet told him nothing of the paper.

Elaine on a visit to her aunt hears strange noises and sees a man trying to enter the house. She sends for Kennedy, who discovers Long Sin at work on a safe in a secret passage under the house. The detective and Jameson are overcome by a deadly gas in the safe, but thanks to Elaine's extraordinary pluck they are saved and the Chinaman driven away. Instead of a fortune or a clue to one Wu Fang finds only a mystic ring in the box which the safe contains. The picture is filled with thrills, and is a sure hit in any theatre.

"NIOBE"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is quite some time since Hazel Dawn made her initial appearance on the screen in the Famous Players feature, "One of Our Girls," but the interim between that picture and "Niobe" is not so long that she has been forgotten by the many who admired her in that pleasing comedy-drama. Her return to the screen is most assuredly an event to remember with the greatest of pleasure, for in "Niobe" her performance is delightful.

Miss Dawn appears as the statue Niobe which comes to life in this enlightened age, through the dream of a congenial old man, who is henpecked by his sister-in-law. The situations which follow are extremely funny, and are made the most of both by Miss Dawn, as the dazed animated statue and Charles Abbe, who appears as the fearsome Peter Amos Dunn.

Mr. Abbe is an exceptionally able comedian, and would make the picture well worth while by himself, but two such capable principals as Mr. Abbe and Miss Dawn invest the production with such a magnetism that the result is doubly pleasing.

S. L. Rothapfel, of the Strand Theatre, New York, at whose house the picture was shown the week of April 4, prepared a delightful musical program to accompany the picture. Selections from "The Pink Lady" and "The Debutante," musical pieces in which Miss Dawn starred on the speaking stage, were most appropriate, as indeed was the entire program.

Photographically the picture is fine. The light effects are most pleasing, and the scenes, both interiors and exteriors, are very beautiful.

Those scenes coming in the first reel showing the ancient history of Niobe, the manner in which she was turned to stone, et cetera, are very well put on, and the earthquake which sends a temple crashing down about the heads of the Romans is an excellent bit.

THE OUTLAW'S REVENGE"

(Mutual Masterpictures—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IF the lives of all notorious men were blessed with as much dramatic incident as these four reels outlining part of the life of General Pancho Villa, there would be little doubt as to their immediate and successful adaptation to the screen. Very likely in the course of the transfer of this gentleman's early manhood from actual life to the celluloid, events have been somewhat altered to suit the requirements of a pictured drama, yet the fact remains that without realities even the supplemented craft of the director and scenario writer would appear unconvincing.

As the early incidents of his career are unfolded on the screen, they assume the shape of pathetic and thrilling story, until at its conclusion the deepest sympathy is felt for the man, General Villa.

THE OUTLAW IN HIS ENEMY'S POWER

Through the greedy lusts of two Federal officers he loses both his sisters, and thereafter he is branded an outlaw, because of his attempt to avenge their death. But he finds others in the same position, and his activities on the film cease not until he has taken life for life and killed his two enemies.

W. Christy Cabanne has produced the picture in a manner which clearly shows his realization of the highest properties productive of suspense. Assisted by one of the best selections of Reliance players obtainable, he has practically made the different characters human. Again by a careful appreciation of expressional values he has completely done away with the sometimes tiresome vision or reminiscent scene.

In the battle scenes as well, of which there are not a few, the utmost realism prevails. The supernumeraries are obviously trained to an understanding of their roles, however small they may be. The falling from the horses seems more thrilling than ever, and it is hardly conceivable that some of these sensational falls resulted in anything short of fatalities.

R. A. Walsh is to be seen as Villa, and he is very successful in making the role appear human and convincing. Irene Hunt and "Teddy" Sampson have short yet difficult parts as his sisters, and acquit themselves most creditably. Mae Marsh and Robert Harron are good as the American lovers, and Eagle Eye is Villa's faithful servant. Walter Long and W. E. Lawrence make the Federal officers villainous.

Photographically the picture is excellent, and in the realism of locations nothing could be better, as they were in most instances filmed in Mexico. As advertised the real identity of the central character is given as General Villa, but the film itself leaves this to the imagination.

"BETWEEN THE TWO OF THEM"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PAST performances at the Vitagraph Theatre, New York, have well demonstrated the fact that Sidney Drew is fully capable of causing a Broadway audience to rock with mirth at his comedies, whether they be in one or two reels. In "Between the Two of Them" he has turned his attentions to more serious work, and although burdened with a slightly hackneyed story, he has produced a picture which is as good in a dramatic sense as his more frequent offerings have been in the way of comedy.

Mr. Drew takes the part of a playwright, but not one addicted to extraordinary feelings of jealousy toward his wife. When all things point to her as leading a deceitful life, he naturally forms conclusions, which are not at all nice. Finally he suffers an awakening and realizes that instead of possessing a hypocritical wife, he is blessed with a mate who is responsible for his success.

As the playwright, Mr. Drew gives an expressive performance at all times. He is natural, and lends to the part his own particular individuality, which gives the entire production an aspect of distinction, sufficient to counterbalance its conventional theme.

Mrs. Sidney Drew appears to decided advantage as his wife, especially in those scenes in which she is suffering the undeserved wrong inflicted on her by her suspicious husband. Paul Scardon appears as the dramatic critic, who innocently comes near wrecking the happy home of the playwright and his wife. Mary Maurice, always good, is seen as Margery's mother, and Courtlandt Van Deusen is a detective.

"Between the Two of Them" is practically sure of success, and such being the case, we hope to see more Sidney Drew dramas in the future. Shannon Fife is the author of this selection.

"THE POETIC JUSTICE OF OMAR KHAN"

(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

IT is a pretty rigorous brand of justice Omar Khan deals out, but inasmuch as the horrible fate of the evildoers was never made known to any one but him, and as his actions insured the future happiness of the others who had not been getting as much pleasure out of life as they deserved, he may have been justified in what he did.

Anyhow, it makes an interesting and quite unusual story, which with the aid of the Selig Western company's ability, through appropriate costumes and settings to produce a perfectly realistic Oriental picture adapts itself well to the screen.

The desert scenes in this production are particularly beautiful. The cast is made up of Guy Oliver, Stella Razeto, Eugenie Besserer, Harry Davies and Fred Huntley. Guy Oliver is very good in the role of Omar Khan.

IN AMIR PASHA'S HAREM

The story was written by James Oliver Curwood. Neva, the wife of Philip Hyde, an American attache in the Orient, plans to leave her husband and elope with Harcourt, a man she is infatuated with. Neva's cousin Joan, who loves her cousin-in-law dearly, discovers this, and goes to Philip's faithful friend, Omar Khan, with the information.

Omar captures the eloping couple, and takes them far inland to the desert stronghold of Amir Pasha. Here Harcourt is turned loose to die in the desert waste, and Neva is delivered to the harem of Amir Pasha. These two disposed of, in the years that follow Philip grows to love his cousin-in-law, Joan, who has comforted him after the loss of his wife. Eventually they marry and live happily, much to the joy of Omar Khan.

"A DELAYED REFORMATION"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMAN

If people in novels, plays and pictures acted with the commonsense of real life there would not be so many misunderstandings and heart burnings. But without such there could be no exciting films, so what would you?

Shannon Fife has made interesting and melodramatic use of the old story of a wife trying to help an erring brother without letting her husband into the secret. Sterling as a consequence is suspicious of his wife's actions, but not without seeming reason, as he discovers an ambiguous note from a money lender, which Bess will not explain satisfactory.

THE DISCUSSION OF CRIMINALS REACHES A CLIMAX

When the crucial moment arrives, however, the conscience-stricken brother takes on himself a theft to save his sister's reputation, and is hauled off to prison, before she finds courage to explain. Ere long the tangled skein of mystery is unwound and Sid Rand's complete reformation, which caused all the misery, is an accomplished fact.

Joseph Smiley does good work as director and visualizes his role of the Magistrate Sterling to the life.

"THE POET OF THE PEAKS"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

As usual, the "Poet of the Peaks" is an example of perfect photography and excellent photographic effects. The fade-ins used in portraying the story of a Keats poem and in relating the past of the heartless coquette are most effective, adding much to the interest of the picture. The mountain scenes are beautiful and the interior settings are well done throughout.

Her natural charm enhanced by many beautiful becoming gowns makes Vivian Rich most convincing in the role of Lydia Lovell, an irresistible vampire. The others in the cast are Harry Von Meter, Jack Richardson, David Lythgoe and Louise Lester.

Lydia goes to a shooting lodge in the mountains, where she runs across Dane Strong, a youthful poet of ability who lives in a lonely cabin among the peaks. This romantic young man at once interests her and she uses all her charms to arouse his love.

Strong is completely captivated, heedless of the warnings of his friend that Lydia is a heartless, social butterfly. The friend attempts to enlighten Strong to the true character of the temptress by reading one of Keats' poems that is analogous to his case of infatuation.

To no avail, however, and Strong blindly follows Lydia to the city, where amid the noise and dirt the quality of his work quickly wanes. He is again warned against the girl. This time her many previous affairs with other men are told to his unheeding ears. Finally, after asking Lydia to marry him and return to the mountains he overhears her making fun of his love to her friends, and not until then does he realize the truth of the warnings.

Disillusioned, he goes back to his lonely cabin. Here before his maddened brain appears the phantom form of Lydia. He follows this to the edge of the cliff, loses his balance and falls to his death below.

"RUNAWAY JUNE"

(Reliance—Instalment Thirteen)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

In this number entitled "Trapped," June in her desperate efforts to free herself from the obdurate man with the black Van Dyke, runs into an even greater danger, besides which Blye's harmless advances seem like child's play.

On one of the Bermudian islands a venerable mystic, resembling in character a Persian Shah, and in garb an ancient Athenian, rules over a court of beautiful maidens.

In escaping from Blye, June takes refuge in a boat owned by a half-wit. When this gentleman has plied his craft far out upon the water he discovers the presence of June, and attempts to embrace her. A struggle ensues and both June and her oppressor are thrown into the water.

One of the maidens in the service of Hierophant, the mystic, sees our heroine's predicament, and we glimpse her from a distance, taking a high dive into the water. She swims to June's rescue and takes her to the island.

Here June is commanded to render a dance before the evil mystic, minus her clothing, at which she strenuously objects. She is about to consent, however, being threatened with torture, when Ned arrives on the scene accompanied by two sailors.

A fight ensues in which the rescue party are worsted, but June manages to escape with another girl, and Blye comes to the rescue.

The company should have been more careful concerning the introduction of familiar players of the serial in this episode. They are supposed to be different characters, but the resemblance is marked.

"O-18" OR "A MESSAGE FROM THE SKY"

(Cosmofotofilm—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

Here is a girl spy picture with a sensible plot. Jane Gail, who plays the leading role, doesn't have things all her own way as girl spies too often do upon the screen. She is a stenographer working for two alien merchants, in whose office she and a secret service man plant a dictograph.

The merchants receive a message from the sky, dropped from an aeroplane, to blow up a particular railroad bridge as a train is passing over it. The girl spy hears them plotting but is nabbed with the dictograph to her ear. The merchants chloroform her and speed her away to a country villa. Secret service agents follow her, and after numerous complications, arrive just in time to save her and then get to the railroad bridge just in time to save the train.

Jane Gail, the girl spy, is an American girl well known in Cosmofotofilm and Imp pictures. George Loane Tucker, also an American, produced the picture in England. Tucker has introduced many clever bits of business and careful detail. The continuity of the story and its probability are so apparent that it seems shorter than its four reels. This is intended to be taken as high praise.

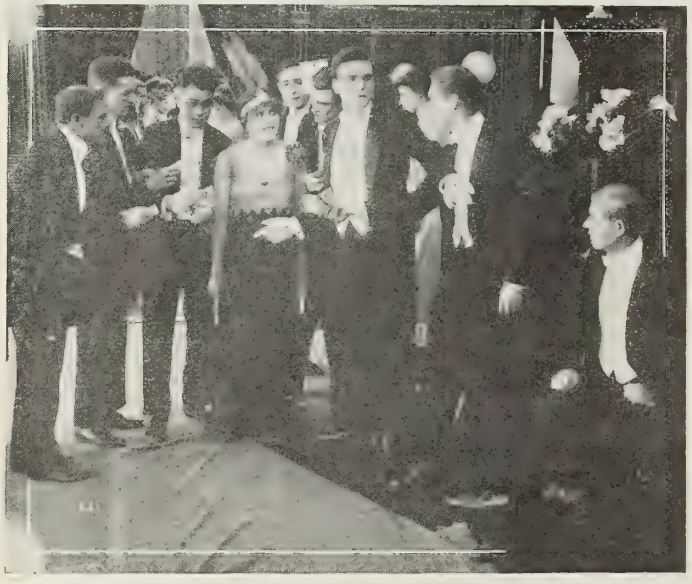
[illegible]E PURSUIT OF PLEASURE"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)



REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE second of the strong series under the general title "Who Pays?" This picture deals with an oft-discussed and undoubtedly growing problem of American life. The woman who prefers what she imagines to be pleasure to the bearing of children is the subject. The handling is frank yet entirely without anything offensive, and an important point is brought out in the emphasis placed on the influence of early environment on the girl.

As in all of the stories in this cycle the leading parts are played by Ruth Roland and Henry King. In this instance the heroine is the daughter of an austere clergyman, who frowns on all the innocent pleasures of this world in a manner fully the equal of the old-day New England leaders. He suppresses her every effort to take part in the harmless amusements of her friends, but he is defeated when she marries a young man who has a large fortune, who loves her so well that he plans to do anything which will please her.

The reaction from the life which her father had imposed on her leads the girl into a round of frivolity which is carried so far that the young husband is much disappointed while the girl's father thinks she is surely a lost soul.

Suddenly there comes a great climax which drives home to the girl the knowledge that she is throwing away her birthright, and that she and her husband cannot have true happiness until children come. Unhappily she realizes this too late. She has hardly told her husband of her views, when their new happiness is blighted by an accident, which makes it impossible for her to ever become a mother. The narrow minded father, the wife and the husband are all heart-broken.

"THE TWENTY MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"

(Thanhousuer—Last Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS episode, entitled "The Richest Woman in the World," puts an end to "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," previously known as "Zudora."

It is almost unnecessary to remark that Zudora and her champions are at last successful in putting the clever band of conspirators to rout. That group of notables headed by Madam Du Val and the captain had anticipated their final defeat, and, of course, had made everything ready for an escape.

When they see at last that there is not the slightest particle of hope, they take flight through a number of mysterious underground passages, deserted houses, and the like, and succeed in completely fooling the police, who have been notified by Baird and Hunt to be on the lookout. The last glimpse of the desperate villians is to be had when they are speeding away on a motor boat, leaving the tardy police behind.

Storm and Zudora are married amidst great rejoicing while Tom Hunt and Jim Baird are happy witnesses of the wedding.

"A DEADLY HATE"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THERE are several features of this production which combine to give it value to the exhibitor. The story is taken from the play by George Roberts. The idea of the insane brother passing as his twin might seem rather improbable, but the situation is so cleverly arranged that this objection is of no importance. The result is a story of much interest. The double exposure work in the many scenes in which Marc MacDermott appears as the two brothers is very well handled.

At the opening of the story an English peer is dying. He has two sons, Charles and John. The former is a dissolute wretch who has so far tried his father's patience that he is cut off with a nominal part of the estate. His twin brother John is engaged to his cousin Constance, and the dying man blesses the pair. John inherits the estate. Charles comes to the house for a visit and during a fit of insanity brought on by his excesses kills the family lawyer. For this he is committed to an asylum for the insane.

Later the insane brother escapes, enters his brother's house and after a fight changes clothes and throws him into a lake, supposing him to be dead. John is found by a keeper and returned to the asylum as he is taken for Charles. The keeper then commences to blackmail Charles.

Constance sees that something is wrong with her lover, but is unable to account for the mystery. Fortunately a fire at the asylum allows John to get away and he reaches his home just in time to save Constance from the horrible mistake of marrying the criminal brother. The latter is so enraged that he dies of apoplexy.

"HISTORY OF THE GREAT EUROPEAN WAR"

(Picture Playhouse—Eight Reels)

THESE pictures are divided into two series of four reels each, and their object is to give some idea of the present war in Europe. Many and varied scenes of military and naval activities in all parts of the war-stricken region are shown, but of actual fighting there is rather a scarcity.

During the course of the films all of the rulers of the contending countries are shown. The czar of Russia, the president of France and the king of England are seen reviewing troops. The emperor of Austria appears in Vienna, while the kaiser is seen at a consultation in the field. King Peter of Servia, King Albert of Belgium and the king of Montenegro are also shown among their troops.

Some very effective and beautiful views of the different sections of the allies' fleet, and a few glimpses of German warships comprise the naval section of the films. One of the scenes is captioned as being the bombardment of Paula and Cattaro by the allied fleet.

Various types of aircraft are clearly shown.

"THE RETURN OF MAURICE DONNELLY"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Vitagraph Company issues this picture as an appeal for the abolishment of capital punishment.

We see an innocent young man convicted of murder on the "fixed" evidence brought forward by a corrupt band. He is sentenced to the chair, and suffers an unjust fate, there being no pardon arriving at the crucial moment, and no member of the band wounded in a gun fight to "confess with his last breath."

The story is terrible, nerve-racking, and it presents a lasting appeal against capital punishment. Then comes an unexpected episode, brought in perhaps to take away the bad taste of the supposedly terminated story.

DONNELLY BIDS HIS MOTHER GOODBYE

The dead man is taken to a physician, who, by the aid of electricity, restores him to life. Then comes the forced confession of the gang, and a "married and lived happily ever after" ending is the result.

It is our opinion and that of several others who saw the picture that it would have been much stronger if the end had come with the execution of the man. The picture would fulfill its mission to better advantage if such were the case, and its punch would be considerably stronger.

Leo Delany is excellent at all times as the doomed and later the happy man, who is born again, as it were. Leah Baird presents a performance of varied merit as his lawyer and later his wife. Mary Maurice has several difficult scenes to go through before her son takes the chair, and acquits herself very well in all of them. Others in the cast are Denton Vane, Daniel Hayes, Josephine Earle and Anders Randolph.

The picture is faithful in realism. The photography is good.

DRAMATIC CRITICS TO GIVE DINNER IN HONOR OF LUBIN

SIEGMUND LUBIN, head of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, will have a rather unusual honor conferred upon him next week when the dramatic critics of Philadelphia tender him a dinner in the Hotel Majestic. The Philadelphia critics have an organization known as The Critics' Association, of which George Rogers, of "The Inquirer," is president, and Henry Starr Richardson, of "The Evening Star," secretary.

Some months ago Mr. Lubin invited the critics to spend a day at his studio and to meet the men and women who write, direct, act and make the Lubin photoplays. They came in a body and saw everything there was to see, from an inside point of view. Mr. Lubin told them of his early days when he was experimenting in his cellar and back yard with motion pictures and then showed them some of his newest unreleased productions.

So interested were the critics in inspecting the inner workings of the motion picture industry that they unanimously accepted Mr. Lubin's invitation to visit his ranch at Betzwood and see the work that is being carried on there. At the dinner next week Mr. Lubin and the newspapermen will have a heart to heart talk on the trend of the photoplay of today.

FOX POLICY CREATES STIR IN [illegible]

THE insurance policy of $250,000 written on the life [illegible] Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, in favo[illegible] concern, has been made the subject of several full-page newspaper advertisements throughout the country by the company which issued the policy. This company is the Prudential, of Newark, N. J., one of the largest of its kind in the world.

"If Mr. Fox's place is valued at a quarter of a million dollars, what is the value of yours?" The advertisement goes on to state that the financial backers and stockholders of the Fox Film Corporation would in the event of Mr. Fox's death suffer a distinct loss by no longer having the benefit of his skill and judgment in the general management of its affairs, and that they have therefore taken this means of insuring themselves and incidentally the exhibitors of the Fox features throughout the country from the tremendous loss which would ensue in the event of Mr. Fox's demise.

"A JITNEY ELOPEMENT" IS GOOD VEHICLE FOR CHAPLIN

COUNT de Ha Ha aspires to the hand of an heiress and $1,000,000. The father of the beauteous lady pays over the million and tries to deliver the daughter. She, however, has a mind of her own, in "A Jitney Elopement," Essanay.

She drops a note from her balcony, begging to be saved from the cruel fate. Charles Chaplin picks up the note and at once enters the house and announces he is the Count de Ha Ha. He gets a royal welcome. While dining at the house, however, the real count appears. His former negotiations had been carried on by correspondence, but he proves to the satisfaction of the millionaire that he is "it."

In the ensuing battle Chaplin kicks both the count and the irate parent out of the house and flees with the girl. They find a Jitney automobile, and after dropping a nickel in the slot are off, the count, the cruel parent and several policemen in pursuit in another machine.

THE GIRL'S SWEETHEART AND THE COUNT FACE TO FACE

There is a wild race across all kinds of roads, through woods and across small creeks, in which the autos run both backwards and forwards, colliding many times. Chaplin loads his auto with bricks, and when the pursuers are too close bombards them. He knocks the policemen out into a mud puddle.

"MADE IN CANADA" FILMS SHOWN IN WINNIPEG

THE first "Made in Canada" films have made their appearance in Winnipeg at two of the local pictures theatres, and there is no doubt that if the same excellence of staging, acting and photography, and quality in general, is kept up in other productions of the "Made in Canada" variety, it will soon establish itself with the public.

The pictures portray Canada in "peace and war," showing scenes taken in some of the larger cities of the troops which were trained there previous to being sent to England.

Dallas We' "THE LONE STAR RUSH"

(Climax-Alliance—Five Reels)

Actor St— REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"THE Lone Star Rush" is melodrama and makes no pretension to anything else. And it is good melodrama. The film moves with all the swiftness expected from the action in a play of this type. While the story is avowedly sensational, the producers have observed gratifying forbearance in the use of knife and pistol scenes. In one or two places the situations, tense in the cross purposes of the principals, justified the exhibition of primitive impulses finding expression in a resort to deadly weapons.

In other incidents a producer might have given way to the easiest method of getting action in episodes demanding a strong finish. By a judicious grouping of scenes fraught with romance and adventure, Edmund Mitchell has produced an interesting play, founded on his own exciting novel depicting life in the Australian gold fields.

HARRY MURRAY ACCUSES POTOSI JIM

While the story deals fundamentally with the experiences of men who battle with the obstacles of nature in an eager pursuit of gold, a love interest has been introduced with telling effect. The heroine, a city-bred girl quite unused to the hardships of camp life, persuades the gold seekers to let her accompany them on their perilous and uncertain journey. Her presence, winsome and magnetic, helps the tired and mystified desert travelers to forget the difficulties of the undertaking. The actress in the part of the heroine plays in undeserved anonymity. Her work is creditable enough for her name to appear on the program.

The plot is somewhat hackneyed, but its treatment and the novel scenes introduced in the various reels make the picture acceptable with those who are partial to melodrama. A young man rescues a miner from death by thirst in the desert, and receives through gratitude a rough map of a rich mine located by the unfortunate man only a short period previous to the meeting. After the demise of the miner Murray starts out to find the hidden treasure, and is pursued by an unscrupulous desert rat, who manages to steal the precious document.

Some time elapses before it is regained by the rightful owner, who experiences all the killing toil of travel in a wilderness ere he finds the elusive object of his search and discovers the gold mine.

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS INC. OPENS OFFICES IN CANDLER BUILDING

RADIUM Gold Fibre screens acquire increased activity through the formation of a new company, Radium Gold Fibre Screen, Inc., which has just opened offices and projection rooms on the tenth floor of the Candler building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

The officers of Radium Gold Screen, Inc., are: President, Henry J. Brock; vice-president and general manager, Robert T. Kane, and treasurer, J. L. Kempner.

Under this corps of officers the output will be increased. The factory at East Orange, N. J., has been enlarged and plans are being drawn for a new factory which will shortly be erected to supply the Middle West. The screen itself will be improved, the coming output being "in the nature of a radium gold fibre screen de-luxe," according to General Manager Kane.

Distribution will be through the most prominent exchanges and accessory dealers as heretofore.

Frank T. Highfield has been retained as factory superintendent. Mr. Highfield has been superintending the manufacture of Radium Gold Fibre screens since the first one appeared seven years ago.

Unusual circumstances brought about the entry into the company of Henry J. Brock, the president. Mr. Brock is associated with Mitchell Mark, Moe Mark and Max Spiegel in their theatres, which include the Strand in New York City and its affiliated houses. About thirty-five high class motion picture theatres are owned and controlled by these men.

In all of these Radium Gold Fibre screens have been installed. Through this fact Mr. Brock became convinced of the excellence of the Radium Gold Fibre screen and when the opportunity presented itself he was quick to seize the chance to become a factor in the new company, of which he is president.

VITAGRAPH DANCE THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON

WHAT was one of the biggest social affairs of the film season took place on Wednesday evening, April 7, at Stauch's Dancing Palace, Coney Island, when the Vitagraph Company of America Employees' Benevolent Association held its grand annual ball.

This affair was attended by all the most prominent stars in filmdom, including all the Vitagraph Stock Company, some of whom donated large silver loving cups to be contested for during the evening by the exponents of modern dancing.

The grand march, led by Maurice Costello and Estelle Mardo, of the Vitagraph players, followed by all the other members of the company.

The officers of the association are: A. Victor Smith, president; S. M. Spedon, vice-president; Jack Evans, secretary; Richard Leslie, treasurer, and Peter La Grasse, assistant treasurer.

The arrangement committee included: Richard Leslie, Frank Nelson, Martin Hall, Frank X. Shaw, Robert Morley, William Lally and Peter Young.

The members of the floor committee were: Harry Waldron, Frank Lawrence, Phil Lally and Peter La Grasse.

"COMMUTERS" FOR RELEASE ON APRIL 26

THE Kleine offices announce the release of "The Commuters," featuring Irene Fenwick, April 26. Bookings are now being made through the various Kleine offices commencing with that date. "The Commuters" is founded on the successful stage comedy by James Forbes. A star cast includes Charles Judels in the role of "Sammy," George Le Guere as Larry Brice, Dan Moyles, Della Connor and others.

May 10 has been set as the official release date for the Kleine comedy, "Who's Who in Society." This features Della Connor, Dan Moyles, Kate Sergeantson, Will H. Powers, and other Broadway players. The subject is in four parts.

FOUR STAGE FAVORITES NOW APPEARING IN THE FILMS OF THE METRO PICTURES CORPORATION

JANE GREY EMILY STEVENS OLIVE WYNDHAM VALLI VALLI

UNITED PHOTOPLAYS SHOWS FIRST FILMS IN CHICAGO

Chicago, April 7.

THE United Photo-Plays Company, of Chicago, held the first advance showing of the Dr. George A. Dorsey pictures in E. E. Fulton's projection room very recently. Dr. Dorsey is connected with the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History, and holds the chair of Anthropology at Chicago University. He left last summer for the Far East, to take educational pictures for the United Photo-Plays Company.

The titles of the four reels shown are: "The Whaling Industry of Japan," "Pearl Diving," "Explored and Unexplored Parts of China," and "Lives and Habits of Geisha Girls."

The plan is to run these pictures at some loop in Chicago theatres, with a competent lecturer, then to book them to exhibitors throughout the country directly through the Chicago office of the United Photo-Plays Company.

This company will ultimately branch off from the production of strictly educational pictures. They later intend to combine entertainment and instruction; that is, to supply a plot to various educational pictures, thereby giving comedy and drama that will instruct and at the same time amuse.

"DOC" WILLAT ENTERTAINS BROCKLISS

J. FRANK BROCKLISS, managing director of J. F. Brockliss, Ltd., New Compton street, London, England, with branches in Paris and Berlin, foreign representative of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, and probably the best known in this country of the English film men, was entertained at dinner on Wednesday evening, March 31, by C. A. "Doc" Willat.

The dinner was one of reciprocity, for Mr. Brockliss had entertained and dined Mr. Willat when the latter was in England. Present were B. P. Schulberg, S. M. Spedon, Paul Gulick, Hugh Hoffman, Hopp Hadley, Willard Holcomb, Harry Ennis, Hanford C. Judson, Milton R. Loewenthal and Arthur Leslie.

"When the war is over I hope to build in London a theatre like your Strand here, to be run on a similar policy. In England we have nothing like the Strand," said Mr. Brockliss. "Big features of six, seven and eight reels have never been shown successfully in England. But I feel that with the proper presentation policy they would be a success."

TWO MAGAZINE ARTICLES ON THE STEFANSSON ARCTIC EXPEDITION

TWO examples of remarkable publicity are evidenced in the publication of recent articles in magazines of general circulation on the Stefansson arctic expedition, pictures of which have been released by the Sunset Motion Picture Company.

The "Sunset Magazine," published in the West and devoted to the interests of the Pacific Coast, carried in its January issue an article giving in detail the experiences of the members of the expedition, and illustrated with fourteen photographs.

In the February number of "Harper's Bazar" is an elaborate account of the exploration conducted by the Stefansson party

$50,000 THEATRE FOR BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

PLANS have been completed for the erection on the site of the Steele-Smith building in Birmingham, Ala., recently destroyed by fire, of the finest, most modern and best appointed picture show in the South, to cost $50,000, and primary operations to this end have already commenced.

It is stated that A. R. Boone and associates have closed the deal for a long lease on the site and that the demolition of the Steele-Smith building to make way for the picture palace is under way. The house is to cost $50,000 or a little more, and will be two stories and a half high.

Mr. Boone states that no expense will be spared to make the theatre safe, comfortable and attractive. Its seating capacity will be 1,000, including a balcony on the second floor. The front of the building will be of polychrome terra cotta.

On each corner of the lot will be two small stores, the entrance to the house in the center. The lobby will be lined in marble, a grand stairway of marble and ornamental iron leading to a mezzanine floor on which will be located a ladies' parlor, waiting room and manager's office, will be only a few features.

Ample space between each row of chairs will be provided, so that patrons can take any seat in the house even if crowded without disturbing those already seated. The aisles will be twice the width of an ordinary picture house, while the entire front and rear will be provided with safety exits.

A $5,000 pipe organ will be installed, which will have a smaller instrument in the lobby, and an electrical attachment will be played automatically when the organist plays the organ inside the new theatre.

A heating and cooling system similar to that installed in the Lyric, another big Birmingham house, will be installed and the best projecting machine procurable will be used. The building will be completed July 1.

It is the intention of the owners to make of the new theatre the equal of the New York houses and superior of any Southern houses.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Gambler's I. O. U." (Biograph. Mon., April 12.)—This is a silly western story, its weak quality being largely due to its entire improbability. A gambler who is taking advantage of a small loan to a girl's father is forced to pay himself with his own I. O. U. Charles West and Claire McDowell appear as the inevitable sweethearts.

"Lorna Doone." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., April 13.)—R. D. Blackmore's great novel, which is one of the most universally read books in the English language, is here compressed into two reels of film. Such a story can hardly be shown in a manner pleasing to those who have read and enjoyed it, in only two reels. The title role is played by Viola Smith, while Edward Cecil is seen as John Ridd.

"The Test of Sincerity." (Biograph. Thurs., April 15.)—A man who has been jilted by a flirt contrives a test in order to prove to his egotistical mind whether or not another girl in whom he is interested is sincere. He decides after the test that she is. Charles Perley and Augusta Anderson are seen as the pair.

"The Girl and the Matinee Idol." (Biograph. Fri., April 16.)—A stage-struck girl furnishes amusement in this comedy drama. She dogs the steps of a matinee idol after getting a small part in his company. When she discovers that he is devoted to his wife and two small children it is a sad blow to her ambitions. However, her persistent suitor is the gainer. In the cast are Gretchen Hartman, Jack Drumeir, Herbert Barrington, Jack Mulhall and Irma Dawkins.

"One Hundred Dollars." (Biograph. Sat., April 17.)—A drama of domestic life in which the principle advocated seems to be that if you can steal and get away with it you are all right. Irma Dawkins and Jack Mulhall are seen as the young married couple.

"His Sad Awakening." (Edison. Tues., April 13.)—This is a good bit of burlesque featuring Arthur Housman and William Wadsworth. A youth of low degree meets an heiress when he hands her a package which she has dropped from her automobile. She makes violent love to him, but his parents object to the match. An elopement is then planned by the girl and successfully carried out. After this the hero wakes up.

"The Cook's Mistake." (Edison. Wed., April 14.)—This is a rough house comedy of fair interest. The antics of the cook and others keep things at a lively pace throughout.

"A Woman's Revenge." (Edison. Two reels. Fri., April 16.)—Although disguised by the unfortunate title, there is a good story in this film. The three principal characters are played by Miriam Nesbitt, Frank McGlynn and Bigelow Cooper.

The latter appears as an unfaithful husband, who is discovered trying to seduce his stenographer. He is prevented from his evil purpose by Effie Dorgan, a member of a gang of crooks. She pities the girl and warns her in time. Later the gang kidnap the daughter of the man, and demand a $10,000 ransom.

He cannot raise the money, but Effie is so touched by the grief of the mother, who is on the point of suicide, that she returns the little girl. The father has learned what it means to a father to have harm come to his daughter and promises to mend his ways.

"The Landing of the Pilgrims." (Edison. Sat., April 17.)—The famous voyage of the settlers who landed at Plymouth in 1620 is depicted in this semi-historical picture. A touch of romance adds to the interest.

"A Night in Kentucky." (Essanay. Mon., April 12.)—Ruth Stonehouse, Albert Roscoe and Lester Cuneo appear in this drama. It tells the story of a man who is forced into a duel because he is mistaken for his brother, who married and deserted a girl of the Kentucky mountains. He is slightly wounded when the mistake is discovered, and he explains that his brother died suddenly, leaving the girl in ignorance of his fate.

"The Fable of the Men at the Woman's Club." (Essanay. Wed., April 14.)—The Woman's Club settles upon a big show to which all the men are led pulling at their halters. Things began to get too literary for the prominent business men, and Josephine started life saving with the result that in two minutes of the men left in the front room one was asleep and the other was penned in.

They clustered around Josephine and sang songs about baby, chickens and razors. Josephine was dropped from the club, but right now she is the most popular woman in the town. Ruth Stonehouse, Helen Dunbar and Charles Stine play this George Ade comedy.

"The Bouquet." (Essanay. Thurs., April 15.)—Swedie, the maid, gathers some nettles and puts them in a beautiful bouquet that has been sent to her mistress' daughter by the daughter's fiance. The guests smell the flowers with the result that their skin begins to sting from contact with the nettles. The mistress discovers what Swedie has doine, and a wild chase follows the calling of the policemen.

"The Turn of the Wheel." (Essanay. Tues., April 13.)—An involved plot not clearly worked out detracts from the interest of this otherwise excellent production. The cast, including Richard C. Travers, E. H. Calvert, Lillian Drew and Betty Scott do some very praiseworthy acting, and the situations are exciting and well played up to. The story deals with an unscrupulous but brilliant stock manipulator's effort to hold up a mining company for the controling interest in a much needed railroad. There is also a love story interwoven, and everything ends happily.

"The Face at the Curtain." (Essanay. Fri., April 16.)—G. M. Anderson is featured in a new role which gives him an opportunity for some strong acting. A burglar rescues the wife from her drunken husband after listening to the domestic tragedy of this wealthy home. The husband is prevented from surrendering the burglar to the police by his wife's threat to tell them that he is her friend. The husband realizes how he has acted, asks his wife for forgiveness and the burglar departs.

"The Girl and the Bachelor." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., April 12.)—Tom Moore and Marguerite Courtot are featured in this tiresome story. The plot is that a bachelor meets and marries a girl. The silly situations render this celebrated idea less interesting and more boring than is often the case.

"The 'Pollywogs' Picnic." (Kalem. Tues., April 13.)—The frequent excellence of the Ham comedies is touched in only a few parts of this offering. For the most part the situations lack originality. The doughty pair, Ham and Bud, go to the picnic of a fraternal order, and start several sorts of trouble.

"The Voice from the Taxi." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., April 14.)—The last half of the second reel of this production is taken with a short comedy called "One Rainy Day." It is a much better piece of work than the reel and a half of labored detective stuff which precedes it. The two feats of detection which make the story consist of following a taxi from which a cry for help has come, and searching a house from which a criminal was seen to come. The lack of interest may be imagined. There is a fair fight at the end. The usual cast of this series is seen.

"The Third Commandment." (Kalem. Three reels. Fri., April 16.)—"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain" is the commandment which is supposed to be the basis of this picture. The man who breaks the commandment does so by giving perjured testimony, which nearly costs his rival his life. The plot is a weak one, and wholly inadequate for a three-reel production. Although rather dull, the play is well acted by Marguerite Courtot, Tom Moore, Robert Ellis and a supporting cast.

"The Girl Engineer." (Kalem. Sat., April 17.)—This is another in the Hazards of Helen series. Helen Holmes exploits in this story are not as startling as in some previous ones, but the plot is an interesting one. A crooked owner of a worthless mine tries to substitute two carloads of his ore for that from a good mine which is being sent to a prospective purchaser of the prope ty.

"The Strength of a Samson." (Selig. Fri., April 16.)—A messenger boy obtains a copy of a "penny dreadful" entitled "The Strength of a Samson," and reads how the Herculean hero overrides the objection of the stern father and elopes with the heroine. His feats of strength culminate when he hurls an enormous rock upon the father, and refuses to remove it until his consent is obtained. This is a laughable comedy burlesque.

"The Jungle Stockade." (Selig. Sat., April 17.)—The life of a missionary's daughter is saved by Kahma, the younger brother of a hostile tribal chief. Kahma is thrown among the wild animals in a jungle stockade, but they do not harm him. The chief liberates his brother, and is converted to Christianity.

"The Poetic Justice of Omar Khan." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., April 12.)—Reviewed at length in another section of this issue.

"Mrs. Murphy's Cooks." (Selig. Tues., April 13.)—A western comedy written and produced by Tom Mix. Mrs. Murphy has trouble to keep the cooks she hires for her boarding house from marrying the cowboys. She at last secures from an employment agency a guaranted man hater, who gives her would-be suitors a warm reception, until the "man of her dreams" comes along, when she leaves like the rest. This is too much for Mrs. Murphy, so she presses a down and out actor into service, and marries him in order to insure his permanence.

"Iole, the Christian." (Selig. Wed., April 14.)—A drama with its settings laid in Rome. A popular gladiator rescues a beautiful Christian slave from the king, thereby incurring the ruler's displeasure. The king, fearing public opinion, plans to kill the gladiator by stealth. He is unsuccessful, and the gladiator and the Christian make their escape. Virginia Kirtley, Robin Adair, and E. J. Brady are seen. The costumes and settings are very good.

"Mr. Jarr's Magnetic Friend." (Vitagraph. Mon., April 12.)—The usual principals are seen in this fifth picture of the Jarr Family series. Mrs. Jarr insists that her husband aid her in an attempt to bring Fatima, the fat girl, and Dinkston, the poet, together. The results are both startling and amusing, and make a very excellent picture. The magnetizing of Hogan when he gets too near a dynamo is a clever novelty.

"His Phantom Sweetheart." (Vitagraph. Wed., April 14.)—Earle Williams and Anita Stewart in the cast, with Ralph Ince as the director, make this a notable one-reel offering. The subject, however, is an unfortunate one so far as general interest goes, because of the rather unsatisfactory nature of the story. It deals with a dream in which a young bachelor falls in love at first sight with a girl who returns his feeling, but is found to be violently insane.

"Strength." (Vitagraph. Thurs., April 15.)—A rather conventional story of the eternal triangle. The strong man wins out, but in this case he happens to be the husband. In the cast are George Stanley, Natalie De Lortan and Jack Mower.

"The Love Whip." (Vitagraph. Fri., April 16.)—Because he is less demonstrative a young husband's wife thinks he cares less for her. She tries coolness with consequences which are rather startling, but which fortunately lead to a complete understanding and an end of all jealousy on the part of either the husband or the wife. The young couple are played by Lillian Walker and Evart Overton.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News, No. 26."—The San Francisco Exposition furnishes several interesting views. A number of scenes from the war region of Europe show activities other than fighting. Perhaps the best pictures on the reel are those showing the testing of the great 14-inch gun which has been made for the defenses of the Panama Canal.

Dallas W[illegible]
ctor Stanely.

ws No. 24."—With their usual and agility the Pathe camera men ged to secure pictures of the most in- ng events of the week. The war news is mely. One view of especial interest is a picture of the Russian siege guns, partly responsible for the downfall of Przemysl. A cartoon brings the reel to a close.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Artist's Wife." (Majestic. Fri., April 2.)—Elmer Clifton and Miriam Cooper play the leading parts in this picture. A friend of an artist tells a group of people the story of the man's romance. It is the familiar situation in studio stories of a model who is a painter's sweetheart, but is forgotten when he becomes infatuated with a banker's daughter. Of course the model proves to be the right girl in the end.

"Sympathy Sal." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., April 3.)—This is a pretty story of a little girl, who is a waitress in a restaurant at a mining camp. The son of the owner falls in love with her, but his jealous rival seeks to end the affair by wiring the boy's father that his son is about to marry a "hash slinger." The wealthy man comes to the camp post haste, but it proves to be another case of one who came to jeer but remained to pray. Sal captures the old man's heart to such an extent that he joins his son in asking her to become a member of the family.

"Dr. Jim." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., April 4.)—In his efforts to keep the sheriff's son out of mischief the western doctor is accused of leading him astray, but he at length succeeds in proving his own innocence and influencing the youth to lead a less vicious life. Although the great amount of riding that appears in this is somewhat unnecessary for the advancement of the plot, it is riding of the best sort, and this padding, if it may be called such, detracts little from the interest in the story which is at all times very great. Fred Burns appears as the doctor and Vester Perry as the sheriff's son, while Catherine Henry has a small part as the doctor's sweetheart. The photography is clear, and some impressively expansive scenes have been filmed.

"The Winning Hand." (Eastern Reliance. Mon., April 5.)—The widow's child dislikes her mother's suitor, so she hides herself in the room in which are some valuable jewels and discovers that the man is really a thief. This makes a good story, and the acting of the little girl is human if not clever.

"The Indian Changeling." (Reliance. Wed., April 7.)—After a traveler has betrayed an Indian girl he marries and settles in the west. Back fire from his rifle causes blindness. His child dies at its birth at the same time that the Indian girl has left her baby at the ranch. A substitution is effected, and many years later when the man has regained his sight, the truth is revealed to him by his wife, and so the man's neglected duty overtakes him in his old age and he is resigned. Rather an old story, yet acted well and artistically produced by Joseph Belmont.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 14." (Thurs., April 8.)—The remains of Paris' famous Moulin Rouge, which was recently destroyed by fire, is an interesting feature, while the antics of a human fly on the side of a twenty story St. Louis skyscraper form a thrilling series of scenes. Views in the training camp of the New York Giants will interest the fans, and besides a number of other domestic happenings the section devoted to war news is full of timely events.

"A Double Exposure." (Thanhouser. Sun., April 11.)—As her mother is unable to attend a house party the daughter disguises herself as her parent, and goes in her stead. A young man penetrates her disguise and the little trick is capped with a romance. This is a very clever and enjoyable comedy which contains nothing of the slapstick order, besides being original in both plot and situations. Peggy Burke makes the daughter an attractive figure, while Arthur Ashley appears in the opposite role.

"The Poet of the Peaks." (American. Two reels. Mon., April 12.)—Reviewed at length in another section of this issue.

"Persistence Wins." (Beauty. Tues., April 13.)—A bachelor girl wedded to her art and the Bohemian life finally capitulates after a series of events that show her the eventual loneliness of an unmarried existence. Her persistent suitor has their future home all furnished, and they lose no time in rushing to the minister. Virginia Kirtley takes the part of the bachelor girl.

"The Wishing Stone." (American. Wed., April 14.)—A refreshing story of a childhood love affair that develops into the marriage of a homeless girl and the son of the family that adopts her. Contains some good child acting.

The adult parts are taken by Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood, who are supported by William Bertram and John Steppling.

"Droppington's Family Tree." (Keystone. Two reels. Mon., April 12.)—The usual hilarious riot which is expected in Keystone productions is found in this double barreled comedy. The plot is one which has been seen before, but which offers fine opportunity for fun. A youth is in love with a carbaret singer, who has an ardent admirer in her own set, and also is followed about by the boy's father. This triple complication causes some startling scenes in the restaurant, and keeps the audience in an uproar. Chester Conklin plays the role of the troubled husband.

"The Moment of Sacrifice." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., April 13.)—The young army officer is believed by the colonel to be his son, but in reality his father is an international spy, who when in destitute circumstances allowed his baby to replace that of the commander's, when it died.

With this basis to work on the Thanhouser company has constructed an excellent drama, one which is unusual in both theme and situations, and one which is productive of an exceedingly large amount of suspense. The final scenes which show the youth in the clutches of the spies, from whom he is rescued by his penitent father form a powerful climax, which will thrill the most hardened picture fan.

In photography, lighting and general realism of the scenes, both interiors and exteriors, the two reels excel. The acting is fitting.

"Shorty Turns Actor." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., April 14.)—Shorty becomes an actor through a correspondence school course, and plays the lead in a play visiting his village town under the name of Shortius Hamiltonius. He is not much of a sucess, and his dramatic gyrations attract quantities of hen fruit. While the show is going on the manager robs the general store. The money is hidden in Shorty's suitcase, so he comes out on the large end after all. This is an excellent comedy; there are funny situations in it, and the plot as a whole is equally funny.

"The Sons of Toil." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., April 15.)—A strong and absorbing drama concerning chiefly railroad characters. There are numerous and realistic strike riots, and interwoven there is a love story which only terminates happily after the villain has been disposed of after a great amount of difficulty.

If at times the story is slightly illogical, this fact is buried by the rapid action and numerous thrilling scenes in which the picture revels. Richard Staunton is cast as the hero and Jack Nelson as the heavy. Both do excellent work.

"The Taking of Luke McVane." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., April 16.)—The rancher protects a dance hall girl from the unwelcome attentions of a Mexican. His act leads to a murder, and he is forced to flee. The sheriff gives pursuit and is wounded. The man cares for him, and is promised a pardon. The two men start to return, but are attacked by Indians and both are killed. A very plain yet absorbing picture, with William S. Hart and Enid Markey in the leading roles.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"You Need a Doctor." (Starlight.)—The two Starlight comedians again determine that the world owes them a living, and proceed to practice medicine, but they lack patients. So one of them goes out with a quantity of jumping powder and inflicts several persons with the jumps. The other prescribes a cure. They make a lot of money, but the police discover their evil practices in the end, and they land in jail. This comedy is laughable in all but a few scenes, which are too suggestive to be humorous.

"The Girl with the Camera." (Premier.)—The daughter of the sheriff rounds up a band of moonshiners, among which is one who is in love with her, by taking snapshots of the offenders with a camera, and then identifying them as the wanted law breakers. The plot of this is rather shallow. Edythe Sterling and Willis Robards are the principals.

"Uncle's Last Letter." (Superba.)—The scheming relatives of an old man who is thought dead completely wreck his house in a search for his will. To our mind there is too much rough and tumble work in this, which lacks punctuation by humorous scenes.

"The Trunk Mystery." (Superba.)—This comedy is at fault in the same place as "Uncle's Last Letter." There is too much of the same thing. This, however, is better than the other in that at the start several scenes of a laughable nature appear. The truck photography which is introduced during the chase is appreciable, but the reel would be better if cut considerably.

"Brothers." (Premier.)—A western drama of an average nature. The story might be criticised as illogical in some instances, but the plot gains in interest as it progresses, and so these little faults are overshadowed. Fred Church appears in the principal part.

"The Room Between." (Empress. Two reels.)—The serious minded man and his frivolous wife fail to get along on peaceable terms, so they separate and each lives a different life. The husband adopts a deserted baby, and this causes the wife to repent when she sees it.

Added to this there is another plot concerning the parents of the deserted child, which makes an entertaining yet hardly necessary story. The two leads are well played by Joseph Levering and Marion Swayne. Most of the others that appear in the picture are good, except the society man. The main idea of the offering is a good one, and the picture will make an impression on all who see it.

"Jealousy." (Starlight.)—Both the guardians decide that they shall marry their ward, and so keep the money in the family, but naturally they fail after many humorous scenes have been introduced.

"Can a Man Fool His Wife?—Leave It to Your Uncle Dudley." (Cameo.)—In this comedy such well known persons as Harry Kelly, of the "Watch Your Step" company; Dan Mason, Ed Boulden and May Abbey, formerly of the Edison company, and Millicent Evans, who appeared in the Colonial feature "Seats of the Mighty," appear.

The comedy is one of the best that the United Program has issued. It concerns chiefly a grand mixup at a hotel, which is overcrowded because of a coming convention. Its situations are very funny at all times, and are very well taken care of by the capable cast.

"Can Love Grown Cold Be Revived?—Leave It to Your Uncle Dudley." (Cameo.)—The cast of this is practically the same as that which appears in "Can a Man Fool His Wife?" The comedy, which is written about a love charm, is not quite as good as it tends to wander from its original theme, yet for all that it will appeal humorously to the average motion picture audience.

"The Come Back." (Premier.)—The man whose wife deserted him because of his drunkenness returns to his old home and meets a little child to whom he tells his story. The little one turns out to be his own daughter, and her mother is not far away. A reconciliation is effected when the husband tells his wife that he has reformed.

A heart interest number which the patrons of this program should receive well. Willis Robards and Edythe Sterling are the leads. Mr. Robards slightly over-acts in some of the scenes in which he is affected by the liquor, and their dramatic value is somewhat lowered because of this.

"Back to the Farm." (Empress.)—The young farmer coming into possession of a small sum of money journeys to New York intent on earning a living and seeing high life at its highest. But he is swindled of his last cent by a pretty girl and her aides, and returns to the farm sadder but wiser.

There are many laughs in this comedy, and the ending offers a moral as the producers intend. Joseph Levering produced it, besides playing the lead. Marion Swayne appears as the girl who swindles him. This should be enjoyed by all as its humorous moments are many and well taken care of.

"Stung." (Starlight.)—Two hoboes with socialistic tendencies make a duke captive, and one of them impersonates him while the other goes along as his boon companion. The bogus duke meets a rich maiden, and is getting along tolerably well when the real nobleman puts in his appearance. A merry farce of the extreme slapstick order, which will surely amuse those who appreciate this variety of comedy.

"In the Blood." (Regent. Two reels.)—This story shows the manner in which a lazy good-for-nothing went from bad to worse, and how his sister rose with equal rapidity, ending in marrying a well-to-do man. It will entertain as the story is thrilling all the time, and is produced well. The subtitles are very good at present, and there are far too many of them.

"The Parasite's Double." (Lariat. Two reels.)—The man who bears a slight resemblance to the much feared parasite is a highway robber, who, incidentally is in love with a pretty girl.

The parasite kills the girl's father and her lover is accused of the crime, but he discovers who the guilty man is and kills him, subsequently receiving pardon from the sheriff after the confession of his own misdeeds. This story presents a shallow appearance as filmed, and the likeness in the apparel of the two men often results in confusion, which detracts somewhat from the interest.

The scenes are typically western, and are supported in most instances by clear photography. George Gebhardt, the Indian, is seen in the title role and gives a good performance. The others in the cast are quite competent.

"Her New Job." (Luna.)—A farce revolving about an ungainly maid's tribulations while being constantly tormented by the mischievous offspring of her mistress. The comedy belongs to the slapstick class and ought to amuse. Dot Farley appears as the Swedish maid.

"The Misplaced Twins." (Luna.)—The husband, who is slightly under the influence of liquor, is taken in by his older children's trick and carries off the twins instead of the clothes. He leaves them outside a saloon, and after they have been through all manner of hairbreadth escapes, they are returned safely to their mother. There is not much comedy in this, and the ending, which borders on the dramatic, is out of place.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Animated Weekly, No. 161. (Wed., April 7.)—Both the Panama-Pacific Exposition and the scenes from the warring countries hold prominent positions in this number. The thousands of visitors crowding Universal City is an interesting event. Other domestic occurrences and Hy Mayer's cartoons complete the reel.

"The Grind." (Rex. Three reels. Sun., April 11.)—Three sisters live together. One is a shop girl, broken in health, another the stenographer of an unscrupulous man; the third is a chorus girl, who is continually inflicted by the attentions of the man's son.

The stenographer is lured to the older man's country home, where he attempts to take liberties with her. Her older sister, learning her whereabouts, arrives and is protecting her when the man's son arrives informing him of his wife's sickness. Seeing the older girl in a disheveled state he believes her guilty.

Later he is rescued from a gang by the former chorus girl, and on the arrival of his father at the girl's home the stenographer declares the truth about herself and her sister.

Such an offering is sure of keeping the interest up all the time, and the subject is handled in such a delicate manner that the picture is suitable for exhibition in any theatre, including those of neighborhood and family patronage.

Pauline Bush has a part that she is fully capable of rendering beautifully as the older girl, while Queenie and Helen Rosson appear as her sisters. Lon Chaney is the old man and William Dowling is his son. The story was produced by Joseph De Grasse, and is an adaptation from a novel by Ida May Parke.

"Life's Furrow." (Laemmle. Sun., April 11.)—As the result of a visit from his sweetheart and her father, who openly denounce him, the wreckless college youth returns home satisfied to work on the farm for the rest of his life. A pretty poor idea of college life is conveyed, but aside from this the picture is convincing and pleasant. Frank Lloyd directed Millard K. Wilson, Mrs. Benson, Helen Leslie and Marc Robbins.

"Saved by a Dream." (Victor. Two reels. Monday. April 12.)—The young millionaire who is infatuated by an adventuress has an awful nightmare chiefly concerning the misdeeds that he perpetrated in her behalf. On awakening he resolves to put her out of his life for ever. Harry Myers produced this, playing the principal male part opposite Rosemary Theby, who makes an alluringly attractive figure out of the adventuress.

Brinsley Shaw is the man's father. The drama departs from the beaten path considerably and, together with the fine acting of the cast and the effective direction, the picture is certain to be well received. The dream in which the young man indulges is as illogical and abrupt in its development as actual dreams are, a fact which goes to show the attention of the director to detail. The photography is good, and the light, dim in some scenes, is most effective.

"The Streets of Make Believe." (Imp. Mon., April 12.)—Although this picture's main plot is extremely old, its situations are clever and well taken care of by King Baggot and Jane Gail, the principals. A man employed in a department store pretends he is a millionaire and meets a girl employed in a laundry trying the same scheme.

Each finds the other out in the end. There are many laughs in this and the players are good actors besides good comedians. The reel is free from anything vulgar and will surely be enjoyed by any audience.

"Skipper Simpson's Daughter." (Joker. Mon., April 12.)—A melodramatic burlesque which will be sure of reaching its mark as a comedy because of its sheer ridiculousness and exaggerated characterizations rendered by all the members of the cast who are fully equal to any occasion that presents itself. The comedy was produced by Archer McMakin and in the cast are Ernest Shields, who is seen at his best; Ed. Boland, Buck Conners and Queenie Rosson.

"A Wild Irish Rose." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., April 13.)—While the true lover of the girl is absent, one who has long sought her hand at last succeeds in gaining her consent to marry, but at the eleventh hour the other returns, to put the villain to route and to marry the girl himself.

This is the first picture produced for the Gold Seal company by Charles Giblyn and, although the story is not new, its situations are enough to furnish the required amount of suspense. The locale being Ireland, it was necessary to obtain some original locations, which the director has done. The scenes are exceptionally beautiful and photographed well; in some instances entire Irish street settings have been erected.

Cleo Madison is seen in the title part and gives a good account of herself both in the heavy and light scenes. Joe King is the lover, while Ray Hanford lends melodramatic villainy to his part and the picture. Comedy touches are not wanting, and blending with the drama, which in turn is supported by the fine scenes, the result is an enjoyable picture, which the director and the company may well be proud of.

"The Old Tutor." (Big U. Tues., April 13.)—The tutor, who has been in the family for many years, takes the two orphans under his wing after their father has died. He tries in many ways to earn a living for them, but he is too old to be useful, and finally, when he had about given up hope, an old friend of the family appears and renders his assistance.

This is the second picture produced by Murdock MacQuarrie, and is excellent from every angle. In the title part Mr. MacQuarrie is as effective as ever, and his strong character portrayal is fine. Agnes Vernon and Antrim Short are the children and Millard K. Wilson is the friend in need.

"A Mixed-Up Elopement." (Nestor. Tues., April 13.)—Two fathers are antagonistic toward their daughters' lovers, who despite the careful guard manage to slip away and get married. A short comedy written and produced by Al Christie with Harry Rattenberry, Jack Dillon, Neal Burns and Billie Rhodes in the leading parts. The detective is not as funny as he thinks he is, but on the whole the picture will be enjoyed.

"Under the Table." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., April 14.)—This farce depicts the complications that result when three married couples quarrel. All six air their heated minds by a stroll, and the final scenes, which are laid in a restaurant, find each husband with another wife.

Consternation reigns after the couples are enlightened to the actions of their better halves. Unlike most multiple-reel comedies, this one fully deserves the space furnished by two thousand feet. Hank Mann, who is by all odds the star, and a clever one at that, registers some original tricks that are bound to produce laughter, while the rest of the cast, which includes Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris, is good to furnish many a laugh.

The farce is by no means vulgar, and besides it is literally clean. It will offend no one, and should surely please the lovers of slapstick comedies.

"When the Spider Tore Loose." (Laemmle. Wed., April 14.)—An ex-convict evidences his gratitude for the woman who previously cared for his sick wife by rescuing her from the clutches of the gangsters. A thrilling one-reel subject produced by Frank Lloyd, who plays the ex-convict. Some excellently staged, healthy brawls and excitement to the otherwise interesting plot. Helen Leslie, Marc Robbins and Olive Fuller Golden are also in the cast.

"The Troubadour." (Big U. Two reels. Thurs., April 15.)—A story showing the manner in which a wandering musician was tricked from marrying the girl he loved, and how after long years of separation the two are at length united.

Some beautiful scenes have been filmed during the course of these two reels, yet the action of the story seems at times incoherent, and this is more than regrettable, for this is Murdock MacQuarrie's first official attempt at directing. We have seen his second offering, however, and can vouch for the clarity and all around excellence of that.

It seems that Mr. MacQuarrie needed two reels' experience before getting his faculties as director under way. He plays the title part himself and is supported by Agnes Vernon in the opposite role.

"A Man and His Money." (Rex. Thurs., April 15.)—A young society man possessed by a wanton extravagance is discarded by his thoughtful fiancee. A sudden turn of the market renders her almost penniless, and finally she is discovered by her rejected suitor, who is sobered a bit by her lecture.

The story here presented is most interesting and the incident of the burning of the one dollar bill and its circulation among the people until it at last reaches its first owner's hands is very cleverly executed, besides serving as a channel of reunion between the two people. The picture, however, does not clearly explain that the young man has gotten over his spendthrifty ways, and so its termination seems incomplete. Aside from this fact the reel is excellent. Pauline Bush and Ray Gallagher are the principals.

"Playmates." (Sterling. Thurs, April 15.)—A group of children tiring of marbles adjourn to a mud hole, and before they are through every one is coated thick with dirt. The best part of the reel comes when the three boys of the party are washing themselves. This is by all means one of the best juvenile comedies that the Sterling company has produced of late. The situations are humorous, and the child players enter well into the spirit of the thing.

"The Bombay Buddha." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., April 16.)—A married couple claimed to have been robbed of a precious Indian image of Buddha. The detective who is put on the case discovers that the two are crooks, who play the old trick of robbing themselves to collect the insurance money. After a time his untiring efforts are rewarded with the capture of the two

This play was produced by Stuart Paton and has been so constructed and effectively handled from practically every degree that it is highly engrossing from the beginning until the finale. In fact, such a plot is bound to be absorbing if handled with any degree of intelligence and realization of the mystifying powers lying in the theme, so the fine results that have been attained here are due to both the author and director.

The cast is well equipped to handle the most difficult situations that present themselves. Hobart Henly and Frances Nelson are seen as the crooks, Howard Crampton as the detective and Alan Holubar as the Indian. The several fights which are staged toward the end of the picture are realistic to the extreme, and the contenders succeed in wrecking several entire settings, which before were most effective.

"All in the Same Boat." (Nestor. Fri., April 16.)—Lovers quarrel. The man marries an old maid for her money and embarks for Europe with her. The girl and her father also decide to take the trip. The lovers meet again, and at length the man discovers the alleged old maid has another husband, so he's free. This was written and produced by Al Christie, and while the situations are funny, there is too much meaningless horse play for the good of the picture. Billie Rhodes, Jack Dillon, Harry Rattenbery and Stella Adams are in the cast.

"The Doorway of Destruction." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 17.)—One of Francis Ford's pictures with India as a locale. The numerous fights that crowd the two reels are thrilling, to say the least, and the story is so well conceived that none who witness the picture will be able to live down that patriotic feeling which so often presents itself when a picture of this variety is projected.

Whether any English commander in India ever treated his Irish regiment in such an unmerciful manner as he does in this film we do not know, but it seems hardly likely that he would order the Irish to take the gate by storm and not to come back until it was taken.

In fulfilling his command the crack regiment is sadly depleted by the shots from the rebel Sepoys, but they are finally victorious, and with their miraculous accomplishment comes the Colonel's everlasting respect for the Irish. This will immensely entertain despite its seeming disregard of logic. Francis Ford, Jack Ford and Mino Cunard are cast in the principal parts.

"The Love That Lasts." Powers. Sat., April 17.)—Of two lovers the girl marries the one who turns out to be an habitual inebriate. At the birth of her child the husband gets mixed up in a gang fight and is killed, while shortly afterward the baby dies. At the same time the other man's wife bears him a child and she dies from weakness.

The doctor sees his way clear to save both the remaining mother and child, which paves a way for the reunion of the old lovers. This is a very sympathetic story produced in a delightful manner by Sydney Ayres. The subject is exceptionally delicate and is handled in the best manner conceivable. Mr. Ayres, Val Paul and Doris Pawn play the leads.

"The Way He Won the Widow." (Joker. Sat., April 17.)—The drummer thinks the widow's son is too much of a baby, so he takes the sickly youth in hand and makes a man of him in short order, thus winning his mother's hand. This was written by Clarence Badger and produced by Allen Curtis. It is one of the best of the Joker comedies. The situations are of an uproarious nature throughout the real. The comedians are excellent in their respective parts. Max Asher is seen as the salesman, Gale Henry as the widow, Milburn Moranti makes a ridiculous figure of the son, while William Franey gets in his usual clever work as the doctor, another suitor of the widow's.

"Girl of the Night." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., April 18.)—A daughter of the underworld, bred among thieves and drunkards, compromises herself before the district attorney, who had befriended her, to shield from him his wife's contemplated action or eloping with another man. The story of these two reels is presented in a wonderfully gripping manner.

All the scenes are effectively worked out and the spectator finds himself rapped up in the story from its very start. Joseph De Grasse produced this picture, with Pauline Bush playing the principal part of the child of the slums. Lon Chaney has a small part as a crook, who reforms and finally wins her, while Hilda Sloman is the attorney's wife.

"The Things in the Bottom Drawer." (Laemmle. Sun., April 18.)—The destitute young widow returns to her mother after her husband has taken to drink. In time he gives up his bad habits and secures a lucrative position.

When he hears his wife spoken of in disrespectful terms he knocks the slanderer down. This act brings to mind his dead child and he returns to his old home to brood over the baby's clothing. There he finds his wife possessed with the same thoughts and a happy reunion occurs. Although slight in plot, this picture contains a lot of deep thought, and by excellent work in the way of the producing the offering has been made most impressive.

James Dayton wrote the scenario and Alan Forrest, formerly of Bob Leonard's Rex company, directed the work and plays the young man. Helen Rosson is his wife, and Jean Hathaway and Albert MacQuarrie complete the cast.

PICTURES CROWD VAUDEVILLE AND "LEGIT" IN PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 7.

Vaudeville and the legitimate stage have been handed a hard jolt in Pittsburgh by screen drama. There is a loud cry from the management of a number of the theatres regarding the inroads made into the box office receipts since motion pictures became so popular.

The Schenley theatre, erected at great expense by Harry Davis, one of Pittsburgh's leading theatrical men, in the Oakland district, one of the richest sections of Pittsburgh, is to be turned into a motion picture theatre. It will be one of the finest if not the finest photoplay houses in Pennsylvania.

For a number of weeks the theatre has been carrying stock at a loss, and this is said to have decided the management to change to photoplays. The best pictures brought to this section will be shown at the Schenley first.

WILLIAM V. RANOUS DIES IN CALIFORNIA

William V. Ranous, one of the oldest motion picture directors in the business and the first man to make pictures for the Vitagraph Company of America, is dead in California. A widow survives him.

Mr. Ranous' most notable feat was directing the globe-girdling tour of the Vitagraph players, headed by Clara Kimball Young and Maurice Costello three years ago.

The Vitagraph players have subscribed to a fund for Mrs. Ranous, which the officers of the company started with a check for $100. Mr. Ranous was about fifty years old.

VITAGRAPH COMPLETES NEW EDUCATIONAL FILM

An educational picture in three parts, "The Lady of the Lighthouse," has just been completed by the Vitagraph Company, produced under the direction of Captain Harry Lambart. "The Lady of the Lighthouse" was picturized from the book of the same name by Helen S. Woodruff and taken in co-operation with the New York Association for the Blind.

It is the first time pictures have been taken in the rooms of the association, this being made possible by the new light adopted by the Vitagraph Company. Lionel Adams, who made his initial appearance as a Vitagraph player in this picture, is seen to excellent advantage, his co-players being Rose Tapley and Charles Wellesley.

THANHOUSER STUDIO HAS CREW AND BALL TEAMS

The completeness of the Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle is evidenced in its possession of an eight-oar rowing crew, football and baseball team.

In a spirit of fun a minstrel show was suggested recently and within forty-eight hours the play was written and the organization perfected. Everyone in the company were Thanhouser people.

ARKANSAS LEGISLATURE SEES NOTHING WRONG IN PICTURES

The Arkansas legislature of 1915 has passed into history, and in its passing has for the nonce left the motion picture business intact. And unless there should be a special session the situation will rest for two years. The strong and active organization of exhibitors is probably responsible for the non-action of the solons.

Early in the session there was quite a sentiment in favor of some sort of a censor law, but this disposition was finally overcome. The temper of the legislature seemed to be in opposition to freak legislation. Exhibitors in the state will probably become objects of envy in other localities because of the common-sense action of the Arkansas legislature.

MUTUAL'S FRISCO EXCHANGE NEEDS MORE ROOM

San Francisco, April 5.

The Mutual exchange here, of which J. R. Crone is manager, reports business so good that it is handling all the business possible. With a view to increasing its capacity it is seeking new quarters. A whole building in a desirable location is wanted.

Manager Crone is arranging special exhibitions of "The Devil," to be held at Stockton, Fresno and San Jose, to which all exhibitors within a radius of 100 miles will be invited. Special music will accompany the picture.

Flash!

Sam once had a small haberdasher's shop in a newly settled and thriving little town. He had no competition so he decided to get all the profit he could out of the business while the getting was good. Sam bought a lot of odds and ends that had a "flash." These were cheaper than standard lines and had the appearance of being as good. The quality in them was negligible. The townspeople complained, but they bought from Sam anyway, because they had no other place to go for the needed wear.

A big factory concluded to locate in the town. Bill heard about it. He wanted to go into business there, too, so he looked over the ground. He sized up the situation immediately and decided to start a shop in competition to Sam's. In a few weeks Bill opened his new establishment. He put in nothing but standard lines of haberdashery that gave the purchaser full value for his money. Using the opposite of Sam's method Bill's innovation was a success from the jump. As the town grew Bill's business moved along with it. In the meantime Sam kept his shop open but the returns were almost nil. He retained some customers, to be sure, but these were either too lazy to try to get value for every dollar they spent, or they were too ignorant to take advantage of a good thing. Sam saw Bill become rich, while his own bank balance never increased.

The incident is exactly like the motion picture business. Its development is parallel to the growth of the thriving little town. It offered opportunities to the first exhibitor as the new town did to the first haberdasher. Sam was the first exhibitor. He held to cheap pictures that had only a "flash" to recommend them because he considered it economy! Then when Bill got into the game with standard quality pictures, Sam watched the newcomer wax prosperous.

MinA comedies are of standard quality. They breathe individuality born of the work of artists; solid comedy is the result. No beaten path is followed; flashiness is no part in or of them. Yet to have them in your program—your stock in trade—costs no more than the ordinary comic picture, so called. Insist upon getting them from your licensed exchange. Released every Thursday through the

The Four Greatest Films

Harold MacGrath's Most Popular Novel

"The Carpet From Bagdad"

A tale of the Orient—an adventure story teeming with Far-Eastern Mysticism—of how a prayer rug, boldly stolen from a Mosque, is followed with Fanatical devotion through a series of exciting adventures to the end. The stoical fatalism of the Far East is unfolded in MacGrath's inimitable style and includes camel caravans, adventures on the burning sands of the Sahara, Streets in Cairo, and features an all-star cast including Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary, and Wheeler Oakman. An unusual plot and beautiful Oriental scenery.

Anna Katherine Green's Fascinating Mystery Story

"The Millionaire Baby"

Anna Katherine Green is known as the queen of the mystery story and "The Millionaire Baby" is her most popular work. The baffling plot has been faithfully followed in the screen adaptation and exciting action is the watchword in every foot of the five reels of adventure. One of the most elaborately staged film dramas of the year. Hundreds of players appear in several of the big scenes. Harry Mestayer, John Charles and others take the leading roles. A thrilling story of mystery, of plot and of counter plot!

PECIALS

Of A Great Combination

Edward E. Rose's Soul-Stirring, Intense Drama

"The Rosary"

Edward E. Rose, author of the world-famous stage play, "The Rosary," has adapted his wonderful story for motion picture production. Opening in Auld Ireland, the life work of Father Kelly leads him across the seas to central Ohio, and later to the Lower East Side of Greater New York. Wonderful lighting effects, true comedy and pathos, a strong plot and lovely scenic investure make "The Rosary" an unusual Spectacular Special. Kathlyn Williams and her supporting company are featured. A pictureplay that will bring both laughter and tears.

Charles Hoyt's Greatest American Comedy

"A Texas Steer"

The late Charles Hoyt never wrote a more laughable comedy than "A Texas Steer." It is a comedy of true American life and the logical situations incite honest merriment. Mr. Tyrone Power, the distinguished actor, assumes the leading role of "Maverick Brander," and he has stated that the character appealed to him. Mr. Power makes his first appearance in Selig Spectacular Specials in "A Texas Steer" and his delineation of that whole-souled American, "Maverick Brander" is artistic and appealing.

Rembusch Screen Talks

By F. J.

If I had all of the money that exhibitors waste every year in experimenting and smearing around, trying to make their own screens, I would be the highest salaried man in the United States, and again,

If I had with this all the money that exhibitors lose on account of using screens that do not give good results, screens that make a good film look like slop, I could write my name J. D. R. instead of F. J. R.

It is those clouds, smears, seams, spots, wrinkles, and especially that poor reflection and improper distribution from your screen that puts the kibosh on your whole show and keep folks from repeating.

Don't get it in your mind that any old rag will do for a screen. I am the world's greatest screen expert. For ten years I have been making screens. I run six theatres myself and when I make a screen for you I make it just the same as if I was making it for my own theatre.

If you have a wide house, get our wide house screen. We make every screen in nine finishes, according to your angle. It won't cost you any more to buy a Rembusch screen and you get in our screens a surface that is made to fit your house. Write me and let me tell you why.

I have got screens at any price and terms to suit, cash or payments. I am the only manufacturer in the world that makes every kind of moving picture screen.

"THE SCREEN THAT HAS WON ITS SPURS"

FLATTERY

While "imitation" is said to be the sincerest form of "flattery," the tremendous abundance of it that has been bestowed upon us has become an annoyance—especially after verbal pyrotechnics indulged in recently by one of our "flatterers."

SKY-ROCKETS

Heretofore it has always been our policy to ignore the "mushroom growth" of "gold" screen makers, knowing full well theirs to be a "sky-rocket" career—SPLASH—SPLUTTER—THUD.

WARNING

However, so bold have some of the "flattery family" become that it becomes our duty to warn exhibitors when purchasing a screen to insist upon a guarantee against suits for infringement, as we have taken steps to protect our rights.

FACTS

There is but one RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN, the patents and secret processes of which are owned and controlled by THE RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN COMPANY.

ROBERT T. KANE is and always has been the General Manager of this company.

FRANK T. HIGHFIELD is and always has been the factory Superintendent of this company.

The RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is the first screen to be backed by a 5-YEAR GUARANTEE.

PROOF

That the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is acknowledged by projection experts to be the screen of PERFECT PROJECTION is proven by the fact that the FINEST Moving Picture Theatre in the world—The STRAND—and most all the LEADING Moving Picture Theatres in the United States and Canada have RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

A REPRESENTATIVE ST. LOUIS THEATRE

THE New Grand Central Theatre, Grand and Lucas avenues, St. Louis, Mo., cost $160,000, and is representative of the highest type of photo-play theatre in the United States.

It was constructed in accordance with the very rigid requirements and ordinances governing the erection of new theatres, in St. Louis. It embodies every principle known to the expert architecture, to insure the public against disaster by fire and panic. The practical disposition of the large number of exits impresses every visitor at once.

On the north side twenty-six feet is a store having a depth of about sixty feet; in its rear is an open yard and under the same, entirely outside and separate from the theatre, are the boiler and fan rooms.

The theatre building proper has a frontage of eighty feet by a depth of one hundred and fifty feet. The entrance, which is on the axis, is emphasized by the highly ornate canopy. The lobby is thirty-seven feet wide by twenty-one feet six inches deep; the walls thereof are wainscoted with marble and mirrors to a height of eight feet; the ceiling is groined or vaulted, and these wall and ceiling surfaces lend themselves admirably to embellishment by the decorator.

The theatre auditorium has a width of seventy-eight feet by a length of one hundred feet. Only one balcony is provided, the extreme forward edge of which extends to within forty-eight feet of the curtain. The lower auditorium will seat 1,200, while the balcony has a seating capacity of eight hundred, all immeasurably comfortable. The balcony is reached by broad, easy stairways, provided with two intermediate platforms.

Months to Finish Decorations

A stage complete in all its details is provided; its depth is twenty-six feet, its width eighty feet; the proscenium opening is forty feet wide by twenty-one feet high. Every modern and ingenious electric device enters into the theatre equipment.

The asbestos curtain with which the stage is provided, is decorated by a prominent St. Louis curtain painter, Benjamin Berger, with a scene depicting the entrance to the Garden of the Gods, in Colorado. It is a very truthful and well executed representation of this well known spot, near the Rockies.

The mural decorations of this theatre were done by Mr. Aquardo, and took several months for the completion. They are of such pleasing quality that upon entering the theatre one is impressed with an air of quiet refinement, seldom found in a place of public amusement.

The theatre is equipped with a large three manual organ, a unique departure from the usual motion picture theatre.

The illumination of the theatre is accomplished by the indirect system, using two types of units, one for the general illumination of the theatre while the audience is assembling and departing, and the other for a very subdued lighting all through the performance, but of sufficient intensity to allow a person to readily make his exit while the performance is going on. The fact that there is at all times considerable illumination within the theatre demands particularly powerful projection apparatus.

The screen is 15 x 20 feet, which shows a picture of sufficient size to allow details to be seen from any part of the theatre.

Position of Projection Booth

The projection apparatus is located in a booth, in the foyer of the theatre, at such an elevation that the axis of a cone of light is at right angles to the screen. This eliminates all distortion in the projection of the pictures, and allows every part of the picture to be in focus. The distance between the projection lens and the screen is 123 feet.

This requires highly intensified light, the current for which is furnished by two 70 ampere Wagner white light converters, one for each one of the projection machines.

These converters are sufficiently liberally rated so that they will be able to furnish larger currents for short times, if an intensified light is desired.

The operating switches for these converters are located in the projection booth. The converters themselves are located in the basement of the building. Thus no larger amount of space is

First. In the Edison machine, which carbon, top or bottom, should the current come in on to form the arc?

Second. In which carbon should the crater form? On the carbon the current comes in on, or on the one it is passing out on? One carbon burns to a point, the other forming a crater. Which way is the correct passing?

Third. The curtain is 62 feet from the objective lense, forming a picture about 9½ x 11½ feet. The condensing lenses are 5-inch focus each. The outer one seems to have a greenish shade. The other is pure white. The dynamo is 46 amperes and 65 volts, D. C.

We are troubled with a dim or blurred spot which takes different positions on the curtain.

For the past two months we have had trouble with a hole burning in the lower carbon, where the clampscrew sets against the carbon. Sometimes this will be half way through the carbon.

I have been running this outfit for the past two years. Never had any trouble until past two months. Use ½-inch carbons, top and bottom.

ANSWER: When using direct-current, which you say that you have, the current flows or travels always in the one direction; that is, it is passing into the lamp over the wire connected to the carbon burning to a crater. This carbon should be the top carbon. The carbon burning to a point is the negative carbon and should be the bottom one.

The difference in the color of the glass of which the condensing lenses are made is due to impurities or composition of the glass. Crown glass gives a whitish reflection of color and flint a greenish color. It is best to use clear white color lenses.

It would seem the connection or carbon clamp is corroded and affords a poor path for the current to flow into the carbon. An arc forms at the small area which the current finds available. Clean the inside faces of the clamp, by filing and have the threads of the clamp screw clean and to turn freely in order to secure a firm pressure against the carbons.

If you are using the full 46 amperes from the dynamo, and without resistance, ½-inch diameter carbons are too small. A ⅝-inch carbon would be better to use and have it a cored carbon. The ½-inch carbon will answer for the lower carbon, though it should be a solid carbon. Make this change of carbons and clean the bottom carbon clamp, or obtain a new arm for the lamp and the blurring in the picture will disappear.

Change in Meter Register

M. R. Merslon, McGehee, Ark.—Our meter was placed in a building with entrance switch. Then, through a ruling of the city, the meter was removed to a new location across the street, a wire distance of 100 feet, feeding to the house through several No. 6 wires on a 110-volt alternating current.

Will the meter register the same, or will it not register higher than the current we are actually getting? I have contended that the drop in power comes after the meter, or through the 100-foot leads, but I am not well enough informed to know if the drop only affects volts and not wattage.

ANSWER: All wires conveying electric power dissipate some energy from the heat radiation. This is a loss of power. It will vary according to the current passing and the resistance of the wire. Especially so with the current strength. Say a No. 6 wire is conducting 20 amperes and then it is increased to 40 amperes. The loss from heat radiation will be four times as much.

The current flowing in the wires across the street will be the same on both ends. The voltage will not, however. The meter measures the actual power passing in the wires at the point of connection of the meter wires. The lost energy from the new location of the meter may not be much, according to the current the several No. 6 wires are conducting.

You might demand the company to install an additional wire to act solely as a potential wire to measure the voltage at the entrance to your building. The watt is the volt times ampere. Hence, the drop you speak of affects the wattage also.

Speed of Projection Machines

J. J. B. Toledo, O.—What is the proper speed for a motion picture projector or how many revolutions per minute?

What is the length of life for 1,000 feet of film and how many days will it stand the wear and tear of the projector?

How many duplicates are made from each subject?

ANSWER: The correct speed to run a projector is the exact speed at which the film was taken. It will vary slightly according to the scene and the cameraman taking the picture. As an approximate guide the cranking handle should be turned about fifty to sixty revolutions per minute. This will be varied too by the make of the projector. The surest way is to watch closely the action in the picture on the screen and turn more slowly or faster to obtain a natural walk or other action to the persons in the picture.

Starting in with a good film stock and a machine in easy running order a film will last for a long time. With the same film used in a machine not in perfect adjustment it may only last a few days or even hours, accordingly. There is no definite answer to the length of the life of a film. There are too many circumstances to affect it.

Also with the number of duplicates positive films made from each film negative. This will vary to the popularity of the subject. A producer may order so many positives according to his judgment as to the subject. With special features a limited number only are made and with comedy or single reelers, it may be several thousands ordered, et cetera.

How to Remove Blue Streaks

The R. M. McGehee, Ark.—In a question of March 6 to W. W., he asks what makes a blue streak, but does not specify where in the picture. I have the same trouble, but will state that mine is a blue streak from top to bottom on the left-hand side or margin of picture, about two inches wide. I can remove it by turning the objective lens but in doing so it throws picture out of focus.

ANSWER: The blue streak may be from defective chromatic aberration in the lens, judging from its disappearance when moving the objective lens. This is a good clue toward locating the seat of trouble.

It might be suggested that you turn one of the lens combination of the objective around about one-half turn and see if it will remove the streak. If possible try another objective lens. You might be able to borrow one for this experiment.

If the color is always in the same location it would seem to be seated in one of the lenses and not from the light source. Look inside the barrel mounting of the lenses and see if it has a dull black surface; also the side of aperture plate next the objective lens, and see if this surface does not reflect some light into the objective. Clean the lenses thoroughly.

Difference Between Dynamo and Motor

T. S. M., Richmond, Va.—Will you please explain the difference between a dynamo and a motor? Can a dynamo act of a motor?

ANSWER: The definitions of a dynamo-electric generator is a machine for converting mechanical energy into electrical energy; in other words, it generates electric pressure when driven by mechanical power.

The term dynamo-electric generator is so long that it is usually and unavoidably shortened into "dynamo," which has the same meaning. The name electric generator or simply "generator," is commonly used when the machine performs that function, in order to distinguish it from the motor, which is also a dynamo-electric machine.

This last term is employed generically to include practically all electrical machinery—direct and alternating current generators, motors, rotary converters, etc. An alternating generator is commonly called an "alternator."

An electric motor is a machine for converting electrical energy into mechanical energy; in other words, it produces mechanial power when supplied with electric current. The two machines are very similar in construction.

In fact, the same machine can be used equally well for either purpose. They are generally made slightly different, but this is only done to adapt them more perfectly to certain conditions of operation.

Causes of Sparking

D. V. N., Chicago, Ill.—What causes sparking at the commutator in a motor? Is there any way in which it can be prevented?

ANSWER: This is a common trouble that is not objectionable if moderate in amount and duration. Beyond these limits, however, it is likely to become serious because it burns and roughens the commutation and at the same time it produces heat. This heat may spread and damage the armature, or bearings.

This trouble can be prevented by proper design and construction. When these have been done a motor may spark when it is overloaded. A short circuit, leak, or ground on the line may also have the effect of overloading a dynamo. A motor may bind in its bearings and cause sparking.

The wear of the bearings may cause the armature to rub the pole faces and cause sparking. If the commutator is smooth and the armature turns freely, the position of the brushes, if not in correct position, is a very frequent source for sparking.

Move the brushes back and forth until a point is found to produce no sparking. High copper bars in a commutator, or hard mica, will lift the brush and cause sparking. Brushes should fit the curvature exactly and held with a firm tension against the commutator. Have the motor set on a firm foundation.

Angle of Incidence Defined

M. O. H., Pittsburgh, Pa.—What are the meanings of the two terms catoptrics and dioptrics? Also what is angle of incidence?

ANSWER: In the science of light the phenomena of refraction and reflection of light have been given separate divisions in the science. Catoptrics deals with the laws and nature of light from reflecting surfaces, such as mirrors and screens.

Dioptrics deals with light being bent from a straight line by means of transparent bodies, as glass and water.

The angle of incidence is the term used when speaking of a ray of light striking a reflecting or refracting surface. It is the incoming ray of light to the surface, and, after reflection, it is the reflected ray. After refraction, it is the refracted ray.

AIRDOMES

Owners of airdomes listen! Do you want the best patronage of your neighborhood? If you do, you will not use last year's sheet iron Screen. It looks pretty bad after the winter, with its bulges and dents and rusty spots. Even after giving it the "once over" with a coat of white paint, it won't do.

The best patronage of your neighborhood demands a Screen that not only gives them brilliantly clear pictures, but by that very brilliancy, enables you to commence your show two or three hours earlier every evening, or under proper conditions, to give it in the afternoon. Write and learn how this is done.

FIRST RUN RENOVATED REELS

Boston, Mass.
Rex Film Renovator Co.,
Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

The Rex Film Renovator which you installed for us some time ago is the best thing the writer has ever come across in this line. It does the work so well that we call our films which have just been put through it "first run renovated." And aside from a very short distance from the beginning and the ending of the film it is indeed "first run" again. I can highly recommend this Renovator to any Exchange man who wants to have his cheaper customers satisfied. Our Exhibitors are now beginning to ask for "renovated" reels, and not for "age," as the Renovator almost entirely eliminates the age objection.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes for your continued success, I am, posited and also lifts the reel out on opening the door. It is absolutely fireproof.

Yours very truly,

The vault is made of heavy galvanized iron, the sides and bottom of one piece and the ends are locked and double seamed; the covers are hinged and riveted and the partitions are made with a hollow air space between each vault, the reel being held suspended in the vault by a band which is fastened to the front of the box and passing around the reel to the center of the cover which holds the reel suspended in the center of the vault and also closes the cover by the weight of the reel, and at the same time lifts the reel out on opening.

The whole box is made of lock seams and riveted, and comes in standard sizes for three, four, five or six reels. Other sizes can be made to order. Prices range from $7 to $12.

American Shipments of Film Abroad, 1914-1915

IN the last six months of 1911, 42,468,442 linear feet of American cinematograph films, valued at $3,277,668, were shipped to other countries. In 1912—the first complete calendar year for which figures are to be had—exports amounted to 62,240,743 feet, value $5,501,593; in 1913 these shipments rose to 146,436,783 feet, though the value dropped to $5,291,464; in 1914 they receded to 117,580,304 feet, value $4,742,620. The countries that shared to the largest extent in this trade were:

Exported to—	1912		1913		1914
	Linear feet	Value	Linear feet	Value	Linear feet	Value
France ...	1,019,171	$375,549	306,774	$41,688	316,020	$26,261

The extent to which the present European conflict has affected the American export trade in motion-picture films—chiefly through interposing transportation difficulties—is apparent from the following table, which gives comparative figures for the seven months ending with January, 1913, 1914, and 1915:

Exported to—	July, 1912-January, 1913		July, 1913-January, 1914		July, 1914-January, 1915

It is interesting to note that the average value per linear foot of film exported in the last six months of 1911 was 7.72 cents; in the complete calendar year 1912, 8.84 cents; in 1913, 3.61 cents; in 1914, 4.03 cents; and in the seven-month period ending with January, 1915, 5.39 cents.

The manufacture of films and the production of motion-picture plays have reached vast proportions in the United States, but no official figures of the production or consumption of "raw" films in this country exist. However, a marked development of the trade in foreign "raw" films followed the placing of these on the free list under the law of October 4, 1913, imports of "sentitized but not exposed" films into the United States during 1914 aggregating 70,518,288 linear feet (against 17,945,908 feet of completed film), and in value constituting more than one-half the total for that year. Details of the film imports of the United States during the last three calendar years and in the seven months ending with January, 1913, 1914, and 1915, follow:

Period	Sensitized, but not exposed		Positives		All other (entered by value only)	Total value

PLANNING OF PICTURE THEATRES—II

By Percival R. Pereira

IN discussing the matter of balconies I shall quote from an article by myself in the "American Architect" of September 23, 1914:

"In modern picture houses and, in fact, in most of the more recent playhouses, it has been found best to omit the gallery or second balcony entirely. The advantage of this is not only from the standpoint of economy, which is effected by the fact that the auditorium may be reduced in height, but a finer architectural effect may be obtained.

"Also in modern picture houses, even where vaudeville is presented in connection with the pictures, the prices are in most cases moderate, and it is found that a certain class of patrons will be kept away in the event that they will have to climb to an upper balcony or gallery.

"In this connection it is well to provide the entrance to the balcony through the main entrance, as is usual in the regular theatre, access to the same being greatly improved by providing a mezzanine directly over the rear of the orchestra from which tunnels or vomitories are extended, bringing the patrons out on the lower portions of the balcony and at those points placing ushers to direct the audience to their seats.

"At these openings a cross-over aisle is nearly always provided; that is, a stepping wider than the other steppings of the balcony on which seats are located. Seats are sometimes located at the back of the cross-over aisle. In houses of great depth more than one cross-over aisle is found necessary and the main balcony stairs are extended up to a second mezzanine with additional outlets further up the balcony.

"This arrangement of cross-over aisles and tunnels eliminates the necessity of climbing to the rear or highest point of the balcony and then walking down the aisles to reach the lower or front portion, which is, of course, inconvenient for the patrons of the continuous performance house, as it creates unnecessary disturbance."

Slope of Balcony Determined

The foregoing, of course, applies only to the larger type of picture theatre, since a shallow balcony will, as a rule, not be of sufficient height to leave head-room for a mezzanine. If the theatre is to be provided with a stage the balcony must have the same pitch as in a regular playhouse so as to provide the usual sight lines.

When a stage with scenery is not to be used, then the pitch of the balcony may be reduced considerably, at a consequent saving in height of the auditorium and in cost of construction. Auditoriums of more than thirty rows deep are to be avoided in either a picture house or playhouse.

As to the doorways, great judgment should be used in determining on the number and location of them, since very often it is found advisable to provide more ample facilities for entrance and exit than called for by the laws. The value of emptying a house rapidly is fully appreciated by theatre owners and operators.

These doors should not in any individual case be less than five feet in width, with single or double doors as conditions require, and where exterior doors, the same should be provided with panic bolts, which are spring bolts operated by means of a lever arm horizontally placed across the door.

The lobby should not be obstructed by a projecting ticket booth or announcement frames or furniture, unless it is of unusual width.

The placing of temporary vestibule doors during the winter months is often done with very little consideration to their appearance, and, frequently they are not provided for in the original layout. This is a very serious consideration and should be arranged for in the design of the building as first planned.

3 Sets of Doors in Cold Regions

In the colder sections of the country it is usually thought proper to have three sets of entrance doors intervening between the auditorium and the outside. Of course, this is possible only where a long entrance space is practicable. The constant incoming and outgoing of the audience where doors are so provided does not tend to make the auditorium drafty.

The toilet rooms for men and women should, where possible, be widely separated, and should be reached by passing through at least two sets of doors from the auditorium. This, of course, cannot always be obtained, but its advantage is obvious.

As to the location of the ticket booth, the treatment of the picture screen, or proscenium, and its surroundings; these will be discussed in another article.

Enterprise Projection Machines in Big Demand

THE Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, is receiving a large number of orders from schools, churches and sanitariums for projectors and, if the orders continue to come in as they have during the past three months of this year, it would seem that every school and church in the country would be equipped with a projector.

Some of the very recent shipments are as follows:

Punta Gorda School, Punta Gorda, Fla.; W. N. Fuller, care of Board of Education, Cumberland, Wis.; the Catholic Assumption Church, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Joseph Corder, Corrall, Ia.; and Battle Creek Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich.

At all of the above places were installed late model motiographs.

MAJESTIC, DETROIT, THROWS OPEN ITS DOORS

OVER five thousand of Detroit's select people attempted to gain admission the opening night of the New Majestic, Woodward and Willis Avenues, Detroit, Mich., which threw open its doors for the first time Thursday evening, April 1, at seven o'clock.

There have been theatre openings galore in the past year, but it is doubtful if any were more auspicious and noteworthy. There were floral offerings galore in the foyer and lobby sent by friends. All of the officers of the company were on hand to receive the congratulations bestowed upon them.

The majestic theatre company consists of A. Arthur Caille, president, Henry J. Guthard, secretary and treasurer, and M. W. McGee, managing director, formerly of New York.

The program for the first night consisted of selections by the orchestra, the Majestic topical review, Pathé hand colored travel views, George Kleine's masterpiece, "The Woman Who Dared," southern melodies by three young ladies, and "The Dancing Beetle," with Richard Carle. In addition to a large orchestra seated upon the stage, there has been installed a large duplex pipe organ, performed by Prof. Frank Fruttchey, an expert organist.

The Majestic is built in the amphitheatre style, there being no balcony or gallery. The total seating capacity is 2,160.

And now just a few words about the theatre itself. It occupies a plot of ground 120 by 175 feet, the main entrance being on Woodward avenue. It is a two-story structure, built of stone, steel and concrete. The stage is 48 by 28 feet deep. C. Howard Crane, of Detroit and New York, was the architect and the Frank Farrington Company, of Detroit, the builders.

The front is faced with glazed polychrome terra cotta, treated in modern architectural style. The entrance has three stores on either side and the second floor is to be laid out for high-class shops or offices.

Elaborate Finish of Entrance

The entrance is entirely finished with tile, marble and terra cotta. In addition to the foyer there is a recessed loggia or lounging room which is artistically furnished and fitted up, and which contains an open fireplace; on one side of the foyer are spacious retiring and rest rooms for ladies, with a maid in attendance, while on the other there is a large smoking room for gentlemen.

The arrangement of the theatre itself is novel, original and unique. Everyone of the 2,160 seats has a perfect "sight line." Each seat is finished in leather, firmly upholstered. There are forty boxes on both sides of the auditorium and across the center; the box chairs are made of reed, finished in old ivory.

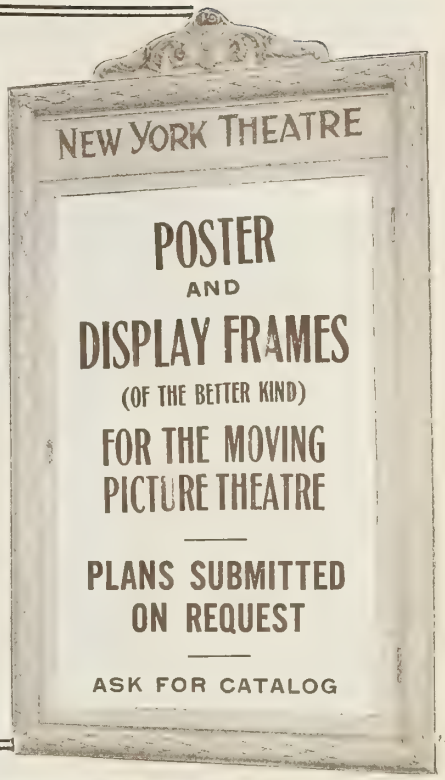
Ivory, gold and old rose are the basis of the color scheme, while the decorations are conformed to the Adam period. The lobby color scheme harmonizes with that of the auditorium. Its mosaic and terrazzo flooring, marble, tile and wainscoting with marble trimmings are magnificent specimens of the best workmanship.

As to the ventilation, in the cold season the air is heated in a specially constructed chamber and forced into the theatre by powerful electric fans so that any temperature desired may be maintained. An attic ten feet in height between the ceiling of the theatre and the roof also permits of the proper cooling.

Gorgeous Draperies

As for the draperies, the old rose velour with gold trimmings has created a harmonious effect. It is used in the many portieres, lambrequins and immense stage curtain. The same color scheme has been carried out in the box office, lobby, foyers and throughout the theatre.

The orchestra is seated on the stage, and is a reproduction of a theatre with its boxes and stairways on both sides. On the opening night there was a beautifully gowned woman in each stage box enhancing the effect.



The box office is provided with an electric ticket seller, a machine capable of delivering to patrons 275 tickets a minute. At the foyer entrance has been installed an electric ticket chopper—a machine that defaces tickets so that they cannot be used again. Both of these devices were made by the Caille Brothers Company, of which A. Arthur Caille is at the head.

In the projection room has been installed two Powers 6-A machines.

Prices are from ten to twenty-five cents. It will be exclusively a motion picture theatre, there being four changes weekly.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS wishes its officers, promoters, directors and management the very best of success.

Directory of New Theatres

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

F. J. REMBUSH, of Shelbyville, of "Mirror Screen" fame, has purchased the Dream Theatre at Martinsville, Ind., from the Switow Amusement Company and is running the Mutual program.

The Wells Bijou Theatre, of Evansville, Ind., formerly a legitimate theatre, has reopened as a moving picture theatre and is running a Mutual Master release four days each week. Philip Scora is the manager.

J. T. Lacey, of Muncie, is booking service for his mammoth airdome at Muncie, Ind., which will open for the summer, May 10.

The Grand Opera House at Terre Haute, Ind., formerly a legitimate theatre, has changed its policy and is running short tabloid shows and feature pictures, running each Mutual Master release four days.

Indianapolis Houses Show Activity.

The Lyric Theatre, of Indianapolis, will change its policy this week. It will run Mutual Master pictures with vaudeville.

The Starland Theatre, in West Market street, Indianapolis, has reopened after undergoing extensive repairs and alterations. The entire theatre has been redecorated, and the color scheme of old ivory and amber has been carried out. A women's retiring room at the right of the lobby has been added.

The Starland was the first moving picture theatre in Indianapolis to show the Kriterion program. Grant Heth, manager of the theatre, announces the formal spring opening Easter Monday, when he will inaugurate a special lunch hour program from 12 to 1:30 o'clock.

W. W. McEwen has been appointed manager of the new Orpheum Theatre, Lafayette and Shelby streets, Detroit, succeeding Harry P. Williamson. Mr. McEwen was formerly associated with the John H. Kunsky, Inc.

The Colonial Theatre, in North Illinois street, Indianapolis, or "movie row," which has been closed for some time, will open Monday under the management of Bingham, Crose & Cohen, with a feature moving picture program and vaudeville. Three performances will be given each day.

Alex Cornut has purchased the interest of his partner, Clyde Willard, in the Westport Theatre, Westport, Ind. Mr. Willard has gone out of the moving picture business entirely as he recently sold his interest in a Greensburg theatre.

The Broadway Theatre at Logansport, Ind., is being redecorated and refinished inside and out for the formal opening the middle of April. Joseph Schmal, of Chicago, will put on moving pictures and stock.

Samuel L. Cohn, who has an option on a valuable site in Monument place, Indianapolis, and expects to erect a $200,000 moving picture theatre, says he has no theatre interests in Denver, but that his interests are in San Francisco.

The Royal Theatre Company, Manistee, Mich., plans to completely rebuild its theatre, making it 48 by 100 feet in size.

With Exhibitors In and Near Pittsburgh

New managers have been installed at the Carlton theatres in both Butler and Dubois, Pa. W. H. Hampton, of LeRoy, N. Y., has purchased an interest in the Dubois house and will act as its manager from now on. Harry Thompson, who was its former manager, has been transferred to Mr. Carlton's house at Butler.

Mr. Walker, who formerly managed the house, will remain with the theatre and act as its publicity manager as the theatre is doing a lot in this line. The entire town is being billed by Mr. Carlton the same as though he were running a regular performance of some road company, and it is said he has found this to be most profitable in bringing business to his house.

A. J. Lax, formerly manager of the Sharpsburg Cameraphone Theatre at Sharpsburg, Pa., has been installed as manager of the Cameraphone Theatre at 1600 Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh. He took charge of the place last Thursday.

It is understood Mr. Young, one of the stockholders in the theatre, has sold his interests in the concern. He was the former manager of the theatre and it is said he has other interests which occupy too much of his time for him to take an active part in the management of the Cameraphone.

Erskine and McGivern are erecting a new motion picture theatre at Hermoine, Pa., which they expect to open in about two weeks. The name of the new theatre is "The Grand," and it is said to be one of the most complete theatres of its kind in that part of the state.

The theatre is to have a capacity of 200 and is a new and neat proposition. The entire equipment for the theatre has been secured from Pittsburgh firms and the work of getting the auditorium ready for the opening two weeks hence is progressing rapidly.

Theatre Activities in Ohio

Lorain, O., is to have a winter garden, as the Majestic Theatre is to be converted into a place of amusement of that kind. L. C. Hoover and Gus Schroeder, of Cleveland, have secured the playhouse on a long lease. They will make changes in the interior of the house, and have announced that their policy will be to run high class photoplays exclusively. The showhouse will be redecorated. They plan to install an air-cooling plant, so that the house can be open all summer.

The front of the Colonial Theatre, Ashland, O., will be remodeled and new furnishings installed. The Princess Theatre, in the same town, has put in a new steel ceiling and made other improvements.

Manager Gebhart, of the Grand Theatre, Ashland, O., has put in an attractively arranged box, which accommodates eight persons. It is located in the rear of the theatre and on an elevation above the rest of the seats. A Wurlitzer musical instrument, which plays twenty selections without change, has been added to the equipment of the house.

T. J. Powell, veteran motion picture theatre man, has bought the Gem Theatre, Sandusky, O., from H. C. Mills. Mr. Powell has been located at Lorain, and he has announced that he will remodel the house. Mr. Mills and his wife will retire from the picture theatre field for a rest, but are expected to get back into the show business in the fall.

Manager O. L. Taylor, of the Majestic, Lancaster, O., announces that he will retain that theatre, but is seeking a buyer for the Orpheum Theatre, at Nelsonville.

Shaheen and Thomas have just opened a new theatre at Clairton, Pa., and it is said with the opening of the doors the crowd waiting outside filled the theatre to overflowing.

The theatre is a well designed, fireproof structure, large, roomy and well ventilated and is one of the best theatres in the town.

The proprietors have several other theatres on their list and it is said will shortly visit several towns in the vicinity of Clairton to look over several properties with the view of buying and erecting other theatres.

The Stanley Theatre, owned by the Stanley Company, of which Mr. Stanley V. Mastbaum is president, will on April 26 celebrate its first anniversary.

This occasion will be made a notable one; the management will announce its program in a few days. The Stanley was the first picture theatre in Philadelphia to raise the price of admission to twenty-five cents, and that standard has been maintained, no seats being reserved. The Stanley has 1,200 seats and uses first run Paramount program in conjunction with special comedies and news features.

Will Stop Vaudeville

The Globe Theatre, owned by the Stanley Company, will on next Monday give up its vaudeville policy and for the present during the summer season, run special feature pictures beginning with "Hypocrites," the Bosworth film.

The Globe, which seats 2,200 and cost $1,000,000, was opened last summer. "Hypocrites" will be first shown on Sunday at an invitation performance.

The Regent Theatre has been sold by N. R. Boyd to a stock company not heretofore interested in picture houses, the president of which is Mr. Jacques Moore of Jenkinstown, Pa. The price is said to be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

The Regent will continue its present policy and book as formerly through the Stanley Booking Company.

Mr. Boyd owns the Arcadia Theatre now nearing completion. The Arcadia at Sixteenth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, while but one block distant from the Stanley and the Regent, is the very finest theatre in the city to be built in the business part of Chestnut street.

The Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, which has so successfully emerged from the legitimate to a full-fledged picture house, is six blocks further down town on Chestnut street.

The Victor Theatre, Sixteenth and McKeon streets, has changed hands, going from its present proprietor, J. M. Walters, to S. W. Henry.

The Empress, built but three months ago at a cost of $84,000 with 1,200 seats, will come up at Sheriff's sale this week. The Empress is owned by the Manayunk Realty Co., and is situated in Manayunk, a suburban part of Philadelphia.

Another theatre to come under the Sheriff's hammer is the Kriterion, formerly the Lancaster, at Forty-fifth street and Lancaster avenue, Philadelphia. This theatre is about two years old and has 500 seats; there is a mortgage of $1,000 and a judgment of $9,600 against the property.

A serious panic was averted at the Woodland Theatre, 71 Woodland avenue, the other evening. When fire broke out in a nearby dwelling, the management instructed the musicians to play a stirring march while "goodnight" was flashed on the screen. The audience moved out in a quiet manner and no one was hurt.

The Overbrook Theatre was one of the few moving picture houses to close during Holy Week. The management took this opportunity of redecorating the interior of the theatre.

A permit has been granted to Chas. E. Fuchter for a motion picture theatre at 6149 Woodland avenue, Philadelphia. This will be a one-story, stone, steel and brick structure, 50 x 125 feet, and will cost $15,000.

Kline Is Manager of Palace in Harrisburg, Pa.

W. A. Kline, formerly traveling representative of the Fairmount Feature Film Company, 1304 Vine street, Philadelphia, a branch of the Universal Film Company, has become manager of the Palace theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. Mr. Kline succeeded Clyde D. Klinger, who has become manager of the Photoplay theatre, here, owned by Isaac Silverman. The Palace is owned by George W. Bennethum, of Reading. Mr. Kline at one time was manager of the Comedy theatre, Baltimore.

The Picto motion picture theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., which for the past several days has been undergoing thorough repairs, reopened March 30. "Smouldering Fires," with Warren Kerrigan as the star, proved an excellent drawing card for the opening day.

Fire practically destroyed the Pastime theatre, Brunswick,

PROSPECTIVE vs. EXISTING THEATRE MAILING LIST SERVICE

Our service includes new motion picture theatres contemplated or being built, or only those existing, or both, as required. The former comprises a card resume of what you now receive thru trade papers and clipping service, together with many additional items secured by our reporters, summarized and standardized, and mailed to you daily, reported as received with subsequent reports verifying or cancelling.

The fact that we report all information received, irrespective of whether it is an unverified rumor (which we use our best endeavors to substantiate later), or a verified fact, makes it of particular value.

Waiting until plans are filed or the ground is broken, is ofttimes the means of losing an order. The earlier the approach is made the fewer the "lines of resistance" to overcome.

Changes in ownership included if desired. All classes of new motion picture ventures are reported. The saving in office expense thru its use will pay for its cost.

Write me for further details.

Me., a motion picture house, last week, causing a loss of about $10,000 to Wallace O. Gould, the proprietor, and the destruction of the film "The Master Key," which was the feature picture of the program at the time.

Manager Gould and his family occupied a flat in the building and barely escaped. Mr. Gould jumped from an upper window, receiving a severe cut on the right leg, and was badly bruised. His wife sustained a fracture on the left leg and both arms were cut by glass. Miss Amy Gould, their daughter, fractured her left leg and broke one rib.

News of the Theatres in Northern California

A. C. Pabst has taken over the Swastika theatre at Sausalito, Cal., and will conduct this in conjunction with the house being erected for him at Mill Valley by C. L. Mehrten.

Plans are being made to reopen the Crystal theatre at Grass Valley, Cal., at an early date. The women of that place are devoting their energies to securing programs for children.

R. A. Howell and R. J. Sheldon have closed the Curry theatre at Martinez, Cal., and the former has left for Benicia.

A moving picture theatre has been opened at Sutter City, Cal., by Smith & Benham in an amusement hall recently erected. Shows will be given on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, and on Wednesday evening will be followed by a dance. On the opening day ice cream was served free to patrons.

The Novelty Show Company, headed by John Hayward and Geo. H. Perry, of Cloverdale, Cal., has purchased a theatre at Geyserville, a summer resort, and will give a weekly show. This concern now has houses at Cloverdale, Hopland, Asti and Geyserville.

S. Dales has reopened the Dales theatre at Los Molinos, Cal. A show recently advertised had to be postponed, owing to the failure of the films to arrive, and it developed that three of the boys in the audience had walked five miles to attend the entertainment.

W. Burgen has taken over the Orpheum theatre at Alturas, Cal.

The First Presbyterian Church at Fresno, Cal., has installed a moving picture machine and is giving entertainments regularly.

The Majestic theatre at Spokane, Wash., has been taken over by A. H. McMillan, who will remodel it.

Beck's theatre, Spokane, Wash., is now under the management of E. M. Helmund, formerly of Seattle.

The Osra Amusement Company will erect a moving picture theatre at Bremerton, Wash., at an estimated cost of $65,000.

A new theatre is being planned to take the place of the canvas-topped theatre situated at the southwest corner of Grand and Cass avenues, St. Louis. George Colovos is the owner, and will retain the name The Fair, for the new house, which will be thoroughly modern in every respect.

The White Way Theatre and Airdome, a new house seating 600 persons is nearing completion at Sixth and Hickory streets, St. Louis. The house will be equipped with two projecting machines, all the modern improvements, and will open for business on April 10.

An important change has taken place among the large motion picture houses of Washington, D. C., in the departure of A. M. Waters for Roanoke, Va., where he will assume the management of the Paramount Theatre. Mr. Waters has been the popular manager of the Apollo Theatre, Washington, for the past several years and it was on account of his exceptional business abilities to build up a new theatre that he was offered the management of the Paramount.

Minusa in New Office in St. Louis

THE Minusa Cine Products Company have taken possession of a new suite of offices on the sixth floor of the Houser building, St. Louis, specially refitted for their occupancy.

$25,000 Organ for Harrisburgh, Pa. House

THE Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., of which James and Athens George are the proprietors, installed a Wurlitzer Unit organ, the first of the kind to be introduced in that city.

The organ has a two-board manual, 65 stops and 32-foot pedals, all operated by one musician. The management says the cost of the instrument was $25,000.

Piano Duets in Oregon Theatre

CLIFFORD L. CARNEY, without doubt one of the cleverest organists and pianists in the Northwest, has introduced a novelty at the National Theatre, Portland, Ore.

Assisted by Mr. Russell they play piano duets, and on an organ picture also use a piano accompaniment. Mr. Carney is both versatile and talented to an amazing degree, and his new stunt at the National has met with universal approval.

Mr. Carney has been in charge of the musical department of the new theatre since its opening. It has a twenty-piece orchestra.

utilized for the projection booth than is absolutely necessary, and the converters are removed from all danger of fire. should it occur by the film being ignited from the intense light and the necessary heat therewith of the projection lamp.

These converters have been in operation for over one year. and have given excellent satisfaction. At no time has it been necessary to interrupt the performance on account of failure of the converter to supply current for projection purposes.

Special efforts have been made in solving the question of heating and ventilation. Two air washing fans, manufactured by J. Zellweger and Sons, each of the capacity of 33,000 cubic feet of air per minute, force this into the plenum chamber, which extends under the entire first story auditorium, and under the balcony forcing fresh "washed" (either heated in winter or cooled in summer) air through mushroom ventilators placed under the seats.

Two Big Exhaust Fans

Furthermore, the truss loft above the auditorium acts as a "minus chamber" and is connected up to two 33,000 cubic feet per minute capacity each exhaust fans. This means that the air contained in the entire auditorium can be renewed every two and one-half minutes. These fans are driven by Wagner polyphase, alternating current, variable speed motors. The air in the theatre is always kept at constant humidity, about 70 degrees, which provides the maximum comfort for the theatre patrons.

During its first summer, the hottest summer that St. Louis has known for several years, the New Grand Central theatre was the one cool place in St. Louis, and many people were known to attend the theatre not entirely for the very excellent films that were shown, but for the purpose of keeping cool.

This theatre is owned and operated by the Rex Amusement and Realty Company, of which Edmond Koeln is the president, and William Sievers is secretary and treasurer. The latter gentleman also is the manager.

The architects, Helfensteller, Hirsch and Watson, of St. Louis, deserve considerable credit for the manner in which they worked out the details of this theatre.

Arc Controllers Ordered For Keith-Proctor Theatres

THE Speed Controller Company, Inc., 257-259 William street, New York, has just received from J. J. Murdock, executive manager of the United Booking Offices, an order for twenty-two Arc Controllers for shipment to various points, and it is understood that this order is only preliminary to an order which will cover the equipment of all of the houses of the Keith-Proctor-Orpheum circuits that show motion pictures.

In view of the number of houses that are controlled by the United Booking Offices, the Speed Controller Company anticipates that this order alone will keep it busy for some time.

The Arc Controller was described in detail in a recent issue of Motion Picture News, and we believe that its universal adoption is only a matter of the length of time it takes exhibitors to realize that the quality of their projection is their stock in trade.

The Four Grateset Films

Harold MacGrath's Most Popular Novel

"The Carpet From Bagdad"

A tale of the Orient—an adventure story teeming with Far-Eastern Mysticism—of how a prayer rug, boldly stolen from a Mosque, is followed with Fanatical devotion through a series of exciting adventures to the end. The stoical fatalism of the Far East is unfolded in MacGrath's inimitable style and includes camel caravans, adventures on the burning sands of the Sahara, Streets in Cairo, and features an all-star cast including Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary, and Wheeler Oakman. An unusual plot and beautiful Oriental scenery.

Anna Katherine Green's Fascinating Mystery Story

"The Millionaire Baby"

Anna Katherine Green is known as the queen of the mystery story and "The Millionaire Baby" is her most popular work. The baffling plot has been faithfully followed in the screen adaptation and exciting action is the watchword in every foot of the five reels of adventure. One of the most elaborately staged film dramas of the year. Hundreds of players appear in several of the big scenes. Harry Mestayer, John Charles and others take the leading roles. A thrilling story of mystery, of plot and of counter plot!

PECIALS
Of A Great Combination

Edward E. Rose's Soul-Stirring, Intense Drama
"The Rosary"

Edward E. Rose, author of the world-famous stage play, "The Rosary," has adapted his wonderful story for motion picture production. Opening in Auld Ireland, the life work of Father Kelly leads him across the seas to central Ohio, and later to the Lower East Side of Greater New York. Wonderful lighting effects, true comedy and pathos, a strong plot and lovely scenic investure make "The Rosary" an unusual Spectacular Special. Kathlyn Williams and her supporting company are featured. A pictureplay that will bring both laughter and tears.

Charles Hoyt's Greatest American Comedy
"A Texas Steer"

is quality. Quality is made up of many units. Acting, photography, story and advertising material are the essentials. Kriterion pictures have stood the acid test. They have been put through every trial imaginable with the result that they are demanded more and more every day by exhibitors and public alike.

Kriterion quality abounds in the necessary requirements. Compliments and testimonials pour in with every mail. The exchanges furnishing Kriterion service prosper because of the splendid quality in Kriterion pictures.

EDWARD ALEXANDER

JUSTINA WAYNE

ALLEN FRALICK

RENA ROGERS

WE HEREBY TESTIFY

And those exhibitors whose letters we quote, attest to the superiority of Kriterion Service.

Such expressions as are contained in these testimonials have a convincing ring to them.

They are but a few picked at random. We print them in proof of our many statements that Kriterion Service is highly pleasing to both exhibitors and patrons.

They speak not only well of Kriterion pictures, but also of Kriterion advertising matter. Every theatre owner knows that half the battle of getting people to coming to the theatre is the advertising material used. Then to have the pictures fulfill your advertised promises is securing the faith of the public.

Read these over carefully, undoubtedly one or the other of them will answer some question that has come into your mind concerning Kriterion.

I have run the KRITERION Service the past week, and found it to be very satisfactory in every respect. The two reel features are exceptionally fine, and the photography, production, etc., entirely up to the standard. The comedies are also very good, taken as a whole, the service is as good as any on the market in my estimation. Respectfully yours,
Howard G. Carroll, Mgr.,
International Theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

I never in my experience in the show business have received as good a selection of subjects, every one having a cause for the making of it, especially the dramas which were far above the average, each and every one having a good punch. If your paper will not pull people into a house there is something radically wrong with the neighborhood or the house.
Looking forward to my next week's program and wishing you the success that you deserve, believe me to be,
A Kriterion Booster,
L. Israel,
Main Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

Although I am a new man in the game, I have heard many of my patrons say that I have shown the highest class and cleanest pictures that have ever been shown in our city, and can see new ones come each evening, and will say that if I am able to put this house on a paying basis it will be largely due to your good Service for which I am so far very grateful. Yours very truly,
Ira W. West,
Rex Theatre, Oberlin, O.

The comedy was refined, the drama strong and appealing, and held me spell bound. Another thing I noticed was that the photography is exceptionally clear and the settings are distinctively the best I have ever seen in a regular service. Yours very cordially,
F. J. Rembush,
Fountain Theatre, Terre Haute, Ind.

Paper, none better. Dramas, A-1 in every respect. Plenty of action and good photography, and your comedies are good, clean subjects, with a laugh in every one. Yours' very truly,
H. W. Dirmeyer, Mgr.,
Princess Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

I was certainly more than pleased with the pictures that you had been sending me, and what is more important, my patrons also are more than satisfied and are showing their satisfaction by filling my house. You have the three requirements for good pictures. Splendid photoghaphy, acting and setting.
Hoping that both your success and mine may continue, I am, Yours very truly,
Sam Barck, Owner,
Market Square Theatre, Cleveland, O.

The service that we have been getting is satisfactory in every way, both dramas and comedies, and I trust that they will keep to the standard that they have set for themselves.
Yours truly, Hilda Reark,
Theatorium, 710 Market St., Sandusky, O.

I want to say to you that I am more than pleased with your service so far, and you have the best of advertising matter of any service I have run yet.
Wishing you the best of success, I am
Very respectfully yours,

MY SUCCESS AND YOURS

By Edwin Thanhouser

Why isn't business better? Been trying to figure that out, have you? Well, you know that I'm not given to exaggeration, so read carefully:

I am not an experiment! My pictures earned money for you exhibitors for years. Why? Because you always knew this:—That every Thanhouser film made by Edwin Thanhouser himself you could Depend upon. Day in, day out, you knew for sure—positive—CERTAIN—that your audience would enjoy these Thanhouser releases. Your show was CONSISTENT!

How many brands are consistent? What percentage of them are good—what bad—and don't one bad one hurt you more than the good you get out of five good ones?

Why? YOUR SHOWS ARE NOT CONSISTENT! People take a chance every time they enter your house! They can't depend on you.

If you're still losing, it's your time now to become consistent. Inject Thanhouser into your program somewhere and be safe. Be consistent. Don't be haphazard—spasmodic—don't be a "once-in-a-while"—be an "always is!" That's how I made good!

Send me your name. I want to tell you something you'll be mighty interested in.

The Newsstand Ghost

THERE are some ghosts which, seemingly, will not be laid.

One of them is newsstand circulation, as applied to a trade journal.

Several times previously the matter has been taken up on this page and an effort made to show clearly why it is impossible for a trade paper to indulge to any extent in newsstand distribution.

But the ghost keeps bobbing up.

A READER goes to Palm Beach and writes to know why he cannot get his copy of the NEWS at the hotel newsstand. An advertiser drops off the train at Colorado Springs and goes back to his seat disgruntled because the depot newsstand has no copies.

The explanation is very simple; at least so it seems to the publisher. He feels that most anyone, particularly the advertiser who is, or ought to be, interested in circulation, should understand it easily enough.

IN the first place, it would take an extremely large edition—very much larger than the best trade journal boasts—to supply every newsstand in the United States and Canada with even a handful of copies apiece.

But this would be a splendid achievement if each copy of this big edition went to an exhibitor, or exchange, or dealer, or manufacturer of motion pictures—to the trade, in other words.

However, this is absolutely impossible—absolutely out of the question, for one main reason alone,—there are more newsstands in the country than there are exhibitors.

THE basis of the matter is this:

A trade journal, a good trade journal like MOTION PICTURE NEWS loses heavily on circulation. The better it is, the more heavily it loses. By this I mean that it costs over and over again as much to put out a copy of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, as we get for it from the reader.

It would be difficult for any one to believe just how excessively the publication does cost us.

BUT that is not worrying us. We are adding more cost all the time, and we expect to continue to give the reader more and more for his money. This is the way we acquire circulation. It is the only way.

And this circulation we sell to the advertiser. It is a genuine circulation, and its quality and quantity make it valuable to him.

But only on this basis—of quality as well as quantity. It must be all-wool-and-a-yard-wide circulation. In other words, every single unit of it must, if possible, be a trade unit, a reader who buys the goods advertised.

NOW you can't possibly have "all-wool-and-a-yard-wide circulation" on the newsstands.

If the entire edition of MOTION PICTURE NEWS went over the newsstands we couldn't guarantee one single copy of trade circulation; and we couldn't honestly receive a single dollar of the advertiser's money.

We may assume that because we build a paper entirely for the exhibitor that exhibitors will buy it on the stands. But we don't know. We couldn't say so to the advertiser.

WE do know that the public will grab a magazine which features the words "Motion Picture" on its cover. You cannot prevent this as long as you exhibit freely on the newsstands.

And every copy which is bought by the public the advertiser pays for—pays the loss in manufacture—and doesn't get a single penny in exchange.

We are not after public circulation. If we were, we would build a less expensive magazine, minimize the cost per copy by putting out an edition of several hundred thousand and go after the millions of people who see pictures, charging the advertiser a much lower rate per thousand circulation.

BUT certainly we have no ambition to reach a few thousand of the public through a trade journal and charge an advertiser trade journal rates to reach people who don't book pictures and don't buy theatre equipment.

We could add ten thousand copies to our edition this week and the news company would be glad to get them. But to maintain this extra edition a year would cost us more than one hundred thousand dollars, which the advertiser would pay for—and lose.

So we go to every expense to restrict our newsstand circulation, giving copies only to newsstands near theatres and exchanges—where the trade will get them.

We favor our subscribers by putting their copies in the mails first and giving them for $2 a year what the newsstands charge $5.20 for. We get to our subscriber first, most cheaply and most surely.

A TRADE paper never had, never will have a legitimate place on the newsstands. Practically none of the many and excellent trade publications are sold that way. In justice to the advertiser they can't be; for the reader it pays to get them through subscription.

Vol. XI April 24, 1915 No. 16

A Little Mind and a Great Industry

MOTION pictures and the motion picture business have been more recklessly traduced and misrepresented than any form of enterprise in the United States. It is the fashion, in certain quarters, to abuse them and say all manner of things falsely against them, just as it has been the fashion to foam at the mouth against "Big Business."

For one Frank M. Wiltermood has remained the distinction, however, of publishing the most carefully constructed misrepresentation of motion pictures that has come to our attention. This man's action would be beneath notice, as its motive is beneath contempt, were it not for the fact that he has taken advantage of a reputable periodical's ignorance of the motion picture business and its policy of publishing the views of its readers to make it the vehicle of his attack.

IN the march 27 issue of "Harper's Weekly" appeared a large half-tone reproduction of a mass of headlines, purporting to have been clipped from "moving picture trade magazines" and mounted upon pasteboard.

The caption over it was "CRIME CUTS." Underneath ran the following letter:

Los Angeles, Cal.

Editor, Harper's Weekly:

Most respectfully do I send you the enclosed exhibit of headlines on advertisements printed in moving picture trade magazines to solicit the buying of films by theatre owners. It might seem to some people that these films would harm the minds of children and weak grownups. But I suppose the poor film-makers must dispose of their wares in some way—why not in this manner? I believe, nevertheless, that there are some things worse than patent medicines, say, morbidly sensational, criminal, yellow movies. If there is anything intellectual, poetical, spiritual, uplifting or educational in the films described by the enclosed headlines, it would be an odd element among the mass of crime and viciousness.

Yours truly, FRANK M. WILTERMOOD.

LET us begin by reminding those who never heard of Wiltermood—and they are the vast majority of the men in the motion picture business—that he was unfortunately identified with the industry for a brief time.

Two concerns on the West Coast will remember him, with what feelings let them say. He was, it appears, more of a sightseer in the business than a settler.

A stranger and an outsider, perhaps he looked for a warmer welcome than he received and, not finding it, resented it with a bitterness more or less apparent in his latest action. There are men whose vanity is hurt if the world does not hail them as a genius at first sight.

BE that as it may, Wiltermood learned enough of the motion picture business and the motion picture trade journals of today—however much he failed to learn—to know that his contribution to "Harper's Weekly" was and is inexcusably, yes, dangerously misleading.

He has no excuse for not being completely aware that "the advertisements printed in moving picture trade magazines" contain no such matter as he has led Mr. Norman Hapgood to believe. No excuse except the fact that he was too deeply absorbed in the contemplation of his own self-importance and in brooding over the apparent neglect of his valuable (?) talents by the motion picture industry to acquire what may yet prove to be useful knowledge.

TWO features of Wiltermood's performance would arouse the suspicions of any one in the business.

The first is his peculiar system of editing the headlines he has chosen to substantiate his charge of "morbidly sensational, criminal, yellow movies." The context, in which appear the phrases he selects, means nothing to him.

Strange, almost unbelievable as it may seem, he betrays an absolute ignorance of the difference between a comedy and a melodrama. With abundant evidence that this alleged scenario-writer knows so little of his own professed business that he cannot distinguish a comedy from a melodrama by its title, it is not difficult to see why his connection with the motion picture business was brief.

THE second peculiarity of the Wiltermood attack is the fact that he carefully omitted all reference to his former identification with the motion picture business from his letter to Mr. Hapgood. It seems strange that a person with such an uncontrollable itching to rush into print should have failed to take that opportunity of dwelling upon his past performances and heralding his record.

One is tempted to ask the reason for this unnatural modesty, and one is tempted to reply that Mr. Norman Hapgood is entirely too astute a gentleman not to have questioned the eagerness with which his contributor sought the use of his columns, had he been aware of that individual's former connections with the business.

Unluckily, there was no one to supply Mr. Hapgood with the information which Wiltermood so shrewdly withheld from him, and "Harper's Weekly" became a victim of a biased and distorted statement quite as much as did the motion picture industry.

WE do not intend to waste much sympathy upon the periodical that albeit unwittingly, lent itself to the Wiltermood incident. Its defence is, of course, that when it prints such a letter, it assumes no responsibility.

But, as a matter of fact, the paper cannot escape responsibility. The weight its readers give to such statements, even when published under such conditions, force upon it and upon its editor a responsibility it cannot avoid.

As for Wiltermood, we beg to assure him once more of his insignificance in this field, and to congratulate the film companies upon his disappearance from among them.

V-L-S-E AIMS AT WORLD-WIDE DISTRIBUTION

The Consolidated Companies, However, Do Not Intend to Relinquish Foreign Rights of Their Productions—Exchanges Organized and Controlled by the Combination Abroad Will Handle Its Features—Office Managers Appointed for Several Cities in the United States; Irwin General Manager

IMPORTANT details in the machinery of operating Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., the new company which will distribute the more pretentious pictures made by the four producing companies, the names of which are indicated, were closed as quickly as possible during the past week.

The first feature will be "The Eagle's Nest," a five part Lubin drama with Edwin Arden and Romaine Fielding, which will be the release of the week of May 3. The next week's offering will be "The Juggernaut," a five-part Vitagraph drama with Earle Williams and Anita Stewart. The week of May 17 brings "Graustark," a six-part Essanay feature with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. This is followed by "The Carpet from Bagdad," a five-part Selig drama with Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary and Wheeler Oakman.

Until September first at least one feature a week will be released. Vitagraph will release an extra feature a month till then and so will Lubin. Essanay and Selig may do so but whether they will or not has not yet been definitely decided. After September first the releases will be increased to two a week.

Walter W. Irwin, for a long time attorney for the Vitagraph Company of America, is general manager of Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc. He will have active charge of the rental end and of organizing the exchanges.

Engage Office Managers

Office managers have been definitely engaged for several cities. Negotiations are in progress for other cities in which distributing offices will be opened.

Joseph Partridge will be manager of the New York City office at 1600 Broadway. He was formerly special representative for the General Film Company in Canada and later represented that concern on the Pacific Coast.

Ike Van Runkel, whom every exhibitor in his territory has known for at least five years, will manage the Chicago office. W. C. Brandon will be the manager in Atlanta, C. A. Mead in Dallas, William Price in San Francisco, and Mr. Hebrew in Philadelphia.

One important feature is that Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay will distribute its pictures all over the world. This means that the foreign rights to these special features remain in the hands of the distributing company organized by the producers. Owing to the European war the foreign market will not be worked thoroughly for some time but whatever is done will be done by Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay.

Each distributing office will be conducted by a manager but each of the four affiliated producing companies will have its own representative in each office. The exhibitor may book pictures through the office manager or through any of the four representatives of the individual companies. This is a distinct innovation. It will give the exhibitor additional service. The man who wants to book such-and-such a picture for next Tuesday will not be told, "That's working Tuesday, better book this other picture"; the representative of the company which produced the picture the exhibitor wants will see that he gets it.

Four of Oldest Companies

Now that the magnitude and importance of this combination is being appreciated, it is being noted that the character and past performances of the companies involved are such as to inspire the utmost confidence. They are four of the older companies; three of them have been established in 1896 or 1897, Essanay not having started till 1906. They are representative of the concerns which made the motion picture business what it is today.

They all represent investments of from one to six million dollars. They have big, established producing organizations which have been making pictures for a long time. The heads of the companies are old showmen and motion picture men—J. Stuart Blackton, William T. Rock, Albert E. Smith, Siegmund Lubin, Col. William N. Selig and George K. Spoor.

As evidences of what they have done, conspicuous achievements of the past may be cited. Way back in 1897 A. E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company invented the "loop setter," or "framing device" now in use on most projection machines, thereby enabling the operator to bring the picture "into frame" without stopping the picture. This was the Vitagraph's greatest achievement of the old days.

First Newspaper Serial

Col. W. N. Selig was the first man to put out a motion picture serial in collaboration with the newspapers. This was "The Adventures of Kathlyn." The Selig zoo is a well known Los Angeles institution.

To George K. Spoor and Essanay goes the credit for being on a par with the others, though the baby in point of years. "Broncho Billy" pictures were once among the most popular, and in the impetus thus acquired has never been lost. Essanay's most recent acquisition is Charlie Chaplin, the comedian.

To enumerate the stars controlled by these four producing companies would take considerable space. The Vitagraph has 200 well known players in stock. The others all have formidable lists.

"I feel that the new organization of four of the oldest and largest producing companies in the business to distribute their own features should command much respect," said E. A. Smith of Vitagraph, president of Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay.

"We are men who have been making pictures and keeping our promises with exhibitors for fifteen years. These are the concerns which saved the business. For a time we have neglected certain phases of the business, such as the proper distribution of our big features and the value of the stage star and the stage play.

"Now, however, we are going to make the most of both of these phases of the industry. The publicity and advertising material which we will furnish with our pictures will be unsurpassed in the business. The posters and lobby display now ready on our first four pictures are a show in themselves. We are not going after a business on a low rental basis. We are going to make the exhibitor able to pay more because we are going to help him make money. We will help him along practical lines and more thoroughly than any other concern has ever done."

Fills Long-Felt Want

William N. Selig, treasurer of the new combination, while in New York last week, was interviewed regarding the plans and prospects of the new affiliation, and said:

"The Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay Motion Picture Company is destined to fill a long-felt want. The question of proper distributing channels for the more elaborate motion picture plays, has been one puzzling to us manufacturers for some time. We believe this question has been satisfactorily settled for all concerned and especially for the exhibitor of motion pictures, who now will be permitted to select his own feature program direct.

"We are confident that the exhibitor will be delighted over the new plans just now announced, for we shall in every respect, in quality of service, in expediency of service and in all publicity details, fulfill necessity on the part of the exhibitors.

"For some time the Selig Polyscope Company has been engaged in the production of Spectacular Specials, a name we have coined for Selig photoplays of five reels or more in length. We have spared neither time, thought nor expense to make these Spectacular Specials noteworthy in every detail. Strong stories, convincing acting, clear photography and proper scenic backgrounds are essentials to the worth of any multiple reel pictureplay, and we believe that our forthcoming Spectacular Special releases contain all of these qualifications.

According to Ira M. Lowry, general manager of the Lubin Company, the combination was formed in order to enable the manufacturers to get in closer touch with exhibitors and to produce the finest grade of features possible at very moderate prices.

"The new combination," said Mr. Lowry, "will mean a big thing for the exhibitor. We are all pledged to produce the very highest quality of feature film and these features which will run from four thousand feet upwards, will surpass by far anything that has ever been made in the past. For some time past we have been studying the demands of the public for feature pictures and we have arranged our plans accordingly.

"It is impossible to put too much emphasis on the type of productions we intend to make. Neither time nor money will be spared in making each feature a masterpiece in every sense of the word and it will be possible for the exhibitor to obtain these at moderate prices."

The plan will make a strong appeal to exhibitors.

Milwaukee Mayor Urges Exhibitors to Watch Films

Official Asks for Co-operation Between Theatre Managers and Citizens' Committee, Appointed to Censor Pictures—Approves Film News Organization

Special to Motion Picture News

Milwaukee, Wis., April 14.

IN an address before the Milwaukee Exhibitors' Association at their last regular meeting held in the club rooms of the Plankington House, Mayor Gebhard A. Bading of this city advised the local photoplay men to get together and work for the good of the industry as a whole.

He also warned them that they must do everything in their power to see that no pictures are exhibited in this city harmful to the morals of the community and that they must obey the dictates of the local censorship board or Citizens' Committee, as it is known, if they did not want police censorship.

"I am sorry to see that your organization does not include all the exhibitors in the city," said Mayor Bading, "and I would advise you to get out and work to strengthen your association. I am quite a screen fan myself and I know that the morals of this community, or any other, cannot be benefited by iron-clad rules for the censoring of pictures.

However, we must have close co-operation between the exhibitors and the citizens' committee on account of a certain class of people. I firmly believe that the most beneficial censorship to all concerned, both the general public, the producer and exhibitor, is the censorship that is carried out along broad lines, consistent with the best censorship.

"The exhibitor should look upon our censorship committee as the best friend that he has got and should be careful not to start any controversy with the censor board, as certain exhibitors have been prone to do, for just as soon as he does it is going to lead to police censorship.

"I hope all those present here today fully appreciate that if it had not been for the local censor board or citizens' committee there would have been police censorship of the most rigid sort."

Following Mayor Bading's address the Motion Picture Operators' Union offered to co-operate in any way possible with the exhibitors to prevent censorship and in assisting the theatre men to keep out all suggestive film.

G. R. Radley, chairman of the citizens' committee, also spoke.

In addition to Mayor Bading, the following members of the citizens' committee were in attendance: G. R. Radley, G. A. Meyer, B. K. Fischer, N. B. Neelen, H. R. Dennison and C. H. Phillips.

Floor Space at National Convention Going Fast

Manufacturers Are Showing Intention of Supporting National Convention, Which Promises to Draw Crowds of Exhibitors to the Exposition City

THE Universal has again demonstrated its friendly interest in the exhibitor by being the first to sign up for floor space at the San Francisco convention July 13 to 16.

Manager Joe Brandt, of the home office, was the first one on whom M. E. Cory called when he started out to sell floor space. Joe glanced over the blue print, picked out the largest space and wrote Universal on it. Mr. Brandt also extended a cordial invitation to all exhibitors to visit Universal City while they were on the coast.

A special train will leave San Francisco the morning after the convention closes, carrying the stars returning to their work, and the exhibitors who will spend several days visiting the various studios around Los Angeles.

To the irrepressible Harry Reisenbach, who serves up news in the Metro office, belongs the honor of signing up for the first two tickets on the special train which will run through solid to the San Francisco Convention.

After selecting his floor space, Mr. Reisenbach described his plans for the Metro exhibit.

A booth adjoining Metro has been reserved for Mr. Lesser, the San Francisco man who handles Metro program on the coast. Mr. Lesser will have his booth arranged as a reception room, where he will greet visiting exhibitors, and where they will find many delightful things arranged for their convenience and comfort without stint.

"It's simply wonderful," said M. E. Cory in speaking of the hearty support being accorded the committee in the arrangements that are being made for the National Convention.

"You see the manufacturers and the accessory men all realize that every exhibitor who can go anywhere this year is going to San Francisco, as he will not only be able to attend the convention, but will take in the great Panama-Pacific Exposition. He will also be able to spend several days visiting the wonderful studios at Los Angeles, and probably attend the San Diego Exposition.

"There will be at least fifteen hundred Western exhibitors at this convention. These men are up to date, aggressive and liberal and quick buyers of anything that looks good to them."

"The Eternal City" Begins Its Run at the Astor

Long Expected Picture of Famous Players Makes Hit on Its Presentation in Metropolis—Put on Simultaneously in Ten Cities

"THE ETERNAL CITY," the Famous Players Film Company's photospectacle of Hall Caine's novel and play, which opened at the Astor Theatre, New York City, last Monday night, is now being presented simultaneously in ten different cities, in all of which it is scoring one of the greatest artistic and financial successes ever won by a photoplay attraction.

The bookings arranged by the Select Film Booking Agency, recently created for the distribution of important subjects of the standard of "The Eternal City," in the manner of regular theatrical attractions, already comprise New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Detroit, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Trenton, Memphis, Nashville and St. Louis.

The theatres in these cities in which this greatest of all Famous Players productions is now being exhibited are, respectively: Astor, Studebaker, Gaiety, Washington, New, Chestnut Street Opera House, Trent, Majestic, Orpheum and New Grand Central.

The reviews that followed the inauguration of this epochal subject in the local newspapers in these centres unanimously and enthusiastically hail the production as one of the foremost artistic triumphs in the history of the screen, and a repetition of some of the eulogistic terms used by the dramatic critics to describe the power and charm of the subject would sound like a complete collection of superlatives.

PLAN ALL-NIGHT PICTURE THEATRE FOR NEW YORK

Walter Rosenberg, has leased the Garrick theatre, New York City, from Mrs. Edward Harrigan, and upon the conclusion of Arnold Daly's season there in Shaw revivals Mr. Rosenberg will make alterations in the playhouse and convert it into a motion picture theatre.

Pictures will be shown from 9 A. M. to 5 A. M., the program being changed every midnight. This will be the first all-night picture theatre in New York.

BONNECAZE WITH PATHE IN NEW ORLEANS

Alexis Bonnecaze, who for sixteen years has held a responsible position with the W. G. Coyle Coal Company, has resigned and has become assistant manager of the Coquille Film Company, New Orleans producers for Pathé. His nephew, Rene Plaisetty, the eccentric director imported from Paris by Pathé, is director-general.

POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS BUYS FITCH DRAMAS

Negotiations were completed last week by the Popular Plays and Players Company with the Fitch Estate and the American Play Company for the motion picture rights to three of the famous Fitch successes, "The Girl with the Green Eyes," "Her Own Way" and "Her Great Match."

Baltimore League Holds Second Annual Dance

Fifty Stars Were Guests of Exhibitors—President Pearce of the National League Introduces Speakers—Siegmund Lubin Delivers Speech—J. Howard Bennett, Chairman of Dance Committee, Presented with Loving Cup—Many Screen Guests Remain in Baltimore After Event

Baltimore, April 13.

NEVER before has so great a throng gathered at the Lyric in Baltimore as there was when the Baltimore exhibitors held their second annual dance. Men and women of all ages were there, and all came with the intention of giving their favorite photoplayer a rousing reception. Fifty stars, representing many companies, were the guests of the exhibitors and everyone enjoyed the occasion as much as the Baltimoreans.

The sentiment of the players was voiced in a little speech made by Viola Dana, of the Edison Company, at a banquet which followed the dance. She said:

"I never had such a good time in my life. I'm glad I came and I hope you will want me to come back to Baltimore when you hold your dance next year."

The players who arrived early were taken on motor trips through a portion of the city and then to the Hotel Emerson, which was the headquarters of the visitors while in this city.

The players arrived at the Lyric shortly after 8 o'clock and had there been any doubt in their minds as to how Baltimore felt toward them it was immediately dispelled when they stepped from the automobiles in front of the big hall.

Pursued by the Autograph Hunter

Ringing cheers greeted each party and they were then ushered through private entrances to the stage. So great was the crowd that for a long time it was impossible for the players to mingle with their admirers on the floor.

Later in the evening a number of the players went among the fans shaking hands and writing autographs. The latter fad was greatly in vogue. One fan after having filled his official program with the signatures of the players secured additional ones on his collar.

During the early part of the evening the players were seated on the big stage of the Lyric, which was backed by immense palms, behind which the orchestra was seated. The seats were arranged on either side of the stage and a large dancing carpet was spread so that the players danced in full view of the crowd.

Between dances they were kept busy shaking hands by leaning over the footlights, giving away flowers and other souvenirs. President Marion S. Pearce, of the National League, introduced each player from the stage.

Each one received a great ovation and their popularity seemed equally divided. Each player made a short talk, even little "Bobby" Connelly, of the Vitagraph Company, led by big Tefft Johnson, said a few words, telling the fans how glad he was to be there.

The banquet began in the concert hall of the Lyric about 12.30. Covers were laid for about 200, including a number of film men and exhibitors from Philadelphia and Washington. William F. Broening, state attorney for Baltimore, acted as toastmaster, and made a popular opening talk. "Pop" Lubin gave a most interesting address, in which he advised the exhibitors and all interested in the film business to guard most closely the rights of the industry.

Siegmund Lubin Speaks

He spoke of inclination in some sections to place excess taxation on film manufacturers and pointed out how this action would effect every one in the business and every branch of the business. He urged the picture men to guard against the picture industry being made a plaything of state and city politicians.

President Pearce made an address, as did also J. Howard Bennett, chairman of the dance committee. Marc MacDermott, Clara Kimball Young, Dorothy Kelly, Mable Trunelle, Ormi Hawley and many other stars said a few words.

Mr. Bennett, chairman of the committee, was presented with a handsome loving cup by the other members of the committee. At this point Hughie Mack, the heavyweight comedian of the Vitagraph Company, quietly left the banquet hall. A few minutes afterwards a very stout and heavily veiled lady entered the hall, walked up to Mr. Bennett saying:

"Oh! You dear man. I'll just have to kiss you," and followed the remark by a resounding kiss on the chairman's cheek. When the veil was lifted from the mysterious lady, the good-natured face of the big comedian beamed on the banqueters.

Many of the stars remained in Baltimore over Sunday. On Sunday afternoon they were tendered a trip along the wanterfront to the boathouse of the Ariel Rowing Club. Here a very extensive program of entertainment was carried out and late in the afternoon a luncheon was served.

Bushman Runs Down From Chicago

Francis X. Bushman came from Chicago to attend the dance. He was not present at the banquet, as he had to catch a train back to the Windy City shortly after midnight. Players present and not previously mentioned were: Vivian Martin and James Young, of the World Film Corporation; Rosemary Theby, Harry C. Myers, Ben Wilson and King Baggott, of the Universal; Mariam Nesbitt, Augustus Phillips, H. G. Plimpton, Herbert Prior, Edward Earle and Gertrude McCoy, of the Edison Company; Wally Van, Maurice Costello, James Morrison, Kate Price, Flora Finch, Norma Talmadge, Mary Maurice, Edith Storey, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Smith, of the Vitagraph Company; Ruth Bryan, Mary Charleston, Lilie Leslie, Florence Hackett, Alan Quinn, Howard Mitchell, Joseph Smiley, George Soule Spencer, John Ince, Earl Metcalf and Crane Wilbur, of the Lubin Company.

The committee in charge of the arrangements consisted of J. Howard Bennett, chairman; F. A. Hornig, Frederick Clement Weber, William Fait, Jr., Frank A. Hornig, Charles A. Hicks, Nat B. Keen, E. B. McCurdy, Guy L. Wonders, Marion S. Pearce. A. F. Gillaspey.

Marie Dressler Will Appear in Lubin Comedies

Comedienne, Famous for "Tillie's Punctured Romance," Will Begin in Series of Five Reel Plays in June—First Reeves Subject Ready May 15

MARIE DRESSLER, the funniest woman on the stage today and widely known in filmland for her "Tillie's Punctured Romance," has signed a contract with the Lubin Company at a very large salary and is to be starred in a number of comedies written especially for her.

Miss Dressler will be seen only in five-reel comedies and she will make three of these each year. Elaborate preparations are being made for the first of these big reelers. The comedienne will arrive at the studios in Philadelphia the first of June, the close of her present theatrical season, and the work of producing the first feature comedy will begin then. For her supporting company Ira M. Lowry, general manager of the Lubin Company, is selecting one of the most expensive lists of players that have ever been used in a Lubin production.

The first of the Lubin comedies in which Billy Reeves, the widely known English comedian, pantomimist and acrobat, is featured will be released on the regular service Saturday, May 15.

It is called "The Substitute," and is one of the liveliest and funniest farces ever made by the Lubin Company. According to the present plans, a Reeves comedy will be released each Saturday.

The Lubin Company is devoting special attention to comedies at present and has an elaborate program ahead. Billy Reeves and a special company of fun-makers are in Jacksonville making one and two reel comedies; Jack Tucker and Evan Williams who won much fame in vaudeville, are also at the Lubin Southern studio with their own company making comedies; Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, known from coast to coast, have just completed two comedies, and in a short time Marie Dressler will come to the Philadelphia studios to begin the production of a number of five-reel feature comedies.

Dyreda Will Release Through Metro Corporation

"Four Feathers," Founded on a Popular Novel of A. E. W. Mason, the British Author, Ready for Exhibitors in June—Company Plans 24 Subjects a Year

THROUGH arrangements entered into several weeks ago, and finally consummated this week by Richard A. Rowland, in behalf of the board of directors of the Metro Film Corporation, The Dyreda Art Film Corporation, beginning with their next production, will release exclusively on the program of the Metro Pictures Corporation.

Dyreda, under the direction of Parker Reed and J. Swarle Dawley, have recently instituted an enormous plant at Fifty-ninth street and Broadway, occupying several floors of the gigantic building on the southwest corner of those streets. Work is progressing there on "Four Feathers," which will be the first release of that company through the Metro exchanges.

"Four Feathers" is the latest fictional work of A. E. W. Mason, the virile British author, which created so profound an impression shortly after the beginning of hostilities in Europe. It is a story of a man who redeemed himself after having been condemned as a coward.

In brief, four young lady admirers, believing him afraid to join the army, present him with white feathers in symbolism of cowardice. He finally goes to war and his name appears time and again in the honor role, as having distinguished himself on the field of battle. The girls, then, one by one, write and demand their feathers back. The climaxes, situations and mighty action form a powerful plot for the picturizing that Mr. Dawley intends giving the picture. Howard Estabrooke will have the leading role in "Four Feathers" and will be supported by an all Broadway cast.

Mr. Reed, of the Dyreda company, in speaking of the move that brought him to Metro, says: "We have been investigating the principle and method of distribution of the Metro Company ever since the organization, and after fully going over every detail, are under the firm impression that their mutual co-operative plan is the most flexible and logical now existing.

"We were then prepared to sign to release through that concern. We have in sight twelve big plays, which will be made between now and January 1, 1916. After that I think we will do about twenty-four a year."

"Four Feathers" will probably be released by Metro early in June or the final week in May.

Filming of Next Nance O'Neil Subject Under Way

Director Powell Expects Picture, an Emotional Vehicle for the Well Known Actress, Will Prove More Successful Than "Kreutzer Sonata"

FRANK POWELL, director of the new William Fox photodrama, in which Nance O'Neil is to be starred, supported by a strong company, is certainly making the fur fly in the production of this picture.

At the William Fox studios, in Jersey City, Mr. Powell has introduced a time-saving innovation. This is in the form of a triple stage, and he uses five cameras simultaneously to shoot the scenes.

After Miss O'Neil and her fellow players have finished working in one set, they simply walk into the next one to be vacated. Sometimes, under his new system, he is actually directing three companies simultaneously. Mr. Powell says that he is confident the new film drama which he is screening will be even more successful than "Kreutzer Sonata," in which Miss O'Neil was also starred.

In this connection a letter received at the home offices of the William Fox Film Corporation, at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, from John Hamrick, manager of the Colonial theatre, Seattle, Wash., has distinct interest. The letter reads in part as follows:

"Your wonderful 'Kreutzer Sonata' has just closed an eleven-day run at our theatre. We played to 7,000 more paid admissions during the first seven days than ever previously. Eleven days is the longest any feature has been played at a photoplay theatre in Seattle.

"I have not words to express my views on the merits of this great picture. Your productions show very plainly that you reign supreme with plays, players and directors. Thousands of my patrons actually came back to see the picture three and four times. The public are fast getting wise to the name "William Fox" on a feature. Capacity business greeted William Farnum in 'The Nigger.' I believe this is William Farnum's best to date."

LAURA HOPE CREWS MAKES DEBUT IN PICTURES

The Lasky-Belasco release following "The Woman" will be Laura Hope Crews in a picturization of the Belasco drama, "The Fighting Hope," by William J. Hurlbut.

The drama concerns the life experience of a noble woman, whose husband is sent to jail, and who strives to fight for him and believes in his innocence until the absolute bare facts of the case finally confront her.

LAURA HOPE CREWS

Laura Hope Crews, who makes her photodramatic debut in this production, is one of the most celebrated of the younger Broadway stars.

Miss Crews made her first stage appearance when only four years of age, in San Francisco. Among the important productions with which she has played important roles in recent years are: "Merely Mary Ann," "Ranson's Folly," "Zira," "The Great Divide," "The Faith Healer," "The Havoc" and other widely-known Broadway successes.

BEEFSTEAK DINNER PLANNED FOR UNIVERSAL OFFICIALS

Treasurer P. A. THE FILMING OF "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

By Terrence Eugene Ramsaye

S. S. Hutchinson Overcomes Difficult Technical Problems in the $10,000 Prize Play Produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company—Secretary of the Board of Judges, Who Made the Award, Interviews Man Responsible for Success of Picture

I HAVE just spent two absorbing, intense hours with the man whose genius in organization is going out to the millions in "The Diamond from the Sky."

This man is S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company.

Hutchinson—when a man gets into his rank you don't call him Mister any longer—has solved the most difficult problem ever presented to a producer of the film drama. "The Diamond from the Sky" from the very facts which make it so powerful a story, presented problems without precedent or parallel, problems of cast, problems of action, problems of photography.

The author of this romance over-rode every convention in writing his heart-compelling story. He mastered his own problems of technique and left a hundred others for the producer of the picture to solve. It is probably because of the very nature of these difficulties that Hutchinson has been inspired to the attainment of his striking success in the picturization of this story.

Some weeks ago Hutchinson came to Chicago and waited as the hour of the decision of the judges neared, to get the winning manuscript. Then for three days and two nights he sped westward to Santa Barbara in uninterrupted study of his chosen jewel. The appealing story of "The Diamond from the Sky" was read and reread in those thousands of miles of plain and mountain. It was Hutchinson's task to paint a thrilling, tense panorama of human life, to reconstruct history that never happened except in the imagination.

Preparing for the Big Picture

To this end he must choose of men and materials. He was as a painter before a blank canvas, fired with a great conception.

"Long before I stepped off the train into the sunshine of Santa Barbara I had decided on the man who should do the producing," Mr. Hutchinson related, reviewing his labors. "One reading of 'The Diamond from the Sky' had shown me that this was the time for the master stroke, the time to 'burn all the powder' for my greatest picture.

"The man I chose was Jacques Jaccard, the director who is now putting 'The Diamond from the Sky' into the films. He combines with inborn ability extreme accuracy and artistic conscience as a scene builder. His experience has been of just such range as best fits him for his assignment. And great among his qualities is youth. Romance is illuminated only with the fire of youth. I early resolved that the energy and inspiration of youth must shine through this production in every line.

"In selecting a cameraman my thought fell almost automatically on George Hill—George 'Tripod' Hill. I took pains to investigate particularly the quality of his work, and when I came to 'Hypocrites' I knew he was the man.

"Then there came the matter of the technical director. There is only one Fred Priest, and that was the answer. The selection of exterior scenes and the construction of interiors is a particular and special part in the production. It has been a part of his work to take old Virginia and set it down in California.

"With this technical phase I came to the more difficult and intangible problems.

Considered Hundreds for Cast

"In the selection of the actors I considered hundreds and talked with scores of them. Again I had the best of all that America had to offer in moving picture talent to choose from. Every possible candidate for a place in the cast was weighed and analyzed in the light of the exacting requirements of the wonderful story, and the conception of the finished picture.

"In the first place because of the nature of the plot it became instantly necessary to enroll two sets of actors of star quality, and nobody was chosen because of a name, because of a reputation.

"It was not stars that I sought; it was the capability in each actor and actress which would mean that they could best and most significantly re-live before the camera the powerful story, 'The Diamond from the Sky.'

"The action of the piece rapidly eliminates the actors who first appear, hence the double set of stars.

"For the highly important purpose of preventing the confusion of personalities in the story on the part of the moving picture patrons, I had to seek the height of contrast in the types of actors. It would never do to permit the slightest possibility of the spectator mistaking the identity of a single character for a single scene.

"In the opening of the romance it is necessary to represent the hero and heroine as babies.

Two Babies in Principal Parts

"That baby business was certainly a problem. As the novel relates, both of the babies were born on the same day—these changeling children of fate. We had to have two babies, a boy and a girl, each four weeks old, a dark infant to represent Arthur Stanley, the gypsy child; a fair baby as Esther, true heir of the title and the diamond from the sky."

"And just who are these babies?" I interrupted, with a grab at this very human phase of the story.

"That I am not free to tell now," Hutchinson replied. "You see, we had such a hard time finding the particular kind of babies necessary that we had to go on a baby hunt first and get the parents' consent to their appearance in the film afterward. Once we located the babies it took a good deal of diplomacy to induce the parents to let us cast them in the play. We promised we would not tell, and I guess that only I and the parents know just who the babies in 'The Diamond from the Sky' are.

"It is not often," Hutchinson continued, "that babies are so important to the trend of the plot. Usually babies are incidental. Here they are everything.

"Then as the action progresses the principals appear in their early youth. The role of Esther made it necessary to get a young girl. The lead calls for a girl with all that is lovely and desirable in a girl. I had to find an actress with that indescribable charm of youth, pretty, fresh, vivacious, innocent, ingenious, magnetic. It was necessary to find the girl whose charm and magnetism was infectious, and communicable in the expressions of the silent drama.

Lottie Pickford Selected from 25

"In this connection I interviewed about twenty-five prominent moving picture actresses. The choice was made when I talked with Lottie Pickford.

"In this choice the Pickford name, made famous through the successes of Lottie's sister Mary, had absolutely no weight. Lottie was chosen for herself alone. And she would have been chosen for the part if the name Pickford had never been heard in filmland before—because of all the actresses available she is so pre-eminently the one for the part.

"Then we come to the almost equally important part of Arthur Stanley. Here again the high quality of youth was required. I chose Irving Cummings because he is a young romantic actor. He is clean-cut, aggressive and cast in the mould of the gentleman adventurer. His ideal fitting to the part may be indicated pretty well by calling him of the cavalier type.

"For the part of Blair Stanley, calling for a 'silk hat or gentleman heavy,' the possible actors were considered one by one until the elimination left the ideal man for the part—William Russell. An actor could not be better chosen for his delicate business of being both a gentleman and a villain, a suave, polished gentleman of unscrupulous purpose. Also he furnishes the required contrast to Cummings in the role of Arthur Stanley.

"A vitally important choice had to be made in casting the role of the adventuress who appears as the accomplice in the genteel villainy of Blair Stanley. Here again I was fortunate in being able to use Charlotte Burton, a most accomplished actress, for the purpose. In the vivid play of motives and impulses this actress must portray all of the cunning of a clever woman, and yet there must be no suggestion of grossness. It must be done with consummate delicate skill—and we have the woman for the part.

"I made a ten-strike in the selection of George Periolat for the part of the 'mean heavy' who appears in the deeds of daring and violence inspired by the circumspectly careful Blair Stanley. Periolat has the reputation of being the best make-up artist in the country. Also I have never seen his rival in facial expression.

"Then there is William Tedmarsh as a lucky human fact in the cast, in the part of Quabba, the hunchback gypsy. He is convincing and compelling of attention on the screen. None of the characters could be chosen with cursory consideration.

"In the plant at Santa Barbara where the play is being filmed, nature herself is making a great contribution to this great romance. In Santa Barbara we have such wonderful qualities of light that I sometimes hesitate to talk too enthusiastically of it, lest competitors 'see the light' and move in with us.

"While 80 per cent. of the moving pictures are made in California, and the quality of California sunshine is shouted to the world, I believe that we in Santa Barbara have an advantage even over the other sections of the State. The lay of the land conduces to a remarkable clarity of atmosphere, a striking crispness and clearness of light. On the west the ocean mists and winds are broken and warded off by the Channel Islands, and to the north are the mountains that have sheltered the old town of Santa Barbara through all of the centuries.

Natural Advantages of Santa Barbara

"An unlimited range of photographic and scenic possibilities is presented by our location. Natural settings that range from the tropical to the temperate zone in flora are available in easy distance. There is inspiration in Santa Barbara itself. It was the home of the old Spanish dons and grandees centuries before civilization pushed west of the Atlantic seaboard. There is, in short, the indefinable flavor of romance that we want for the bewitching story of 'The Diamond from the Sky.'"

Hutchinson paused in one of those moments of reflection when his busy mental process speed on ahead of his deliberate, careful speech.

"We have gone to limits before unknown in the making of films to secure this.

"And the world will know how well we have succeeded when the first release is made May 3."

There you have it—Hutchinson, the master producer, and his masterpiece.

New Orleans Lifts Ban Against Use of Park by Fox

City Commission No Longer Adverse to Filming of "Wormwood" Scenes by the Company—Association of Commerce and Mayor Sided with Producer

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, La., April 12.

AFTER the Association of Commerce, the mayor of the city, a few exhibitors, exchange men and others having no connection whatever with the motion picture business, had sent in their protests against the City Park Commissioners' action in not allowing certain scenes of "Wormwood" to be taken in the City Park by the Fox Film Company, the commissioners bowed to the numerous criticisms and removed the ban.

The latest protest against the commissioners' banning order came from Paul L. Ford, manager of the New Orleans office of United Program Film Service, on the very day that the ban was removed. Mr. Ford's protest was in the form of a communication to the New Orleans correspondent of Motion Picture News.

Mr. Ford called attention to the scenes objected to, and said that the commissioners' actions did not meet with any local sympathy, best evidenced by the fact that the Association of Commerce had almost demanded a rescinding of the action, realizing that the advantages that would redound to New Orleans by the advent of the producing company were great, and would far outweigh any squeamishness anent the alleged immorality of the play.

"The commissioners refused the use of the park on the ground that "Wormwood" was an immoral book. It is ridiculous to presume that a motion picture corporation like Fox Film would be so anxious to act an immoral scene, or scenes, only to have them later deleted by the National Board of Censorship.

"It is equally preposterous to think that they would act any scene that would be offensive to any religious sect, as it was not their object to give offense, but to film a play that would later be shown all over the country to people of all denominations," Mr. Ford wrote.

It is authoritatively reported that the disagreement of the Association of Commerce with the commissioners was principally responsible for the ban being removed.

The work of Director Farnum and his score of film men and women is going merrily on. The scenes in which New Orleans' famous absinthe house in the French quarter figures have all been taken. It is interesting to note that most of the modern scenes were taken in and in front of the magnificent Dunleith Court, the residence of J. E. Pearce, the New Orleans exhibitor, who turned over his home and the grounds surrounding it to Mr. Farnum.

The Association of Commerce, a banded body of all New Orleans business men and business firms, had also gone to the side of the Fox Feature Film Company, which endeavored to take a few scenes of "Wormwood" in City Park and were stopped by the park authorities. They had written to the City Park Commissioners, asking that they reconsider their refusal to allow the pictures. The Association of Commerce saw no reason for the refusal, and its manager, Walter Parker, had read the three scenes in the scenario to which there was an objection.

Scene 38, park: Pauline, prayer book in hand, stands under the shelter of bushes in path. Her face brightens as she looks toward church. Silvion enters; she greets him happily; then takes his arm; exits.

Scene 40, park: Silvion parts the bushes and allowing Pauline to pass, enters the shady nook. They sit on the grass and start to converse; Silvion looking earnestly at Pauline, while she smiles with happiness. Pauline expresses desire to go. He tries to prevail upon her to stay, but she smilingly tells him, "some day."

EXHIBITOR MADE MAYOR OF OKLAHOMA CITY

Special to Motion Picture News

Oklahoma City, April 13.

Ed. Overholser, owner and builder of the Overholser, Oklahoma City's largest playhouse, today assumed the duties of mayor of this city, to which office he was elected last week. He was elected on the Republican ticket, defeating W. J. Gault, a feature of the campaign being that twenty-five years ago, in the first municipal election held in this city, W. D. Gault, father of the 1915 losing candidate, defeated Henry Overholser, father of the new mayor.

Mr. Overholser has lived in Oklahoma City since 1889, and erected the Overholser Theatre in 1902. He managed the theatre until 1910.

LYCEUM'S STAGE SET IS REPLICA OF STRAND, NEW YORK

THE Lyceum Theatre, Indianapolis, which closed its doors to road shows for the season, sprung an entirely new idea as far as Indianapolis motion picture theatres are concerned, when it reopened as a high class picture theatre.

Instead of being greeted by a blank screen upon entering the theatre, the audience is delighted with the sight of a Japanese garden. Among the flowering cherry trees are hung Japanese lanterns, glowing with lights. There are quaint pagodas and great vases holding flowering plants, while a high bank of purple iris conceals the orchestra.

At each side are flights of stone steps leading to the platforms where the soloists stand. The screen itself is hidden behind scarlet and gold curtains of Japanese embroidery until it is time for the program, when the curtains slowly part. The beauty of the whole stage setting is greatly enhanced by the lighting effects in the hands of an electrician noted for his skill.

"It is a replica, only on a smaller scale, of the Strand Theatre in New York," said Manager Phil Brown," and our idea is to give the patrons of picture theatres the best show, with the most attractive surroundings, and the best music for the money."

The reels shown will all be first-run pictures, and will be changed three times a week. Among other features wil be the "Scientia" pictures, in color. There will be a seven piece orchestra, and Hazel Winans Selby, of New York, is the soloist.

OPERATORS MAKE THEATRE PAY

OPERATING a strictly comedy house with special features comprising home talent performers, H. L. Harcroft, a motion picture machine operator, who has taken the active management of the majestic Theatre, Boise, Idaho, is making a success of the business, and has played to houses averaging 800 daily for the past month.

The Majestic Theatre has had somewhat of a stormy career. During the past two years it has had several different managers, business and professional men, but never a man who understood the motion picture business until the owners in disgust some two months ago placed the management in the hands of Mr. Harcroft with the understanding that the house must be made to pay or it would be closed down.

Knowing he had keen competition, that two of the biggest houses in Boise were using big productions and two others a lighter class of pictures with varied programs, Mr. Harcroft decided upon comedy. He uses the General Film service, shows only comedy pictures, which are interspersed by local performers, singers and dancers, who have a good following and bring out crowds when advertised strongly.

Slowly but surely the house began to secure audiences, and is now doing a business which places figures on the right sight of the ledger, and also tends to show that Mr. Harcroft, while operating the machine at the theatre, noted the failures of others, figured out why they failed, studied the audience, and has placed a program on the screen that is out of the ordinary, and one which is bringing the crowds.

ONE LONG FEATURE AND ONE COMEDY

HARRY D. BUCKLEY, manager of the Strand theatre, on Sixth near St. Charles streets, St. Louis, has made an innovation in the matter of his program in the last few weeks.

The Strand is right in the heart of the shopping district, downtown, and the idea has long been prevalent that nothing but one and two-reel photoplays would have any vogue in that section, as tired shoppers and business men only went into motion-picture theatres to rest a few minutes.

Mr. Buckley was prevailed upon to try long features, but before he made any contracts he tried out his audiences with features. The attendance and the box-office receipts did not show any loss of business. After a careful study of the audience, which seemed to be very well pleased with the program, Mr. Buckley decided to put Paramount pictures as the permanent attraction at his house.

The bill is now one long feature and one comedy, changed twice a week, and each day's business shows an increase over the day before.

"WHO IS IT?" PROVES SUCCESSFUL

PEARCE theatres in Lake Charles, La., recently ran a "Who Is It?" contest, publishing pictures of prominent stars in the local press, and gave prizes of free tickets to persons guessing correctly the series of photographs.

VOTING CARDS ON EDISON NIGHTS

IN line with the endeavor to enliven the weekly "Edison Night" at the Claremont Theatre, 135th street and Broadway, with a new "stunt" every week, Frank Bannon, of the Edison Studio, has staged a double attraction for this week. To each patron of the theatre for the last week has been given a voting card upon which they can register their choice for the most popular girl in upper New York.

The winner will be introduced from the stage of the theatre and will be given an opportunity to become a motion picture favorite by being allowed to pose in an Edison film. Whether her course will be starward will depend upon her ability to make good. The contest has excited a lot of comment and some excitement among that large contingent who look longingly for such an opportunity.

The Claremont is also running a contest in conjunction with the Edison company whereby the patrons will be given a prize for the best scenario ending of a play which Edison has now in production, Manager Dollinger giving a prize of $10 for the best ending and $5 for the best title of the play. At these weekly "Edison Nights" all the releases of the current week are shown.

INTERESTS MOTHERS' CLUB IN EDUCATIONALS

THE Friday night educational program recently established by Manager Charles Hoefle of the Clifton, Ludlow avenue, Cincinnati, promises to be a big business-getting scheme.

In arranging his program Mr. Hoefle consulted members of mothers' clubs in his community and the school teachers. Films on historical subjects, interspersed with travelogues and natural history subjects with an occasional fairy tale thrown in, have proved great favorites with the children.

USHERS IN SOLDIERS' UNIFORM

THE Duchess theatre, Cleveland, O., under orders from "General" Bulkley and "Adjutant" Comey, has been placed under martial law, and when the house opened on Monday, March 29, uniformed soldiers had charge of the house.

This was due to the fact that "The Heart of Maryland" was being shown there. All attendants, ushers, orchestra and others connected with the house were in military uniform, and it made a great hit with the patrons.

Edwin Arden Pessimistic Over Future of Stage

Under Present Conditions in "Legitimate" Individuality of Players Is Suppressed by Directors Who Insist Upon Observance of Their Own Conception of Roles

EDWIN ARDEN, now under contract with Pathé, and featured with Arnold Daly and Pearl White in "The Exploits of Elaine," has, according to the Whartons, some interesting things to say about the decline of modern dramatic art. He lays the blame upon the stage directors.

"I would infinitely prefer to be a poor original than a good copy," he says with emphasis. "Now, after many battles with directors who wanted to do my thinking for me and make me imitate some one else, I am left alone to play my parts in the way I conceive they should be played.

"I had a lesson early in my theatrical life upon this very question, and it made a lasting impression upon me, coming as it did from the great Edwin Booth himself. At the time of which I speak I was a member of Mr. Booth's company, playing Shakespeare in the old Boston Museum, that great school of the best dramatic art. One day I was to play a part in Othello and went to Mr. Booth, asking him how he wanted me to play Cassio, and if he had any ideas for my instruction. 'No, I have not,' said Mr. Booth very gently, 'but the part must be played well or tomorrow some one else will play it.'"

Mr. Arden, considerably disturbed but put upon his mettle, went home and studied the part as he had never studied before. He analyzed it until he had gotten a clear conception of Cassio's character, of every emotion of which he was capable. He played the part and in a way to meet Mr. Booth's approval, and then and there became convinced that to play a part properly one must take no second hand knowledge, but really think and live the character.

Not long afterwards the young actor was in a small part with the Madison Square company, at that time the most prominent of all the New York companies. He was given his part, studied it carefully, and then went to the rehearsal. After he had played the character as he conceived it, the director yelled at him. "Here, you," he said, "I won't have you play it that way. Do this and this and this," and showed him what he meant. Young Arden replied, "Do I understand you to say that you want to do my thinking for me, and that you leave me no option as to how I shall play my part?" The director replied that that was correct, and that he was paid to do the thinking, and the actors were merely to carry out his ideas.

Mr. Arden is frankly pessimistic as regards the future of the American stage under present conditions. He says that since directors do not want originality and initiative in the actors those qualities are becoming atrophied. When the few real stars of the stage are gone there will be none to take their places, for the newer generation, with few exceptions, has not been permitted to develop its own peculiar talent.

Mutual Publicity Staff Moves Into New Quarters

Department Whose Function It Is to Electrify Public With Live Ideas Leaves Union Square for More Commodious Offices at 71 West 23d Street

THE Mutual Film Corporation's publicity department and "Reel Life," its weekly magazine, together with "The Film," the weekly published by the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, have been moved from the quarters at 29 Union Square West, which they have occupied for more than a year, and are now located in more commodious quarters on the fifteenth floor of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, the floor above the Mutual's present executive offices.

These departments, under the direction of Arthur James, together with practically the executive offices of the Mutual, will occupy the entire fifteenth floor.

The Mutual publicity department has had a remarkable growth, due to its success. When the Mutual first started at 52 Wall street, Hector Streychmans edited the Mutual publication. In the spring of 1913 he was succeeded by Clarence Herbert New, as editor, and William H. Peckham, as business manager of "Reel Life," which then took its present name and policy.

Late in 1913 Philip Mindil took charge of the Mutual publicity department and "Reel Life." At that time the Mutual publicity department and that of Reliance, headed by Hopp Hadley, well known to the trade, were consolidated.

In May, 1914, Mr. Mindil was succeeded by Arthur James. Mr. James brought to the department a wide and invaluable experience as a newspaper editor, a special writer on nearly every current topic and an advertising and publicity expert.

Merritt Crawford, as editor of "Reel Life," is responsible for many of the magazine's strong features. Henry James is its business manager.

Reliance to Release Series of Juvenile Subjects

Cast Will Consist of Children Under the Age of Ten—Story of the First Picture, "The Baby," Revolves Around Dark Deeds of 6-Year-Old Villain

A DISTINCT novelty is provided for small motion-picture "fans" in the foundation of an entire company of children, all under the age of ten, for regular work at the Reliance-Majestic studios. This company, which is under the direction of C. M. and S. A. Franklin, is to work out a series of photoplays especially for children.

The Franklins have had considerable experience in training and directing child actors, but they are taking no chances. They have provided a series of rewards, ranging from candy and peanuts up to more valuable objects, which are to be used to stimulate the small players to their

The plots to be handled will, of course, be designed to appeal first of all to the children, and will constitute a regular Reliance offering. It is felt that with other childhood subjects, released by the Reliance, many photoplay theatres will be enabled to afford their small patrons regular children's days. Work with the company of children has just begun on the first release, "The Baby."

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 12.

REALISM for motion pictures is being secured at the expense of German prisoners in Paris, according to reports that have reached the Lasky studio. For the production of "Stolen Goods," the third subject starring Blanche Sweet, an original scenario was prepared by William de Mille, giving Miss Sweet the part of a nurse in Belgium.

The need of German and French uniforms was wired to the New York office of the company, and three cablegrams to a Paris costumer served to secure the needed props for the Lasky studio costume. When the twelve uniforms arrived a letter brought the news that they had been secured from German prisoners, cleaned, and forwarded at once.

The uniforms are complete, even to the helmets and coverings of gray cloth. One coat had been the property of a major and on another was found the black and white ribbons which denote that the wearer had been awarded an iron cross. Included in each outfit were belts, cartridge boxes, leggings and blankets.

A score of carpenters have been busy erecting buildings for a small Belgium village at the Lasky ranch, which was burned for scenes in "Stolen Goods."

The other Lasky company went to the California desert in the vicinity of Indio in a special train of five coaches, taking with them a number of camels, twenty-five head of horses, and about one hundred people in all. Near Indio a very desirable location was found for scenes of the Sahara desert in "The Arab," in which Edgar Selwyn is being starred. All desert land in California has more or less vegetation, which is not true of the Sahara, making it almost impossible to find suitable locations unless a portion of land is cleared.

Lasky Company in Egyptian Camp

In this instance the bed of what was at one time a lake will be used. It is estimated to be three hundred feet below sea level and all went prepared for a hot time. While the company is in the North they will enjoy real Egyptian camp life living under a tent of the same kind used by the bedoins of Northern Africa, special tents 40 x 60 feet in size, having been made especially for this picture and excursion.

Included in the list of props for these exterior scenes are a number of earthen water bottles, scores of Egyptian coffee bags, and similar articles. During the company's absence a street scene of a small Egyptian village will be built for the portion of the picture which transpires in the market place.

Director Harry Edwards of L-Ko, with his company headed by Billie Ritchie, is putting the finishing touches to the "Fatal Note," which will be an early Universal two-reel comedy release.

Three single reel animal pictures were made last week at the Selig Jungle Zoo. "The Jaguar Trap," a story of the treachery of renegade white men in South America, offers the Selig collection of jaguars their first opportunity to act for pictures. With them will be used a number of South American pumas. "Beautiful Belinda" is the title of another play written by James Oliver Curwood which will be a comedy with a big surprise for the climax.

The third is being produced by Louis W. Chaudet, a late addition to the Selig forces, who assisted in the production of the Kathlyn series, and has since been with the E. & R. Jungle Film Company. Mr. Chaudet is making "Little Billie," of one reel from a scenario by W. C. Clifton, in which Baby Jean Fraser plays the name part. Others in the cast are William Stowell and Vivian Reed.

President Carl Laemmle can now be termed an 'xtra, for he was induced to take part in a mob scene for the first episode of the forthcoming serial "The Broken Coin," produced by Francis Ford from a scenario by Grace Cunnard. At the end of the day the director gave the president the regulation order for extras, which entitled him to three dollars for his day's services, and the president forthwith collected the money. This serial is a chronicle of the adventures of an American newspaper woman in an imaginary principality where there are a number claiming the throne.

Filming Leaping Salmon

Henry Otto and several of his American company recently rode horseback over the mountain trail near Santa Barbara to the base of Gibraltar dam on the Santa Inez River, where they spent several hours securing pictures of the salmon trying to leap over the base of the dam in an effort to return to their spawning place.

The government, it is understood, intends placing a fish ladder at the falls by next season, and the American director therefore believes he had a valuable negative that is absolutely exclusive.

The Selig western company, under the direction of Tom Mix is making "Saved by a Horse," a one-reel subject in which the director's favorite horse plays a very important part.

Hereafter "Nymp" (pronounce it as you will) stands for New York Motion Picture Corporation. Such long names require a contraction or a substitute that may be used without killing off an entire line. The business department will appreciate this, for correspondents receive so much per—yes, per word—but conservation is necessary because of the increase in the costs of typewriter ribbon due to the European war causing a shortage of dyes.

companies were given a pleasant surprise Easter morning, when they were summoned to the big western stage by Superintendent Eugene H. Allen who had prepared a celebration. Two dozen white rabbits were released on the enclosed stage and after their capture, Director General Thomas Ince made a brief address. Easter cards were distributed, and all engaged in egg hunts, and other Easter games and contests for the kiddies.

The premier of the most recent production of Thomas H. Ince, "The Sign of the Rose," with George Beban, has now been definitely booked for Monday evening, April 12, at the Clune Auditorium, at which time the nine week engagement of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will be brought to a close. Special music is being arranged for this subject.

Bessie Barriscale in "The Mating"

Bessie Barriscale has been cast to play an entirely new and "different role," in "The Mating," a multiple reel feature, a Nymp contribution to the Mutual Master-Pictures program. This subject will be produced under the direction of Raymond B. West from a scenario by C. G. Sullivan and Thomas H. Ince. This is a comedy drama of college life, and Lewis J. Cody, former Broadway legitimate favorite, will be the co-star of Miss Barriscale.

"The Man from Oregon," is commanding the attention of director Reginald Barker. This is a multiple reel subject for the M M-P program telling a political story the scenes of which are laid in Washington, D. C., and Oregon. Howard Hickman and Clara Williams have been selected as stars for this production, scenario for which was also written by Messrs. Sullivan and Ince.

Simultaneous with the making of these productions is the filming of a spectacular feature of oriental life, "The Beckoning Flame," being made under the direction of Charles Swickard. This will serve to introduce Henry Woodruff.

How a health-seeking minister helped to bring peace and quietude to squirrel-whisky-drinking, gambling, and gun-play loving natives of a western town of by-gone days is pictured in "The Conversion of 'Frosty' Blake," a Nymp subject being made by William S. Hart, who appears in the name role.

The part of the minister is played by Charles Ray, and his two final acts in the subject are to step in front of a gun aimed at the chief rough-neck of the gulch, "Frosty," and take the lead; and then to marry "Frosty" and a dance hall girl. At the death of the minister, "Frosty" orders the Legal Tender saloon closed for keeps. Melodrama, what!

"Her Easter Hat," is the title given a two-reel Nymp fishing village story made last week with Estelle Allen, George Fisher, and Margaret Thompson in the principal roles. This will tell the story of a daughter of a poor fisherman craving better clothing because her sweethart forsakes her for a neighboring daughter who wears finer raiment.

Majestic "Kid" Company

The most recent addition to the producing forces of the Majestic and Reliance studios is the "kid" company under the direction of C. M. and S. A. Franklin. The initial production being a one reel subject, "The Baby."

The cast for this is composed of children all under ten years of age. The villain is Violet Radcliff, age four years, and others in the company are Francis Carpenter and Olive Johnson. It is the intention to make a one reel juvenile subject each week.

The Majestic-Reliance producing company under the direction of R. A. Walsh is making scenes for "The Comeback," a two-reel subject, at San Diego, and during the trip to and from the southern exposition city are making scenes for the one reel Reliance, "The Smuggler," in which the director appears in the name part supported by Billie West, Ralph Lewis and Jack Dillon.

"The Old Shoemaker," a melodrama, is being filmed by Sheriff Arthur Mackley. This story is from the pen of Russell E. Smith, and may be classed as a newspaper play, one of the principal characters being the newspaper reporter who unearths clews that lead to the discovery of the heroine, the daughter of the shoemaker, and her ultimate recovery.

An Indian subject, "The Son of the Dog," is a one reel subject for Reliance release and was made last week with Dark Cloud, the miniature Indian of the stock company playing a prominent part and assisting in making the production one true to conditions. The story is that of an Indian who attends Carlisle College, wins laurels there and is loved by a girl who is ignorant of his identity.

Scenic artists of the Majestic studio are giving special attention to securing exceptional effects for "Strathmore," the three reel Majestic featuring Charles Clary and Francelia Billington. The locale of this story is in England in the early part of the nineteenth century, and a scene which caused the costumers much trouble is that of a big mask ball.

Adolfi Resigns

Announcement was made last week that John G. Adolfi, who came to Los Angeles with the original Majestic and Reliance companies and has since been with this company, has resigned to accept a position as director for the Universal, making Imp releases at the New York City studio.

During his engagement with the Griffith forces Mr. Adolfi has served as director, his most recent production being "A Man and His Mate," a four reel subject with Henry Woodruff in the principal role, which will soon be released on the Mutual Master-Picture program. Other Adolfi productions are "Blue Pete's Escape," "The Blotted Page," "The Runaway Freight," and others. He left for the east accompanied by Florence Crawford (Mrs. Adolfi in private life), who will play in Imp subjects.

Dorothy Gish is being featured in a one reel subject, in which she appears as a headstrong small village girl who decides to elope with a flashy drummer, but arriving at the station ahead of time falls asleep and has horrible dreams. She is rudely awakened by the drummer, but the timely arrival of her village sweetheart prevents an abduction. The title for this has not been announced.

A two reel Majestic subject, "The House of Bently," demonstrating that success causes most men to ignore their former associates, is being made under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham. Cora Drew appears in the principal part, that of Grandma Bently.

The striped gown has been relegated to the bottom of the trunk, and will not be seen in the twenty-second release of the Komic Brand Bill series. Instead the stenographer disguises herself as a man when she is detailed to serve a summons on an Italian, by her employer, the attorney. All of this is necessary in a divorce suit. The title for No. 22 is "Ethel's Disguise."

Conway in Newspaper Story

Having finished his work in the name role of "Captain Macklin," Jack Conway is now playing the part of Sim West, a newspaper reporter in a "sob sister" story of the doings of the "Daily Mail," the "Added Fuel." The story is by Chester Clapp, a late acquisition to the R and M scenario staff.

Courtenay Foote, who appears in the part of the monk "supporting" the naked truth in "Hypocrites," has been engaged to play the star part in a film version of "Up from the Depths," from the play of the same name by Robert Stodard and Charles Battell Loomis.

Foote has been assigned the part of Davids, the evangelist, who elopes with, but fails to marry a girl, and later aban-dons her. Found in a New York dive by a slum worker the girl tells the story of her life, and the former lover is induced to go through the marriage ceremony.

The scenario for this was prepared by Mary O'Connor, and included in the supporting cast will be Gladys Brockwell as the girl and Sam de Grasse as Lestrade.

The first Bosworth feature for the Universal program, was begun last week. The title selected for this is "Hop" and the picture, which will be of four reels, will portray an early day western story, in which the principal parts are played by Hobart Bosworth, who will direct the production, Joe Florez, his pal, and Helen Wolcott, the girl.

Eugenic Law in Laemmle Brand

This will open with the two western men saving the lives of a number from being captured and probably killed by Indians, and for their work are rewarded by the express company whose property they protected.

After a lapse of time the westerner, grown wealthy by frugal management of a small ranch purchased with the reward money, finds the daughter of one of the women he saved, as waitress in a rough western restaurant. When he protects her from insults she loses her position.

What follows makes a pretty romance. Special attention will be given the scenic effects for this subject and some very big scenes with hundreds of people appearing in them will add to the value of the production.

VIEW OF ENTRANCE TO ROLFE STUDIOS, LOS ANGELES

The Laemmle brand company has just completed a one-real subject dealing with the proposed eugenic law. Here a father induces his son to sow his wild oats before he thinks of marriage, and after watching the wild life of the youth for several months, picks up a paper and sees the new eugenic law, providing that all applicants for marriage license must pass a strict physical examination.

The father is punished for a time in the belief that he has caused his son to unfit himself to pass this examination, but the picture ends with the youth and the girl coming to the father with a license asking his permission for their marriage.

The Smalleys have taken up their first Universal subject which has been given the title "Scandal," and will consist of three reels. The services of Dal Clawson, formerly photographer for these directors with the Bosworth company, has been engaged, for the camera work.

Jack Kerrigan is now working in the second comedy drama of his film experience, "The Oyster Digger." The first he played in more than a year ago.

Railroad Scenes in "Black Box."

The members of the "Black Box" company are spending several days at San Bernardino, Cal., where a number of big railroad scenes were made for the series.

Director Henry McRae, learning the members of the Engineers' and Architects' Association, holding a convention in Los Angeles, had accepted an invitation to visit Universal City, planned a party for them on the big back stage. In a very elaborate cafe set he served lunch.

While they were enjoying this he made a number of scenes for "The Blood of

THE ORIENT AS IT WAS CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA THAT FILMED "THE CARPET OF BAGDAD," A SELIG SPECIAL

His Brother," in one of which Marie Walcamp rode a runaway horse through the plate glass window in the front of the cafe, and caused a real for sure commotion which added realism of the true sort to the picture. The horse was captured by Wellington Playter just after it had dashed through the window and made two very good raises to its hind feet.

The last scenes for the subject in which a flood was staged during Universal City opening week, "In the Wake of the Deluge," were filmed last week by the McRae 101 Bison Company, and included pictures of the mammoth reservoir to be used for storage of water for fire protection. This is the story of a construction superintendent wishing to bring about the dismissal of an engineer, causing a weak spot to be made in the wall of a reservoir built to conserve water for a lumbering camp.

When the tank is finished it gives way and floods a portion of the village. The lives of many are saved by the daughter of the owner riding ahead of the torrents and warning the people. The superintendent is caught by the flood waters, but later is rescued by the engineer he had tricked, and his conscience hurting him he later confesses he was the cause of the damage.

"With Father's Help"

How a pair of visitors, unknown to each other, invited to spend the week-end, come to look upon each other as burglars, bring about each other's arrest and turn a perfectly quiet and peaceful household topsy turvy, forms the basis for Al. E. Christie's Nestor comedy, "They Were Heroes."

All the original Nestorites, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Victoria Forde appear in this subject, which was made under the personal supervision of Mr. Christie. Another Nestor of the week is "Following Father's Footsteps." During the coming week the companies will make "The Idolater," and "With Father's Help."

Joker comedies made this week are, "A Day at the San Diego Exposition," and "The Lady Doctors of Grizzly Gulch." In the latter, the arrival of a female doctor causes all the boys of a usually healthy western town to become ill and go to her for medicine. The original pill dispenser disguised as a woman, has flirty-girty ways and takes back all the practice. The newcomer learns of the imposter, and when she threatens to expose him there is a compromise in which they agree to join hearts and shingles. The scenarios for both are by Clarence Badger.

"The Woman Hater's Baby," a two-reel subject being made with Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark in the principal parts, is a story of a penniless widow leaving her infant baby on the door step of a bachelor who considered himself a confirmed one. The mother answered an advertisement for a nurse, takes care of her own child and ultimately becomes the bride of the bachelor.

Princess Hassan Series Completed

The "Under the Crescent" series, featuring Princess Ibrihim Hassan in pictures depicting her life as a wife of an Egyptian nobleman, has been completed.

When this was first taken up it was decided to make the series in six reels, but now after being cut and re-cut, it is impossible to reduce it to less than twelve reels without materially injuring the subjects. It is stated these will be released two reels each day for a week. This is the most expensive series so far produced at the Universal studio, when the number of reels is considered. Those who have seen the studio runs of the early productions predict a remarkable success for the subjects.

Frank J. Baum of the Dramatic Feature Company, is introducing the making of one reel comedies at the studio in order to keep the players busy while features are being cut and a new scenario is being prepared. The first to be made has been named "Pies and Poetry." According to reports several lunches were lost in the making of the scenes. In this Betty Pierce, formerly with the Chicago Essanay Company, Selig, Kalem and Crown City Producing Companies, was featured. The first feature production, "The Grey Nun of Belgium," has been completed and will be shipped to the Alliance Corporation in the next few days.

A romance of the South before the Civil War, with George Larkin playing the leading role opposite Mabel Van Buren, recently engaged, and supported by Will E. Sheerer and Hal Wilson, is being made at the Ideal Features studio. This will be complete in two reels.

Charles Chaplin Insures His Feet for $150,000

"What Would I Do Without Them?" the Essanay Comedian Wants to Know—They Are His Fortune, As Every Exhibitor Is Aware—Hence the Care

CHARLES CHAPLIN, Essanay comedian, is declared to have the most valuable feet of anyone in the world. He has just insured each foot for $50,000, or $150,000 for the both. That is, he is reimbursed by the insurance company $50,000 for the loss of either one and $150,000 if he loses both.

"My feet are my fortune," said Chaplin. "What kind of a photoplay comedian do you think I would be without my feet? In fact I think $150,000 is a very small amount for the loss of both feet. It would cut me out of my salary for the rest of my life."

As Chaplin is the highest-priced comedian in the world, the insurance would not go far towards his salary. Chaplin critics declare that Chaplin's feet are one of the most valuable assets he has. Without the Chaplin walk, the Chaplin kick and other antics he pulls off with his pedal extremities, they say it would not be a Chaplin comedy.

It is these little tricks with his feet, as well as the comical facial expressions, that keeps spectators in roars of laughter. These great clumsy-looking feet, that move with such deftness and quickness, spell nothing but fun.

Without the make-up the Chaplin feet are much smaller than the average. He has them massaged and cared for after every performance to keep them supple and in excellent condition, so that he can pull off his tricks.

They are wonderfully strong and have the grace that comes with strength, which shows to advantage when clad in pumps. Mr. Chaplin is one of the finest of fancy dancers and can put on dances that are the envy of many a ballet girl. Toe dancing and all other steps come to him with ease and he has originated many a fancy trot.

LEAH BAIRD ON VACATION

To enjoy a complete rest from her work, Leah Baird, of the Vitagraph company, left recently for the South on a vacation that will last until she has thoroughly recuperated.

Miss Baird has been at work constantly for the past several months.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

NEWS FROM THE WORLD FILM EXCHANGES

JOHN RAPIER is now acting as salesman out of the St. Louis office of the World Film Corporation. He is a young chap, only 20 years old, with a pleasing personality, who has been promoted from the shipping department.

On April 29 Harry Weiss, of the Chicago office of the World Film Corporation, celebrates his first anniversary with this firm. Invitations have been issued for what promises to be some blowout.

William Postal, of the Seattle branch, and C. L. Theuerkauf, of the Los Angeles branch of the World Film Corporation, are leading all the other salesmen in the race for star positions for this period. R. S. Clark, of the New York branch, is fighting hard to reach second place. He has headed the last two honor rolls, but has not yet been one of the all-star trio.

W. W. Kulp, the Cleveland manager, of the World Film Corporation, received the first prize for branch managers for the period starting January 25, and ending February 21. This amounts to $100. Mr. Kulp's field comprises northern Ohio, and is one in which he is very popular.

The Get Together Club, composed of the employees of the World Film Corporation of Chicago, held a special session in honor of R. A. Bertschy, who is en route to the Kansas City office of the World Film Corporation. Mr. Bertschy is representing the sales department, and hails from the executive office.

After the meeting Mr. Weiss entertained at the North American with a buffet lunch and cabaret performance.

Harry R. Rosenberg, of the Minneapolis branch, is one of the World Film special flying squadron. That group of expert salesmen are sent by Sales Director Seelye to build up offices where greater results are necessary.

BIG BOOKING OF FOX FILMS IN CINCINNATI

THE Fox Film Corporation is said to be supplying films to about one-third of the motion picture houses in Cincinnati.

Bookings have greatly increased during the past month according to A. M. Muller, in charge of the local office. He has just booked "The Nigger" for a week's run at the Alhambra Theatre at the largest flat rental price ever paid for a film in that city.

Notwithstanding the fact that the original presentation of the play in Cincinnati several years ago was not enthusiastically received, the film version of the story has met with almost instantaneous approval of the people there.

Requests for bookings have been received from a large number of exhibitors in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, according to Mr. Muller. The exhibitors are anxious to book the production because they declare the public has approved it as an even more realistic and artistic presentation of the story than that of the stage production.

OKLAHOMA EXCHANGE MAN HURT IN ACCIDENT

ATTENDING physicians announced today the probable recovery of C. D. Mattingly, manager of the Oklahoma City exchange of the Universal Film Company, who was badly injured April 4 in an automobile accident. He was internally injured, two bones being broken and vital organs pierced by the bones.

Mr. Mattingly, with B. H. Powell, one of the owners of the Empress and Folly motion picture theatres of this city, were driving on the Grand boulevard northwest of town, and in attempting to pass a car in front, the cars collided. Mattingly's car, a new one purchased just a day previous to the accident, turned over pinning the owner beneath it. Powell was hurled almost 50 feet, but escaped with body and face bruises.

An immediate operation saved the life of Mr. Mattingly, although for several days physicians gave no hope for his recovery.

PARAMOUNT IN PITTSBURGH MOVES INTO OWN BUILDING

THE Pittsburgh office of the Paramount Pictures Corporation will move this week to its new home at Penn avenue and Twelfth street into what is known as the Paramount Pictures building.

That the company can well be proud of its new home and that its business will be greatly increased as a result of the additional quarters that are secured by the company in its new home, of that there can be little doubt.

For a number of months the quarters of the company have proved too small, and it is now possible for the company to spread out, as the new building has five stories and two basements.

METZGER AT UNIVERSAL CITY

GUS A. METZGER, general manager of the Universal Film Supply Company, with offices at Portland, Ore., together with his wife, are on a trip to Los Angeles, where they participated in the opening of Universal City. He expects to be gone about a month. Warners, Mutual and General Film offices of Spokane all report normal business.

MUTUAL TAKES OVER EXCHANGE IN PITTSBURGH

THE Mutual Film Corporation, at its executive offices, 71 West Twenty-third street, announces the purchase of the Pittsburgh Photoplay Company, of 412 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, Pa. The details of the sale were completed during the present week, and the Mutual Film Corporation has taken possession of the offices.

The Pittsburgh Photoplay Company has handled Mutual pictures in Pittsburgh and adjacent territory. Its officers were J. B. Clark, president, and H. B. Miller, secretary and manager.

Mr. Miller will continue as manager of the branch, and exhibitors throughout the territory are assured of a careful consideration of their interests and of the usual excellent service of the regular Mutual exchanges.

BRADY WILL REORGANIZE UNITED POSTER DEPARTMENT

DICK BRADY, formerly in charge of the Greater New York Film Rental Company's poster department, has been engaged to reorganize the poster department of the United Film Service's Forty-sixth street exchange of which Fred Holderman recently assumed the management.

At the same time, his brother Arthur, of Brady Lithograph Company fame, has also joined the United forces and will manage a department for the supplying of banners, signs and novelties to New York theaters using the United Program.

COCHARD AND LEVI WITH "DIAMOND" BOOKING FORCE

C. E. COCHARD has been placed in charge of booking of the coming Mutual serial, "A Diamond From The Sky," now being made at the Santa Barbara studios of the American Film Company, and N. E. Levi has been employed as salesman for the Mutual exchange in Southern California. Both Mr. Cochard and Mr. Levi were formerly connected with the General Film Company Los Angeles exchange.

"DIAMOND" BOOKINGS GOOD IN INDIANA

J. G. CONNER, who is now connected with the North American Film Corporation, with headquarters in the office of the Mutual Exchange in Indianapolis, has returned to his desk after spending a week at French Lick. Mr. Conner says the bookings on "The Diamond from the Sky" are very satisfactory and that he expects to exceed the business he did with "The Million Dollar Mystery."

MANY EXHIBITORS VISIT FOX BRANCH IN CAPITAL

J. P. ANDERSON, manager of the Washington, D. C., exchange for the Fox Film Corporation and the New York Film Rental Company, has had a busy week with visitors from both these organizations as well as exhibitors from out of town.

Abraham Carlos, general representative of New York, brought to Washington "The Nigger," which was given a private exhibition at Crandall's theatre. Among the thirty odd film men present all made bookings for this exceptionally impressive subject.

Harry Crandall, of Crandall's theatre, out-bid all competitors for the initial showing of "The Nigger" in that territory, which will have a four days' run beginning April 1. On this occasion Mr. Crandall will raise the price of admission from ten cents to fifteen cents for the matinee and twenty-five cents at night. This announcement has already been made to the patrons of Crandall's and no dissenting voice of consequence has been heard.

Other representatives of the Fox Corporation who were present at this private exhibition of "The Nigger" were Earl Booth of Philadelphia, Jack Levy, district representative of Philadelphia, and C. F. Senning, traveling representative for this district.

A visitor from the Greater New York Film Rental company was W. E. Jasper, road man in that territory, who had a very encouraging report to make from the various cities.

Among the exhibitors who have dropped into Mr. Anderson's office during the past week may be mentioned C. Clifton Cross of Norfolk; N. J. Hoerrmann, of the Palace theatre of Petersburg, Va.; F. C. Wright, of the Colonial theatre, of Hagerstown; William Fait, Jr., of Baltimore; J. Schaeffer, of Hagerstown, and Sam Levine, of the Little Pickwick, of Baltimore.

Mr. Anderson has contracted for extensive improvements at his exchange offices which will distinguish them as the most attractive in the Washington film district.

These will not only include commodious departments for the films and paper, as well as a comfortable waiting room, but will provide for a display room which will permit exhibitors to view films at any time.

BRYAN MANAGES PATHE, NEW ORLEANS; AUGER FOR MUTUAL

B. S. BRYAN, recently Atlanta manager for Pathé, has succeeded at New Orleans J. A. Mitchell, manager of the Crescent City office of the Pathé exchange. Mr. Nicholl has gone East.

Edward Auger, formerly of the New York office of the Mutual, arrived in New Orleans recently and was installed as manager of the Mutual exchange there. He took the place of H. L. Smith, who was transferred to Texas territory.

Mr. Auger is no new hand at the picture business, and knows it from A to Izzard.

ALLIED FEATURES ENLARGE OFFICES IN MONTREAL AND TORONTO

THE Montreal offices of the Allied Features, Inc., in the New Birkes building, the Canadian distributors of the Allied program, are being remodeled and enlarged.

It is intended to double the space heretofore used by the exchange and to give to the other departments the added room which the growth of the Allied has made imperative.

Similar alterations are to be made shortly in the Toronto offices.

"PINK SHEETS" FOR RED BLOODED EXHIBITORS IN TEXAS

THE Consolidated Film and Supply Company, Dallas, San Antonio and El Paso, Texas, handling Universal pictures, is issuing, under the editorship of James B. Kelly, weekly bulletins, "The Pink Sheet," for theatres in the Southwest taking service from that company.

Each number contains chatty announcements of coming pictures likely to attract with special dramatic qualities and acting of well-known players in roles particularly suited to their abilities.

ALLENBAUGH IS POPULAR EXCHANGE MAN

WITH offices in the Strand theatre building, Washington, D. C., Oliver J. Allenbaugh, president-manager of the Metro Film Service, has already made a place for himself among the exchanges and the theatres.

Mr. Allenbaugh has been able to place the Metro features in local houses, as well as other cities in his territory, which includes Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia. His first big act was to place the feature "The Heart of Maryland," with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the leading role, at the Belasco theatre for a week's run, which proved a big success.

RIFKIN VISITS NEW YORK

HERMAN RIFKIN, the general manager of the Eastern Feature Film Company, of Boston, was a visitor in New York during the early part of the week.

Mr. Rifkin's firm is the New England representative of the Alliance Films Corporation and he reports that he is getting his share of business in this territory.

Through Mr. Rifkin's untiring efforts the Alliance program is now being used in nearly all of the highest class houses down East. The Strand in Hartford, and the Poli theatres are regular subscribers.

PROGRESSIVE, LOS ANGELES, EXPANDS

MANAGER M. H. LEWIS, of the Progressive Film Exchange, Los Angeles, has found necessary to increase the quarters of the company in the Marsh Strong Building, and two additional rooms have been added to the Progressive suite, making a total of eight. In one of these a fireproof vault is being built at a cost of $1,000 and when completed will have capacity for the storage of 2,000 reels of film.

REGAL FILM EXCHANGE GIVES UP QUARTERS

THE Regal Film Exchange, San Francisco, recently opened in the Pacific building by F. E. McCoy, has given up its quarters there, but plans to continue booking its feature attractions.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

MORE PLAYS OBTAINED BY METRO PRODUCERS

The Metro Corporation and its producing allies are sparing no pains to secure the big plays that are still uncontracted for. "The Bridge" was gotten by B. A. Rolfe. The Popular Plays and Players had ten big dramas already contracted for before they entered into an agreement with

EDWARD CONNELLY

Petrova, and the play for Faversham is already under advisement.

Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way" is now about to go into work and "The Flaming Sword" and "Fighting Bob" are already under way.

Barbara Fritchie," Julia Marlowe's former powerful stage production, has been absolutely secured by the Popular Plays and Players Company and work will begin on it shortly.

Edward Connelly, well remembered as the original star of "Marse Covington" of George Ade's formidable story of "Antebellum Days," will appear in his original role in that production under the B. A. Rolfe banner, and this will be another early release on the Metro roster.

FILMING OF "NE-'ER-DO-WELL" FINISHED

"The Ne'er-Do-Well," certain to be one of the best picture-play features of 1915, has been completed by the Selig company. From the beginning to the last thrilling scene, expense piled high as the filming of the great Rex Beach novel made its demands for special structures.

FLAMINGO COMPLETES TWO COMEDIES

The Flamingo Company has now completed its first two comedy productions for distribution through the World Film Corporation. It will specialize on a comedy series entitled "The Feats of Felix," in which appear the famous German comedian, Charles A. Mason, who appeared in Henry W. Savage's production, "The Prince of Pilsen," and was a member of the well-known vaudeville team of Mason and Mason.

The third picture in this series will be "The Book Agent," a two-reel production to be released on June 21. All of the Flamingo comedies will be two or more reels in length and so will not conflict in any way with the weekly World-Comedy Star pictures, which will always consist of but one reel. The Flamingo director is Charles A. Murphy, who was with the Lubin Company for three years.

IRENE WALLACE TO PLAY IN "BLOOM CENTER" COMEDIES

Irene Wallace, now leading lady for the Selig company, will star as Margaret Tate, editor of the "Bloom Center Weekly Bugle," in a series of rural comedies called "Chronicles of Bloom Center," soon to be released by the Selig Polyscope company.

Ralph McComas has been engaged for the part of Johnny West, the fat office boy, while Harold Howard, another recent acquisition of the Selig company, will enact the role of Percy Pinkham, in love with Margaret. For "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," a typical rural village, such as dot the United States, has been erected at the Jungle-Zoo. It is complete even to the town pump.

INA CLAIRE TO BE A LASKY STAR FOR FIVE YEARS

Although "The Wild Goose Chase," the first photodrama in which Ina Claire is to appear, has not yet been released, Jesse L. Lasky and Samuel Goldfish are so delighted with the production that they have arranged for Miss Claire to begin work immediately upon her second production.

By the terms of the contract between Miss Claire and the Lasky Feature Play Co., the fact that she is retained for a second production gives the Lasky Company exclusive right to her services for a period of five years. This does not mean that Miss Claire is to abandon her engagements as a legitimate artist, but merely that she will devote a certain portion of time each year to work for the screen and that this work must be entirely for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

The second subject chosen for Miss Claire is a picturization of Harold MacGrath's famous novel "The Puppet Crown."

BOSWORTH WILL PRODUCE "THE TURKISH RUG"

Work has been begun on the next Bosworth, Inc., production, "The Turkish Rug," from the pen of Mrs. Julia Ivers, the novelist and magazine writer.

"The Turkish Rug" has splendid atmosphere and works out an unusually original idea. A little dancing girl of the Orient weaves into a rug the dreams and wistfulness of her girlhood and the rug finally sells at a high figure to a young New York connoisseur. Their eventful romance through the agency of the rug is a piquant novelty and constitutes as charming a love idyl as has been seen on the screen in some time.

THE CHRISTENING OF "BRYAN" AT THE HORSLEY ARENA, LOS ANGELES

Walker Whiteside to Make Film Debut for Cort

Legitimate Star Will Make His First Screen Appearance in Israel Zangwill's Famous Drama, "The Melting Pot"

WHEN Walker Whiteside, who had previously turned aside all offers to appear in motion pictures, finally agreed to join the picture forces of John Cort he picked "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's great drama, as the proper medium through which to show himself to the motion picture public for the first time. Mr. Whiteside talked to a representative of the Motion Picture News at the studios in Bayonne where the Cort Film Corporation is making "The Melting Pot" as the first of a series of features in which stage celebrities now under contract with Mr. Cort will appear.

"I picked 'The Melting Pot,'" said Mr. Whiteside, "because it is the greatest of my repertory and because it comes the nearest to being what might be called a tremendous heart interest story for the screen. More than any other play with which I have had to do, this masterpiece of Mr. Zangwill presents, in the life of a few, the terrible struggle which has been going on underneath the surface for years and finally burst forth in the conflict which is now going on in Europe.

"And, in the last analysis, this great story of passion, love and hate makes America the promised land, the place where all national hatred and racial prejudices are brought to the level where even the Jew, the persecuted of all time, comes at last to the triumph of peace, contentment and happiness.

"I don't know of any stronger story of the unjust power which one monarch holds over more than half the area of Europe. I don't know of a more thrilling tale of flight from oppression and struggle for existence in a new land than this. I cannot remember a more telling incident in literature than the awful chronicle of the Kishneff massacre which stunned the entire world with its horror.

"And, if the picture teaches no other lesson, it ought to show every man, woman and child why they should rejoice in their God given right to live and have their being in America. These are some of the reasons why we have put on 'The Melting Pot.'"

Much money and patience is being spent on the making of "The Melting Pot," which was picturized for Mr. Cort by Catherine Carr, a well-known scenario editor and writer. Hundreds of extra people have been used in the massacre scenes, and in the taking of the "bits" which show the crowds of political prisoners being driven across the snowy wastes of Northern Russia. More than two hundred horses were employed in these scenes, the whole being topped in the latter part of the picture by a representation of the Metropolitan Opera House interior in which Mr. Whiteside, as the musician come to fame, directs an orchestra of one hundred musicians before a large audience.

It was learned at Mr. Cort's office in the Longacre building that Mr. Cort considers the acceptance of a contract by Mr. Whiteside as one of the biggest things that has come to the motion picture public. Mr. Whiteside was convinced that he should do a picture only after a great deal of persuasion, and is said to be getting the largest salary ever paid to a male star in the movies.

For Mr. Cort it was said that he took Mr. Whiteside's judgment in the matter and started work on "The Melting Pot" because he was satisfied that it was the most thrilling sermon which could be put on the screen and because he felt sure that every Jew and Gentile, Protestant or Christian, would find much for them in the story. He knew from the stage version of the piece that Mr. Zangwill's stupendous drama would meet complete public approval.

Metro Tenders $25,000 Offer to Geraldine Farrar

Company Plans to Include Famous Singer on Regular Program—Concern Also Secures Screen Rights to Johnson-Willard Fight

THE Metro Pictures Corporation, now under full steam and going ahead at a fast clip, startled the trade this week with an offer of twenty-five thousand dollars to Geraldine Farrar, the noted opera singer, for her appearance in a gigantic spectacle of the great historical play, "Barbara Fritchie."

The offer was made through Richard Herndon, a theatrical broker, and was communicated to Miss Farrar after she had practically signified her willingness to accept the offer. Mr. Herndon had already spoken to the famous singer and then approached the Metro directors, asking them if they would be interested in the proposition.

Speaking for the Metro Corporation, Mr. Rowland, president of that concern, said: "We are in the market for the world's greatest stars and our flexible distributing policy permits us, I presume to go farther than any other firm, to make bids for noted stars and plays. We were instrumental in securing Mr. Faversham for fifteen thousand dollars and have offered another almost unapproachable star, twenty thousand dollars for one picture.

"And now when Farrar's name came to us from a most substantial source, we were quick to see the commercial value of the great singer's name and it will be a regular Metro release, as will the Faversham and Petrova pictures."

Anyone who knows Dick Rowland, as he is familiarly known throughout the trade, will tell you that he seldom talks. An example of the attractiveness of the Metro subjects can be gleaned from the fact that the New York office is booked for seven weeks with the three releases already gotten out, and this office is running with five prints per production, two more than the other offices are accustomed to using.

There are but three men at the central office, Richard A. Rowland, Joseph M. Engel and Harry Reichanbach. It is a mystery where all the work is done, but to the initiated, one has but to know that all shipments, receiving departments and other detail work is done by those who supply Metro Pictures Corporation with its accessories.

The Metro people this week secured

FLORENCE REED (Popular Plays and Players)

the rights to the Johnson-Willard fight pictures, and these will be given to the Metro exchanges, in the event of the Federal law permitting of their being shown in this country, and Metro exhibitors will, of course, receive optional bookings.

Already thirty-eight hundred theatres are booking under the Metro Pictures banner.

ENFORCE 8 O'CLOCK LAW, DEMAND DETROIT WOMEN

Because they believe that the city ordinance relative to prohibiting children under 14 years of age from attending theatres or motion picture shows after eight o'clock at night, unless accompanied by parent or guardian, is not being properly enforced, the members of the civic department of the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs are making urgent appeals to parents to see that their children are not permitted to attend motion picture shows in the evening.

"The parent is primarily the guardian of the child and is often more deserving of censure for this state of affairs than the managers of theatres," said the chairman of the civic department. "Children usually enter the theatre before eight o'clock and then it becomes a question with the manager of violating the ordinance or requesting the children to leave.

"Those theatres which plan Saturday matinees for children should be encouraged, for this lessens the evening attendance on the part of the children and every one knows that artificial entertainment for growing children should be indulged in sparingly. But the value of the motion picture as an educator and moulder of morals cannot be overestimated."

ACTION OF OMAHA LICENSE INSPECTOR CAUSES CRITICISM

Reports emanating from the license inspector's office in Omaha, Neb., that motion picture theatres in the city are slow in paying their license fees, and attempting to lay the blame at the door of the exhibitors, has aroused considerable indignation.

Under the commission plan of government in Omaha the license inspector is expected to collect the license fees when they remain unpaid for a certain length of time. His neglect to do that led to criticism, which he shifted to the exhibitors.

The license in Omaha was recently lowered from a flat rate of seventy-five dollars a year for a theatre, making no difference how large or small it was, to a rate of ten cents a seat for each year. Thus a house seating two hundred and fifty people now pays only twenty-five dollars instead of the former seventy-five dollars.

The rate is so reasonable no exhibitors have objected to paying it. A number of them had their checks all ready and waiting for the inspector to collect. When he blamed them for their negligence, a number took it upon themselves to resent it in letters to his superiors.

Nebraska Senate Fails to Pass Censorship Bills

NEBRASKA motion picture exhibitors are among the luckiest people on earth. The legislature of that State has adjourned after defeating one censorship measure and leaving another one trembling on the verge of passage. Thus Nebraska as a whole is free from censorship for two more years.

One bill, for an act providing for the censorship of motion picture films by the Nebraska Conservation and Public Welfare Commission, and providing a penalty for violation, was rushed through the house of representatives during the last days and hung poised over the senate sifting committee when the legislature adjourned. An idea of how it might have flashed through the senate, had it had a chance, is shown by the fact that it went through the House by a vote of sixty-three to four.

Absolutely no opposition was offered to the bill. While it was before the committee, with an out-state representative urging it, not a voice was raised against it. To get rid of the persistent representative, more than anything else, the committee pushed it before the house, where it was raced through. The few exhibitors throughout the State who feared the passage of the bill are now shaking hands with themselves over the outcome.

The other Nebraska censorship measure was concealed in a "public welfare bill." It provided for a welfare board, part of whose duties would be to censor all motion pictures shown in Omaha. The power of such a board or commission was to be rapidly extended out into the State. A fight was made against this measure. Lincoln, Neb., exhibitors arose in a body and remonstrated. Omaha exhibitors, directly affected, paid little attention.

Those in Omaha who were concerned are looking upon the defeat of the bill in the senate as another cause for congratulating themselves.

Nebraska exhibitors sure are lucky. Now those interested are hoping there will be an efficient organization in the State to meet and oppose the next censorship measure suggested.

Winnipeg Censors Install Their Own Projector

A PROJECTING machine of their own will be installed by the Winnipeg censors of moving picture films. Heretofore the projector belonging to the picture exchanges in the city has been used.

This action was taken by the Winnipeg board of control, after it had been pointed out to them that when the board of censors was first started in Winnipeg there were but three exchanges here.

Now the number of exchanges has increased to ten and complications are constantly arising as to the use of the projector. At the recent session of the Manitoba legislature the motion picture bill was amended by allowing the city to charge one dollar and twenty-five cents per reel for censoring. One dollar was the sum previously charged. It is believed the additional twenty-five cents per reel will allow of the purchase of a projector in a short time.

During March 616 reels were censored by the board, of which number 55 were condemned as unfit for public view.

One hundred and ninety-three reels had strips of film of varying sizes cut out, for the following reasons:

Cruelty, 11; choking, 7; German scenes, 16; murders, 11; suggesting murder, 9; subtitles, 106; incendiary, 22; breaking open freight car, 2; holdups, 22; assault, 15; changing blank cartridge for bullets, 1; robbing safe, 2; burglary, 19; vulgar, 6; lighting fuse, 3; opening letters, 5; forgery, 1; threatening with dagger, 22; stage robbery, 2; shooting, 56; threatening with gun, 23; suicide, 4; stealing, 11; opening safe, 5; attempted murder, 2; pocket picking, 6; suggesting suicide, 7; suggestive scenes, 46; fighting, 9; letters, 9; gambling, 18; blackmail, 6; gruesome, 18; infidelity, 10; stabbing, 2; kidnapping, 1; theft, 3; desertion, 2; drugging, 4, and robbery, 4.

IOWA EXHIBITORS HOPE TO KILL CENSOR MEASURES

Iowa exhibitors have hopes now that the two censorship measures now before their State legislature may be allowed to die peacefully. The legislature is nearing its last days, grappling with measures they consider much more important, and in the meanwhile W. C. Eddy, secretary of the Iowa State branch of the M. P. E. L. A., is sitting tight on the lid of the censorship bills.

The last report from Secretatry Eddy, who has an office within a stone's throw of the legislative halls, so he can be on the battlefield at a moment's notice, was that silent attention was all that was needed to kill the bills. The matter is being kept out of the State papers and the exhibitors are breathing with bated breaths.

"The outlook is bright," said Secretary Eddy, in a letter. "We have been fighting, and fighting hard. They seem to have forgotten us. We hope so, for the time being, at least."

The energy displayed by the forces behind Secretary Eddy promises gratifying results,

Helen Strickland, New Edison Star, Long in Stock

Actress Who Was Also with Frohman, the Lieblers, and Henry B. Harris, Makes Hit in Eccentric Parts on the Screen

HEREDITY told in Helen Strickland's remarkable interpretation of the mother in the Edison feature, "The Stoning," for she is the daughter of Edward F. Strickland, the well-known actor of a half-century ago and a player in the companies of McCready and Keane.

Miss Strickland has been almost continuously on the stage since she was fifteen—with but one vacation of six months—and has played everything from ingenues to eccentric comedy. She went to Edison to play eccentric comedy, but her "mother" characters made such an immediate impression that she was, with one voice, chosen for such parts.

Miss Strickland, although comparatively new to pictures, gives certain promise to be known as one of the most compelling "mothers" on the screen.

Miss Strickland has spent much of her time in stock. She spent two years with the Pabst English stock company at Milwaukee which, since that time, has added so many stars to the stage. She was with Hedwig Reicher in "On the Eve" for one season, afterward joining Eleanor Robson for two seasons in "Merely Mary Ann." Miss Strickland has been under the management of the two Frohmans, the Lieblers and the late Henry B. Harris.

Some of the Edison films—the first she has appeared in and for which she left "The Bachelor's Baby," with Francis Wilson, are "The Last of the Hargroves," "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" "The Manufactured Mother," of the "Olive's Opportunities" series, and "The Stoning."

Thanhouser Entertains Press Representatives

Outlines His Views on Film Making and Demonstrates Their Accuracy by Showing Three Latest Productions of New Rochelle Studios

WHAT the return of Edwin Thanhouser means to the Thanhouser Film Corporation was indicated on Monday, April 12, when representatives of the motion picture trade press and newspapers journeyed to New Rochelle at the instance of Mr. Thanhouser and Leon J. Rubinstein, his publicity representative.

Mr. Thanhouser outlined his policies in a very short talk, moderately worded, not over-enthusiastic, giving, if anything, the impresion that he was understating his case.

"Too many good pictures are being made now for me to think I can drive the other producers into obscurity or anything like that," he said. "But I shall endeavor to make Thanhouser pictures consistently good. I have always believed in motion pictures carrying their own virtues as pictures and not as vehicles for a star. The man who creates a demand for his pictures through creating a star, is taking the easiest way of creating a demand, but sooner or later he finds himself at the mercy of the star. I shall try to make the Thanhouser product of the future good all the time. Every picture may not be a world-beater but I'm going to see that no 'flivvers' go out under our brand."

Then came the important part. Mr. Thanhouser went on to demonstrate, ocularly, the strength of his words by showing three of the coming releases of Thanhouser pictures made under his supervision.

One was "Their Only Love," which can best be described as a one reel feature, for that is just what it is. It is a single reel picture without a sub-title, and containing enough "meat" to carry a three-reeler. Most conspicuous in the cast were the Fairbanks twins, age fourteen, whose beauty was very apparent.

The most important technical feature of "Their Only Love" was the taking of exterior battle scenes at night. Motion picture photography at night has long been the aim of many producers and technical experts, but never before has been so well realized. The device by which the scenes were taken, for want of a better name, is now called a "noctoscope." It is not patented, for it will stay at the Thanhouser plant.

Other pictures shown were "The Actor and the Rube," which is the first of the new Falstaff comedies, and a two reel subject called "Nickola Dupree," the title of which may be changed before its release. Both of these were pictures fully justifying Mr. Thanhouser's claim of "consistent excellence."

Other pleasant events enlivened the day. The writing persons dined at Pepperday Inn, chaperoned by Mr. Rubinstein, smoked many large cigars with Thanhouser bands, were personally conducted all over the plant, shook hands with the hired men, "had their pictures took," and watched the filming of scenes featuring Florence LaBadie and Loraine Huling.

On the next trip, and a next trip was promised by Mr. Rubinstein, there may be more to see for it is very probable that by that time ground will be broken on a new studio building, which will enlarge the present producing quarters. But that will be another story.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS BUILDING HOME IN LOS ANGELES

Kathlyn Williams, the Selig star, who recently returned from Panama, where scenes from the forthcoming Selig spectacular special, "The Ne-er-Do-Well," were staged, is building a beautiful home on Bryan street, just off Sunset avenue, Los Angeles.

Miss Williams reports having been delightfully entertained by General Edwards and Mrs. Edwards at Panama.

LOS ANGELES CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WAITING SELIG VISIT

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has taken notice of the forthcoming visit of the Selig Movie Special, which leaves Chicago, Ill., Thursday, July 8, for the Golden State.

A queen of honor and her court will meet the Selig tourists when they arrive in "The City of Angels."

THREE CHANGES IN WORLD FILM EXCHANGES

C. E. Shurtleff, formerly salesman of the Atlanta branch of the World Film Corporation, has been transferred to Washington to work in the same capacity.

O. T. Enos, a product of the salesman's school, has been sent to the Philadelphia office of the World Film Corporation.

The World Film Corporation has outgrown its quarters in Washington, D. C., and on May 1 Manager Ben Drum and his staff will ttake possession of the three-story building located at 1004 "E" street, N. W.

Paramount Units Sign 25-Year Contracts

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, the Famous Players Film Company and Bosworth, Inc., Arrange for a Continuance of a Definite Number of Releases for That Period—Zukor, Goldfish and Hodkinson Expect an Improvement in the Artistic Side of the Industry

NEW contracts just consummated between the Famous Players Film Company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., and the Paramount Picture Corporation, for a period of twenty-five years, will mean an even closer affiliation between these concerns in the future.

Such a contract establishes a permanence and stability, affording immeasurable opportunities for progress. All will work in a more united effort to improve the quality of production on the Paramount Program, and to insure a yet more valuable service for Paramount exhibitors.

These contracts eliminate all possible differences that might arise in the conduct of the multitude of affairs, and provide that the three producers shall retain their position on the program, and continue to supply their proportionate number of releases.

The contracts in question further provide that all releases must measure up to a certain defined standard, if they are to find a place on the program. Every incentive is given the producer to make the very best pictures it is possible for him to make.

Paramount has agreed to increase the amount of advances to its producers, so there may be every reason for the manufacturer to attain the highest goal in his efforts to give the best.

By this latest affiliation of interests the subjects handled by the Select Film Booking Agency will be so distributed as to protect the interests of Paramount exhibitors.

Paramount in Strong Position

With the recent increase in capitalization to $10,000,000, Paramount is in an invulnerable position. The advantages already possessed by it and the manufacturers releasing through it, are greatly enhanced and the inherent strength of the organization as a unit is greatly increased.

With the oldest established exchanges handling high-grade productions and the consequent efficient distribution, together with its program, Paramount service is easily in the front rank of the concerns engaged in the distribution of a feature program. The development of this program will be further advanced within the next few months.

These new plans of the producers and Paramount must make for the ever increasing benefit of the exhibitors holding contracts for Paramount service, as well as for the exchanges, and in fact every affiliation of the Paramount organization.

Paramount is now entering upon its third quarter, and the success which has attended its consistent growth will be materially advanced by the increased harmony between the manufacturers and the distributing organization.

The standard which has marked the combined output of the manufacturers comprising the Paramount Program has substantially increased the prestige and prosperity of feature exhibitors and promoted the releasing facilities of important feature productions.

When seen, Mr. Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, said:

"The financial and artistic success of the Paramount program is now undisputed by the firmest former believers that the feature could not be distributed in the regular manner for an exclusive program; but, far from resting content with this achievement, we are all determined to surpass it in as great a degree in the future as we have in the past excelled all other distributing systems.

"Near the close of the first year of Paramount distribution, we are all not so much amazed at the success of the elementary idea of this plan as at the extent of the success. With our plans for forthcoming productions of unusual importance and attractive power, we are confident that the producers releasing through the Paramount program will offer to exhibitors not alone the most efficient service feature in the world, but greater cooperative value than was ever before possible in the history of feature productions."

The closer and greater affiliation of interests between the producers and Paramount Pictures Corporation offered by the unprecedented period of time covered in the extended contract recently consummated provides an unequalled incentive for a more enduring policy of merit and distribution. Due to the permanency of this arrangement the producers releasing through Paramount can so regulate their activities so as to maintain a perpetual standard of efficiency.

Goldfish's Views on Situation

Samuel Goldfish, speaking for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, comments upon the new arrangement between the producers and the Paramount Pictures Corporation as follows:

"Probably the most important aspect of the new arrangement, not only from the viewpoint of the trade, but in the eyes of millions of photoplay patrons, is the great encouragement which it gives the producers to redouble their efforts for the still further advancement of an art which they have already developed most remarkably.

"Naturally the cost of producing photodramas increases in proportion as we pay higher salaries for stars and associate players, as we consume more and more time in order to let no details escape attention, and as we make the settings continually more elaborate and realistic.

"It is not reasonable that we should forever multiply these risks unless we have at least moderate expectation of greater income to offset the augmented expenditures

"We feel that the new and more comprehensive plan now undertaken by the Paramount must inevitably produce this increased financial return, and we have such confidence in the undertaking that we are willing to draw upon our resources even more lavishly than ever before, resting satisfied in the assurance that the ultimate results will justify every present hazard of money and energy.

"The Paramount has already proved the worth of the program idea—with the qualification that any program must always be valuable only in accordance with the public demand to see the various productions The Paramount Program, we feel, as been truly 'paramount' from the start, and we shall take good care to see that our share of the productions always tend to keep it in the lead.

"Twenty-five years is the stipulated duration of our new undertaking with the Paramount. This is the record long-term contract for the amusement business in America. By thus binding ourselves together we pledge ourselves to progress not from day to day, but from year to year, knowing we shall have time to reap what we sow."

W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, endorses this opinion, and adds the following:

"The phenomenal development of the Paramount program, due to the consistent merits of Famous Players, Lasky and Bosworth productions, and to the efficient cooperation which we have succeeded in establishing between the individual exchanges and exhibitors, will be further advanced within the next few months.

Confidence and Harmony Extended

"We are all striving to further extend that confidence and harmony which have existed between the manufacturers, exchanges and exhibitors allied with the Paramount program from its inception. We are not alone making plans for the business of today, but are trying to anticipate conditions that may arise a year or two from now. I am certain that no industrial exigency of any nature can arise to find us unprepared. We are striving to protect, not alone the present welfare of our exhibitors, but also the future of the individual theatres booking our program.

"Quality and system have placed manufacturers and distributors of Paramount pictures in the lead of the whole world, and there is no evidence that upon the first year of Paramount having elapsed there will be any other concern so far advanced as Paramount was at its beginning on September 1, 1914.

"To indicate definitely that these ideas were originated by the president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, and were advocated by him in 1910, some years before any of the present feature producing companies were in existence, we quote from an article by Mr. Hodkinson which appeared in the "Film Index" of March, 1910, as follows:

"A longer show can be given for 10 cents, averaging an hour and consisting of three or four reels of film in which will be a pleasing variety of which some particular part must interest each one.

"A show running an hour is an inducement for people to travel a distance to witness it, and one will feel repaid to come out during disagreeable weather for an hour's entertainment.

"Shows universally must run 3,000 or 4,000 foot programs for a considerable period, depending on population, and receive increased prices before the manufacturers will be able to do their best in the way of producing long subjects of especial importance and interest, consisting of several reels on one theme, which could be made so attractive that 10 cents or more could be drawn from everyone with any desire for knowledge or entertainment. When this is done it would force exchanges to place the true valuation on real feature films, and not regard each film as just a 'reel,' as at present. The present system prevents either exchange or exhibitor from placing a true value on an unusually good film, and it must be discouraging to the manufacturer to see it handled in exactly the same manner as a reel of worthless matter."

Policies Not Borrowed

"Paramount policies are not borrowed from some other source—these policies have been carefully thought out and painstakingly worked out during a series of years to prove their true worth in practical operation.

"Briefly, Paramount policies are a high-grade feature program released regularly; better theatres to show it in; higher admission prices, and a better class of patrons.

"These policies were given their first trial by me in a small theatre in Ogden, Utah, in 1907, at a time when practically every motion picture show charged 5 cents—but I charged 10 cents, ran a program, tried for quality instead of quantity, catered to a better class of people, and ran my pictures one week. This began the development of a feature program, longer runs, higher admissions, better theatres, better patrons.

"In 1910 I was running three theatres, operating these present Paramount policies, and in order to obtain pictures which approached a feature, I held single reels being issued as a serial until three reels had been secured, when all three were played at one time to make a program. I followed this course with 'The Life of Moses,' put out by the Vitagraph company in 1910; also 'Tale of Two Cities,' put out by the same concern.

"One year ago today there was no such thing as a concern distributing a regular weekly program of expensive multiple reel productions in a national manner, with regular release dates, consistently graded prices for large and small towns, or exclusive service contracts. The only thing approximating such service was 'Hodkinson's Progressive Service' on the Pacific Coast, which has been operating for almost a year on an exact and scientific basis, and which had taken lead in the minds of the exhibitors of the West on account of quality and system."

"The Woman" Is Fifth Lasky-Belasco Picture

Mabel Van Buren, Lois Meredith, Theodore Roberts and James Neill Star in Modern American Drama, Written by William C. De Mille

THE Lasky-Belasco production in pictures of "The Woman," which is announced for release on Monday, May 3, is the fifth in the series of productions made by Jesse L. Lasky in association with David Belasco. These productions, up to date, in chronological order, are: "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Girl of the Golden West," Blanche Sweet in "The Warrens of Virginia," Edith Wynne Matthison in "The Governor's Lady," and "The Woman."

Like "The Governor's Lady," "The Woman" is a story of strictly modern and American interest. The plot of the play, written by William C. De Mille and first produced by Mr. Belasco, at the Belasco theatre, is a remarkable combination of domestic and political intrigue.

The cast of "The Woman" includes four artists, who deserve to rank as stars: Theodore Roberts, James Neill, Mabel Van Buren and Lois Meredith. This is the first time that Miss Meredith, who is one of the most noted of the younger Broadway stars, has appeared under Lasky management. In addition to these four artists, the cast includes Ernest Joy, Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Helen Hill and Dr. Beitel.

MICHIGAN BILL TO PERMIT PICTURES ON SECOND FLOORS

A bill has been introduced into the Michigan legislature by Senator Robert Y. Ogg, of Detroit, which would permit the exhibition of moving pictures in auditoriums that are situated above the ground floor, providing the buildings are fireproof.

The Ford Motor Company is said to be behind the bill.

Gaston Melies, Film Pioneer, Dies in Corsica

Brought Star Trick Pictures to America in 1903—Was Licensee of Patents Company—Retired in 1913—Typhoid Caused Death

A DELAYED cable from Ajaccio, Corsica, announces the death of Gaston Melies, the pioneer of the film business. Death was caused by typhoid fever after a protracted illness.

Mr. Melies was the first to establish the film business in America, coming from France in 1903, and handling the Star films, produced in Paris. Old-time exhibitors will remember some of these trick Star films as among the finest films of their kind they ever ran.

The growth of the industry, however, and the introduction of American drama curtailed the demand for trick pictures and dramatic productions were necessary to the continuance of the business.

Mr. Melies commenced his American productions in 1909 and early in 1910 organized the Melies Manufacturing Company. He was a licensee of the Motion Picture Patents Company, and upon the formation of the General Film Company was a director and shareholder.

In August, 1910, he resigned as director of the General Film Company and assumed active charge of his productions, first in Texas, then in Santa Paula, Cal. Western subjects comprise his principal productions at this time.

In 1912, with his complete stock company, he made a Pacific tour, including the Society Islands, Australia, Java and Japan. The hardships of this tour proved too much for his realth, and he returned to this country in the summer of 1913, a wreck of his former self. Later in that year he retired from the business and spent his last days in France and Corsica.

Paul G. Melies, his son, is now in active charge of the Melies Manufacturing Company.

BOXES TAKE WELL IN HOUSTON

It was during the showing of "Satan Sanderson" at the Isis, one of Houston's bigger theatres, that the boxes in the picture house first "caught on" with a discriminating public.

The boxes, rather a new idea in Houston, were well patronized.

Some Objections from a Film Patron

Editor, Motion Picture News.

Dear Sir: Recently I picked up a copy of your publication and after reading more or less of its contents I was impressed with the magnitude of this comparatively new amusement game.

I have been a faithful patron of the theatre for over twenty-five years, and also enjoy motion pictures now and then. Therefore, I think I may mention some blemishes in "screen work."

In the first place, there is a large number of patrons, at least among men, who do not care for stories running for more than one or two reels. The reason is obvious in houses where pictures and vaudeville are combined. A patron may happen in after the story has got under way, and he will fail to catch the threads of the plot. It is just like going to the regular theatre after the first act. In this case the subsequent action is apt to be confusing, if not altogether unintelligible.

To give a concrete instance of this. I recently attended one of the largest houses in Boston and there were at least 1,500 people present at 4.30 p. m. On the screen part two of a story produced by one of the leading companies was just starting, and it was rather hard to get the drift of the story, which was in three parts and dealt with diamonds, an adventuress and blackmail—melodramatic dope as old as the pyramids and Noah's Ark.

A One or Two Reeler Needed

The photography was clear and the settings excellent, but the thing was trite and long drawn out. After awhile the audience got restless, and at 5 o'clock there were hardly five hundred people in the theatre.

If it had been a one or two-reel picture followed by a good vaudeville turn the situation would have been saved. I have heard many business men speak of this same thing.

The "hero" in this story and a "chum" of his looked so much alike that it was hard to differentiate between them, and the women were made up so heavily around the eyes and lips that they looked "theatrical" and cheap.

Is it unreasonable to call attention of producers to these remediable details?

WALTER H. DUGAN,
39 Cypress Street,
Brookline, Boston, Mass.

Editor's Note—Some of the objections voiced by Mr. Dugan may seem well taken by producers who believe in the maintenance of high standards in the making of pictures. On the other hand, a few points in Mr. Dugan's criticism do not appear to constitute serious objections.

In the first place, everybody does not prefer short reels. Reports throughout the country indicate a wide popularity of features. This is evident among patrons who do not look upon motion pictures as a kind of stoppage for an idle hour between business appointments. They consider photoplays a serious form of entertainment, and plan to spend a whole evening at the theatre. With this in mind they are in their seats when the performance begins, and can follow the action of a plot from start to finish without difficulty.

If a patron expects to go to a "legitimate" play in time for the rise of the curtain on the first act why shouldn't he feel it necessary to be in his seat at the beginning of a four or five-part motion picture?

The day has gone by when the average person thinks only of "dropping in" to see pictures. The majority of the films brought out by responsible manufacturers have been produced with sufficient skill to create a desire for witnessing the "whole show."

For this reason there is no necessity for the interpolation of vaudeville—pictures are sufficient unto themselves.

The case cited by Mr. Dugan as indicating the displeasure of the audience with the entertainment is not well taken. At five o'clock people are getting ready to go home for dinner. Women constitute the patronage at afternoon performances, and the majority have to leave in time to prepare the evening meal for the homecoming breadwinners.

No Real Dissatisfaction

If the attendance had fallen off from 1,500 to 500 in half an hour at a night performance, the sudden exit of so many people might indicate dissatisfaction with the program. But it was not.

The "make-up" Mr. Dugan complains of is not overdone as a rule, and he should remember that, like the stage, it is often necessary to accentuate the peculiarities of the actor's countenance to bring out the facial oddities of a character having distinct traits. All players look "theatrical" under such circumstances, particularly if the spectator sits close to the orchestra pit.

If the hero and his chum looked so much alike probably there was the best reason in the world. The same actor might have been playing both roles, and the likenesses were really a tribute to a camera man versed in the mysteries of trick photography. The perfection of this branch of the motion picture art is shown in a picture having ten characters, many on the stage at once, and all played by one actor, King Baggot, in "Shadows."

Why So Much Shooting When Unnecessary?

Editor, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—Why don't manufacturers eliminate so much shooting from their pictures? I am in favor of doing away with revolvers in motion pictures altogether. There is entirely too much killing. And sometimes the use of weapons seems so unnecessary.

Recently I viewed a very fine picture, as far as photography, acting and setting were concerned, but the ending was disgusting. In the first reel a man steals food for his family, then leaves home on a prospecting trip. Later his wife falls in love with the man from whom her husband stole the provisions. When the struggling husband returns he is shot down in cold blood without a chance for self-defense. The only apparent reason for the deed was an excuse to give the murderer opportunity to marry the wife of his victim. And how utterly useless and distasteful an ending for the drama! Here the revolver certainly was used with deplorable effect.

Allow me to make further criticisms. It is a joke to see how some companies can get a policeman from anywhere. An officer can be called up at the mere beck and call of a director from a barren field, off roof tops or wherever one is wanted.

Then, too, there are so many pictures of poor quality in which clever actors and actresses appear. It seems like a waste of good effort on their part to try to make the story interesting.

A Film Fan.

NEW OFFICE FOR MILWAUKEE EXCHANGE

THANHOUSER PRIZE WINNER SEES HERSELF IN FILMS

Joseph Halleman, proprietor and manager of the Melvin Theatre, 2912-14 Chippewa street, St. Louis, grasped an opportunity for a house filler not long ago that broke all records in his attendance.

Mr. Halleman has been running the "Million Dollar Mystery," and Miss Ida Damon, the fortunate young woman who won the $10,000 prize for the scenario of the final reel, has been a regular patron of the Melvin, and has never missed an instalment of the serial. On the night that he was to show the final reel of the "Million Dollar Mystery," with motion pictures of Miss Damon, Mr. Halleman invited the young lady, who lives only a block away from the theatre, to appear in person before his audience.

The people of the whole neighborhood, many of whom were personal friends and acquaintances of hers, turned out to do honor to Miss Damon. Lew Bent, of the Mutual exchange, introduced her with a few well chosen remarks, and after enthusiastic cheering and requests from the appreciative audience, Miss Damon also made a speech.

A remarkable incident of the performance was the fact that Miss Damon's father, Albert Damon, seventy years old, witnessed a motion picture exhibition for the first time in his life.

SEEK TO BOOST LICENSE FEE IN MILWAUKEE

It has just been learned that Alderman Thomas Manning of Milwaukee is contemplating the introduction of an ordinance to raise the fee for theatre and motion picture house licenses from $100 to $500. Although Alderman Manning could not be reached those who are in a position to know say that the bill has little chance of getting through, as the idea of the theatre license is not so much a tax as a method of regulation.

CLEVELAND THEATRES ENLARGE SCOPE OF MUSIC

Cleveland motion picture houses are providing special attractions on Sundays. The Ray theatre, Prospect, near East Twelfth street, has an orchestra of seven pieces every Sunday.

The Duchess theatre, converted into a picture playhouse by Manager A. A. Comey, has an orchestra and musical program, including a quartet, on Sundays. Other houses are contemplating similar attractions.

NAOMI CHILDERS PLAYS LEAD IN "ROSELYN"

Of the screen stars who have recently come into the limelight, perhaps Naomi Childers is one of the best known and best liked. Without a doubt Miss Childers is an exceptionally talented and versatile actress. She has appeared in both drama and comedy with equal success in each.

A recent dramatic success of hers was in "Roselyn," a Broadway Star Feature, in which she played the leading part.

Shipman Resigns from Universal to Make Features

After Trip to Pacific Coast He Will Begin Production of "The Mermaid," Seven Reels, by Captain Peacock, and Expects to Star Princess Hassan

IN order to carry out plans of a personal nature which have been maturing for some time, Ernest Shipman has tendered his resignation to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, to take effect on April 17.

Mr. Shipman leaves immediately for a trip to the Pacific Coast, stopping at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Denver and Chicago. On his return to New York he will begin immediate activities for the production of "The Mermaid," a seven-reel photo drama by Captain Leslie T. Peacock, author of "Neptune's Daughter." This picture will be made in the Bermudas.

He will also contract for the Princess Hassan in a seven-reel feature entitled "The Leopard Lady," which reveals her further adventures in the Orient. Other plans are also under way.

The plans include a trip to the Bermudas for the purpose of utilizing the wonderful scenic effects used in "Neptune's Daughter." Arrangements have been made to feature Nell Shipman in the name part of "The Mermaid," and it is more than likely that Miss Shipman will collaborate with Captain Peacock upon the construction of the photo drama.

A party, including Ernest Shipman, will leave on the Santa Fe Limited on April 17 to confer with Nell Shipman at Los Angeles, where she has just completed the big special feature of "Under the Crescent" for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and is busy finishing her book of the same name for Grosset and Dunlap, the New York publishers.

Added to her accomplishments of actress and photoplaywright. Nell Shipman has proven her prowess as a swimmer and deep water diver, holding records for many aquatic feats, and is qualified in every way to enact the role of the mermaid in this forthcoming photo drama.

One hour after contracts were executed, enough foreign territory was sold to more than pay for the cost of production, and Frederick Shipman, who bought the rights to Australia on "Neptune's Daughter," secured first refusal to "The Mermaid" for Australasia.

Nell Shipman will return to New York in May to prepare for the trip to the Bermudas.

"Cabiria" Rights Sold for All the West Indies

D'Annunzio Film Has Premiere in Havana, April 17, Under Personal Direction of Harry Raver—All Features of American Production Duplicated

D'ANNUNZIO'S "Cabiria" is to have its premiere in Havana, Cuba, on the 17th, the engagement to precede the grand opera season at the National Theatre. Harry R. Raver will personally organize the exploitation. He sailed for Havana on Wednesday, April 14, accompanied by Rafael O. Galvan, lessee of the theatre where "Cabiria" is to be first shown in Cuba. Senora Galvan and Mrs. Raver join them on the voyage. Last season's Knickerbocker Theatre presentation will be duplicated in Havana, including an orchestra of fifty men and a chorus of forty voices. The elaborate stage decoration by the Ackerman Studios and all the accessories used by Mr. Raver in New York have been shipped to Cuba for use there.

Incidentally, the final disposal of the Cuba, Porto Rico and all the islands of the West Indies by Mr. Raver to a group of prominent business men of Havana, not identified with motion pictures in the past, and at a figure said to be more than double that paid for any previous film, brings to light many of the tricks of the trade usually employed in Cuba to obtain an important feature at the price of an ordinary release.

The few buyers in Cuba will offer a low price for a second-hand copy. If this is refused they wait for thirty or sixty days and pick up a second-hand copy in Barcelona or some other country outside of the United States, bring it into Cuba and then register the title of the film in their own names. The manufacturer is thereby not only deprived of a sale, but he cannot thereafter use the title of his own film in Cuba.

"Cabiria," however, has been so closely guarded in its world-exploitation, protected in all countries by proper registration and copyright, and kept at all times under direct control of the company, that no smuggling or pirating has ever developed.

The head of the American Itala Company will remain in Havana until the engagement is well under way, and will then return to New York.

ANOTHER EXTENDED TRIP FOR FOX MANAGER

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, the general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, is off once more on another of his tours of inspection which will take him as far as the Pacific Coast. He will visit every branch of the William Fox concern in the twenty-one principal cities of the country. Mr. Sheehan intends to make a thorough study of conditions throughout the country especially with a view to the summer season. Before leaving, Mr. Sheehan said:

"My trip will occupy several weeks and I am sure that I shall acquire much very valuable information as to the exhibitors of the country. It has been my experience on previous trips that the exhibitor is hungry for big features, preferably strong dramas featuring a big star and portraying society life. That is one reason why such William Fox features as 'The Clemenceau Case,' 'Kreutzer Sonata,' 'A Fool There Was,' and 'Anna Karenina' have been so enormously successful. The people of the country at large want real plays about real people, and the exhibitors are waking up.

WILL FIGHT SUNDAY CASE IN HIGHEST COURT

An effort to open a moving picture theatre at Lafayette, Ind., last Sunday was unsuccessful.

The Columbia Amusement Company controls two theatres in that city. David Maurice, manager of the Family Theatre, advertised that pictures of the German war would be shown and employed three attorneys to fight the case. Thomas Bauer, mayor of Lafayette, threatened to send a squad of police to the theatre if the pictures were shown, and the management did not show the pictures, for fear of trouble.

A percentage of the receipts was to have been given to the German societies for the relief of the Germans and Austrians in the war zone, and a crowd assembled in front of the theatre.

Luke H. Balfe, president of the Columbia Amusement Company, says he will take the case to the highest court, saying that the exhibition was being given for charitable purposes, and the city authorities had no right to interfere.

FLORENCE REED TO STAR IN "THE DANCING GIRL"

Florence Reed, last seen in the Famous Players production of "The Dancing Girl," has been engaged by the Popular Plays and Players Company for appearance in "Her Own Way," by Clyde Fitch, which will be produced at Fort Lee.

"Her Own Way" will be released by the Popular Plays and Players on the program of the Metro Pictures Corporation early in June.

Miss Reed, star of A. H. Woods' production of the Morton play, "The Yellow Ticket," has been before the public for about eight years, but it has only been three years since she first saw stardom.

Miss Reed's work in "The Yellow Ticket" was so favorably commented upon, that within a week of its opening, Mr. Woods decided to star her.

David Horsley Will Fight California S. P. C. A. Bill

States Facts with Regard to Proposed Legislation Urged by Sentimentalists Who Would Abolish Animal Training

SPONSORED by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, a bill, that in its object is to prevent "any human being from entering any cage, arena or enclosure with a wild animal," has been prepared and will be submitted by Representative Slater, of Santa Rosa, to the California State legislature for passage during the present term of that body.

A fight against the passage of the measure will be made by David Horsley, owner of the Bostock Arena and Jungle in Los Angeles. Mr. Horsley recently purchased this collection of wild animals, the largest in the world by the way, for use in a series of animal comedies he will produce.

Referring to the bill Mr. Horsley said: "Evidently the measure was drawn up before the subject it involved was thoroughly investigated. Those familiar with the training and working of wild animals are well aware of the fact that cruelty is never practiced, while the duties of trainers entail little or no hazard.

"With my Bostock Arena and Jungle I have for my general manager Mr. Harry E. Tudor, and for chief trainer, Captain Jack Bonavita. These gentlemen were for years associated with the late Frank C. Bostock, from whose widow I purchased the animals. Never did they practice cruelty. Instead of whipping the dumb brutes about until they were drilled into the desired manoeuvers, Mr. Tudor and Captain Bonavita exercised infinite patience and unlimited kindness. They had made an exhaustive study of wild animal tendencies and characteristics and realized the limitations of their charges. The result was that they were able to accomplish their ends without forcible measures.

"Then again the new camera I have invented will not necessitate the slightest risk on the part of the animal trainer or the actors. By the use of this camera it is possible to take two exposures and make two separate double exposed negatives at one time. The camera has been tried and the effects produced were startling. For instance, in one of the MinA releases a lion is seen eating peacefully out of the same plate with a little girl. The deception in taking this scene was perfect. When the actual picture was made the little girl was not within twenty-five feet of the lion and outside the bars of the cage."

AMERICAN PLAYERS GO TO LOS ANGELES

Director Harry Pollard has taken one of the American Feature companies, including Margarita Fisher, Lucille Ward, Joseph Singleton, Joseph Harris, Carlton Griffin, the company's new juvenile lead, Edward Langley, scenic director, James Douglass, assistant director, and two camera men to Los Angeles, where they will secure theatre interior and street scenes for "The Girl From His Town," a coming American from the novel of the same title by Marie Von Vorst, published by Bobbs-Merrill Company. Fred Gamble, who has been transferred from the "Beauty" Company to a part in Mr. Pollard's productions, together with William Carroll, are expected to join the company.

FILM CENTAUR DANCE FOR MINA RELEASE

The Centaur Film Company, of Bayonne, N. J., was the scene of gay festivities on the night of March 17. A large dance was given in the studio to which all the prominent motion picture actors and actresses were invited. During the dances a motion picture camera clicked constantly, and when in the intermission an exhibition dance was held two cameras were on the job getting every move.

The dance was very well attended, and from all reports the camera men had very good luck obtaining pictures.

CHILD ACTRESS GIVEN AN OVATION

Following the private showing of "The Clemenceau Case" at William Fox's Riverside Theatre, there was a remarkable scene in the lobby when a crowd of five or six hundred enthusiastic women literally mobbed tiny Jane Lee, who plays the child of Ritz Constantin in the play.

JANE LEE

In the course of the action several close-ups of little Jane are shown. Some of them show her grief over a broken doll, with real tears streaming down her cheeks, and then a well worked out return to sunshine when she is assured that it can be mended. No emotional actress could have depicted the gradual change from abject grief to reassured delight more cleverly than did this youngster. The "mobbing" of Jane occurred as, under the wing of her mother, and with her little sister Katherine, also a miniature picture star, she emerged from the theatre into the lobby, after viewing herself on the screen.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS TO MEET AT BUFFALO

New York State officers have decided to call a meeting at the Statler Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock, April 21. Exhibitors throughout the State of New York are hereby invited, whether members of the league or not.

There are several dangerous bills to be acted upon in Albany, and there are other matters of vital interest that must be discussed and acted upon at once. This is going to be a get-together meeting that all harmony will prevail, says President A. N. Wolff.

MAGIE ARRIVES AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 12.

George A. Magie arrived here the first part of this week from the East and took up the management of Universal City, succeeding Isidor Bernstein, who resigned the early part of last week. In addition to having charge of the producing plants of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, it is announced, Mr. Magie will also supervise the West Coast Universal film exchanges. The new general manager has been engaged in the motion picture business for the past six or seven years, during which time he has supervised the construction of two plants, personally directed a number of subjects, and in the past three years has devoted almost his entire attention to the supervision of exchanges and built up a very strong chain for the Universal company. His most recent work was that of securing for the company a chain of exchanges in Canada, which have now been thoroughly Universalized.

AMERICAN FILM BREAK GROUND FOR ADDITION

With the arrival of President S. S. Hutchinson in Chicago last week, ground was broken for the erection of a new two-story, 80 x 100 foot addition, to the company's Chicago plant.

The new building will be equipped with the most improved machinery and will contain a handsome suite of offices. The addition more than doubles the present capacity of this big plant. At present the facilities are cramped, owing to the added production of two multiple-reel "American Distinctive Creations" each month, and the weekly chapters of the picturized romantic novel, "The Diamond from the Sky."

MAY FUTRELLE FEATURE COMPLETED

The film adaptation of May Futrelle's best seller, "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs," has been completed by the Thomas Ricketts Feature company at the American studios and the negatives shipped to the Chicago plant.

Fay Allison and William Ephe, both new to American productions, will be featured in this four-part "American Distinctive Creation." The supporting cast includes Blanch Light, Carol Halloway, Hal Clements, Wallace McDonald and others. The picture rights were purchased from the publishers—Bobbs-Merrill Company.

NOVELTY SLIDE HAS WILLARD FIGHT PICTURES

The headline attraction at Hammerstein's, New York's foremost vaudeville house, is Jess Willard, accompanied by a set of Willard-Johnson fight pictures, reproduced by the Novelty Slide Company, 67 West Twenty-third street, New York. These slides tell the story of the big fight from the weighing-in to the knock-out. They are the only authentic pictures available of this championship battle and are being booked in the best houses all over the country.

COLONIAL TAKES LARGER OFFICES

The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation have moved from their offices on the 13th floor of their present address (18 East 41st street) to the 8th floor, where they have secured a larger suite and one more adapted to their enlarging business.

"THE COMMUTERS" TO BE SHOWN APRIL 19

George Kleine will give a private exhibition of his latest photoplay, "The Commuters," featuring Irene Fenwick, supported by Charles Judels and a superb Broadway cast, at the Candler theatre, on West Forty-second street, New York City, Monday, April 19, at 10:30 a. m. All exhibitors and their friends are invited. "The Commuters" will be released April 26.

CHARLOTTE IVES PLAYS FOR WORLD FILM

Charlotte Ives, for many years associated with Charles Froham productions and pleasantly remembered for her work in the John Mason Company in the Augustus Thomas play "As a Man Thinks," more recently with Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Loving," has been playing leads for World Comedy-Star pictures in Chicago.

WHO SAID "MY KINGDOM FOR A HORSE"?

Edgar Lewis has a real white elephant on his hands in the form of a large and bony brown horse, which he is trying to sell to any of the inhabitants of Lumpkin county, Georgia, where, at the jumping off place named Dahlonega, Mr. Lewis is directing for William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, a screen version of Roy Norton's famous novel, "The Plunderer." The aged quadruped had belonged to a mining engineer, from whom Mr. Lewis rented it, as in that rugged country it is impossible to direct on foot. Easter Monday, however, the engineer announced that he was moving away, and wanted to take his steed along. Mr. Lewis's company, headed by William Farnum, and including Claire Whitney, Harry Spingler, William Riley Hatch, George De Carlton, Elizabeth Eyre and W. J. Gross, decided they would celebrate the occasion by chipping in and buying the animal. Now that the company is ready to leave, however, nobody will buy the horse from Mr. Lewis, as it appears it has a local reputation for being "locoed."

EDGAR LEWIS AND HIS HORSE

WORLD FILM HAS NEW DALLAS OFFICE

World Film in the Southwest was introduced by F. M. Sanford, Dallas manager, in the fall of 1913. To him belongs the distinction of having opened one of the first offices for the old "World's Special." The increase in the volume of business has compelled him to secure larger and more commodious quarters. Hence he is now installed in up-to-date offices at 1905 Commerce street.

Mr. Sanford first entered the film business as secretary and treasurer, and afterwards active manager, of the Satex Film Co. of Austin, Texas, which manufactured and released features through Warner's Feature Film Co. Later he was appointed salesman for "Warners" in Texas, and following this connection he opened the World's Special office in Dallas. He introduced World Film in his territory, and his name is synonymous with World Film in the Southwest.

KRESS BOOMS KRITERION IN MILWAUKEE

Thomas Kress, special representative of the Kriterion Film Co., spent last week in Milwaukee talking Kriterion service to the exhibitors and laying wires for the introduction of the program into local houses. On Thursday, April 1, Mr. Kress gave a screen show at the Alhambra theatre which was largely attended by the exhibitors.

Betty Harte, Kriterion Star, Succeeds in Alien Art

Popular Actress in Her Youth Desired Success with Her Pen, and Entered Thespian Folds By Accident—A Fine Swimmer and Daring Horsewoman

TO have a certain ambition, then to make a big success in another line of endeavor is rather an unusual thing. Betty Harte, since her early school days, has been dreaming of the time when she will write a book that will be read by everybody. She has found an outlet for her literary ambition in short stories and scenarios.

In the meantime, however, she has been forging ahead in her photoplay work, and now is included amongst the best known photoplayers appearing on the screen today.

The stage wasn't really her early idea; it was a result of circumstances. Amateur theatricals of course claimed her at various times, so that when she heard the call of the footlights she was not altogether unprepared.

Of course those first few years were spent in stock in minor parts.

As she gained experience she assumed larger roles. She was finally starred in several popular plays.

While Betty Harte appears in many roles that calls for acting of a highly dramatic nature, she has appeared in comedies. She has played in pictures which required that she enter the cages of wild animals.

Not so long ago she was elected Animal Queen at a big banquet given by the company. This was after the taking of a picture in which she had been dropped upon a bed of rocks and a beautiful big Puma came bounding into the picture.

Miss Harte has appeared with many of the large companies. The Alhambra Film Manufacturing Company, which releases its product through the Kriterion service, claims her. She is featured in all the two reel dramas this company turns out. While she has gained considerable fame in the past, her present activities on the Kriterion service have brought her additional popularity. Many of the pictures she appears in come from her own pen.

Miss Harte makes a confession that few actresses make. She tells the public her right name. Betty Harte is merely assumed for theatrical purposes. Daisy Light is what she was christened. It did not have the same ring to Miss Harte, or Miss Light, whichever you prefer that Betty Harte has. In fact her reason for that particular name was because of its similarity to the well known author's, Bret Harte.

Miss Harte is not alone in furnishing fame for her family name. Margaret Illington, the well known actress, is a cousin to Miss Harte.

Miss Harte is very daring and takes chances to register in pictures thrilling situations that would not be considered by many other girls now appearing on the screen. Not so long ago she dived eighty feet into the ocean. She is a very capable swimmer. She is also especially noted for her horsemanship.

Some of the photoplays which have been put out on the Kriterion service in which she has done splendid work are: "The Fisher Lass," "The Romance of an Actress" and "Love's Vendetta." She has a manner peculiarly all her own in depicting difficult situations which require technique of a delicate nature. She also possesses the art of registering strongly dramatic situations.

Miss Harte also has a human side. Her big aim and purpose outside of her motion picture work is the happiness of her mother, with whom she lives in sunny Santa Barbara. She also attempts a high plane in her scenarios, endeavoring to point a moral in each one with the belief that if she helps but one person by the presentation of this picture she has accomplished a great deal.

Kitty Stevens Soon to Be Seen in Strong Metro Role

Well Known Actress Plays Dance Hall Molly in "The Cowboy and the Lady," Produced by Rolfe Photo Play Company

ONE of the five-reel feature pictures of interest which will be released shortly, through the Metro program, by the B. A. Rolfe Photoplay Company is "The Cow Boy and the Lady," in which Kitty Stevens will be seen in the role of "Dance Hall Molly."

Anyone seeing the splendid bareback riding, the clever interpretation of the heavy role, the sensational escape of "Dance Hall Molly" from her captor's cabin, and dash across the Mohave desert to save the life of an innocent man, would not realize that throughout the making of the picture Miss Stevens was so ill that after each scene she was carried to her dressing room and put under the doctor's care.

Despite the protest of Director Edwin Carewe and his suggestion that she have a "double" to perform some of the most difficult bareback riding feats, Miss Stevens pluckily refused, and by sheer grit and nerve was able to continue acting throughout her many scenes. During the making of the picture Miss Stevens was thrown from her horse and confined in the hospital for several days.

Miss Stevens worked in motion pictures first two years ago, when she came to Los Angeles. The excitement, the opportunities for dramatic acting appealed to her, and being a good rider and a lover of the out-of-doors, Miss Stevens decided to leave the legitimate stage and try pictures. Since then she has played with the Albuquerque Company, the Masterpiece Film Company, and recently with the B. A. Rolfe Photoplayers Company.

Perhaps her best work is in "The Cow Boy and the Lady," in which she played opposite Bert Hadley.

With a successful theatrical career to her credit, Miss Stevens has "made good" in pictures. When a young girl, she made her first appearance on the stage in "The Jewel of Asia," a comic opera company under the management of John P. Slocum. She has also toured the Canadian cities in concert work, and appeared in an original song and monologue act in vaudeville on the S. and C., the Interstate and the Western Vaudeville circuits.

VITAGRAPH HOLDS BALL FOR BENEVOLENT FUND

On Wednesday evening, April 7, the Vitagraph Company of America employees will hold their first annual ball at Stauch's Dancing Palace, Coney Island.

This promises to be one of the biggest social events of the year in film circles. The grand march will be led by Maurice Costello and Estelle Mardo, of the Vitagraph players. There will be dancing for silver loving cups that have been offered by different members of the Vitagraph stock company.

The proceeds of this affair will go towards the founding of a benevolent association.

TWO MICHIGAN CITIES TO HAVE SUNDAY SHOWS

As a result of the elections on Monday, April 5, Corunna and Ann Arbor, Mich., will hereafter keep their theatres open on Sundays. In Corunna the vote was nearly two to one favoring moving picture theatres to operate, while in Washtenaw county (including Ann Arbor, the largest city) there was a large majority for the winning side. In both Corunna and Ann Arbor the members of the council recently voted aganst Sunday shows, but later decided to submit the matter to the people.

THREE KRITERION EXCHANGES READY

The Detroit Kriterion Film Co., located at 183 East Jefferson avenue, Detroit, will be opened on April 19 with a ceremony, followed by a feast in the evening for exhibitors and those allied with the moving picture industry. This concern will handle Kriterion films for Michigan and Northwestern Ohio. The same day that the office in Detroit is opened, the Toledo office at 428 Huron street, will also be ready. Later, the company will open a Grand Rapids office to take care of business in the western part of the state. Ralph Peckham and Charles D. Wesch will be in charge of all the company's business, making their headquarters in Detroit. Mr. Peckham for the past two years was manager of the Toledo Film company, and was previously associated with the Detroit Universal Film Company. Mr. Wesch was associated with the latter concern from the very start, only recently disposing of his holdings. He operates the Virginia Park theatre, on Hamilton boulevard. That this new concern means business is evidenced by the extensive space it has leased, taking three upper floors of the building at 183 East Jefferson avenue. The first is for the general offices, the second for projections and film, and the third for posters, advertising matter and the like.

PORTER, NOT PALMER

By an oversight the name of E. S. Palmer appeared under the portrait of Edwin S. Porter, in the account of the third anniversary of the Famous Players Film Company, in the issue of last week.

SUNDAY SHOWS OPEN IN WARREN, OHIO

The war has been dropped at Warren, Ohio, and the motion picture shows can run on Sunday without any attempt to enforce blue laws. The picture houses are filled to capacity, and large crowds that thronged the streets the past two Sundays have not been able to see any excitement. It is not likely that there will be any further move on the part of the advocates of Sunday closing until after the Beal law election, which will determine the fate of the dry movement. Regular admissions are charged, but the majority of the residents of Warren are said to be in favor of having the shows open on Sundays.

NEBRASKA COMPANY WANTS EDUCATIONALS

A new company for the purpose of handling educational and religious films has been organized by R. R. Smith and Charles Strader, of Lincoln, Neb., with headquarters in that city.

The company is called the Missouri Valley Film Company, and is assembling a library of educational and religious subjects. The company announces that it is in the market for films of this sort which will fit in with any of their classified heads. All films put out by the concern are passed on by a special board of censors, composed of local educator and ministers.

WORKING FOR WORLD COMEDY RELEASES

Kathryn Osterman is now working in "Sauce for the Gander," soon to be announced as a World Comedy-Star release.

Dave Thompson, the leader of the New Rochelle Elks, and also the brand new father, dropped in on the ranks of the World Comedy-Star, and is now playing an important part in the forthcoming Kathryn Osterman release, "Sauce for the Gander."

Hayward Mack, formerly connected with the Biograph and Imp companies, is assisting Director William Jefferson in producing World Comedy-Star pictures.

STRONG COMPANY CAST FOR "HEARTS ABLAZE"

"Hearts Ablaze," an original drama by Eugene Mullin, is a Vitagraph-Broadway Star Feature now in course of production under the direction of Lorimer Johnston.

The cast alone will be potent in the attractiveness and interest of the picture and will introduce such finished Vitagraph players as Leo Delaney, Charles Kent, Zena Keefe, Julia Swayne Gordon, L. Rogers Lytton, Frank Currier, Nicholas Dunaew, Edward Elkas and Rose Tapley in the principal characters.

WEBSTER OPENS AN EXCHANGE IN SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A. N. Webster has resigned from the Feature Film Corporation of Buffialo, N. Y., and will open an exchange at Syracuse, N. Y.

VIVIAN PRESCOTT APPEARS IN NEXT IVAN FILM

Vivian Prescott started the picture business with the Biograph Company under the direction of D. W. Griffith. After being with the Biograph for two years she left, and at the instance of Carl Laemmle joined the Universal Imp company, where she was under the direction of Herbert Brenon. She has played the leads in many dramas of different brands including "Leah the Forsaken," "Under Two Flags," "The Power of the Press," "Woman Against Woman," "Man's Enemy," and others of note. She will appear in the forthcoming Ivan Film Production, Inc., picture, "The Unwelcome Wife."

GRIFFITH SPECTACLE ENTERS SEVENTH WEEK

D. W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," continues the sensation of the season in New York. With the matinee Sunday afternoon, April 11, this motion picture spectacle begins its seventh week in the Liberty theatre.

The weekly receipts have averaged $14,000, which is the absolute capacity of the theatre. Last Friday's presentation of the story took on an added interest, it being the fiftieth anniversary of General Lee's surrender to General Grant at Appomattox, April 9, 1865.

When the reproduction of this scene was flashed upon the screen the audience rose and stood impressively quiet as the historic event passed before its vision.

J. & M. COMPANY AT CENTAUR

The J. and M. Film Company will shortly start producing comedies of one reel length at the Centaur Film Company, Bayonne, N. J.

It was here that the MinA comedies were first produced, but since their departure to the Coast the studio, which is of the very latest model, has been rented to well known producing companies.

THE EVANGELIST

(Lubin Special Feature—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMAN

THAT the "Evangelist" on the screen will be far more popular than the short lived drama of this name by Sir Henry Arthur Jones was in America goes without saying.

The scenario of Clay M. Greene has much to recommend it that will prove of interest to picture loving people. Barry O'Neil can always be depended on for conscientious and clean directing. Especially are his large scenes of crowds of people handled with skill.

Above all, when Gladys Hanson adds consummate charm of face and figure to great depth of emotional intensity in depicting beautiful Christabel Nuneham, what more can the ardent picture enthusiast desire? But there is still more to be said of this very first release under the new regime of the V. L. S. E. combination.

Given a beautiful wife, a careless husband, a good-looking friend of the family—can the triangle of mischief be improved upon? Even a dear little daughter and devoted father-in-law can not save the situation.

So Christabel Nuneham, although loving her little Ione, treads "the primrose path of dalliance" with Rex Allen and even goes secretly to Southampton to see him off for India. Here, after being injured in a motor accident, she is rescued by the evangelist, played by George Soule Spencer, whose good looks, commanding presence and dignified rendering of his part easily persuade you that he must really have held the mob in the hollow of his hand as shown in several strong scenes.

Of course, the resultant broken arm of the rash Southampton trip leads to all sorts of complications, final discovery of Christabel's identity by the evangelist (who, however, keeps his secret), and suspicion by the tardily aroused husband, Phil Nuneham. On Allen's return these suspicions are turned to certainty. Although Christabel by this time has realized her folly and is having her last meeting with Rex, Phil will not listen to any protests but threatens divorce; meanwhile locking the child from its mother.

The flashing of electric light signals between Christabel and Ione gives a chance for several beautiful scenes. At last the Evangelist, who all through the play has rescued from death and destruction all sorts of people, now saves the happiness of the Nunehams, persuading Phil for his child's sake to forgive and forget, and all ends happily.

Rosetta Brice in the part of Phoebe, the repentant Magdalene, helped by the evangelist and hated by the people, has a chance for her usual good and conscientious interpretation. Jack Standing, as Rex Allen, depicts the lover with ease and grace. When one sees the indifferent little caresses bestowed by Ferdinand Tedmarsh as the husband, and feels that the wife had some excuse for her defection, then one knows his rendering of his part is good.

Bartly McCallum and Frankie Mann take excellent advantage of character work as the agitators amongst the strikers. Ruth Bryan is sweet as Naomi, the beautiful daughter of the evangelist.

Florence Hackett plays the wronged wife with convincing jealousy and rage. Other principals in the long cast who deserve commendation are Arthur Matthews, Peter Lang, Walter Law, Charles Brant and W. H. Turner. Quaint little Eleanor Dunn does real acting above her years as Ione. Eleanor's clothes, however, are not in keeping with the supposed wealth and standing of her parents, one little jarring note in this splendid production.

"THE ACTOR AND THE RUBE"

(Falstaff-Mutual—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the first of the Falstaff releases, a new brand inaugurated by Edwin Thanhouser to take the place of the old Princess pictures. It is a comedy as all its followers are to be, and likewise it is an excellent example of refined comedy, sometimes designated by the word "parlor."

THE ACTOR AND THE RUBE GET TOGETHER

The greatest asset in behalf of its power to amuse lies in its humorous situations, which assert themselves regardless of the players' ability. Not that the players are incompetent, for they are comedians deserving the name, yet it is evident that they have been restrained from attempting to force the laughter, and the situations have been left to care for themselves, a duty which they commendably execute.

The chances are the story has been seen before, yet this fact detracts little from the picture's comic element. An actor accepts a bet and masquerades as a rube, journeying to the latter's home town, and completely taking in the old man's pals, besides getting him in right with his girl and the few hangers-on of the country hotel. Riley Chamberlain is very good as the actor, and gives the part an air of reality.

There is no reason why this comedy should fail to amuse, and if it is merely the first of a long line equally as good, the Mutual company can thank themselves for possessing such a brand as the Falstaff.

"THE CASTLE RANCH"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE CASTLE RANCH," to be released on April 19, is a light comedy drama, dealing with the experiences of Algy, the second son of an English lord, on a castle ranch in America which his father had purchased for him from a photograph submitted by a Montana land shark.

There is considerably more comedy than drama in this picture, mostly centered around the actions of John Steppling, who takes the part of Simpson, Algy's portly man servant. The rest of the cast, which includes Ed Coxen as Algy, Winifred Greenwood as Sally Dunn are also good. Beautiful scenery, both in England and Western America is reproduced by perfect photography.

The picture from which the ranch was purchased shows a beautiful castle located in the midst of mountain grandeur. On Algy's arrival he finds that the castle ranch is but a one room shack with a high board front painted to give the imposing appearance shown in the photograph.

Algy is not as slow as it is generally conceded that the son of an English lord should be. He slips one over the crafty Montana land shark, inducing him to buy back the worthless land under the belief that it contains oil. And furthermore he wins the affections of a neighboring ranchman's daughter with whom the land agent is in love.

Poor old Simpson, what with the absence of all conveniences and his fear of hostile Indians, spends some miserable days, consequently it is entirely without regret that he sees his master sell back the ranch.

"GUSSLE RIVALS JONAH"

(Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

IT is difficult to comment either at great length or with much dignity on so hilarious a comedy as this one, but it seems hard to refrain from a few words of praise for the marvelously fertile imagination which made the picture possible. Seldom has more fun of the slapstick sort been crowded into the space of two reels. From the first flash on the screen to the last there is a constant succession of laughs. One of the most original scenes is towards the end, when the hero is pulled from the water, and a husky shark is seen hanging from the western part of his trousers.

Sidney Chaplin appears in the principal role. Most of the action of the picture takes place on the upper deck of a steamer on which Mr. Gussle is taking a trip with Mrs. Gussle. He is greatly interested in a decidedly more attractive woman with whom he succeeds in spending a few moments, but he pays dearly for his desertion of his strong-arm spouse.

After the hero is fished out of the harbor artificial respiration is resorted to, and the effects are astonishing. The unfortunate man's spouting makes a whale seem like a piker. Altogether "Gussle Rivals Jonah" will make any audience laugh until they gasp for breath.

"THE FIFTH COMMANDMENT"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

JULIUS STEGER'S original play, "The Fifth Commandment," somewhat altered, makes a heart-interest picturized offering, with an appeal popular among that class who used to delight in morality melodramas.

Incidentally in the course of the story's adaptation to the screen, the actions of the father, who, by his narrow-minded ideals, ruins his daughter's happy marriage, are made to appear quite despicable instead of well-meaning and just, and consequently the title, the fifth commandment, "Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother," appears misplaced.

On the other hand, the advertising possibilities which go hand in hand with such a title are manifold, and the fact that Julius Steger appears in the stellar role is another point in the picture's favor.

It is obvious that neither Mr. Steger nor his supporting company were well versed in the art of motion picture acting, as all of them are heavy offenders in delivering impassioned speeches directly into the lens, and disregarding the character they are supposed to be conversing with.

Otherwise, the direction of the film is good. The settings are in keeping with the story, and the photography is clear. Some pretty exteriors have been introduced. Small details, however, have been neglected, such as the wedding scene with only one witness, and the fact that telegrams arrive written in the same handwriting in which they were sent.

But we believe, inasmuch as the picture will prove popular with the audience mentioned above, that such faults will either not be noticed or accepted as the usual supplement to such a picture.

The supporting cast includes: Kathryn Brown Decker, Edith Thornton, Alberta Gallatin, Forrest Robinson, Hal Clarendon, John Romano and Grace Reals.

"RUNAWAY JUNE"

(Reliance—Instalment Fourteen)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN this episode entitled "In the Grip of Poverty," which, by the way, is next to the last, June is made the captive of an Apache band, despite the individual efforts of both Blye and her husband to prevent her abduction.

Finally Ned succeeds in enlisting the aid of the chief of police, and the whole force makes a raid on the den of the Apaches.

The two sides engage in a desperate encounter. At length the police get the upper hand and succeed in capturing most of the renegades.

June, however, during the confusion which accompanied the scuffle, took refuge on a high cliff near the sea. There she sinks to the ground exhausted and there Blye finds her.

Ned has been foiled again in his intent to regain his wife, but the final episode will find them reunited and the cause given for Blye's peculiar actions.

The episodes shown so far have prepared the way for a finale full of surprises.

"OUT OF THE RUINS"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

SOME remarkably fine fire scenes, supposed to show the burning of a great department store, give this strong drama many thrills. Anyone who has had the pleasure of reading Rupert Hughes' story, "Miss 318 and Mr. 37," will realize the excellent plot of the picture since it is an adaptation of this tale. For others it need only be said that it is a story of universal appeal, and like so many of the author's narratives deals with everyday sort of people.

Mabel Trunelle is seen as Miss 318, so called because that is her number in the big department store where she is employed. Pat O'Malley plays the part of the city fireman, Mr. 37, as the girl at first knows him. Gladys Hulette appears as the daughter of the department store owner.

Fire inspectors discover that a big store is a fire trap, but by political influence the owners succeed in having the complaint tabled. Miss 318 meets Mr. 37 at a theatre, where he assists her when a woman refuses to remove her hat, which cuts of the clerk's view of the stage. The friendship thus started soon becomes love, and the young couple begin to plan for their marriage.

The daughter of the owner of the store is in the place one day when the inevitable happens, and in fleeing from the flames she finds herself with Miss 318. The brave fireman makes his way through the smoke, and takes the two girls to a window from which a rope leads to safety. The little clerk makes him take the rich girl first. When he tries to come back the rope burns and he falls. The clerk seems doomed, but is found alive, and taken to the hospital. There the store owner finds his daughter whom he supposes lost. The fireman also finds Miss 318, and there is a happy reunion. This synopsis gives but a faint idea of a most excellent picture, which cannot help making a deep impression on an audience.

"THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Sixteen)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

IN this instalment the producers have been particularly successfull in introducing a strong element of suspense, which not only runs through the two reels, but leaves the spectator anxious for the next chapter. Obviously this is an important feature in a serial picture. Besides this the usual high standard of acting, setting and plot are maintained.

Edwin Arden, who is playing the role of the Chinese criminal, Wu Fang, does his first important work in this instalment. He is a most fortunate selection for the part, as in addition to being a finished actor, he makes a realistic looking Chinaman. Arnold Daly and Pearl White, of course, continue in their regular roles.

Chinese Tong men seek the cause of the death of one of their members, slain by Wu Fang. Kennedy tells them that it was due to a subtle poison which leaves practically no trace. He mentions the antidote in the hearing of his young assistant Jameson. Wu Fang also calls on Kennedy, and by so doing discovers that the mystic ring which has been stolen from him has been purchased by Elaine. He decides to get it at any cost, and starts by arranging to act as a magician at Elaine's Oriental reception.

During the evening Wu Fang puts some of the same poison in an ice intended for Elaine, but Kennedy gets it. He tastes the poison just in time, and is revived by the antidote. Wu Fang, however, lures Elaine to a hotel by pretending that Kennedy has had a relapse. There a fight takes place which ends with Elaine in the clutches of some of Wu Fang's gang.

One of the most novel features is Kennedy's pursuit of Wu Fang in an elevator at the hotel. The two elevators race up the shaft, but the Chinaman escapes over the roof, and all but kills Kennedy.

"CAPTAIN COURTESY"

(Bosworth-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE period when California was under Mexican rule is one of the most stirring and picturesque in our history, and at the same time one of the least familiar. Many bands of hardy pioneers from the Eastern United States had settled in California, but their lives were far from peaceful because the Mexican government in 1840 was about as uncertain as it is today. It is with this stirring time that "Captain Courtesy" deals.

Those who have seen Dustin Farnum in his previous screen successes will realize what a fortunate choice was made in assigning to him the leading role in this powerful story of the frontier. Mr. Farnum puts just the right sort of dash and bravado into the part to make it realistic without any affectation.

Winnifred Kingston is equally pleasing as Eleanor, the plucky heroine. Father Reinaldo is played with much feeling by Herbert Standing. Courtenay Foote has the role of the renegade American, and Carl Von Schiller is seen as the energetic Mexican leader.

"CAPTAIN COURTESY" AT THE MISSION

The many fine settings of the picture create an atmosphere of surprising realism, at the same time giving great beauty to the scenes.

A young American whose parents have been murdered by a band of Mexicans swears to have vengeance. He becomes an outlaw of a most unusual sort. He robs only Mexicans, and he gives all of his plunder to Americans who have been robbed. His kindly treatment of his victims gets him the title of Captain Courtesy. When the Californians decide on real resistance he becomes a captain of the Riflemen. There is a fine love story with Eleanor, an orphan, who lives with the old priest, Father Reinaldo. Space does not permit a description of the many fine scenes of fighting, but we can only say that the picture is one of the finest of recent productions.

"PAWNS OF MARS"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WAR plays have not been so great in number even since the commencement of the World War, that they have got tiresome. In fact, a story dealing with international strife is always welcome. "Pawns of Mars" is a strictly mythical offering, as it concerns none of the countries now at war in Europe, and for this very reason it is more pleasant to watch, as no feeling of partisanship will possess the audience.

Any war picture will accomplish the purpose which the producers claim that this does, that is, it speaks for peace. The horrors of aerial warfare are vividly depicted in the final scenes, which are extremely well handled. We see bombs bursting in the middle of encampments, automobiles explode, and an aeroplane wrecked in mid air and crashing to the ground, which event is the main thrill in the picture.

Aside from the war scenes the picture presents a most entertaining story, one in which the spies of one country are for a time successful in obtaining some small yet powerful bombs made by a chemist on the other side. But a young engineer comes to the rescue with a new invention, that of igniting explosives by wireless, so when the villain ascends in an aeroplane and starts dropping the bombs on the enemy, the engineer sets his machine going and the villain is no more.

There is, of course, a love story running through the picture. The daughter of the chemist is in love with the engineer. She is blinded by an explosion in her father's laboratory, which gives the villain his chance to steal the bombs, but the lovers are reunited in the finale.

Those who appear in the main parts are: James Morrison as the engineer, George Cooper as the villain, Charles Kent as the chemist and Dorothy Kelly as the girl. The story was written by Donald I. Buchanan and produced by Theodore Marston, with directorship of a satisfactory order.

IT is a sad enough life; playing leads in the pathetic scenes in the pictures, but a still sadder problem presented itself to Dora Dean, Saturday at the Photo Drama's studios in Jersey, where "Big" Bill Steiner and Hal Reid, who has more than one hundred successful plays to his credit, are staging "Time Lock Number 776," featuring Joe Welch, the well-known comedian. Miss Dean appeared early for work, with eyes all red and swollen. Upon anxious inquiries from the all-star cast, which includes J. Welch, Dave Wall, Ed. Carewe, etc., she replied: "I just received a cablegram that my only brother, just twenty-two years old, was killed in a battle in Europe." Ed. Carewe, who played leading man opposite to Dora Dean, said: "I will badly miss my guess if every audience does not cry at the scenes we took today, as Dora Dean simply worked to perfection, crying most all day because she had in mind the sad fate of her brother."

Her affliction has excited a great deal of sympathy.

"THE TRAMP"

(Essanay—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

ON April 19 was released under the name of "The Tramp" two solid reels of Charles Chaplin's laugh producing antics. Some of them are new and some are of the tried variety that will never cease to be a source of mirth whenever Chaplin exhibits them in his own peculiar way—a way which defies successful imitation.

The role of an eccentric tramp is well suited to Chaplin's abilities. From the time he comes waddling down the road with his cane in one hand and his kerchief-wrapped dinner in the other, until he waddles out of the picture disappointed in his love for the girl whose kindness he mistook for something more sentimental, there is a ceaseless unreeling of side splitting comedy. What happens in the meantime, it is difficult to adequately describe.

Another hobo steals his lunch while Charlie is fastidiously manicuring his finger nails. The thief leaves a brick in place of the food, but this comes in very useful when Chaplin is called upon to rescue a farmer's daughter from the same hobo and his companions.

He falls into a campfire and carries it along with him unextinguished on the seat of his trousers which necessitates his eating dinner from the mantelpiece, when the grateful girl takes him home with her.

As a farm-hand, although thoroughly tried out, he proves more of a hindrance than a help, but he thwarts the plot of the hoboes to rob the farmer's house and is wounded in the fight that follows. He is nursed back to life by the daughter only to find that she has another sweetheart.

Disconsolate and saddened he picks up his cane, brick and kerchief and resumes the weary plodding of the dusty roads.

KENTUCKY COMPANY TO PRODUCE FEATURES FOR CHILDREN

Special to Motion Picture News

Louisville, Ky., April 13.

THE Children's Feature Film Company has been organized here for the purpose of producing films suitable for young folks which will be shown at the Mary Anderson theatre under the direction of the Censorship Board of Children's Motion Pictures. The company has secured ofr its first film the rights to the production of Nannie Lee Frayser's story, "The Flag," which has been told in many schools and social centers throughout the entire country.

David F. Griswold, one of the organizers of the company, says that it has been formed to provide for the nation-wide need of motion pictures suitable for children, and that the aim of the company will be to produce the best that can be made in this line. Hearty support was pledged to the company at a meeting yesterday of the Louisville Censorship Board to which all scenarios will be submitted for approval before they are produced.

FEDERAL SCREEN MAKES PICTURES CLEAR IN ALL LIGHTS

A NEW screen about to be marketed by the Federal Screen Company, 786 Sixth avenue, New York, has many novel and interesting features. Neither cloth nor metal, but a composition of chemicals resembling a drumhead, is used in its construction.

The most important features of this invention are: Projection from the rear, and the fact that pictures may be shown on it with equal clearness in all kinds of light, varying from complete darkness to broad daylight.

The projection machine may be brought within twelve feet of the screen and produce excellent results. It naturally follows that this will result in a great saving of power, and its backers say that only one-half to one-third the power is necessary to project a picture through this screen as must be used for reflecting.

Another point in its favor is that no matter how close one may get to the screen, the pictures are not distorted. Where it is in use, the front and side seats will be just as popular as the ones farther back.

Tears or breaks can be easily mended by a patch of the chemicals of which the screen is composed.

This invention will prove of great value for airdomes, premitting afternoon shows as well as evening. Heretofore the biggest objection to motion pictures in the schools and churches has been the undesirability of the darkened room.

This screen then will be very acceptable to those interested in introducing the motion picture into educational and religious work. The inventors say that the projection machine does not have to be enclosed to secure the best results, although it will be necessary to use a little more power than when the space back of the screen is in darkness.

The officers of the new company are as follows: President, Louis J. Auerbacher, who is well known in electrical circles; vice-president, Thomas Lennon; secretary and treasurer, Charles J. Kleber, who is at present secretary of the Dunlop Wire Wheel Company.

ARTONE ORGANIZED TO MAKE PICTURES OF SONG HITS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Detroit, Mich., April 13.

FOR the purpose of renting, distributing and manufacturing moving picture film, the Artone Film Company, 87 Woodward avenue, this city, has capitalized at $100,000.

The incorporators are: Francis Reno, Gus Froebel and W. H. Goodfellow, every one of whom has devoted many years to the moving picture industry and is well known. One of the big features of the company's business will be the making of moving pictures of song hits.

In other words, instead of illustrating a popular song with slides, as in the old days, the illustrations will be by moving pictures. The company has closed contracts with the biggest music publishers in the country for the exclusive rights in this respect, and expects to be making this kind of film inside of thirty days. Studios will be maintained in Detroit and New York.

UNITED PHOTOPLAYER ENGAGES GERDA HOLMES

Chicago, April 14.

GERDA HOLMES, who for some time has been one of the Essanay leading ladies, is now engaged by the United Photoplays Company to take the principal role in their five reel production "The Victory of Virtue."

Miss Holmes has been on the legimate stage and made her debut in pictures with the Thanhouser Company. She left them to go to the Chicago Essanay studio.

Rapley Holmes, another former Essanay player of deserved popularity, and Bobby Boulder will also appear in "The Victory of Virtue." Production will start about the first of May under the direction of Harry McRae Webster.

In the meantime the United Photoplays Company is about to release the Doctor George A. Dorsey pictures, which record the travels he made in the Orient for the Field Museum in Chicago. These will be first run at the Studebaker theatre in Chicago.

AUTOMATIC STEREOPTICON AIDS PUBLICITY

A MOST original publicity scheme for actors has been instituted by Hugh Hoffman, the well-known motion picture publicity man. It is an automatic stereopticon in the window of his publicity office, in the Gaiety theatre building, New York.

Many of the best known photoplayers are represented in this Broadway display, among whom are the following:

Arthur Leslie and Nicholas Power, manufacturer of the Power's 6A projection machine, is also represented.

A NEW magazine has come in the picture field. Born but a month ago, "The Photo Play Review" is prospering decidedly. The new publication has good backing and is under the editorship of William Edward Zuck, who is also vice-president of the company.

"The Photo Play Review" will appear weekly at 5 cents a copy. It is proposed to make the paper of interest to the motion picture exhibitor, as well as to the patrons, though in no sense a trade paper. The New York office is in charge of R. W. Baremore, well known as a writer and exhibitor in the picture field. The Philadelphia office of "The Review" is in the Real Estate Trust Building and the New York headquarters are at 5 East Forty-second street.

HERALD FILM ORGANIZED TO SELL FEATURES

L. ROSENGARTEN, formerly president of the Cosmos Feature Film Corporation; Max H. Blackwell, of the Favorite Players Film Company, and J. Charles Groshut, formerly director of sales for the Ambrosio American Company, have organized a new corporation named the Herald Film Corporation.

It will operate in the United States and Canada, as well as in foreign fields, buying, selling and distributing feature films of a high grade character made by well-known manufacturers, and in which well-known stars will be the headliners.

The executive offices will be located on the eleventh floor of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, and work has already been started.

PATHE CONTRACTS FOR DIXIE COMEDIES.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

New Orleans, La., April 14.

THE Dixie Film Company has just incorporated in Mississippi, capital stock $100,000, and will shortly begin the taking of films.

The site of the new studio to be erected by the company is on the Gulf coast, in the vicinity of Biloxi. Comedies have already been contracted for by Pathé, and they will be known under the title of "Kotton Blossom Komedies," "Magnolia Brand." A line of dramas with legends of the coast as predominating features will also be produced.

PYLE SHOWS SALESMEN BARTOLA FACTORY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, April 14.

CHARLES C. PYLE recently left for the East on a ten days' trip in the interests of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company. He will visit Boston, New York, Philadelphia and some of the Connecticut cities.

Charles C. Pyle, general sales agent of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, took several of his salesmen on a trip last week to the factory at Oshkosh, Wis., and spent two days showing them the way the Bartola is built, so it will not be necessary for the salesmen to deviate from the truth in selling the instruments.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Ebbing Tide." (Biograph. Mon., April 19.)—A fishing village story of a girl who dies as a result of too great joy following disappointment in love. A shallow effort at tragedy.

"The Quicksands of Society." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., April 20.)—A story which is fully as futile as its title. A rich man divorces his wife to marry a "vampire." She elopes with another man and is killed in a wreck. The rich man then returns to his former wife and is accepted. In the cast are Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vale, Ben Hall, Alan Hale and Gretchen Hartman.

"To Have and to Lose." (Biograph. Thurs., April 22.)—A pioneer becomes separated from his wife in the desert, and is discovered by a prospector who has previously rescued the wife. He overcomes a wish to let the husband die, and takes him back to his wife, thus completing a very old plot. Isabel Rea and Frank Newburg are the married couple, and Franklin Ritchie the prospector.

"When Hearts Are Young." (Biograph. Fri., April 23.)—The familiar story of a widower and widow who fall in love, but fear the attitude of their families. Of course the widow's son marries the widower's daughter, and thus sets the example which is followed by various other couples in the comedy. In the cast are Jack Drumeir, Rea Martin, Irma Dawkins, Kate Bruce, Jack Mulhall, Gus Pixley and Adila Comer.

"Jean the Faithful." (Biograph. Sat., April 24.)—When a girl went blind her former sweetheart abandoned her, and quiet Jean took his place. The girl in fact supposed him to be the other man, but when she was cured she learned her mistake. She also showed that she knew which was the true lover. Augusta Anderson plays the heroine, while Charles Perley is seen as Jean.

"Sleep, Beautiful Sleep." (Edison. Wed., April 21.)—A youth who is never on time at the office resorts to all sorts of methods to induce himself to wake up. His first arrival on time is through the office slylight, assisted by an explosion. An amusing picture extremely well photographed.

"The Heart of a Waif." (Edison. Sat., April 24.)—A parsimonious couple adopt a child instead of hiring a maid. She is overworked and illtreated, but when she saves the family from burglars, who nearly get the farmer's whole savings, her value is appreciated and she is sent to school. A good picture for a neighborhood theatre.

"The Tramp." (Essanay. Two acts. Mon., April 12.)—Review at length in another part of this issue.

"The Mystery of the Silent Death." (Essanay. Mon., April 19.)—The mysterious death of her mother, followed five months later by her brother's equally mysterious death, arouses Adene's suspicions against her stepfather, who, as she discovers, is the sole benefactor of her mother's will. She and Louis Courtland start an investigation, with the result that one night they catch the stepfather in the act of making a deadly gas which it is his intention to send through the fireplace in Adene's bedroom. After a fierce struggle the stepfather is turned over to the police. Beverly Bayne, Albert Roscoe and Lester Cuneo make up the cast.

"The Snow Burner." (Essanay. Three acts. Tues., April 20.)—A drama of a north woods lumber camp, featuring Richard C. Travers, E. H. Calvert and Lillian Drew. A refined girl from the city is left destitute by the death of her father. The rough lumber camp boss tries to get her into his power, but with the aid of a half-breed girl, whom the boss had wronged, a young man thwarts the plot, and after an exciting chase the boss is killed by the enraged lumber jacks.

"The Fable of the Two Unfettered Birds." (Essanay. Thurs., April 21.)—A clever George Ade comedy showing that the parental instinct is bound to crop out even among refrigerated uplifters. Edgar and Laura, two high-brows whose friendship was about as romantic as a cold hot water bag, and considered matrimony the height of vulgarity, become interested in a homeless baby. Learning that the law does not allow any joint ownership of babies, they are forced into marriage in order to adopt it.

"Done in Wax." (Essanay. Thurs., April 22.)—A hobo is pressed into service to take the place of a wax figure of King Woof, which had been destroyed. He got away with it until he was sold to a restaurant keeper. When the statue started eating food its owner decided that it was altogether too life-like, so he boxed it up and threw it in the lake. Wallace Beery plays the part of the hobo.

"His Wife's Secret." (Essanay. Fri., April 23.)—G. M. Anderson is featured in this drama as a burglar, who, hiding in the house unknown to the wife, is discovered when the husband suddenly returns. His wife's peculiar actions arouses the husband's jealous suspicions, but the burglar is able to explain matters and a domestic tragedy is averted.

"The Conspiracy at the Chateau." (Essanay. Two acts. Sat., April 24.)—A good production of an interesting and quite unusual story. Beverly Bayne, Albert Roscoe and Lester Cuneo are featured. Thormly, a political candidate, is discovered by Hobart, a rival boss, in his country home with a beautiful and mysterious young girl. The romantic story of her presence there is revealed to them both after a duel which followed Hobart's insult of the girl. Hobart apologizes, and Thormley falls in love with the stranger.

"The Face of the Madonna." (Kalem. Three reels. Mon., April 19.)—This drama is improbable to the point of impossibility, in addition to which it introduces that wholly incorrect view of an artist at work, which is so exasperating to anyone at all familiar with the facts. A girl crook meets an artist who has been abandoned by his wife on account of his dissipation. She consents to pose for a painting of the Madonna on which he is about to start work. Of course there is the usual love affair, which the timely death of the artist's wife allows to come to a satisfactory conclusion. Alice Joyce and Guy Coombs do their best to make a poor story interesting, but are not equal to the effort.

"Lotta Coin's Ghost." (Kalem. Tues., April 20.)—There is a wide variation in the quality of the Ham Comedies of which this is a fairly good example. Ham and Bud attempt to steal Lotta Coin's valuable necklace, but her appearance in a sheet and wearing a death's head mask puts the would-be robbers to a speedy and amusing flight.

"Martha's Romeo." (Kalem. Tues., April 20.)—The fat girl is not crowded with suitors until she sends herself a note to the effect that she has just inherited $10,000. Then every man in the boarding house camps on her trail. She picks the one she most fancies, and after the ceremony breaks the news to him. William Wadsworth is the unlucky suitor, and Jessie Stevens the girl. Arthur Housman is also in the cast. A very good comedy.

"Mike Donegal's Escape." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., April 21.)—The girl detective makes another of her commonplace discoveries in this story. A prisoner has escaped from a cell which has no exit large enough for a man to pass through except the door. The girl detective naturally concludes that he left by the door, and when he is discovered and tells his story, this proves to be the case. Arthur Shirley, an Australian actor, who is new to American audiences, appears as the girl sleuth's latest assistant.

"Willie Whipple's Dream." (Kalem. Fri., April 23.)—This is a slapstick comedy, in which the first part shows actual happenings and the second the adventures which go through the hero's mind after he receives a knockout blow. Trick photography is used to some extent. In the cast are Myrtle Stedman, Ethel Teare, William Wolbert and Phil Dunham.

"A Race for a Crossing." (Kalem. Sat., April 24.)—Helen Holmes continues her adventurous career as the clever telegraph operator in this production. Corporations must be as soulless as the law implies or before this Helen would have owned the whole road. When the agent of a rival road tries to spoil a trial run made in a bid for the mail contract, Helen takes the mail from the disabled engine and proceeding on a gasoline track car makes the connection just in time.

"The Great Experiment." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., April 19.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Conversion of Smiling Tom." (Selig. Tues., April 20.)—A Tom Mix western drama in which an outlaw saves a widow and her daughter from being turned out of their home by the heartless mortgage holder. The daughter later persuades the outlaw to surrender when cornered by the sheriff and his posse. He is induced to lead an honest life henceforth.

"The Face at the Window." (Selig. Wed., April 21.)—A crabbed old man is murdered the night after he had quarreled with his nephew. Circumstantial evidence points to the nephew as his murderer. A bloody hand print and a hotel check enables the detective to trace down the real criminal, and the nephew is exonerated, much to the joy of the uncle's beautiful young secretary. An exciting drama with Edith Johnson and Lamar Johnstone in the leading parts.

"The Idol of Fate." (Selig. Thurs., April 23.)—This is an amusing comedy played by Elsie Greeson and William Scott. When Billy offends the very human idol it frowns upon him and his troubles begin. Through a misunderstanding his engagement is broken, business setbacks occur, the upper berth in the sleeping car collapses upon him with its corpulent passenger, and everything goes wrong. Then the idol starts to smile and good fortune comes as persistently as had the bad, culminating in his making up with his fiancee.

"The Tyrant of the Veldt." (Selig. Sat., April 24.)—The daughter of a poor South African farmer in order to save her father from bankruptcy sacrifices her real lover and marries a wealthy Boer. A few years later she elopes with her former sweetheart.

Her husband follows and is prevented from shooting her by a leopard who leaps upon him from the branches of a tree. She realizes the cowardice of the man who eloped with her, and, forgiven by her husband, returns home.

"The Taming of Rita." (Vitagraph. Mon., April 19.)—The plot is an old one, but is always popular. It tells of the younger sister, who is disapproved of by mother and her older sister, but who wins the love of the rich young man picked by the sister for herself. Margaret Gibson is seen as Rita, and Alfred Vosburgh as her sweetheart.

"The Guttersnipe." (Vitagraph. Wed., April 21.)—The Guttersnipe is a young girl who has had to shift for herself for so long that she hardly knows how to understand a kind act. When she is adopted by an old man she has a chance to prove her gratitude by saving his fortune from a thieving nephew. There is a romance also. Lillian Walker plays the title role.

"Sonny Jim and the Valentine." (Vitagraph. Thurs., April 22.)—Sonny Jim is once more the unconscious cause of bringing great happiness to a deserving person. Chancing to overhear a mortgage holder threaten to close up a little candy store he tells his father, with the result that friends of the old lady who runs the place buy the mortgage as a valentine. Bobby Connelly, as usual, is seen as Sonny Jim.

"Whose Husband." (Vitagraph. Fri., April 23.)—A henpecked husband and a bullied wife live on opposite sides of the street. An imposter appears and tries to pass himself off as the supposedly dead husband of the latter. He is found out, but his activity has led to a reform which leads the two couples to happiness. Flora Finch and Kate Price appear as the two wives.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Ambrose's Lofty Perch." (Keystone. Sat., April 3.)—In this Mack Swain appears as the king of the harem, and has a number of weird experiences, all of which are excrutiatingly funny. Louise Fazenda appears in support. The king's jester and all around handy man is a most clever comedian; in fact so are all the players clever.

"Droppington's Devilish Deed." (Keystone. Mon., April 5.)—This is a roaring piece of slapstick comedy, which is well done, and will keep any audience in constant laughter. Droppington, played as usual by Chester Conklin, is seen as a scene shifter in a theatre. His antics and those of his companion are remarkable, to say the least. A scene supposed to show the devil arising from his home is mistaken by Droppington for a real fire, and he uses the fire hose with telling effect.

"The Little Mother." (Majestic. Tues., April 6.)—After the death of her widowed mother a little girl and her baby sister are placed in an asylum. The matron makes the motherless child's life miserable, but she finds some consolation in the love which she has for her baby brother. Then some rich people adopt the baby, and life seems miserable indeed to the little girl. She runs away, and, finding the home of the adopted parents, carries the baby away. She is soon discovered, and when the wealthy couple hear her story they naturally adopt her, too. This picture is particularly suitable for audiences in family theatres.

"The Rent Jumpers." (Keystone. Thurs., April 8.)—Once in a while the Keystone company produces a comedy which fails in its mission, either because the players are poor or the tricks they execute are void of humor. In this case it is both. There is not much that is funny in the reel, except a few "Mack Sennett" touches, which are very scarce.

"Just Kids." (Princess. Fri., April 9.)—Those who enjoy juvenile comedies should find in this the epitome of satisfaction, for it is one of the best of its kind. Helen Badgley and Leland Benham, the clever child performers of the Thanhouser company, appear, and are left in charge of "uncle," who suffers the most severe uncomfort before the mother returns. The two children are very clever as all know, and "Just Kids" should prove a happily diverting subject.

"Station Content." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., April 10.)—The wife is in the act of leaving her neglectful husband for another man, when circumstances bring to her mind memories of her former life, and she thinks again. This is merely an elaboration of a conventional one reel subject, and while the story is laid with railroad life as a setting, the situations are practically all familiar. A good thriller is staged in the final reel when a freight car explodes, and previous to this, great suspense is created by the fact that the car is running wild on the same track as the superintendent's special. In the first reel there are many pathetically realistic scenes, laid around the death of the couple's child. This subject will entertain, without introducing anything startling.

"Burglars by Request." (Royal. Sat., April 10.)—Both man and wife plan to have the house robbed to prove each other cowards. When a real burglar shows up complications arise, and the joke turns out to be on the jokers. This comedy has a few laughs in the course of its development, yet the players are not any too capable, and miss a number of fine opportunities for creating a humorous scene.

"When Love Took Wings." (Keystone. Thurs., April 1.)—The girl's wealth of raven tresses is one of the reasons for her great popularity with her suitors. Their efforts to win her cause many amusing situations. When one of them discovers that the tresses are of the portable variety there is a sudden resignation, but one unfortunate victim is collared by dad, and forced to face the minister. Roscoe Arbuckle is seen as one of the ardent swains.

"By Fair Means or Fowl." (Komic. Sun., April 11.)—A story of country rivalry in which the town policeman and the rube are possessed with amorous intentions toward the belle of the town, and the latter wins her. Fay Tincher appears as the belle, and she has an admirable assistant in creating fun in the person of Elmer Booth, who plays the rube. This is a very good comedy, and should amuse the audience of any house.

"The Fencing Master." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., April 11.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"His Bachelor Dinner." (Eastern Reliance. Mon., April 12.)—A man who is engaged to be married entertains at his last bachelor dinner, and afterwards a horrible nightmare is visited upon him. While this subject is novel in many respects it is too gruesome to be appreciable, and the nightmare is even too incoherent, as it appears on the film, to be understood.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 15." (Thurs., April 15.)—From the comprehensive collection of current events in this number the most interesting are: Latest news from the seat of war; the disaster caused on the Atlantic seaboard by the recent storm; the Easter parade in New York, and the act of the Chinese government in burning a half million dollars' worth of confiscated opium.

"Big Brother Bill." (Thanhouser. Sun., April 18.)—Helen Badgley and Leland Benham appear in this child comedy, which, taken as a whole, should please the lovers of juvenile numbers. The plot is novel and the children are possessed with a perfect understanding of their parts, which aids the picture materially.

"The Actor and the Rube." (Falstaff. Fri., April 16.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Castle Ranch." (American. Two reels. Mon., April 19.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Oh, Daddy." (Beauty. Tues., April 20.)—A smile from a handsome widow brings a middle aged widower back to an interest in life. He wins her while his two sons are fighting over which one stands higher in her affections. They are dumbfounded when dad presents them to their future stepmother. Virginia Kirtley, Fred Gamble and John Harris and Webster Campbell make up the cast.

"The Undertow." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., April 20.)—These entire two reels depict the fortunes of a country boy who comes to the city to seek a fortune. He falls in with a band of crooks, but then coming under the influence of a detective's sister he straightens out again. There are many fiercely realistic fights, thrilling chases and hairbreadth escapes in the course of this picture, and the plot is just strong enough to link these together, forming a very fine picture for those who care for this variety of story and action.

"She Walketh Alone." (American. Wed., April 21.)—A rather convincing story presented in a pleasing manner. A nurse called to the bedside of a very sick man straightens a serious domestic tangle, and arouses the love of his cold and selfish wife. Vivian Rich, David Lythgoe, Charlotte Burton, Jack Richardson and Harry Von Meter make up the cast. The photography is excellent.

"The Disillusionment of Jane." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., April 21.)—A crook masquerading as an honest man alienates the affections of a country girl from her lover. They plan to elope, but before they do the crook steals the money of the girl's father. Their horse takes fright and runs away, the man is killed and his perfidy discovered. This may be an old story, but it is told in such a powerful way that this fact is lost. The runaway scene and the subsequent fall taken by the eloping pair is a real thriller and very well executed. Frank Borzage and Elizabeth Burbridge play the leads, the acting of the latter being especially expressive and attractive.

"The Artist's Model." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., April 22.)—The model of a poor, yet honest, artist enters the employ of a rich and unscrupulous painter in order to earn more money. He attempts to take liberties with her, but she is rescued by her hero. This is a mediocre picture, and quite below the standard of the New York Motion Picture Company's offerings. Nothing is accomplished of any consequence, and the last scenes in which the girl is protecting herself from the villainous artist are rather disagreeable. George Fisher and Violet McMillan are the principals.

"The Riddle of the Wooden Leg." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., April 23.)—The girl detective discovers that the robber is the millionaire's secretary instead of a one-legged boy who has been arrested for the crime. The young lady's methods of working on the case are interesting in the extreme. The situations are novel. In fact the entire picture is characteristic of the combined efforts of Thomas H. Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan, the co-authors of the picture. The lovers of detective pictures will find most entertaining subject in this. Leona Hutton is seen as the detective, and Jack Nelson as the guilty secretary.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Seville, Spain." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Seville, one of the most ancient cities of Spain, is depicted in this attractive travel production. On the same reel is "Athletic Exercises in the French Army."

"Athletic Exercises in the French Army." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Many fine athletic stunts by French soldiers are shown. The pictures were made when the soldiers had less to occupy them than is now the case.

"Police Dog No. 4." (Pathe. Split reel.)—About three-fourths of a reel is occupied by this, the fourth of the series of animated cartoons by Bray, showing the activities of the police pup. It is one of the best animated cartoons yet produced. The police dog sees an anarchist blow up a building, and then helps his master clear away the wreckage and get out the safe in which there is a bone. An unusually fine scenic closes the reel.

"Storm and Calm on the Coast of Sicily." (Pathe. Split reel.)—The police dog reel is completed by this extremely fine series of marine views. The opening scenes which show the surf just after a storm are especially beautiful.

"Max on the Briny." (Pathe. One reel.)—This is one of the most amusing comedies among recent releases of any brand. The action is of only the mildest slapstick sort, and most of it is without anything in this line, but the effect is extremely funny. Another attractive feature is that the picture was made in the harbor of Monte Carlo, thus affording a fine background. Max goes out in a tender and then boards a yacht. He imbibes a little more than is good for him, and this, combined with his clumsiness about boats, leads to some startling happenings. One particularly amusing incident is his use of a sailor as a target for the yacht's saluting cannon.

"The South American Ant-Eater." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This educational picture gives an interesting series of views of this little known and odd appearing animal. On the same reel is "He Takes Well at Parties."

"He Takes Well at Parties." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Two soldiers of fortune, having managed to get in at a dinner party, find themselves in an uncomfortable position, but become the heroes of the hour when they discover the identity of a thief who has been helping himself to the guests' valuables. They accomplish this by inducing him to become a subject in certain magical tricks which they are supposed to perform for the benefit of the assembled company. On the same reel with "The South American Ant-Eater."

"Toledo, Spain." (Pathe. Split reel.)—The beautiful and quaint Spanish city is depicted from many angles in this attractive scenic picture. On the same reel is a picture called: "Bridge, Build- and Track Laying by the French Army." It shows soldiers at work before the war.

"Just Nuts." (Pathe. One reel.)—There is no real plot to this picture, but it is a fine example of slapstick comedy. It is the sort of a picture which is sure to keep any audience in roars of laughter. The characters are mixed up in various adventures, most of which take place in a park. Policemen, nurse-maids and the like figure prominently in the fun.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"The Shop Nun." (Empress. Two reels.)—The story of a girl who is sorely tempted to tread the paramour path, but she manages to conquer all temptations, and finally her virtue is rewarded by being made the wife of a man she loves.

There are some parts in this drama which are very well handled, such as the dream of the girl, in which she sees the various persons about her in their true colors, but as a whole the story is rather hard to grasp. Its nature is both semi-poetic and allegorical, and is hardly produced well enough to take effect. Marion Swayne and Joseph Levering are the leads.

"Hidden Memories." (Regent. Two reels.)—A man has an old grudge against another and kills him. He is pursued by the sheriff and his posse, and takes refuge in a girl's cabin. He tells her his story, and it turns out that he has killed her uncle. Possessed with an immediate love for the man she aids him further in his escape, despite her newly found grudge against him. A fair picture. Stuart Holmes in the leading part.

"A Million Hid." (Superba.)—The rube, despised by the girl's parents, proves the hero after all, and puts the two penniless noblemen to rout. A fair comedy of a slapstick nature.

"The Fortune Tellers." (Starlight.)—Again the two Starlight comedians decide that the world owes them a living, so they proceed to set up as fortune tellers. One of them gets mixed up with a renowned lady raffles, and after a while the police get on their tracks, so the game is up. This is very funny, and the two comedians are becoming well known, which aids the picture materially.

"The Stolen Will." (Grandin. Two reels.)—The girl's father dies, having left his will in charge of a lawyer who wants the girl as his wife. When she refuses him he informs her that her father left no money. The girl's true lover, suspecting something, sets to work on his own account and discovers the villainy of the lawyer. This makes an entertaining offering with Ethel Grandin in the leading part. The story is well put together, and although founded on an old plot it ought to please.

"Where Can I Get a Wife?" (Cameo.)—The answer, as usual, is: "Leave It to Your Uncle Dudley." Uncle Dudley poses as the wife of a young man who has told his guardian that he is married in order to receive an increase in allowance. This is an old story, but the cast is competent enough to lift it. Harry Fisher, Edward Boulden and Dan Mason are the leads.

"The Other Girl." (Premier. Two reels.)—The young society man fired by a taunt from his fiancee, goes west to work an old claim. Here he meets a girl, who is the double of the one back home. On learning of his whereabouts his fiancee and her mother also go west.

The mother discovers that the other girl is her daughter, who stayed with her father when she left him years ago. A reconciliation is effected between man and wife, but the western girl is killed by jealous gypsies. A fairly entertaining drama, with Fred Church and Lillian Hamilton in the leading parts.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 162." (Wed., April 14.)—Among the fifteen subjects which comprise the reel this week the most noteworthy are: "The results of the collision between the liners, Parisian and Heredia; the burning of the oil tanks in Sebastopol, Russia; Vice-President Marshall and Irving S. Cobb visiting Universal City, and pictures from the baseball training camps.

"The Stool Pigeon." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., April 19.)—A young man lacking employment and on the verge of committing suicide is innocently made the tool of a group of international crooks. When he discovers the manner in which he has been duped he unites his forces with those of the detectives and brings the gang to bay, after rescuing from their clutches the girl he loves.

This is Lon Chaney's first picture made with the Kerrigan-Victor company, and his success with it marks him as a capable director. The story is replete with situations of a tense character, and is so constructed that the climax can hardly be foretold until it arrives, a great point in its credit. That it will be heartily appreciated by the most critical audience is certain.

Warren Kerrigan is seen in the title part. Vera Sisson has the role of the crook's accomplice, and also that of the society girl. George Periolat plays the heavy. The remainder of the cast renders effective support.

"Wild Blood." (Imp. Mon., April 19.)—An engaging drama showing the manner in which an ancient feud, which extended into modern times was brought to an end by the broad-mindedness of a young doctor who refused to fight his only remaining opponent, a girl.

A recent elevated railroad disaster in New York is brought into the reel to show the manner in which the girl received her injury, which makes it necessary for the doctor to part with some of his blood to save her life.

William Garwood directed the players, and appears as the doctor. Violet Mercereau, the opposite lead, does not look the part of a mountain girl, with neat clothes and silk stockings, but does well in the final scenes. The titles are not very carefully written.

"The Fatal Kiss." (Joker. Mon., April 19.)—A version of the henpecked husband story written by Clarence Badger and produced by Allen Curtis. Although the situations in the course of the plot's development are not original, they are so well handled by the members of the cast that the result is a most laughable offering. Max Asher is fine as the husband, and Gale Henry appears at her best as the majestic wife. William Franey is side-splitting as the burglar, a character drawn as a burlesque on the other screen law-eluders. Dolly Ohnet appears as the actress, who so fascinates hubby that he throws all precaution to the winds, visits her and comes home with a little, betraying red circle on his cheek.

"The Whirling Disk." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., April 20.)—A doctor who specializes in hypnotism loves a girl who in turn loves another doctor. The hypnotist succeeds in bringing the girl under his control to such an extent that she thinks of him all the time. Her actions so terrify her father that he calls in the other doctor, who, discovering the trouble, forces the villain to leave the girl alone. Cleo Madison, Joe King, Albert MacQuarrie and Ray Hanford are the leads in this. The story is refreshing and entertaining. The scenes and photography are very fine.

"The Affair of the Terrace." (Rex. Tues., April 20.)—In this drama Ben Wilson turns detective again, and after a great bit of trouble succeeds in bringing to bay a murderer. The reel is interestingly constructed, yet no apparent reason is brought forward as to the murderer's purpose in committing the crime. Aside from this the drama is acceptably pleasant.

"Eddie's Awful Predicament." (Nestor. Tues., April 20.)—Eddie with a quarter in his pocket sits down to feed his hungry sweetheart. Two of her friends come along and proceed to order a sumptuous meal. Eddie quakes horribly and make his escape.

In desperation he attempts to rob a blind beggar, but this person suddenly regains his sight, catches Eddie, and after listening to his tale of woe takes pity on him, draws a huge wad from his pocket, and presents his captive with a couple of yellow backs. The situations are humorously human in this, and there is a laugh in almost every scene.

Al Christie prepared the scenario, and Eddie Lyons has produced it well, playing the part of Eddie. Lee Moran makes a funny figure of the waiter, and Victoria Forde is seen as the girl.

"Mavis of the Glen." (Laemmle. Three reels. Wed., April 21.)—Directed and played by Bob Leonard, assisted by Ella Hall and the usual supporting company. New twists to the old plot of a rich man taking a country girl as his wife will cause great interest. Good scenes and fine photography.

"The Ladder of Fortune." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., April 22.)—An Italian, becoming prosperous after his arrival in America, is unable to hear from his sweetheart because his rival intercepts the letters. He is almost on the point of marrying his employer's aspiring daughter, when the other girl arrives in America and the story terminates happily.

Although this picture is always interesting there is little real progress of the plot except at the beginning and end. The scenario writer has managed to present a number of heart-interest scenes which have no direct bearing on the story. However, the two reels are fascinating, and will be sure to be enjoyed. Clem Eason directed, and Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joseph W. Girard play the leading parts.

"The Fear Within." (Big U. Thurs., April 22.)—A young soldier in the European war deserts his regiment and returns to his mother and the priest. After the relation of the stories of the two older people, in which it develops that the holy man is the father of the youth, he regains his courage and goes back to fight. This is not very clear, and consequently rather unconvincing. Murdock MacQuarrie has a fine character part as the priest, and Albert MacQuarrie as the son is good, too. The acting, however, is not enough to lift the picture.

"His Smashing Career." (Sterling. Thurs., April 22.)—A fair comedy terminating in a pretty funny chase. Ford Sterling is featured.

"The Mystery of the Yellow Curl Papers." (Rex. Two reels. Fri., April 23.)—Showing the manner in which an actor pulled a publicity stunt to get his opposite, the star of the stock company, into the columns of the dailies. Incidentally the actor almost gets arrested in his maneuverings, but at last he emerges from the scheme successfully. William Garwood and Violet Mercereau are the leads in this. While the plot is novel it fails to hold the interest, as there is little action, and even that is at times unfathomable.

"The Artist and Vengeful One." (Victor. Fri., April 23.)—The artist arrives just in time to rescue his sweetheart, the district attorney's daughter, from thugs. A simple story that is so well put on that it cannot help but hold the interest. Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are the lovers, and Brinsely Shaw plays the chief crook.

"Two Hearts and a Ship." (Nector. Fri., April 23.)—The daughter is married secretly to her father's secretary, despite the old man's desire that she should marry one of the pampered rich.

When his wife departs for a pleasure trip accompanied by her father and his choice for a son-in-law, the young man has difficulty in stowing himself away, and finally is discovered and forced to work.

When the marriage has to become known father is resigned. A fair comedy, some of the scenes of which were taken on ship board. Eddie Lyons, Victoria Forde, Neal Burns and Harry Rattenberry are in the cast.

"The War of the Wild." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 24.)—Henry McRae's wild animal pictures are always a welcome addition to any bill, as, besides offering an entertainment different from the ordinary drama, they combine good melodramatic stories and real thrills. "The War of the Wild" goes his last offering one better in many instances.

The various inhabitants of the jungle which are introduced seem realistically ferocious, and the thrillers they are responsible for in conjunction with the principals are hair raising. For instance, an enraged lioness leaps upon a man who has taken refuge in a trestle of branches, and mangles his legs to such an extent that he expires soon afterwards. Again when the villain, who is maltreating the heroine, seems to be getting by far the upper hand, an elephant comes to her rescue and drags the man off by one leg, throwing him over an embankment.

Such things as these, combined with a true African atmosphere, which is almost perfect, will insure the success of the picture in any house.

Sherman Bainbridge has his usual role of heavy, while Wellington Playter replaces William Clifford as the leading man of the company. Marie Walcamp and Rex de Roselli are also in the cast.

"Love and Handcuffs." (Powers. Sat., April 24.)—A version of the moonshiner-detective story put on by Sydney Ayres. The picture is produced well, and should please those who are not over-particular regarding the conventionality of the subject. The photography and lighting has been carefully attended to, while the scenes are realistic, the view of the still being particularly so. In the cast are Sydney Ayres, Doris Pawn, Val Paul and Wilbur Higby.

"When War Threatened." (Joker. Sat., April 24.)—A French cook and a German butler furnish most of the fun in this while they are preparing a banquet. Food is thrown about liberally. An average laughable comedy.

NOW USES FOUR STANDARDS

"THE MASTER MODEL"

Mr. W. B. Fulmer, Brooklyn, N. Y., wrote under date of June 19th, 1914, as follows:

"I have been using two American STANDARD machines with motor drive in my theatre for over four years. I am perfectly satisfied with them. For perfect projection combined with wear at the small yearly cost for maintenance, they have no equal. My operator who has had experience with many machines says the STANDARD is the peer of them all. I am so well satisfied that I am ready to install them in my new theatre (The Elite) in place of two machines now installed there on trial."

Shortly after writing us Mr. Fulmer purchased two American Standard MASTER MODEL machines.

NEW YORK

"Nature's Triumph." (Laemmle. Sun., April 25.)—The husband who has been separated from his wife because of his drunkenness visits the country where he overcomes his cravings. While there he forms a great friendship for a young girl, rouses the jealousy of her lover, but succeeds in calming him, finally returning to his wife.

While this reel lacks the usual points of a successful drama, it will hold all the time merely because of its heart interest and human theme. The scenes throughout the picture are of the prettiest variety imaginable, and are supported by fine photography. Frank Lloyd directed the work, and plays the reformed inebriate. Helen Leslie and Charles Alexander are the country lovers, and Olive Fuller Golden is the wife of the city man.

"Poor Policy." (L-Ko. Sun., April 25.)—A pretty girl and an empty pocket cause an outclassed rival to burn his house to collect the insurance, but he is arrested as a fire-bug, and rather than suffer the ignominy of a jail sentence he heroically takes his own life. In this Billie Ritchie appears at his best supported by Peggy Pearce and Henry Bergman. Those scenes, which were taken on an ostrich farm, are uproarious, and the remainder of the picture will hardly leave the spectator time for breath, so thick and fast are the laughs. A mallet is used by Ritchie and several other characters with an effect that is as laughable as it is disastrous to the rest of the players.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

GENE PALETTE, who has been with the Majestic and Reliance companies, is soon to become a leading man for Selig companies.

Ray Stewart, late of the Masterpiece and Rolin companies, is now with the American at Santa Barbara, Cal.

Edward Brady, until recently with the Tom Mix Western Selig company, and Betty Grey, for the past six months with the Santa Monica Vitagraph companies, are now with the Balboa company at Long Beach, Cal.

Harry Brooks, late of the Orpheum vaudeville circuit, is now with Keystone. The same goes for Polly Moran, an English comedienne.

Jack Adolfi, late Reliance leading man, is now directing at Universal-Imp studios in New York City.

E. Mason Hopper, comedy producer, late of Essanay, is now making pictures for the World Film Corporation.

ROBINSON AWARDED $189,000 VERDICT IN VANOSCOPE SUIT

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON has won a verdict of $189,765.70 in Judge Charles M. Hough's branch of the United States District Court in his $1,000,000 breach of contract suit against Lewis C. Van Riper and the Vanoscope Company.

The jury in the case was out two hours hearing the testimony adduced by the plaintiff's attorneys, Hector M. Hitchings and Irving E. Burdick, to show that their client had entered into an agreement with Van Riper on January 13, 1913, whereby he was to have the exclusive right to sell the stock of the Vanoscope Company for six years.

Before he was able to create a demand for the stock, he said, he had to spend about $35,000 in the perfection of the machine.

When the machine had been improved, he said, Van Riper, who held the patent rights, abrogated the contract and gave the exclusive right to sell the stock to Harris Hammond, son of John Hays Hammond, and John Hobbs. The company, according to Robinson, got $50,000 for transferring the stock selling rights.

In another suit, concluded less than a month ago in the United States District Court before Judge Hunt, Robinson sued Van Riper for personal damages and was awarded a verdict for $100,000.

Robinson will move for an attachment of the Vanoscope Company's property in case the judgment is not paid.

Mr. Robinson stated to a representative of "Motion Picture News" that he would immediately begin the manufacture of Vanoscope machines and within a reasonable time begin to fill many contracts now pending with exhibitors. The machines will in all cases be leased only, as the contracts specify, not sold outright.

KENTUCKY OFFICIALS INSIST UPON REWIRING

A SYSTEMATIC inspection of theatres in various parts of Kentucky is being made by officials of the State Fire Marshal's office, and electrical wiring is being especially examined.

Several buildings in towns and cities have been adapted recently to use as motion picture theatres. Where changes in wiring are made the officials insist that the work be done in accordance with the provisions of the code of the fire underwriters. It is expected that the rewiring will have an effect on insurance rates.

AMERICAN SEATING CLOSES SOUTHERN CONTRACT

THE New Orleans office of The American Seating Company has just closed a contract to furnish a good grade of seats in the Bonita Theatre, Elysian Fields and Roman streets, which has been entirely remodeled by its new owners.

W. T. Moore, New Orleans manager, reported that four hundred seats will be installed. Business in Louisiana and Mississippi has been very good, according to Mr. Moore.

MINA FILMS

The success of an exhibitor rests principally upon a wise selection of pictures to make up his program. Everywhere one real comedies are in popular favor. To profit by this condition dozens of companies began the production of such pictures, most of them of indifferent quality, and you were confused in your effort to select the wheat from the cockle.

MINA one reel comedies are wheat in the field of comic pictures—a staff of sustenance to the life of your business. They are wholesome in fun, sustaining in action and a treat to your patrons. In addition to this the exquisiteness of clever acting, under capable direction, with careful attention to settings and photography, make MINA films a delight. Released every Thursday.

Dear Sir: I hereby acknowledge receipt of your magazine and must say that it surely is a dandy, both from the editorial and typographical views and there is not the slightest doubt in my mind but what your enterprise will be a big financial success.

Yours very truly,
CHARLES FARRELL.

Cohoes, N. Y., April 4.
Editor, Motion Picture News.
Dear Sir: I felt I could not sign enclosed check without a few words of commendation on your remarkable "News."

About or rather more than a year ago it was hard to make an exhibitor realize the value of the "News" to the trade. This I know from personal experience.

Today I'm sure there are few who would not praise it highly. Its wonderful growth, its wonderful improvements stamp it as the foremost journal of the motion picture industry.

Yours very truly,
L. A. BUETTNER, Mgr.,
Majestic Theatre.

Dear Sir: In reply to your letter of the 21st, would say that I am well pleased with your magazine, and think it is far better than any other.

Very truly yours,
H. C. KUNKLEMAN.

Boise, Idaho, April 4.
Editor, Motion Picture News.
Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check for one year's renewal to the best picture journal on the market. Thanking you for the same, we are,

Yours truly,

With Odds of 100,000 to 1— Will you take a Chance?

They tell me two million people buy this publication; that undoubtedly ten million see it; and that likely a good many thousand read this page.

It's a gaspy sort of feeling you have when you write to so many friends at once. Just think of the ghastly proportions of the wee-est little fib, multiplied ten million times!

You know how it felt when the teacher went out of the room at examination time, saying—"On Honor now, Boys." And how anybody who cribbed while she was gone was more than likely to get his head punched at recess!

Well, writing these pages makes me feel as though the whole ten million of you were teachers,—and had just gone out of the room!

I can't crib!

I promised to tell you the truth about Master-Pictures every week, and here's one I haven't even seen.

Maybe it's just an ordinary moving picture. But do you think the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation,—which produced "The Outlaw's Revenge," "The Outcast" and "A Man and His Mate" in the Master-Picture Series could make an ordinary one? I don't.

Maybe it's badly acted. But do you believe Robert Edeson and Mary Alden, and the rest, would act it badly? I don't.

Before I can get a glimpse of that picture, it will have cost me and my associates a good deal more than a hundred thousand times as much as it will cost you to see it.

Will you take a chance with me? At 100,000 to 1?

This Master-Picture is called

A MAN'S PREROGATIVE.

It is a four reel Reliance production.

It will be shown in a theatre near you this week.

Griffith, the great producer, said to me, "Aitken—it's a fine picture; one of the best; a big subject, handled in a big way. Why, man,"—he said, "It fair burns you to look at it."

But then,—Griffith had seen the picture.

By the time you read this I shall have seen it, too.

How long can you WAIT to see it?

"Take off your hats to your Vice President,— to Captain Macklin, Vice President of Honduras"

Richard Harding Davis is, I suppose, the best news reporter on earth. When you read him you feel, somehow, as though you were there.

At least,—I feel that way.

And I suppose that is one reason "Captain Macklin" makes such a crackling Master-Picture.

It is just facts that happen very, very fast.

From the day he was stripped of his uniform at West Point until the people were cheering him as Vice President of Honduras was less than two months. And, as was every day of the life he led, so every inch of the film that tells it is crowded with action and intrigue and action.

A fine looking young fellow—fresh from West Point; two lovely girls (one just a bit too lovely perhaps), uniforms (some pretty badly battered), Gatlings, half breeds, blazing plazas, the swing and glitter of Romance and War,—doesn't it make your blood tingle to think of it?

You know the prickly feeling that runs up and down your spine when a hundred-piece Regimental Band comes blaring and booming by—even in a parade?

Well,—you feel like that only more so when you go to see

CAPTAIN MACKLIN,—a four reel Majestic,—by Richard Harding Davis.

You can see it most any day now—so watch the newspapers.

And meantime say to your nearest theatre: "I want to see is a story of a highly intelligent woman and a famous lawyer. The woman is of a strong mind, a magazine writer of repute, and believes that she should guide herself by the same standard of morals that governs him. Because of their association with two profligates, complications arise that separate them and cause the man to lose faith in the woman.

It's an old theme, but it's handled in a great big way.

This four-reel Reliance movie is one of the series of Mutual Master-Pictures advertised to over 10 million people.

Money

YOU can read yourself black in the face about what many of the so-called premier features? ? ? ? have done in the way of bringing home the money for Exhibitors, but if you want facts, GENUINE FACTS, from the biggest Concern in the Universe, Hearken, Comrade, to what follows in this advertisement. When you boil down the proposition of FEATURES, there's only one thing that cuts any ice with Exhibitors, and that's the KALE—DOUGH—GREENBACKS—MONEY—SHEKELS or whatever else you want to call the elusive American Dollar. Claims fall flat alongside of actual results, so if you want money, —and if,—

The Williamson Submarine Moving Pictures Are Drawing Capacity Houses Everywhere

JUST the minute the Educational, Scientific and Theatrical world received the news that The Williamson Bros. had accomplished the unbelieveable,—that of exploring the bed of the ocean and making moving pictures at the bottom of the sea,—the whole show world went crazy to get these films. The Williamson Bros. had accomplished something absolutely and positively unheard of in the history of the human race—MOVING PICTURES AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA. The minute data was obtained from the Williamson Bros., such mighty publications as The Scientific American—The American Magazine—Country Life in America—Citizens Magazine—Literary Digest—Collier's—Popular Electricity—London News—Popular Mechanics—Photo-play Magazine—L'Illustration of Paris—New York World—Chicago Tribune—New York Telegraph — New York Sun and hundreds upon hundreds of other publications throughout the entire

What other film feature ever received such endorsement, what other feature was ever played up one ten-thousandth part as strong? You can't name one. What more valuable help to thousands of Exhibitors could anything be than this avalanche of unpurchaseable publicity? The pictures are soul-stirring, amazing, hair-raising,—actually blood curdling in spots. They will fairly knock the audience off their seats, as one enthusiastic Showman said. Floor Plan of Exposition Hall at the San Francisco Convention

Diagram Shows Excellent Arrangement of Booths. Unusual Number of Entrances and Large Projection Rooms a Feature

The coming National Convention and Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will be held in the new Civic Auditorium. This building forms part of the San Francisco Civic Center. It is a permanent building of steel and granite, four stories and basement. The building covers an entire square city block. The main auditorium, in which the grand ball will be held is 190 feet square and when arranged with seats, together with the balcony, seats eleven thousand people. There are twenty-one other convention chambers in this great building. The Motion Picture Convention chamber adjoins the main auditorium and has a seating capacity of twelve hundred.

There are also plenty of committee and press rooms. Large, beautifully furnished ladies' parlors are another feature.

The Exposition of the Motion Picture Arts will be held in a salon the same size as the convention hall. In addition to the forty-seven large booths conveniently arranged and made very accessible by numerous aisles, there will be two or more large projection rooms. These projection rooms will be equipped with the latest type machines, motors, screens, chairs and all appliances, and will offer excellent facilities for the display of equipment and pictures.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

All communications regarding the National Convention should be addressed to the CONVENTION COMMITTEE, 306 Mechanic Bank Building, San Francisco, Cal.

The committee will gladly supply you with full information regarding railroad rates and routes, stopover privileges and things worth seeing en route.

Hotel accommodations will be reserved. Information or assistance of any nature whatsoever gladly given.

An Unsolicited Testimonial

A clothing manufacturer paid recently three thousand or more "iron men" for a page ad in the Saturday Evening Post. He ran two large illustrations showing Rex Beach and Harold Mac Grath, and he named "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and "The Spoilers," two great successes filmed by the House of Selig. This manufacturer did not expend many thousands in cold cash for nothing. He knew, just as you know, Mr. Exhibitor, that Selig Spectacular Specials are household words. He merely cashed in on Selig popularity. He was wise to prevailing sentiment.

The Masterly Acted Feature "GREATER THAN ART"

A talented girl artist, robbed of her future by financial misfortune, makes the great sacrifice to a Count to go on in art, but she meets a clean, aspiring artist and learns of that which is "greater than art," making the sacrifice of her future for his sake. Lee Arthur, the noted author of big stage successes and now writing exclusively for Edison, gives us here a play—big with dramatic power and affords a wonderful triumvirate of acting which is met with compelling force and finish by Miss McCoy, Edward Earle and Duncan McRae. Released in the regular service, Monday, April 26—3000 feet.

A pair incomparable—Marc MacDermott and Mabel Trunnelle in a Strong Drama of Truth, Sin and Regeneration

"His Convert" is the play of life at its seamiest and best—of dramatic truth, presenting two finished favorites, Marc MacDermott and Mabel Trunnelle, in characters that are flashed forth with boldness but leavened with high moral purpose. Released Saturday, May 1—1,000 feet.

Bessie Learn, Carlton King and Harry Beaumont in the 2-act "Poisoned by Jealousy"

Skilfully plotted, presenting these three capable players as children of sunny Italy, storm tossed on the sea of Jealousy, so subtly instigated by Carlton King. Bessie Learn as the madonna, conspired against yet faithful unto the last, is an appealing character. A strong climax. Released Friday, April 30—2,000 feet.

Breezy Raymond McKee and the Distinguished English Comedian, Dallas Welford, in "Count Macaroni"

As the Italian street sweeper transformed into an Italian Count, Dallas Welford—he of the funny eyes and face—couldn't look anything else but funny if he tried. And Raymond McKee and James Harris to drive home the laughs. Released Wednesday, April 28—1,000 feet.

Rewinding Eliminated by Taking First Picture From Centre of Reel

SINCE the inception of the moving picture projecting machine, no invention pertaining to this industry has attracted such widespread and favorable comment in all branches of the trade as that of Edward M. Feaster, whose perfected device for the elimination of rewinding of film is now ready for the market.

This mechanism is in the form of a special horizontal upper magazine which can easily and quickly be attached to any make or model of moving picture projecting machine without any mechanical alteration to the same.

The value of this invention is self apparent to everyone connected with the business, owing to the fact that the advantages which it offers are so varied. To the producers and owners of film the item of damage caused by rewinding is a vital matter. To the exhibitor this new device appeals strongly for many reasons, prominent among which are the saving of labor and time, as well as the noise and annoyance of rewinding, the breaking of film during this process, and all the fire risk incidental thereto.

TWO VIEWS OF THE FEASTER FILM FEED MACHINE

FRONT VIEW OF MACHINE ATTACHED TO A POWER'S — SAME, ATTACHED TO A SIMPLEX PROJECTOR

The accompanying photographs and the following description will give a very clear understanding of the Feaster attachment.

The operation is very simple and consists of taking the first picture from the centre of the coil of film instead of from the outside. In order to take the centre out of the roll of film, it is of course necessary to make a curve in the film before threading it through the projecting machine, and it is in the method of taking the first picture from the centre and in making this curve, which the Feaster machine does so perfectly, that it is possible to produce successfully the result of showing pictures without the necessity of rewinding the film.

The film is carried on a freely revolving ball-bearing aluminum pan, in the centre of which is a stationary cage of rollers. The roll of film is placed on the pan, around this roller cage, and the end of the film on which is the first picture is drawn from the centre of the coil by a vertical sprocket inside the roller cage. Thus the only strain on the film is exerted in a direct pull to this sprocket, and this strain is minimized by the fact that the entire roll of film is revolving with the pan, and also around the rollers in the cage.

At present the entire weight of the roll of film as well as the reel itself is being pulled by a single strip of film in the unwinding process while the picture is being shown, and it is self-evident that with the Feaster device a large percentage of the breaking of film at this point is eliminated.

Impossible to Put Strain on Curve

After the first picture end of the film has been drawn from the centre of the coil by the sprocket, a curve is made in the film and the end put through the floor of the magazine and threaded through the projecting machine exactly as at present. Once the size of this curve has been set it is impossible for it to vary during the showing of the picture, and at no time can the slightest strain be put on this curve, irrespective of the speed at which the machine is operated. The reason for this is that the film is at all times being taken into the projecting machine at precisely the same speed that it is being drawn from the centre of the coil, as the upper socket of the picture machine is geared directly to the sprocket in the Feaster machine and turns at exactly the same number of revolutions per minute.

The roller cage in the Feaster magazine around which the film is unwound is 5 inches in diameter, and in order that the roll of film may have a 5-inch hole in the centre, a special receiving reel is used in the lower magazine. This special Feaster reel has a 5-inch hollow hub, and is made in two halves which can easily be taken apart with one hand, leaving the roll of film on one-half of the reel around the hub. It is then placed in the upper magazine exactly as it came on to the take-up reel, and is immediately ready to be shown again.

Since the pan in the upper magazine is free to revolve at any speed, and is turned, only by the edge contact of the film, it regulates its own speed and never runs too fast or too slow, regardless of how quickly the machine is started or stopped.

Chandler Heads Company Owning Patents

The successful marketing of this device on a sound financial basis has been made possible by the fact that the Feaster patents have been purchased by Byron Chandler, prominent in New York and Boston, and husband of Grace La Rue, the actress. Previous to making this investment Mr. Chandler has had no connection with the motion picture industry, but early realizing the great commercial value of the Feaster invention, he purchased the patents and organized the Feaster Film Feed Company, a Massachusetts corporation with capital of $250,000 and offices at No. 687 Boylston street, Boston.

Mr. Chandler is president and treasurer of the corporation and will give his undivided attention to its affairs. The secretary and general manager is Albert E. Rollins, of Boston, and the inventor, Edward B. Feaster, is retained as mechanical superintendent.

The exclusive territory rights for the State of Pennsylvania have been purchased by John W. McCanna, whose offices are in Bellevue Court building, Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Strand Company Marketing a New Screen Coating

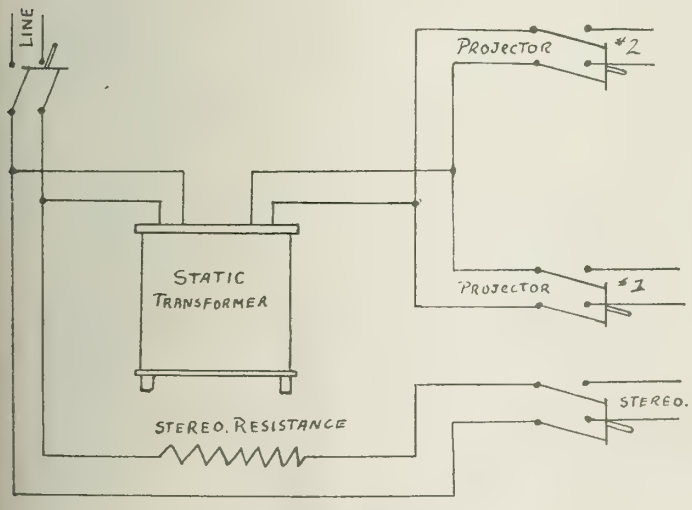
THE Strand Screen Coating Company, New York, has put on the market a screen coating which is applied like paint and can be used on canvas or metal.

One or two coats are sufficient to tone up the very oldest screen so that it will produce pictures of depth and clearness from any angle. This new coating is being used with very satisfactory results in the Sumner theatre, one of the finest motion picture houses in Brooklyn.

For the airdome or roof theatre it is particularly valuable, being guaranteed against deterioration from rain or sun.

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

Jos. H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Tex.—Mr. Smith comments upon the answer given in these columns in answer to D. E. B.'s question regarding the difference between a shunt and a compound wound generator.



As two minds can sometimes explain or interpret a matter to better advantage than one, it is thought best to give his explanations of the two types of machines. Mr. Smith says: "The field windings of a shunt wound generator is composed of a large number of turns of wire or strap of comparatively high resistance, which is connected directly to the armature terminals, thus forming in parallel the main circuit, a shunt circuit through which only a small percentage of the total current flows.

The regulation characteristic of a shunt wound machine is such that the voltage is at maximum at no load and drops as the load increases, unless regulated by the manipulation of a rheostat in the field circuit.

A compound wound generator has both the shunt and a series of field winding. It may be generally assumed that the shunt field is so designed that on open circuit the series field being idle the machine will generate the desired voltage.

The result of applying a load would, as noted under shunt wound generator, tend to lower the terminal voltage. But, it is here that the utility of the compound winding becomes apparent. The series of coils reinforce the shunt field in direct proportion to the increased load and thus hold the terminal voltage constant, balancing the drop due to the increased copper loss and armature reaction at the heavier loads.

Mr. Smith suggests the following as being the proper method of connection for two projectors and a stereo lamp from one static economizer:

Replacing Brushes in Generator Economizer

R. H. E., Newark, N. J.—Will you please tell me the best practice to follow when replacing carbon brushes in a motor-generator economizer? Does it make any difference in the kind of brush used, and what do you recommend as being the best brush to buy? Will a hard carbon brush tend to spark more than a soft one?

ANSWER.—When putting in new brushes on a dynamo or a motor, see that the holders, particularly the sockets that hold the carbon brush, are perfectly cleaned. They may be cleaned with gasoline if found to be greasy.

The carbons should fit freely in the holders without binding in the least at the sides or edges. Fasten the "pig-tail" securely beneath the screw and bend it so that it does not cause the carbon to bind. Also see that it hangs freely so that the vibration of the running will not tend to cut it loose from the brush.

Obtain a piece of No. 2 sandpaper, just about the width of the commutator. Lift up the brushes of one set and place the paper between the brushes and the commutator, with the cutting side toward the brushes. Adjust the tension springs until the brushes bear pretty hard on the sandpaper, and then draw paper backward and forward, holding it close to the shape of the commutator, until the edges of the several brushes are cut down to the exact shape of the face of the commutator.

After this has been done, substitute a piece of finer sandpaper of No. 00 grade, and do as was done with the other paper until a smooth, even finish is obtained on the face of the carbon brushes.

Do not draw the sandpaper from under the brushes with the tension on them, but raise the brushes and lift out the paper. Then blow the dust off before allowing them to drop back on the commutator. The last motion of the paper, under tension of the brushes, should be in the direction of rotation of the armature.

There is a wide difference in the grade of brushes on the market. Several types of manufacture are equally good, one of them being the Le Valley Vitea Carbon brush.

A hard carbon brush will tend to spark more than one of a softer grade. This is because of two conditions. The hard carbon has less resistance to offer the coils, being short-circuited under contact of the brush, hence more current will be passing within the coil and under the brush and, too, there will be a greater tendency of the brush to vibrate from its hardness. A medium soft and even mixture brush is the better one to use.

$200,000 Theatre for Indianapolis

ONE of the largest and most elaborate picture theatres in the United States will be erected in Indianapolis, according to Samuel L. Cohn, of San Francisco, and Morris Cohn, of Denver, who have taken a thirty days' option on the property in the Circle occupied by the Horace F. Wood livery and transportation establishment. The Cohns say that when completed the theatre will represent a total cost of about $200,000.

For the first ten years of the proposed lease the Cohns are to pay Mr. Wood $12,000 a year for the property; $15,000 a year for the next ten years, and $18,000 a year for the remaining seventy-nine years. I. N. Richie & Son handled the negotiations.

The theatre will have a frontage of seventy feet in the Circle, the Cohns say. The tract of ground is irregular in shape and extends south to Court street and east to Scioto street. There will be one or two storerooms at the front, with a lobby 70 x 100 feet back of them.

The theatre proper will be 110 feet wide and 154 feet deep, and will have exits in Scioto and Court streets, in addition to the front exits. There will be in all not fewer than thirty-five different exits, it is said, and it is estimated that the theatre, which will have a seating capacity of 3,500, can be emptied in thirty seconds.

In addition to the picture, he says, he will have an orchestra of twenty pieces and a huge pipe organ that will cost, according to his estimate, $20,000. The orchestra and the pipe organ will give a concert program during the entire picture exhibit. He says he plans to have the theatre open at 1 p.m. and give a continuous performance until 11 p.m.

The building will be of reinforced concrete and steel construction. It will have an ornamental front facing the Circle. The floors will be of a fireproof substance, and one of the sanitary features will be that instead of scrubbing the floors, they will be flushed with water from a hose, as streets are flushed and washed.

The seats will be twenty-eight inches wide and thirty-eight inches back to back, thus affording ample space for late comers to get to the inside seats without disturbing persons seated in the same row. The lighting will be by the indirect system. Another feature will be a large retiring room for women and a smoking room for men.

Plans for the building will call for a ventilating and air washing system which, Mr. Cohn says, will cost about $10,000.

THE IVONHOE THEATRE, SANDUSKY, OHIO

The Ivonhoe stands as evidence of the enterprise of Mr. Blatz, who not only owns it, but manages it. The plans were executed by Steffens & Steffens, of Cleveland, the architects who designed the Duchess, Manhattan and other Cleveland theatres, together with others among the leading theatres and picture-theatres of the state.

The screens were supplied by the Diamond Craft Screen Company, of Cleveland; A. Krastin, president of the company, having personally superintended the installation.

American Fotoplayer Installed

The Ivonhoe's music is supplied by an American Fotoplayer.

The Fotoplayer is very appropriately described as "the instrument that supplies the griefs, joys and triumphs of the people on the canvas."

THE IVONHOE THEATRE, SANDUSKY, OHIO

Not only is Fotoplayer music appropriate, fitting into the picture, but that mechanical monotony of automatic music is eliminated and every shade of expression and musical thought is supplied instead, from the softest pianissimo to the loudest crescendo.

One operator does all the work, using an ordinary 88-note player piano roll. Some of the effects to be obtained in addition to ordinary piano or pipe organ music, and an eight-piece orchestra, severally or combined, are: Pistol shot, tom-tom, thunder, door bell, telephone bell, fire gong, cathedral chime, locomotive bell, tambourine, castanets, horses hoofs, auto horn, sleigh bells, Chinese cymbals, steamboat whistle, locomotive whistle and wind siren.

The theatre measures 36 by 133 feet. The projection machines are Power's 6-A, and the length of throw is 95 feet.

THEATRE MAILING LIST THEORY vs. FACTS

Suggestions in connection with circularizing motion picture theatres.

It is a common theory that an efficient mailing list can be maintained by the means of the following sources of information: correspondence, post office returns, reports of salesmen and press information.

It is a fact, however, that these sources of information are by no means complete, and (outside of our office) I still have to find a system in use for verifying the information received and getting what is missed. This is one of the strong points of the system we use.

Do not theorize, satisfy yourself whether your list is an efficient one, see what percentage of the changes that took place last year—20,245—were recorded on your list, then write me.

Adding to a Picture's Effectiveness by Novel Settings

BELIEVING that an audience needs an "entre" for its entertainment just the same as a person wants one at his dinner, Manager Lloyd Brown, of Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, has added a feature at this big 3,000-seat house which is considered a most important innovation by film men and one that will receive far more attention as exhibitors learn of its importance.

In this particular instance, in the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," Manager Brown has attempted to give zest to the appetite of his audience for entertainment by first adding to the theatre the atmosphere—to use the studio term—of the South before the war by a mammoth transformation scene completed at a cost of almost $3.000.

Immediately following the orchestra overture—which, by the way, is made up of a medley of early-day Southern tunes—all lights in the house are extinguished. For almost a minute everything is in darkness and all expect to see the title of the picture projected on the screen.

Instead, the stage gradually grows lighter and the outline of a dignified Southern colonial home can be seen as though at dawn. As the sunlight gets brighter, the shutters are closed from within by the darky servant. The day passes, and with the arrival of twilight an aged couple come to the front porch and take the comfortable chairs to enjoy the cool of the evening.

The lights within are lighted, and the blinds are drawn in the bedroom above. The twittering of the birds is stilled and the singing of the negroes floats in from the distance. The last word in realism is added by the soothing odor as of a mingling of the pines and flowers of the South, which penetrates every part of the house by means of essense of balsam being placed in front of fans on the stage as twilight settles upon the scene.

How the Elaborate Settings Were Constructed

The setting was erected 20 feet back of the front of the stage, is 60 feet long, 39 feet hight and, including the braces, is 30 feet deep. The trees at either side were uprooted on Mt. Lowe and transplanted on the stage, extending 5 feet into the pit and several feet above the front of the setting. Each of the six columns is three feet in diameter and 28 feet in length.

All of the building is of lumber except the portion representing the weather boarding, and there is glass in all of the windows. Following the transformation scene showing this Southern home, the house is again dark while the screen is dropped into place.

An interesting feature in connection with this "entre" for the showing of the thirteen-reel subject is the development or evolution of special features Manager Brown has introduced. Taking the idea of producers of the big spectacular productions such as "Blue Beard," "Sindbad," "Beauty and the Beast" and others used to close the story of the play, Manager Brown found that practically all authors and producers closed their stories in a distasteful manner or without accounting for some principal character which would leave the audience dissatisfied.

Some of the Manager's Special Features

Following the showing of "The Escape," a series of three scenes were shown, depicting "Love," as necessary for happy mating; "Babyhood" for happy married life, all of which produced "Perfect Manhood." A replica in life of Frederick Remington's painting, "The Scout," was used following "Indian Wars Refought," by an Indian riding out on the stage and looking off into the valley. Rex Beach did not account for Slap Jack in "The Spoilers," and a scene showing this lovable character sitting on a rock waving good-bye to a ship a mile or two out to sea, and then lighting his pipe contentedly, not only caused the audience to applaud at every showing, but induced one of the millionaires of real life, the original character Beach described, to send for his old friend Slap Jack. The sadness of the ending of "Dan" was softened by a view of the Swanee River, with a naked pickaninny, entitled "Jest a-Fishin'!"

Manager Lloyd Brown is a typical show man and knows the likes and dislikes of his patrons from years of experience as producer and manager, and most Los Angeles producers consider the booking of their subject by Mr. Brown a far greater compliment for their work than the showing of their subject in large Chicago or New York theatres.

Why Fabrikoid Is Better Than Certain Kinds of Leather

THE Du Pont Fabrikoid Company, Wilmington, Del., has just started to introduce into motion picture houses for seating upholstery a highly attractive and very durable material known as Fabrikoid.

Fabrikoid is luxurious in appearance, wears like iron and is strictly sanitary. It can be washed with warm water and soap without injury in the slightest. This sanitary feature makes it immeasurably better for upholstery than the ordinary plush and cloth material used for upholstering theatre seats. Every patron, aside from being impressed by the appointments of a house, likes to feel that the surroundings, particularly the things with which he comes in actual contact, are clean and sanitary.

Fabrikoid has all the luxurious appearance of leather, and from which it can be distinguished only by expert examination. It wears for years without the usual shabby appearance which ordinarily comes from continuous use of split leather and other upholstery materials.

Fabrikoid consists of a strong, tightly woven cotton cloth on which is applied a coating material colored and embossed to imitate any grain leather desired. This outside coating penetrates into the cloth, so that cloth and coating become practically one.

No claim is made that Fabrikoid is superior to natural grain leather, but the claim is made, and fully substantiated by the actual facts, that Fabrikoid is immeasurably better than the coated splits which are usually sold as "real leather."

This statement may seem confusing to the layman, but a little knowledge about the leather manufacturing industry will clear it.

A hide as it comes from the cow, for instance, is entirely too thick for any use but soles of shoes. To be used for upholstery purposes, it must be made much thinner. The grain and strength of a hide does not extend through its entire thickness; it is confined to the upper section next to the hair.

The leather manufacturer, after tanning a hide, splits it into four sections. Commencing at the top, next the hair side, he takes off a layer almost as thin as tissue paper. This split has the natural grain of the hide. It is used for bookbinding, the covering of fine jewel cases, etc. It is known as the buffing split.

The leather man next splits off a layer considerably thicker than the buffing split. It contains the natural grain of the hide, and is very tough and strong. It is the best grade of leather procurable, and is extremely expensive. Its cost is so great that it can only be used on the very highest priced upholstery. Only those with the longest purses can afford it.

Kinds of Leather and Their Wearing Qualities

After the buffing and No. 1 grain leather splits are taken from the hide, the leather man has left a soft, spongy mass so weak that it will pull apart almost of its own weight, possessing absolutely none of the natural grain of the hide.

Now what becomes of this almost worthless part of a hide? The leather manufacturer splits it into two layers. He coats each of these layers with a jelly-like substance, then embosses them to imitate any grain leather desired. These two layers are what the public usually gets when it buys "real leather" upholstery.

After furniture upholstered with this sort of "leather" is in use for a short time, its owner is surprised to find it splitting, cracking and peeling. This has been caused by the soft, pulpy back stretching and pulling apart, and the coating material having no tensile strength of its own, it simply pulls apart, breaks and scales.

The big difference between Fabrikoid and these split leathers lies in the backing material, the coating substance used being practically the same. Where the split leather manufacturer uses a weak, spongy mass, having almost as little tensile strength as a wet newspaper for his backing material, the manufacturer of Fabrikoid uses a cotton cloth, woven in a special way to give unusual tensile strength.

This cloth is coated and embossed in the same general way as the split leather, but when Fabrikoid is placed on upholstered furniture, the backing material cannot stretch or pull apart, and consequently there is an entire absence of cracking, peeling or splitting on the part of the coating.

Hoffman Emergency Lock Lives Up to Claims

THE Safety Lock Company, Carrollton, Ohio, is placing on the market a new safety exit lock, said to be one of the most complete and satisfactory ever built. The door was exhibited in Columbus, O., at the recent Safety First Convention, and was highly praised by many of the fire marshals and others from the large cities in Ohio.

The safety appliance can be fitted on any door, and can not be unlocked from the outside. The mechanism is so arranged that the least pressure on the panel of the door will cause it to swing open. In case of fire or panic the first shove against the door opens it.

The appliance is so arranged that it is always ready for use, and therefore needs no adjustment. It is absolutely fool-proof. This safety lock has been shown to numerous architects, theatrical people and managers of large offices and public buildings, who declare it will be a winner. The company expects to have the lock ready for the market by the first of May.

It is protected by numerous patents. There is nothing about the lock that can get out of order as it has no springs and never needs oiling. It is always ready for use without a moment's notice. As this lock cannot get out of adjustment it proves a life-saver in case of panic. And the company will make the price within the reach of all. While the manufacturers realize that the lock is a valuable one, they do not expect to place a premium on its sale.

Place this lock on the exit doors of your theatre and demonstrate it to your patrons, and this advertisement alone will draw you business, as all those who visit your theatre will feel that you are equipped with a safety-first appliance that insures all against loss of life.

It's so simple that a two-year-old child can operate it. Chas. P. Hoffman, the inventor, has been in the motion picture business for the past nine years and has devoted much careful study to the perfecting of this lock. He assures the purchasers of the lock that they will have something worth while.

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

FRED LORELLO, owner of the Happy Hour Theatre at Oxnard, Cal., has purchased new equipment for his theatre, which is now being installed. All new chairs are to replace the old ones, and in the projection booth are being placed two new Power's 6-A projectors, fitted with a Power's Inductor.

James West, a pioneer exhibitor, who opened the first five cent show west of Pittsburgh, at Evansville, who is now proprietor of a confectionery store in Eagle Rock, Cal., has built an airdome adjoining his business, which will be opened the first of the coming week. There will be a seating capacity of 200 or more, the projection booth will contain Power's 6-A machines, sold through the General Film Company's Los Angeles exchange, and the program will consist of four reels of General regular program subjects. Mr. West is a convert of the higher price movement and will charge ten cents admission. The airdome will be accessible only through the confectionery store, and is being opened to serve as a trade builder for his present business to a more or less extent.

Numerous Los Angeles Theatres Change Hands

March seems to be the month for changes among Los Angeles motion picture theatre men, for during the thirty-one days seven of the one hundred houses changed hands. In all instances the sales were made through Leo Ryan, broker of Los Angeles.

The Lyric Theatre, with three hundred seats, at 128 South Spring street, was sold by George Howell to Francis S. Boynton of Long Beach, who took possession immediately. O'Connors and Dormody disposed of the Nevaro Theatre at 738 West Pico street to F. A. Lydy, of Flagstaff, Ariz. The Woodlawn Theatre, at Santa Barbara street and Wall street, formerly owned by W. M. Beal and G. P. Bruso, is now the property of Ernest E. Gagnon, who has also purchased the Auditorium at San Pedro from T. E. Fletcher. Mr. Gagnon is a former Vancouver, Wash., exhibitor.

The theatre of Victor H. Normand, 1234½ West Seventh street, The Playhouse, was bought by A. S. Hulbert, of New York City. H. C. McVey, a former exhibitor in Massachusetts, purchased the Photoplay No. 1, at 737 West Washington street, of Victor Wallenbeck, and S. Sterns, who owns two other eight-hundred-seat theatres, has sold a half interest in the Victoria at 2570 West Pico street to Jacob Golddigger.

The Majestic Theatre at 840 South Broadway, Los Angeles, with the close of the engagement of Oscar Hammerstein's "High Jinks," with Stella Mayhew and the original New York cast, the end of this week, will become a motion picture theatre, with a program consisting of World Film Corporation releases. The managers of this theatre, which is one of the two houses left in Los Angeles for the traveling attractions, have for the past twelve months flirted with the celluloid drama, using it to keep the house from remaining dark. Now the policy is to be changed and the theatre—which has a capacity of fifteen hundred—will be devoted exclusively to film plays. The first offering will be "The Fight," from the Bayard Veiller play. The prices will be 10, 20 and 30 cents and the music is to be furnished by a ladies' orchestra.

$150,000 Detroit Theatre a Certainty

The new theatre announced some time ago by John H. Kunsky at Grand River avenue and Fourteenth street, Detroit, is to be a certainty, ground having been broken on April 1. The contract for its erection has been let to the Frank Farrington Company, builders of the Alhambra and Majestic theatres, who promise to have same completed not later than September 1. It has not been decided what name will be given this theatre. There will be 1,600 seats, and Mr. Kunsky says that for beauty and modern appointments, it will be unsurpassed in the city of Detroit. The cost of this theatre is $150,000.

J. J. Miller has been appointed manager of the Family theatre, Detroit's original small-priced theatre, to succeed Frank J. O'Donnell who has returned to Grand Rapids on account of poor health. The family is now playing feature pictures. Mr. Miller was formerly manager of the Family theatre in Cincinnati, also owned by the John P. Harris Amusement Company. Previous to that position he was associated with the Bijou theatre and Lubin's in the same city.

The reorganization of the Gillingham & Smith enterprises has been effected and the following officers elected: President, A. J. Gillingham, of Detroit; vice-president, H. C. Cornelius; secretary, William J. Clark, and treasurer, Charles H. Seaman, all of Grand Rapids. Most of the stock available for local investors has been taken. As previously noted the capitalization was recently increased to $160,000. The new Strand theatre on Monroe avenue, N. W., Grand Rapids, is to be completed in July, and will be one of the prettiest houses in western Michigan.

The Scenic Theatre Company, which proposes to erect a $350,000 theatre and store building at Warren and Chene streets, has capitalized at $1,000. The incorporators are George C. Hupp, Arthur Thomas and Alex Cannell. The theatre is to seat 2,200 people. Construction work is to start within sixty days.

Woodward Company Opens Another Theatre

The Woodward Theatre Company, operating the Comique, Rosebud and Woodward theatres, have just opened a new one at 200 Randolph street, Detroit. It is 20 by 110 feet in size, and seats 300. It is called the LaSalle. Tom Cady is the house manager. H. S. Koppin, a well-known real estate dealer, is president of the Woodward Theatre Company.

The Broadway-Strand, 35-41 Broadway, Detroit, under the management of Harry I. Garson, formerly connected with the Strand theatre in New York, opened Sunday, April 11 and will follow closely the policy of the famous New York theatre. A 50-stop pipe organ, equipped with a variety of new appliances to reproduce sounds suitable to the pictures, has been installed, and in addition there is a large orchestra. The first feature film was "The Christian," preceded by the Broadway Strand Weekly and followed by a one-reel comedy. The building throughout has been extensively remodeled and redecorated, and numberless improvements added.

Several new motion picture theatres will be opened in various parts of Kentucky at an early date. The Owl Feature Film Exchange of this city, dealers in all kinds of motion picture supplies, sold this week a number of complete motion picture theatre outfits to persons who will open theatres in this section.

Among the purchasers are J. A. Dorsey, who will open a theatre about May 1 at Beattyville, Ky.; Mrs. H. B. Thomas, of Horse Cave, Ky.; A. B. Crockett, of Troutville, Va.; K. R. Knight, of Emery, Va., and J. D. Gaines, of Coolemee, N. C.

The New Castle Academy at New Castle, Ky., has bought a motion picture outfit which will be used in educational work, and the Rev. Francis Felten, of Louisville, one for St. Augustine's school.

The Owl Feature Film Exchange has opened a sales department for the buying and selling of feature films. A miniature theatre has been fitted up in the exchange headquarters where films will be shown to exhibitors.

J. A. Jacobs, of Carrollton, Ky., has purchased from Wilhoit & Collyer the Pearl theatre at Thirteenth and Walnut streets, Louisville. Mr. Jacobs took charge of the house last week.

Schlank Will Erect Big Structure in Omaha

Jacob Schlank, originator and general manager of the Hippodrome Amusement Co. at Omaha, Neb., has sold a part of his holdings and surrendered the managership to Frank Goetz. Schlank plans to give all his time to pushing the erection of a $300,000 building, the lower floor of which will be occupied by a motion picture theatre. The building will be near the business center of the city.

Schlank retains the controlling interest in the Hipp motion picture theatre. He says the policy of the house will remain unchanged. He will spend the greater part of his time in New York City, arranging the details of the building.

The Board of Selectmen of Wakefield, Mass., granted the application of Brooker & Glaser, of Boston, for a moving picture license in the proposed two-story building on the Richardson lot opposite the Town Hall. The board gave a permit with the stipulation that the building shall cost at least $52,000.

Sam Hilkoff and Max Sussman are to be the managers of a new motion picture theatre that is being erected on Chapel street, near Ferry, New Haven, Conn. The theatre will be opened May 1.

Harry D. Ollard has taken over the Gem theatre at Twenty-first street and Portland avenue, Tacoma, Wash. He has contracted for the Universal Warner service and will show a Sterling comedy at every change of program. They are now running "The Trey o' Hearts" and "Lucille Love."

The store building at Titusville, Fla., recently vacated by C. J. Denham is being lengthened and will be used by G. L. Mandaville for his moving picture show.

The Gem theatre, Miami, Ariz., opened April 3 with "The Wishing Ring."

J. D. Sampson, of Thomasville, Fla., has leased the picture show in the new Masonic Temple, and is now installing machine and other fixtures as fast as possible.

On the southwest corner of St. Nicholas avenue and 185th street, New York City, a two-story store and loft building and moving picture theatre is to be erected for the Life Amusement Company, Michael Friedman, president. It will have a frontage of 79.11 feet and a depth of 194 feet. George F. Pelham is the architect and has estimated the cost at $60,000.

H. N. Bragdon will open a moving picture house at Oxford, Me.

The Fifth Avenue Amusement Company has received a permit from the Fire Marshal to alter the three-story brick building at 2328 Fifth Avenue, Troy, N. Y., into a moving-picture theatre. D. A. Shea and Patrick H. Kelly are the owners of the company and the theatre will be opened about May 10.

Orpheum, Utica, N. Y., Continues in Pictures

The Orpheum, Utica, N. Y., is to pass out of the control of Wilmer & Vincent, May 1. It is understood that the Owens estate, which owns the Majestic and Orpheum theatres, will continue the latter as a motion picture house after certain improvements have been made. Under the new management, the Orpheum will be conducted by William P. Donlon, assistant manager of the Majestic Theatre, who is at present in charge at the Orpheum.

The Olive Theatre, the new moving picture playhouse built by Frank E. Long at the corner of Nineteenth and Olive streets, St. Joseph, Mo., was opened recently.

The Olive is a new, fireproof building, two stories in height, and having a ground floor auditorium seating 480.

A. L. Corse has bought the Art moving picture theatre, of Orange, Mass., of Mrs. H. T. Powers, who only recently bought it of the Eastern Theatres Company.

A $10,000 motion picture theatre is to be erected by Isaiah B. Tetreault on a lot bought from James Scholan in Third avenue near Twenty-fifth street, Watervliet, N. Y.

George A. Lalonde of Montreal has leased the Joyland Theatre in Main street, Watertown, N. Y., and opened it April 8. The theatre has been closed for over a year, since the former lessee purchased the Star Theatre in Raymond street of Peck and Olmstead.

The Ideal Theatre, owned and operated at Sheridan, Ind., by Clarence Caldwell, of Frankfort, Ind., has been purchased by Charles Spray.

$200,000 Playhouse for Lawrence, Mass.

A $200,000 theatre for Lawrence, Mass., the finest in New England outside of Boston, has resulted from the Boston Post "Build Now" campaign. Building wreckers are now at work razing the "New Nickel" Theatre at the corner of Lawrence and Methuen streets, and unless all signs fail, the contractors, Whitney & Co., of Boston, will have the building ready for occupancy for Labor Day.

Work on the new Sansoucy Theatre, Biddeford, Me., which is to occupy the site of the Hardy block on Adams street, will begin about the first of July.

Fort Wayne's newest addition to the moving picture industry, the Minuet, opened to the public April 3. The Minuet will seat 600 at one time. The seats are of the most approved pattern and extra wide, thereby assuring patrons of plenty of comfort. Electric ventilating fans have been installed and a change of pure air will circulate through the auditorium every thirty minutes. The entire building has been greatly renovated. The walls are oil-painted—tan blending into brown, making a very pleasing effect to the eye. Velvet draperies adorn all the exits and windows.

Bids for the construction of a $3,000 theatre building at El Dorado, Kan., for W. R. Rowell were opened on April 1 by Architect U. G. Charles of Wichita. This building will be 25 by 125 feet and will be constructed of brick and stone. It will be modern in every way.

Another moving picture house for the west side of Erie, Pa., has already been started. James D. Walker has broken ground for a structure ninety feet frontage by 155 feet deep, in the north side of Fourth street, between Walnut and Cherry streets, which will house a moving picture theatre, a pool room, barber shop, and two stores. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy within three months.

A new vaudeville and photoplay theatre to be erected in Main street, Chicopee Falls, Mass., will be completed August 15, if nothing happens to upset the plans of the promoters. Plans and specifications were received last week from the architect, George H. Fugere, of Chicopee Falls, and bids for the construction will be opened this week. The new playhouse will be the largest in Chicopee Falls, and will provide seating accommodations for 761. In planning the building, the architect has arranged modern and artistic effects, which will be the latest in theatre construction.

Hopp Plans $50,000 Theatre in Rock Island

If present plans that are being formulated, materialize, Rock Island, Ia., will in the near future have one of the finest moving picture theatres in the west, and without a doubt, the finest in the Middle West.

Joseph Hopp, owner of the Majestic Theatre, in Rock Island, of which Joe Quinn is manager, has been in Davenport, Ia., to confer with Henry Dart's sons, in an effort to secure the big building now occupied by them on Eighteenth street between Second and Third avenues, for that purpose.

The building will be entirely remodeled, if secured, and it will take an outlay in the neighborhood of $50,000 declares Mr. Hopp.

The Gem Theatre, Athol, Mass., has been sold by E. L. Crandall, who bought it from Frank C. Derby, to his son-in-law and daughter, Harold Shearer and wife, formerly piano player and proprietor of Art moving picture theatre, Orange, Mass.

A new moving picture theatre is to be erected on Delaware avenue, Mauch Chunk, Pa., by Joseph Browell and Chester La Barre. The excavations are under way. The building, 70x170 feet, will be a three-story structure. The front will contain a large store room on the first floor and the second and third floors will be dwelling apartments.

J. V. Schreck, proprietor and manager of the Majestic and Valentine theatres, Mt. Carmel, Pa., has leased the Temple theatre at Ashland, Pa.

Early Building Operations in Middle West

Building operations in the Middle West began early this spring with the erection of several new theatres. Reports of others going up are being received daily. In the Middle West, more than in any other part of the country at present, the idea of the specially constructed motion picture theatre building is gaining in prominence. The made-over store building or dance hall is going out of style in this part of the country.

At Sheldon, Ia., Buntley Brothers have recently completed the erection of the Lyric. It is a modern little building, seating about 200 people and ornamental in appearance. Reports from Sheldon are that it adds to the appearance of the entire business block in which it was erected.

At Louisville, Neb., J. P. Anderson tore down an old restaurant building and erected one of the best motion picture theatres in this part of the state. There are two there now.

Charles E. White recently opened his new theatre at Yankton, S. D. It is one of the largest and most ornamental theatres in Yankton. He is showing the Universal program.

The Elite theatre of Council Bluffs, Ia., made over from a store building, has been made back into a store. A project is under way for the construction of an entirely new picture building nearby. The American theatre, showing pictures and plays for the last season, has been purchased by other parties and rumor has it the building will be repaired and devoted exclusively to an up-to-date motion picture theatre.

Mains & Van Vleedt have purchased the Park theatre, Sixteenth and Cass street, Omaha, Neb.

M. J. S. Powell, of Storm Lake, Ia., has gone into the motion picture theatre business with a vim. He recently purchased the Princess from William Frazer and the Empire from I. K. Moreland. He has theatres elsewhere.

Airdome Season Near Opening in Omaha Territory

Exchange men say the Airdome bug is circulating in the Middle West. Several would-be airdome proprietors have come to them with requests about service, they say. At least two airdomes will be located in Omaha, one at Thirty-second and Farnam and one out on Vinton street.

Milton Cohn and Alvin McGuire have taken over the Oak theatre, New Orleans, one of the important suburban houses on Carrolton avenue, and have installed a General and Mutual service. This house was formerly operated by R. P. Knight, and his unexpired lease was assumed by the new proprietors.

Philip Wombacher and D. F. Barron, owners of the Pandora, Shamrock and other important suburban houses of New Orleans, are reporting good business after the Lenten season, and declare they are shortly to open another house in the immediate neighborhood of the Pandora.

Sid Grauman, widely-known as manager of the Empress theatre and a leading official of the Screen Club of San Francisco, has a Chinese concession at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, featuring a Chinese theatre and Underground Chinatown.

Forestic Theatre Reopened in San Francisco

The Forestic theatre in the Sunset district of San Francisco, a leading residence section, has been reopened after having been dark for several months, under the dirction of Wm. Stevens,, formerly of Alameda. Feature attractions will be shown exclusively, four changes a week being made.

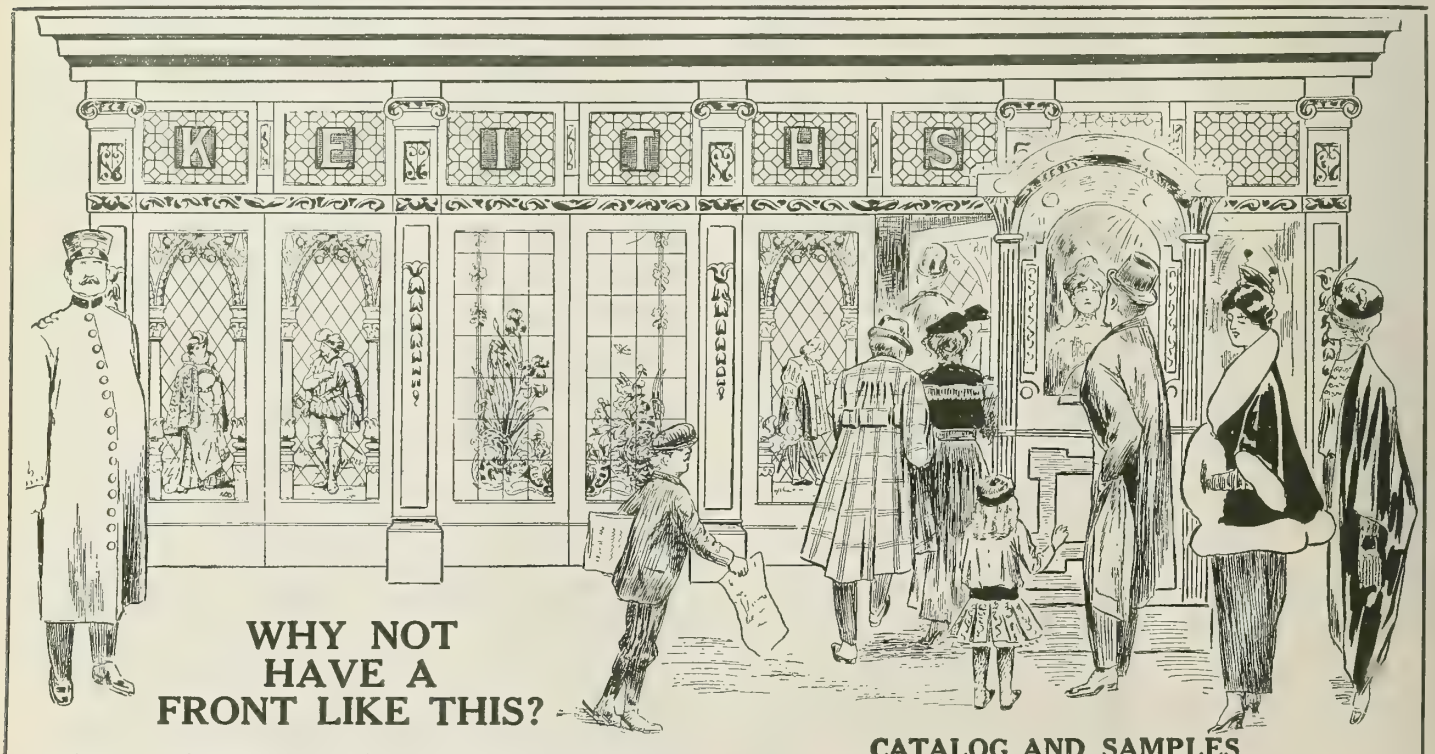
Considerable activity is now being manifested at Modesto, Cal., business having shown a substantial increase there during the past month. D. H. Martin, of that place, is having a fine new house erected and this will be ready for occupancy in the early summer. The Isis theatre, one of the leading picture houses there, has been taken over by W. Clark, a prominent San Joaquin Valley exhibitor, and several changes are being made in the theatre.

The Alcatraz theatre, a well-known house located in the residence section of Oakland, Cal., has been reopened under the management of Bourke & Hodges. A Power cameragraph No. 6A has been installed and improvements made in the theatre.

Sievers & Gatzert, owners of the Tokay theatre, Lodi, Cal., have let a contract at over $3,500 for the enlargement of this house. The length of the house will be increased by fifty feet and a large stage will be constructed for vaudeville use.

The new moving picture house being erected for the Turner & Dahnken Circuit at Watsonville, Cal., is rapidly nearing completion and will be occupied within a month's time. This will make the eighth house owned by this firm, all in the San Francisco Bay territory, and others will be added shortly, several important deals for new locations being under way.

Orpheum of Nashville Goes to Pictures



The Dixie Amusement Company, operators of the Strand, Nashville, Tenn., announce today that they have taken over the Orpheum and will convert the playhouse into a motion picture house. Many improvements are to be made and everything fixed up to date to make the Orpheum a modern photoplay house. The management plans to put on five and ten-cent productions,

The Orpheum will be opened to the public on Monday, April 26. A special orchestra will furnish music for the pictures and everything will be brought to bear to make the Orpheum one of the most popular movie houses in the city. The Orpheum is comfortable and cool at all times, and the management plans to make it a rendezvous for those seeking cool spots

A theatre costing $15,000 and seating 880 people will be erected in Milwaukee by H. Schmidt & Sons, at 674-80 Jackson street.

P. J. and Harvey Hanson have accepted the plans of Architect H. T. Liebert, of Wausau, Wis., for their new theatre at Rhinelander, Wis., which will have a capacity of 1,500.

The Ringling Brothers, the circus kings, are going into the picture game in their home town, Baraboo, Wis. They are erecting a theatre in that city that is to cost about $75,000. C. W. and G. L. Rapp, 69 West Washington street, Chicago, are the architects.

Pyle Finds Business Good Throughout South

CHAS. C. PYLE, general sales agent of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, has just returned to Chicago from an extended trip through the South. Following is a very interesting report of conditions as he found them in this section of the country:

Business in the South is certainly opening up. The theatres in the principal cities in the South show a great increase in business over a few months ago. In fact, some are doing a larger business than they did a year ago at this time.

During my trip South I visited Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala.; Atlanta, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn., and talked with a great many exhibitors in the interests of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, and every one seemed to have confidence in the future in the motion picture business in their territory. They back up these statements by laying plans for the future.

Messrs. Abernathy and Calman, who own Odeon No. 1 and No. 2 theatres at Birmingham, Ala., are playing to a much larger business than they were a year ago at this time. They have just leased the Majestic Theatre, and last week played to capacity business with "Tillie's Punctured Romance." These gentlemen have secured a lease on a most prominent piece of property in Birmingham, and will soon start building a new theatre seating a thousand, which will be one of the prettiest theatres in the South.

In Montgomery, Ala., H. E. Farley, of the Empire theatre, has just remodeled his theatre at a great expense, and there are other parties there who are going to build a new theatre.

Messrs. Flowers and Couch, who own theatres in Selma and Opelika, Ala., have just organized a stock company who will open a great many motion picture theatres.

It was a treat for me to come in contact with Howell Graham, who owns four of the principal motion picture theatres in Chattanooga, and who is so full of ideas and enthusiasm that it is a wonder that he hasn't built more large theatres long before this. However, he expects to shortly build a fourteen hundred seat theatre in Chattanooga, and probably by this time has leased a large theatre there, which will be used as a picture theatre under his capable management.

He still runs two reels of film for five cents and four reels of film for ten cents, and is certainly entitled to credit for holding down the number of reels to the show.

It is remarkable how the colored theatres are progressing in the South. In every city of any size they have several colored theatres that are doing capacity business.

$40,000 Theatre Projected in Walla Walla

PLANS have been announced for two new houses in towns tributary to Spokane, Wash.

Business men of this city are interested in the building of the Rose Theatre, being erected in Hillyard, a suburb. It will seat 250 and will be equipped with a new Power's machine.

Ground has been broken for a $40,000 house, to be known as the Liberty, in Walla Walla, Wash. Contractor N. J. McLeod is to have the house completed before hot weather.

The Princess Theatre in Kellogg is being remodelled at a cost of $8,500. L. R. Stritesky, of Spokane, is the architect.

George Peone has sold the picture theatre at Ione, Wash., to G. E. Widger and Arnold Reading.

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 14

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

The man who is competing with himself has just as real a competitor, as the man who competes with someone else.

The policy of cheap film, means that he does not get all of the business that he can easily get with a different policy.

This is proven by the fact that as soon as a theatre changes from the cheap to the worthwhile films that its attendance immediately jumps enormously.

To prove this, there have been cases where we have sent out heralds and advertising matter to the best people in a given town, and they have taken the trouble to talk to the moving picture manager and ask him to run the features they have read about.

The Kingston Theatre, at Kingston Avenue, Brooklyn, was sold recently, and the new manager installed feature films. The house has been running cheap programs and losing ground steadily. As a result of the new feature policy, the house is paying wonderfully well. Very seldom is it possible to get a seat after 8 o'clock without waiting.

A block away from this picture house is the Albany Theatre, which was run on the old policy of cheap films. The minute the new house began to advertise feature films, the little patronage that the other house had, began to dwindle. It dwindled so much that the owner sold the house. Henry Holtz and William Brandt, the new owners, were clever enough to run a feature program, and the result is that both theatres are playing to crowded houses and making money. There is a continuous stream from one theatre to the other of people who find it impossible to get a seat in one house and try the other. Both of these theatres run World Film.

The men who claim that they are getting all the business they can get find when they adopt the feature policy that they have never reached the limit of their drawing power before. Features not only bring the regulars, but also bring a class that never go to ordinary "picture shows"—but do turn out in droves to see real plays and big stars properly advertised.

THE ACID TEST:

The first of the new Thanhousers will be released on Sunday, May the second and it will be entitled "THEIR ONE LOVE." All I am going to say about it is this:

GO AND SEE IT! THEN IF YOU DON'T WRITE ME THAT IT'S AS GOOD AS THE BEST SINGLE REEL SUBJECT YOU EVER SAW—ANY WHERE—AT ANY TIME, THEN DON'T EVER TAKE MY WORD FOR ANYTHING I EVER TELL YOU AGAIN! That's final and you are perfectly welcome to hold me to this to the very letter.

On April 30th, which is Friday, the Falstaff Comedy Day, I release the Falstaff comedy in one reel, entitled "The Movie Fans." I am not going to say a word about this; but if it is not what I told you Falstaff comedies will be, I want you to do the talking to me—and go as strong as you like!

That's all!

STILL CLIMBING

Right from the jump Kriterion has forged ahead and has made progress that is written down in the history of the motion picture business. It has standardized quality. It has established a record in productions—and it is—STILL CLIMBING.

The rapid progress of Kriterion pictures has established the name KRITERION as the best there is in motion pictures. It has created a demand for a better picture because it has reached a higher plane in motion picture making—and is—STILL CLIMBING.

Its photography has created a buzz of complimentary conversation throughout the trade. Its splendid players have secured a large following. Its service system and co-operative methods have gained it thousands of friends—and it is—STILL CLIMBING.

KRITERION is not satisfied with having done all this but intends to grow better with each day. It insists on giving even better pictures, better photography and better service. It can do these things, because it is—STILL CLIMBING.

NOW READY For Exhibitors!

THE first complete three chapters of "The Diamond From the Sky"—the $800,000.00 "Flying A" continued photoplay—are now ready for exhibitors at every Mutual Exchange in America.

We are so confident of the success of this masterful production that we have arranged to show the first three complete chapters to exhibitors as an indication of the exceptional quality throughout. You can see—before you book this mammoth attraction—Lottie Pickford, Irving Cummings, William Russell, Charlotte Burton, George Periolat, Eugenie Forde, W. J. Tedmarsh and Orral Humphrey enact all the thrilling scenes for which you have waited.

You can see, with your own eyes, the opening of this story, with its romantic traditions. You can see the characters as infants, as children and as young folk. You can see charming Lottie Pickford in the role of the heroine—dashing Irving Cummings as the hero. You can see the thrilling automobile race in Chapter 3, in which your breath is taken away as a transcontinental express train almost dashes a racing car to pieces. You can see the same racing car dashed over a cliff—the most thrilling film conception ever reproduced. You can see—but why tell any more? Go see it—at any Mutual Exchange in America.

$10,000.00 for a Suggestion!

A Picturized Romantic Novel

First Release May 3rd

THE first release of "The Diamond From the Sky" will be May 3rd. The first chapter will be in three acts. Thereafter a two-act chapter will be released each week. The story will appear simultaneously with the film in 500 newspapers throughout the country.

Remember $10,000 was paid for this scenario, the best of 19,846 submitted. Another $10,000 is now offered for a sequel to this prize play. This offer is open to every man, woman and child. Exhibitors everywhere are pronouncing this the most phenomenal photoplay production ever presented.

At an exhibition recently held in Chicago, 400 exhibitors immediately endorsed the first three chapters unqualifiedly. Exhibitions are now being held throughout the country. Go see the films—decide for yourself. Ask the North American representative in any Mutual Exchange in America.

Bret Harte and the California Motion Picture Corporation

An unbeatable combination

BEATRIZ MICHELENA

in "THE LILY OF POVERTY FLAT"

Adapted from Bret Harte's poem, "Her Letter" and its two sequels, "His Reply" and "Her Last Letter," "THE LILY OF POVERTY FLAT" mirrors with historical fidelity that epoch which California's inimitable author has immortalized in story and poem.

This film drama pulsates with the spirit of the pioneer West,—not an imaginary nor an exaggerated West, but the real West which the gold seeker found, fought for and won.

It is the story of stirring events and big motives, whereby order was moulded out of chaos and an empire out of lawless abandon, but, running through, giving purpose to, and eventually overtopping all, is the one supreme motive—a woman's love for a man, against which difference in wealth, intrigue and every adversity are unable to prevail.

In "THE LILY OF POVERTY FLAT" Beatriz Michelena has a remarkably effective medium for the display of her acknowledged histrionic talents. She is the one actress who can place "The Lily" among the really greatest screen characterizations that this country has ever seen.

Produced through special arrangement with Houghton Mifflin Company.

A Supply That Fails to Meet the Demand

A PROMINENT exhibitor came to New York last week on a determined hunt for a certain style of picture.

He wanted this kind of picture because his audience—an intelligent one—wants it. Probably a thousand other astute exhibitors in the country, running similar theatres, also want this character of picture.

AND undoubtedly ten or more millions of intelligent Americans—take only the people who are used to the excellent fiction of the American magazines—also want want this same kind of picture.

And yet this exhibitor has to hunt for such pictures. He'll he highly gratified, he said, if he finds only a few, let alone a steady supply.

THERE is a tip here, it would seem, for any producer even the best and most experienced. Here certainly is a market opening that might well be taken advantage of.

But that is not the moral I mean to point out.

It is this:

Right on the heels of the exhibitor comes another caller who told of the recent formation of yet another producing company!

A CONSIDERABLE amount of money had been paid in. A big plant with several hundred thousand dollars had been purchased at a great bargain, and was being remodeled for studio and commercial work on a large scale.

The company felt very optimistic about the future.

A FEW questions elicited the following information:

The active men in the concern were all novices at the picture business.

No production work had ever been done in or about the city in which the plant is located. The surrounding country has no varied scenery, nor favorable climate, the city itself no manufacturing advantages.

Had a market been arranged for? No. Had the company a production policy? No. None in particular.

They simply expected to make pictures.

THE contrast presented by the two callers was striking, to say the least.

On one hand, we have a market looking for a producer; on the other hand a producer going at it with about as clear an idea of a picture market as of blue moons.

When will it end—this wild hysteria to make pictures—this blind rush to produce blindly?

AN experienced producer the other day compared picture-making to mining. More money was being sunk, he said, than taken out.

The comparison is a very apt one.

In the mind of the novice producer there is the same wild desire for quick riches that stamps the gold seeker, the same fatuous world-old belief that riches can be uncovered easily.

IT seems strange that hard-headed business men, successful in other lines, and knowing full-well that profits are always hard-won, should expect to find them quick and easy in a field so filled with competition as the picture-producing business.

But after all it isn't strange. The same man invests as blindly in mining stock.

He believes anyway that the other fellow's business is easier and better than his own and our best popular magazines have told him that motion pictures make millionaires.

THE new producer of pictures seems to reverse the usual order of things. In every other business, production generally follows because some man or men know that a market exists for a certain article, know how to meet this market and know how to make the article needed.

Not so you new picture producer. He seems to believe that an ever ready market will at once and automatically absorb any picture produced.

He begins with simply a producing impulse; he assumes a market but doesn't knows it first requirement.

AS a matter of fact this lack of knowledge of the picture market is by no means confined to the tyro producer. Too many pictures are being produced today for which no real demand exists. And the fault for this lies just as much with the exhibitor as with the producer.

The plain reason why no real demand exists is because the public—not the high brow public, but the everyday, newspaper and magazine reading public, ten or more million strong—are more intelligent than the pictures. Some exhibitors don't know this, and consequently some producers don't.

AND, as a result, some millions of people go only occasionally, not regularly, to picture theatres. They will not go regularly till they are given regularly as good fiction and facts in pictures as their five and ten cent magazines regularly give them—which is about the best.

Vol. XI May 1, 1915 No. 17

Where Will the Legislative Mania End?

ON the principle that thoroughness is a virtue, the Legislature of Pennsylvania is preparing to legislate for (?) the motion picture industry in as thorough a manner as a busy group of legislators can.

The Daix censorship bill has overshadowed all others, because of its inherent importance, to such an extent that the companion measures following it through the Assembly and Senate have almost been forgotten.

WHAT one of these "miscellaneous" bills is, the exhibitors of Pennsylvania were rudely reminded this past week, when the announcement came that the Stein anti-segregation bill favoring the admission of negroes into theatres upon an equality with whites had been railroaded through the House by an overwhelming vote.

Still more rude, if possible, will be the awakening to the fact that the old Building Code menace is to be revived, and that the theatre owners and managers may have to adjust themselves to a law that will not only make theatre building in the future a costly undertaking, but will be retroactive in its effect upon theatres now in existence.

SUCH strict regulation of theatre buildings is not in itself surprising. It has been undertaken before this by many other states.

Two other measures now before the Legislature will act as eye-openers, however, to those who smile when they are told that the exercise of the legislative power may, with many men, become a passion that amounts to a mania.

One is a bill, giving boroughs and townships the power to regulate the erection of bill-boards within their limits. The other deals with the admission prices of theatres, the form in which tickets shall be printed and the use that shall be made of them. The bill-board bill, it seems reasonably certain, will die in committee. How long the other may live to plague the exhibitor, no one at this moment can tell.

THE fondness of the American people, as a nation, for making laws is an embarrassment at home and a joke abroad.

One-half the American nation spends its time in inventing new laws, and the other half spends its time in circumventing them.

Most of the other businesses of the country have known, to their sorrow, the blight of the law-maker. It is just beginning to be the turn of the motion picture maker.

Censorship and building laws are not the end of the politician's meddling in this business. They are merely the beginning.

Why Not Ask Doctor Crafts to Prove His Statements?

THE action of Nelson Van H. Gurnee, of the Ada Meade Theatre, Lexington, Ky., in buying a full three columns of advertising space in the Lexington papers recently, to reply to the accusations of Dr. Charles Crafts against the integrity of the National Board of Censorship, cannot fail to excite admiration.

Dr. Crafts, with a dogmatic assertiveness common to his profession, had made the statement in Lexington a few days before the advertisement appeared, characterizing the National Board as a "humbug," and declaring that it was composed of friends of the manufacturers.

HIS words—save for the "humbug"—were suave enough. But it was the insinuation behind them to which Mr. Gurnee replied. His answer to the charge of humbug, was the simple enumeration of the men and women who compose the National Board.

Since Dr. Crafts knew the personnel of the board as thoroughly as Mr. Gurnee, his declaration of "humbug" has not even the poor excuse of ignorance to atone for its offensiveness.

He deliberately took advantage of his position to make a statement which, uttered by a layman, would have been questioned in a very emphatic manner.

MR. GURNEE then went on to meet the implication in Dr. Crafts' assertions that the National Board was composed of friends of the manufacturers. His answer was:

"They are, without a question of a doubt, and to this friendliness and the earnest efforts of the National Board and the manufacturers working in co-operation is largely due the high standard attained by the photoplay of today.

"Is Dr. Crafts's statement intended to convey the impression that the manufacturers are evil-doers and that the board is guilty in being friendly with them?" continues Mr. Gurnee.

It seems only too certain that this was exactly the impression that Dr. Crafts intended to convey.

IT would be a relief to the motion picture business if some sensitive member of it would undertake to compel Dr. Crafts to prove some of his reckless statements. The outcome, it may be added, would be a lesson to hundreds of Dr. Crafts' colleagues whose disregard for facts, we are charitable enough to believe, is due to an inability to comprehend them.

And while we are on the subject—if we must have censorship, why not set up a censorship over the tongues of these reverend gentlemen who spend their leisure time in taking liberties with the businesses and reputations of other members of the community?

Negro Rights Bill Passes Keystone Assembly

Measure Forbidding Segregation of Colored Race in Theatres of Pennsylvania Railroaded Through Lower House at Harrisburg—Other Bills Affecting Motion Picture Industry Are Up, Among Them Building Code, Daix Censorship, Vickerman Billboard and Price Regulation Measures

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., April 21.

AFTER almost everybody, including a majority of the members of the Legislature, thought it had been buried in committee for all time, the Stein "equal rights" bill, providing a heavy fine or a jail sentence or both for the owners of theatres, including motion picture houses, for segregating negroes from white patrons, has passed the House of Representatives. It was reported favorably from committee, railroaded through and passed finally on last Wednesday by the overwhelming vote of 138 to 34.

The reporting of the bill unexpectedly was a clever trick on the part of the friends of the measure, who figured rightly that once a final vote on it was forced in the House, a majority of the legislators, who have large numbers of negro constituents, would not dare to vote against it.

The negro friends of the measure were on hand keeping careful tabs on those who voted for and against it, and few representatives dared cast their ballots in opposition to the bill. In fact, many, seeing the opportunity to score heavily among the negro voters, earnestly advocated the passage of the measure in one of the liveliest debates in the present session.

The question of segregation of negroes in the theatres is one that has caused a great deal of concern to motion-picture theatre owners in this state, especially in the southern tier counties, which border on the Mason-Dixon line. There have been many disputes and a number of suits for damages growing out of the refusal of some theatres to seat negroes among the white patrons, and as a result of these controversies there is now pending in the Superior Court of the state a suit to test the constitutionality of the law on this subject which is now in existence.

Court Decision Now Useless

Motion picture men, through the medium of this test case, had hoped to get their final bearings in this most important matter, but if the Stein bill, which sets forth far more definitely than the existing law the rights of negroes to seats anywhere in the theatres, is passed by the Legislature, a victory for the theatre men in the pending court fight would avail them nothing.

The Stein bill, having passed the House with such an impressive majority, it is conceded, will have a good chance of gaining the support of the Senate.

A vast amount of other proposed legislation of great importance to the motion picture interests was advanced in the week just closed, all of which must be disposed of one way or another by the lawmakers in the next three or four weeks, for it is practically certain now that final adjournment of the Legislature will be taken on May 6 or May 13. There will not be another regular session for two years.

The administration censorship bill, introduced in the Senate by Mr. Daix, has passed that body on second reading. It will go through the Senate without amendment, but the motion picture interests will make a strong fight to amend it when it reaches the House.

This is the bill which, while it repeals the present censorship law, retains censorship on a more costly scale with a board of three instead of two members, and a large number of additional employes. While it makes some slight concessions to the picture men, it retains most of the features which caused them to make their earnest though fruitless fight to wipe out censorship entirely through the medium of the bill endorsed by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which bill was so unceremoniously placed in the pickling vat in the House Committee on Judiciary General.

No Appeal Permitted

One of the objectionable features of the Daix bill, which is backed by the administration and, incidentally, by Chief Censor J. Louis Breitinger, whose autocratic methods have aroused the hostility of most of the exhibitors and exchange men of the state, is that it makes the ruling of the censors final. It provides for no appeal from their decision, and one of the amendments that will be fought for most earnestly will be one permitting the picture men to appeal from the decisions of the censors to a court of justice for relief.

Representative A. C. Stein, of Pittsburgh, has declared his intention of making the fight in behalf of the picture men when the bill reaches the floor of the House, and he says he will devote his best efforts to obtaining an amendment providing the right of appeal.

The Senate has passed finally a set of bills introduced by Senator Snyder, of Schuylkill county, designed to cure defects in the present laws relating to the construction of motion picture theatres in Philadelphia and the regulation of such theatres with regard to fire protection. These bills, if adopted, will remove from the minds of Philadelphia theatre owners much apprehension as to whether old buildings that thus far have been converted into motion picture theatres must be equipped in accordance with the very strict rules recently compiled by the Department of labor and Industry of the state to govern the construction of theatres that may be built hereafter.

Doubt as to Law's Operation

One of the bills amends the supplement of June 5, 1901, to the act of May 5, 1899, creating the Philadelphia Bureau of Building Inspection, by exempting from the supplement buildings used for moving picture exhibitions. Another exempts from the operation of the moving picture act of June 9, 1911, buildings in actual use for moving picture exhibitions prior to the passage of the act, and another legalizes the erection prior to May 20, 1913, of certain buildings used for moving picture exhibitions.

The rules that have been laid down by Commissioner John Price Jackson, head of the Department of Labor and Industry, are not mandatory, but nevertheless the Philadelphia theatre men will feel far more comfortable if they are legally absolved from the responsibility of making old buildings that have been converted for theatre purposes conform with these regulations.

Incidentally it can be said that Commissioner Jackson has given assurance to the Motion Picture News representative that he has no intention of seeking the passage of any law, at least in this session, that will make his building regulations mandatory. Thus far, he says, the builders of new theatres have shown such a willingness to comply with the recommendations of his department that no need for compulsory building rules has arisen.

One measure that has been opposed alike by motion picture theatre managers and the managers of theatres in general is destined not to become a law. It is the Vickerman billboard bill, which would have given to borough, township and city authorities the right to regulate the matter appearing on theatrical billboardls in their municipalities. The bill was so vigorously opposed that it is now practically certain to die a natural death in the House committee to which it was referred, and theatre men are congratulating themselves on at least one decisive victory in the present legislative session.

Price Regulation Bill Threatens

What success they will have in combatting the so-called "ticket scalping bill," introduced in the House by Mr. Dunn, of Philadelphia, is more problematical. This measure, after reaching the second reading calendar in the House, was referred back to committee, from which it is likely to be called later on in the session. The bill applies to the managements of "all theatres," which term, of course, embraces motion picture theatre managers. It provides that no ticket shall be sold unless the price is printed on it, and that it must not be sold at a price bigger than that designated, in heavy black type, on the ticket. Tickets shall be sold only at the ticket office of the theatre. "Standing Room Only" signs must be posted when all the seats of a theatre have been sold.

The penalty provided for violation of the act is a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, or imprisonment for not more than thirty days in default of payment of a fine. A person found guilty of violation may appeal from the decision of the magistrate by posting as security an amount double the amount of the fine imposed. Motion picture men as well as theatre men in general say that some of these provisions would impose an unjust hardship on them.

General Manager of V-L-S-E Ends Exchange Tour

Erwin Opened Offices for the Combine in Chicago, Atlanta and Dallas—New Orleans Location Almost Ready—Spoor Opens Kansas City Branch

WALTER W. ERWIN, general manager of VitagraphLubinSeligEssanay, Inc., is back in New York after a trip around the country, during which he opened exchanges to handle the coming Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay features in Chicago, Atlanta and Dallas and opened negotiations in New Orleans. The exchange in Kansas City, Mo., has been opened by George K. Spoor, of Essanay.

The Chicago exchange will be located in the Garland building and conducted by Ike VanRunkle. J. S. Hebrew will run the Philadelphia exchange at 1316 Vine street.

The Atlanta exchange will be located in the Moore building, 75 Walton street, under the management of W. C. Brandon. The Dallas exchange will be at 1900 Commerce street, with C. A. Meade in the swivel chair. Mr. Meade has been with the General Film Company at Kansas City and the Mutual Film Corporation at Omaha.

E. R. Pearson will be the manager of the Kansas City exchange, which will be located in the Boley building, at Twelfth and Walnut streets.

Charles J. Giegerich, formerly motion picture editor of the New York "Review," will handle the publicity of VitagraphLubinSeligEssanay, Inc., from the New York office, at 1600 Broadway. Mr. Giegerich has done considerable motion picture publicity work, most recent of which was the Sir Douglas Mawson Antarctic pictures.

"The way the exhibitors and newspapers took to the new offices was surprising," said Mr. Erwin, showing a large packet of clippings dealing with the opening of the VitagraphLubinSeligEssanay offices.

"Every exchange has several hundred applicants for service. Applications have been pouring in by letter and in person. Work of opening up the remaining exchanges will be rushed and I feel that we will have all we can do to handle our customers."

It has been decided to call the Selig Spectacular Specials soon to be released through the VitagraphLubinSeligEssanay exchanges the Selig "Red Seal Plays." Release dates for some of the forthcoming Red Seal Plays are: "The Carpet from Bagdad," May 3; "The Rosary," May 31; "The Millionaire Baby," June 28, and "A Texas Steer," July 26.

Lynch, of Essanay, Is Optimistic Over Business

Visits Forty-four Branches of General Film Company and Finds That a Wave of Prosperity Is Evident Throughout the Country

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 19.

W. FAY LYNCH, special representative of the Essanay company, spent several days in Los Angeles, this week, while on a tour of the Western state exchanges, and is very enthusiastic regarding the business of the exhibitors in all parts of the country.

Mr. Lynch has visited practically everyone of the forty-four branches of the General Film Company since the first of the year, and in every section business is improving, Mr. Lynch stated.

"When the exchange man can see an improvement in business," he added, "there is every reason to believe the exhibitors are getting their share. The worst for the South has passed and increased business is reported by exhibitors in every section where the cotton market affected conditions. Along the coast I find everyone believing prosperity is here, and of the opinion that times will continue to improve."

Concerning the Essanay company, the best of reports are received. The unusual success of the Chaplin subjects and the three reel releases have in a measure added materially to the popularity of this brand. Of the comedy brand, featuring Charles Chaplin, the highest record for prints of any brand has been reached and passed, all General exchanges receiving two or more of each subject.

The popularity of this comedian along the coast is creating business for both the Essanay and Keystone.

Every available print in which Chaplin played is working overtime, and it is stated that many old subject have been reprinted. Of the smaller downtown theatres in Los Angeles, fully fifty per cent. are running Chaplin subjects every day.

Mr. Lynch, while here, made the announcement that Ralph Quivey, formerly of the San Francisco General Film exchange, has been selected as manager for the San Francisco branch of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay features, and C. B. Pierce will be district manager of the West coast.

FRISCO SCREEN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, April 19.

The first annual election of officers of the Screen Club of San Francisco was held in the splendid new quarters of this organization, on Eddy street, on April 8, when the following were chosen: Sid Grauman, president; Chas. A. Stillwell, vice-president; Joe Huff, treasurer, and Ralph Marks, secretary.

The board of directors is composed of A. Goldberg, Tom North, Sol Lesser, H. J. Gosliner, Leon Boreis, O. V. Traggardh and N. K. Herzog.

Following the election of officers a collation was served and the evening was spent in a highly enjoyable manner. The membership of the club is expected to grow rapidly, now that a permanent home has been fitted up, and an active campaign for new members is to be inaugurated. The club is to be incorporated and placed upon a sound basis without delay.

NEVA GERBER STARRED IN HER FIRST MUTUAL PICTURE

Neva Gerber, the beautiful and talented young woman who is the most recent addition to the acting force at the American studios in Santa Barbara, makes her first appearance in a Mutual play in "Life's Staircase," a production made by the Beauty Company under the direction of Frank Cooley.

This picture is allegorical. Excellent effects, obtained through double and triple exposure, a form of photography the American Company has frequently used with success, figure in the drama. A special staircase and other sizable settings were specially constructed for use in this production.

MASON HOPPER JOINS WORLD COMEDY STARS

E. Mason Hopper is a new director for World Comedy Stars. He was formerly with the Essanay and Pathé companies and has probably written and directed more of this kind of comedy than any other man in the business. He has been associated with the theatre nearly all of his life, and only five years ago took up motion picture directing as a profession. For four years he wrote and directed Essanay comedies, arranging the famous Sweedie series. For them he also directed the first seven of the George Ade fables.

FAHRNEY WILL DIRECT MINA IN LOS ANGELES

The manufacturers of the MinA brand of comedies have re-engaged Milton H. Fahrney as director in their Los Angeles studios.

At the time MinA films were made in the East, Mr. Fahrney served as chief director, but when the producing company was moved to the coast he found it impossible to accompany the force because of previously made arrangements that necessitated his stay in New York.

These plans fulfilled, Mr. Fahrney accepted the offer to return to MinA. He will begin work at once.

SENNETT DIRECTING STERLING IN KEYSTONE

Ford Sterling started recently on the first one-reel release that he has made since his return to the Keystone company. Mack Sennett, managing director of the company, took personal charge of the picture.

Both Sterling and Sennett have been occupied with the new six-reel feature which is now nearly completed, and this sensational release will soon be officially announced.

ILMER WILL PLAY ALHAMBRA HEAVIES

A recent addition to the Alhambra Motion Picture Company producing dramas de luxe under the directorship of Lloyd B. Carleton at Santa Barbara is Herman Ilmer.

Mr. Ilmer is assistant to Mr. Carleton and plays the heavies. This is his first experience in motion picture work, after a long and successful career in the legitimate.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XIII

W. W. Hodkinson, Whose Activities as the Guiding Spirit of Paramount Pictures Corporation Have Placed Him in the Front Rank of Film Men, Declares That the Weak Spot of the Industry Is Distribution—Easy Enough to Make Meritorious Subjects; The Thing Is to Market Them with Efficiency

HOW pictures are distributed, the machinery and policy of the exchange end of the motion picture industry, is the chief concern of W. W. Hodkinson, founder, president and active head of Paramount Pictures Corporation. Like young Lochinvar, Mr. Hodkinson came out of the West—San Francisco—to be specific.

Though his errand was not a sentimental one, his steed, or whatever the motive power of his progress may be, seems to be the best. For in only a little more than six months, Paramount Pictures Corporation has established an enviable record for efficiency, for its attitude toward exhibitors and for quality of pictures.

But Mr. Hodkinson's acquaintance with the motion picture business is much older than the Paramount Pictures Corporation. It dates back seven years, through a successful record as exchange man on the Pacific coast. It was this long experience which laid the foundation for Mr. Hodkinson's germinal idea, from which Paramount grew, and grew rapidly, and with dignity and solidity.

"The articles from representative men in the film business on 'Weak Spots in a Strong Business' have been read with considerable interest by me," said Mr. Hodkinson, "and, in the main, I agree with them, and appreciate their attitude.

"The distribution of the manufactured product is what I regard as the weakest spot in the motion picture business. My experiences during the past seven years are responsible for this opinion. The manufacture of good pictures is not the great problem or mystery of today.

"Frequently really meritorious pictures are brought to us by persons so inexperienced in the business that they have no idea as to how their product will be marketed. The great mystery used to be how to make good pictures, but now the essential problem is how to get back the cost of production, and a reasonable profit, after the pictures are produced.

Sees Contraction Tendency

"A recent editorial in MOTION PICTURE NEWS mentioned the fact that fifty-seven concerns handling feature pictures went out of business during the year 1914. This means that the motion picture business has reached the end of its rope as a get-rich-quick proposition, whereby anybody could make pictures and sell them to a rapidly expanding market.

"The limit of this expansion has been reached and contraction is the order of the day. Large theatres are superseding small ones all over the country, and consequently one service is sufficient where several were required before. In addition, the larger and better theatres change their programs less frequently, thus making fewer pictures necessary.

"It is only by a definite marketing plan and an efficient organization, whereby superior films can be separated from the inferior product, and surrounded by advertising aids, that the confidence of the exhibitors and the public can be secured. That this has not been accomplished earlier is one of the weak spots of the business, because only by such means will it be possible to market films in the future. This is particularly true of the feature films, which represent a considerable investment on the part of the maker.

"A flexible distributing policy, whereby the utmost returns can be obtained from each picture, is necessary. This is what Paramount stands for. By that I mean that our prices for Paramount pictures are adjusted to the ability of the exhibitors and never are and never will be prohibitive.

"The biggest exhibitor in the largest city can secure Paramount pictures, sufficiently meritorious to make his theatre distinctive. Also—the smallest exhibitor in the poorest little hamlet can afford to show Paramount pictures, for our marketing system is elastic enough to include both. Of course, the little fellow can't afford to show Paramount pictures on their first run, but we decrease the rental price little by little until the time comes when he can afford them.

"That the price is decreased little by little is the important feature. Paramount has been in existence only about seven months, and its first releases have not yet been decreased in price sufficiently to meet the purse of the exhibitor in the towns of five hundred persons. But, by and by, they will be reasonable enough for even that exhibitor, and then he can show, in his little theatre, the same pictures which have won recognition in the largest theatres all over the country.

Good Effects of Sliding Scale

"By working this declining scale of prices very gradually we not only increase the number of possible customers, but we also lengthen the life of the film. The life of a film used to be set at sixty days. On program pictures, as some concerns handle them, the life of a picture is only about six months. But the life of a Paramount feature we expect will be from a year and a half to two years. Thus we increase our income from each subject and also enable the smallest exhibitor to show our pictures.

"We do not intend to keep Paramount pictures out of any town because they are too expensive. We want to help even the little fellows make money, and we feel that the good done by helping the little fellow is valuable missionary work. For if he makes money in a small theatre he will be encouraged to open a larger theatre, then he can afford to pay more. So this policy really benefits the entire industry.

"I feel that the feature film business, conducted by random bookings on individual pictures of different degrees of merit and varying prices, is not a feasible proposition, nor is it good business.

"I believe that it is absolutely necessary for this business to be handled along the lines originated by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, whereby the exhibitor deals on a basis which assures him a continuous supply of high grade pictures at a definite price, giving the booking concern and the manufacturers a larger net rental than would be possible if it were necessary for the latter to expand a considerable sum making bookings at random, and being unable at times to book perfectly good subjects because the open dates on such subjects and the open dates in the theatres do not coincide.

Distribution 90 Per Cent. of Problem

"Recently I heard Hugh Chalmers review the early history of the automobile business, and he closed his remarks by saying that success in that industry today depended largely upon the efficiency with which the product is distributed. He expressed the belief that distribution is 90 per cent. of the problem.

"The history of the picture business has been very similar to that of the automobile business. They have been the two fastest growing lines of industry the world has ever known. In the early days of the automobile business conditions surrounding that industry were chaotic and concerns were forming and going out of business continually and, as Mr. Chalmers also stated, the whole business was looked upon with suspicion by the reputable bankers of the country, who refused to lend their aid for its development to the same extent that they would lend it to more conservative lines. The picture business is having a similar experience at the present time."

LUBIN PLANS BIG COMEDY STUDIO IN SOUTH

Siegmund Lubin, head of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to inspect his Southern studio and arrange plans for the summer. Mr. Lubin intends to establish in Jacksonville on of the biggest comedy studios in the country.

Work on this has already begun. The studio there has just been overhauled and enlarged, and two comedy companies are working there at present, one headed by Billy Reeves, the famous English comedian and pantomimist, and the other by Jack Tucker, the comedian, writer and artist. Mr. Lubin plans to send a number of other prominent comedians to Jacksonville within the next few weeks.

RUSSIA BANS SHIPMENT OF FILMS BY PARCEL POST

A Russian customs circular, dated September 17 (30), 1914, prohibits the importation by post of parcels containing manufactures of celluloid (including cinematograph films). All articles of celluloid so shipped, even if packed in wooden containers, are liable to confiscation, according to the "Daily Consular Reports."

Bushman Resigns from Essanay for Metro Contract

Actor Will Soon Leave Chicago for Los Angeles to Appear in Quality Brand Scheduled for Release Beginning About June 15

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN, whose association with the Essanay company, of Chicago, will terminate May 1, has placed his name to a long-term contract to appear exclusively on the program of the Metro Pictures Corporation, under the brand name of Quality films, which will be released at an average of one production per month.

No little surprise was occasioned by the announcement in the trade that Mr. Bushman was to sever his connections with Essanay and cast his lot with Metro. Rumors regarding Mr. Bushman's future have been current for some little time.

It was thought that when May 1 approached he would renew the contract with his old concern, but it is understood that Mr. Bushman, sought after by almost every big manufacturer in the industry, selected Metro, owing to its plan and methods of operation.

Richard A. Rowland and Joseph Engel, acting for the Metro Pictures Corporation, consummated the deal through Fred J. Balshoffer, who, as directing head and president of the Quality Pictures Corporation, under which title the Bushman pictures will be released, early next week at Chicago.

Mr. Bushman is now working on his final picture with Essanay, and will leave for Los Angeles May 2, going direct and taking with him his complete equipment of pets, wardrobe and paraphernalia, including four horses, two motor cars and twelve hundred singing canaries.

That Mr. Bushman is fond of, and a great collector of Hartz Mountain singing birds, is not well known, but he is the possessor of the biggest collection in the United States and rarely moves for a long period to any place that he does not take a number of the birds with him.

It will require a private sleeping car and a 60-foot baggage car to transport the star and his belongings to Los Angeles.

Under the name of Quality films the pictures in which Metro will present Bushman, a policy of one production a month will be followed, and nothing but the biggest and most powerful of dramatic pieces will be selected for Bushman's use.

The Metro Pictures Corporation already controls a large number of plays and fiction works, which will be turned over to Mr. Balshoffer, and these will be used entirely for Bushman.

Mr. Balshoffer is now in the East on a still hunt for a leading woman to work opposite Bushman. He has been interviewing a number of prominent picture actresses and stage stars, and says he will continue until he gets the perfect type of ingenue to harmonize with his big male star.

The first Quality production to be released on the Metro program will, in all probability, be seen about June 15, and from that date forward the releases will occur on an average of every five weeks.

The contract between the Quality Pictures Corporation and Mr. Bushman is for a long period of years, and is said to be quite the most liberal ever tendered a male star by a producing company.

Mr. Balshoffer is now making his offices at the Metro Pictures Corporation, 1465 Broadway.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN AND FRED J. BALSHOFFER SIGNING THE CONTRACT THAT MAKES MR. BUSHMAN A METRO STAR

ANSON JOINS MOROSCO RANKS

A. E. Anson, an English actor, who went direct to the coast from a long engagement in the New theatre, New York, and who played the name part in the Fiction Pictures production of "The Taming of Red Butte Western," is a new member of the Bosworth-Morosco stock company.

Frank Mills has been engaged by the Fiction Pictures and will play his first lead opposite Winifred Kingston, in the film version of the Louis Joseph Vance story, "No Man's Land," to be produced by Wilfred Lucas.

Mr. Mills is best known for his work in the original stage production of "Bought and Paid For," where he appeared in the leading part.

TRANT CONTRACTS WITH FOX FOR SCENARIOS

William Fox has just signed a contract with Joseph H. Trant, who is to write for the Fox Film Corporation the scenarios for a series of features, the exact nature of which is for the present being held a secret.

Before joining the Fox forces Mr. Trant was scenario writer-in-chief for the Vitagraph and several other concerns, for which he produced some of their most notable successes.

"Pop" Lubin Feted by Dramatic and Musical Critics

Dinner at Hotel Majestic, Philadelphia, in His Honor, Under Auspices of George Rogers, Who Afterwards Visits Lubin Ranch with Colleagues

THE dramatic and musical critics of Philadelphia gave a dinner at the Hotel Majestic in Philadelphia this week in honor of Siegmund Lubin, head of the Lubin Manufacturing Company. The critics have an association, and recently Mr. Lubin entertained them at his studio and gave them an opportunity of seeing the inner workings of the big Lubin film plant.

George Rogers, of the Philadelphia "Inquirer," president of the association, paid a splendid tribute to Mr. Lubin for the work the latter has accomplished in the moving picture industry, and then "Pop" was persuaded to make a speech. It wasn't a regulation after-dinner speech, but a sort of informal heart-to-heart talk on moving pictures. Mr. Lubin told them of his early struggles, of his failures and successes, of what he was doing today, and what he hoped to accomplish in the future.

The critics asked many questions, and Mr. Lubin answered them; they offered, in an informal sort of way, many suggestions for the improvement of pictures in general, and Mr. Lubin told them frankly whether the suggestions were practical or not.

The discussion was an interesting one from many angles, and it was a means of bringing the head of the Lubin Company and the critics into a much closer personal relationship, and will no doubt result in much good.

In the near future Mr. Lubin will entertain the critics at his ranch at Betzwood, Pa., where they will have an opportunity of not only seeing out-of-door pictures produced, but of inspecting the big developing and printing plants and the laboratories where the experimenting is done.

"DIAMOND" CREATES STIR AMONG EXHIBITORS

Many Managers Are so Impressed with the Novelty of the $20,000 Prize Play, Produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company, at the First Private Showing in New York That They Practically Book It in the Projection Room

SCENES FROM THE FIRST THREE CHAPTERS OF "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

SHOWN TO THE TRADE IN ALL THE LEADING EXCHANGE CENTERS OF THE COUNTRY THIS WEEK

THE invited audience, comprised mainly of prominent New York exhibitors, who gathered to witness the first three chapters of "The Diamond from the Sky," were enthusiastic on the completion of the seven reels forming this part of the continued photoplay. Many of them booked it then and there, following the example set by their brother exhibitors after the premiere Chicago exhibition.

Similar trade performances were given throughout the country prior to the release of the first chapter of "The Diamond from the Sky," for it was the policy of John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Corporation, and S. S. Hutchinson, treasurer, to extend to all exhibitors the privilege of seeing the picture before signing up. Both these men were present at the showing in the American theatre, New York, and expressed themselves as more than pleased with the results of their policy.

The feeling of confidence which these preliminary exhibitions instilled in the minds of exhibitors was sufficient to insure large bookings on the picture, for actual proof that the story is as good as advertised accompanied each performance.

Anxious to Learn Author's Name

Many who saw the first seven reels at the New York exhibition were extremely anxious to learn the identity of the author of this picturized romantic novel. His name, or perhaps it's her's, is not to be disclosed until May 3, the release day of the first three reels. Mr. Freuler went no further than to say that the author was prominent in both literary and motion-picture fields, and that when the name was announced it would create a great surprise.

Suffice it to say that the pleasing effect created by the first three chapters, as regards the realism and even continuity of theme, the excellently conceived situations, and the clever contrasts of drama and comedy, very often intermingled with logically brought about thrills, well substantiates Mr. Freuler's statement regarding the capability and prominence of the mysterious author.

On the appearance of the story in its picturized form, it will also run serially in many leading papers throughout the country. Both the picture and the novel will tally exactly in regard to action, as the author and scenario writer have long been busy collaborating on the work.

Originality Impresses Spectators

The general impression conveyed to the audience by the first chapters was one of startling originality. It gripped one from the start; one could almost read it as reading a smoothly written "best seller." The cast, headed by Lottie Pickford and Irving Cummings, rendered most pleasing performances. The selection of correct types seems to have been particularly attended to.

The two big thrillers which appear in the third chapter almost exceed the fondest expectations, and seemingly outdo the highest praise of the loquacious press agent. Mr. Cumming's race with the express train, capped by his act of crossing the track ahead of the onrushing engine, barely clearing it, is wonderfully executed in every detail.

Following this, one of the best dare-devil and sensational stunts ever pictured is performed by Mr. Cummings. He is speeding wildly along the road in a low racing car, when a sharp turn catches him unawares. The car dashes over the edge of the road, to crash over a perpendicularly receding embankment.

Below is a river, which at that place widens into a lake. As the car plunges from the road into midair, Mr. Cummings jumps, landing safely in the water only a few yards from the car.

This scene has been wonderfully well done, the camera missed nothing, and everyone connected with it is to be congratulated, with Mr. Cummings receiving the lion's share.

The first three chapters have brought forward proof conclusive that "The Diamond from the Sky" is an unusual picture. It seems fair to predict further stirring and magnetic chapters, as the second two have proved more than a mere "flash in the pan."

From every angle "The Diamond from the Sky" has been handled with an obvious use of brains. It should in reality prove a diamond from the sky to the exhibitor who books it.

JOHN CORT SIGNS THE CASTLES FOR DRAMATIC PRODUCTION

Exhibitors who have been interested in the filming of "The Melting Pot," in which Walker Whiteside is appearing for the Cort Film Corporation, will be interested to learn that John Cort, who is at the head of the corporation, this week signed contracts with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle whereby those exponents of the art of modern dancing will appear in a big dramatic film, which will be released under his name.

While Mr. and Mrs. Castle have appeared before the camera previously, this will be their first appearance on the screen in a film which tells a story. The title of the picture has not yet been decided upon, but the story will deal with polite society albeit the trend will be toward the melodramatic.

Mr. Cort is already looking about for a strong cast of well-known photoplay actors with which he will surround the Castles in this picture. Work on the picture will start about June 1.

ANN MURDOCK ENGAGED BY METRO

Ann Murdock, at present playing one of the most important parts in the Belasco-Frohman revival of "A Celebrated Case," at the Empire theatre, New York, and well remembered as the charming star of Henry W. Savage's comedy, "Excuse Me," which ran for two years at the Gaiety theatre,

ANN MURDOCK

New York, has been secured by the Metro Pictures Corporation for appearance in her former great success, "The Royal Family," which will be turned over to one of the producing companies allied with Metro. The agreement between Metro and Miss Murdock calls for her exclusive appearance in Metro pictures.

"The Royal Family" is a former Frohman success and will admirably suit Miss Murdock as a screen vehicle.

Work will begin on the Murdock pictures within a few weeks and the feature will be released early in July.

HORSLEY RETURNS FROM PACIFIC COAST

David Horsley, president of the Centaur Film Company, arrived in New York on Thursday from Los Angeles to take up several important business matters.

He expects to remain in the East only long enough to dispose of these matters and will then return to Los Angeles to supervise the completion of his new studios.

ANNA LUTHER IS NOW A SELIG STAR

Anna Luther, the well known motion picture star, left New York City for the Pacific Coast last week, where she will join the Selig Polyscope Company. Miss Luther has won an enviable reputation in the silent drama.

Detroit Exhibitors' Ball Not "Starlit," But a Success

Screen Stellar Lights, Except One, Stay Away from First Annual Ball of League, But 1,200 Guests Are Too Merry to Worry

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, Mich., April 17.

THE 1,200 people who attended the first annual ball of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, at the Arcadia, Thursday evening, April 15, did so for the purpose of seeing the half dozen or so screen stars as announced and advertised.

They were disappointed in that respect, however, as the only star who personally appeared was Richard C. Travers, of the Essanay company. He was in Detroit all day. During the afternoon he personally appeared at the Empire theatre, where he gave a 15-minute talk every two hours.

His talk was thoroughly enjoyed, and patrons of the Empire considered it a treat to be able to gaze upon a real screen star. In the evening he was at the screen ball. His stay in Detroit was made a treat by A. J. Gillingham, owner of the Empire and manager of the Detroit branch of the General Film Company. To Mr. Gillingham goes the credit of being the first exhibitor in the state to have a prominent film star appear on the stage of his theatre.

The ball was a delightful affair from start to finish, even though the stars and other things advertised did not "show up." The hall was appropriately decorated for the dance, with specially constructed boxes on the sides and in the balcony. These were all taken. One box was occupied by the mayor, Oscar B. Marx, another by John H. Kunsky and George W. Trendle, and their families, while other prominent men occupied the remainder.

Dancing was started at nine p. m. and lasted until one p. m. The orchestra, which consisted of fifteen pieces, was on a stage hidden by palms. It played everything that was worth while. The grand march started at eleven p. m. and was led by the mayor and his wife, followed by Mr. Travers. Also present at the ball were most of the members of Al Jolson's "Dancing Around" company, which happened to be playing that night at the Garrick theatre. Many people mistook the visiting players for screen stars.

The executive and reception committees, comprising the leading exhibitors in the city, were on hand, with their families. They wore ribbons on their coats bearing the words executive and reception, respectively. They were very busy all evening seeing that everybody who came had a good time.

"Jarr Family" Series Increases in Popularity

Judgment of Vitagraph in Bringing Out McCardell Stories in Films Confirmed by Demand of Newspaper Reading Public, Who Want Favorite Characters Picturized

EVER since the Vitagraph company released "The Jarr Family Discovers Harlem," the first of Roy L. McCardell's episodes, relating to the domestic troubles of the famous Jarr family, the visualization of his stories on the screen have become more popular, if anything, than when published in the newspapers where they were originally offered the public.

It is seeing Mr. McCardell's well-known characters in action that makes the photoplay attractive, and the announcement of a new picture in the series is sure of a hearty welcome.

Following "The Jarr Family Discovers Harlem," "Mr. Jarr Brings Home a Turkey," "Mr. Jarr and the Lady Reformer," "Mr. Jarr Takes a Night Off," and "Mr. Jarr's Magnetic Friend," were released in rapid succession, every release making a distinctive hit.

Harry Davenport is the director for the Jarr family's activity on the screen. Associated with him in their enactment are Rose Tapley as Mrs. Jarr, Paul Kelly as Willie Jarr, Audrey Berry as Emma Jarr, Frank Bunny as Fritz and Charles Eldridge as Jabez Smith, the boss; Mr. Davenport impersonating Mr. Jarr.

As a matter of fact, the Vitagraph company struck such a popular note in its production of this celebrated Jarr series, it has become incumbent upon them to release one each week. To meet this demand, Mr. Davenport has just completed "The Jarr's Visit Arcadia," which is scheduled for release May 10 and is at work on "Mr. Jarr and the Dachshund," with "Mr. Jarr Visits His Home Town," "Mrs. Jarr's Auction Bridge," and "Mr. Jarr and the Loving Cup" in preparation, to be released every succeeding Monday of each week.

New Fox-Nance O'Neil Play "Princess Romanoff"

Strong Support of Emotional Actress in Drama of Russian Name and Parisian Atmosphere Includes Jane Miller, Lillian Paige, and Dorothy Bernard

THE title of the photoplay which Frank Powell has been producing for William Fox, in which Nance O'Neil is starred, is, according to the Fox Film Corporation, "Princess Romanoff." In spite of its Russian title, however, most of the action takes place in modern Paris.

The leading part, based upon a character which Miss O'Neil made famous the world over when she was on the speaking stage, affords an opportunity to display her splendid tragic gifts. "Princess Romanoff" has been staged with unusual settings. The boudoir scene and the drawing room scenes, the settings for which alone cost $8,500, are filled with properties, rare pictures and furniture which, in themselves, represent a small fortune.

Supporting Miss O'Neil in "Princess Romanoff" is a cast of great power. It includes Jane Miller, the beautiful young Southern belle, who scored such success in "From the Valley of the Missing," as produced by William Fox; Jane Gordon, Lillian Paige, Jane Havery, Dorothy Bernard, Stuart Holmes and Clifford Bruce.

"SIGN OF THE ROSE" PREMIERE IS A SUCCESS

Ince Feature Is Shown at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and Reflects Credit on the New York Motion Picture Producer—George Beban, Starring in Film Amplification of His Vaudeville Play, Is Supported by Strong Cast—Players Appear in the Flesh at End of the Nine Reels

A UNIQUE combination of the silent and spoken drama was given its premiere at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, Monday evening, April 12, in the presentation of the latest and greatest production of Thomas H. Ince, "The Sign of the Rose," in which Kessel and Baumann of the New York Motion Picture Corporation present George Beban, as the star. It is a nine reel subject ending with a scene in which the players appear in person and continue in the flesh the parts they have created on the screen.

This production and its decidedly novel ending marks a new era in the joining of the two most popular forms of amusement.

The story deals with an Italian ditch digger and is an amplified version of Mr. Beban's vaudeville play that for five consecutive seasons served as this actor's successful vehicle.

It depicts Phil Griswold, a worthless young roue, at the height of a celebration over a prospective inheritance of his late wealthy father inducing his friend Robbins to take from the safe of his employer, a fashionable flower shop keeper, funds necessary to make the revelry even greater.

Griswold's Career and Its Outcome

Robbins leaves the "party" in a private dining room of a fashionable New York cafe, and goes to his employer's office at the flower shop, where he secures the money that young Griswold promises to return two-fold on the morrow.

Amid scenes, indicative of the glamour of New York's gay white way, made possible by gorgeous settings, handsomely gowned women, and the copious flow of wine the party goes merrily on.

To his utter chagrin Phil on the following day learns that he has been cut off with a legacy of one dollar. Simultaneous with this turn of events, Robbins find himself confronted with the highly difficult problem of balancing his cash.

The two youths are consequently plunged into an embarrassing dilemma. Phil goes to his brother William, who received the bulk of the estate, for financial assistance and is refused aid.

While in the elegantly furnished home of William, Phil is inspired with a plan to get the money, by his little niece's perceptible fear of Pietro, an Italian (Mr. Beban) who is delivering a Christmas tree for William's little daughter.

Absorption of the Plot

With the departure of the Italian Phil kidnaps Dorothy, his niece, in the hope of extorting ten thousand dollars from her parents. Suspicion falls on Pietro, and in searching the Italian quarter for the ditch digger, William's automobile runs down and kills Rosa, the motherless child of Pietro. It is Phil's plan to disguise Robbins as the blackhand artist and thereby obtain the money at the flower shop by "the sign of a rose."

Christmas morning William decides to enlist the services of the police, and detectives are assigned to the flower shop, mentioned in the blackhand note. This prevents Robbins from carrying out his part.

Pietro, burdened with sorrow, wanders aimlessly about the streets and entering the flower shop to secure a rose for his Rosa, becomes the victim of circumstantial evidence.

The culmination is a happy one from an artistic standpoint, being so vividly portrayed by the powerful characterizations by Mr. Beban and his associate players.

The photoplay is a marvel for character delineation, beautiful with gorgeous and realistic settings, and strengthened by perfectly logical continuity, well sustained suspense, and "kidnapper" scenes of New York's Italian quarters. Attention to infinite detail is apparent in every scene of the nine reels and the production as a whole is a work of art.

Supporting Mr. Beban is a splendid cast in which two child actresses are conspicuous. Blanche Schwed, age ten years, appears as Rosa, the ditch digger's daughter, and gives a most praiseworthy performance. Little four-year-old Thelma Salter, is Dorothy, the captivating daughter of the wealthy family.

The part of Phil Griswold was played by Jack Nelson successfully, with Jack Davidson as Robbins giving a good portrayal. Those appearing in the silent and spoken section, besides Mr. Beban and Little Thelma, were Howard Ginn as William Griswold, Andrea Lynne as Mrs. Griswold, W. J. Kane as Lynch, the detective, and Edith McBride, cashier of the flower shop.

All were convincing in their respective parts, and their work adds much to the production.

The presentation was fittingly made. The patrons were presented with roses by flower girls at the entrances. A special musical score was prepared by Manager Lloyd Brown and the orchestra conductor, Carli D. Elinor, consisting of one hundred and sixty melodies with the Roman serenade "Mandolinata," as a theme.

The musical program of the thirty-piece orchestra was augmented by bits of vocal selections rendered at apt moments.

Leading Film Folk at Premiere

The premiere brought together the leading people of Los Angeles film colony, and scores of representatives of the "legitimate" stage, making this a most notable gathering.

The entire house was sold out and hundreds turned away, which indicates that this will prove a most successful attraction to follow the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," which ran nine weeks to capacity business during the entire period.

The prices for "The Sign of the Rose" are the same as for the previous attraction which had set a new mark on the West Coast.

PORTLAND LEAGUE MOVES

The Portland (Oregon) Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has moved from its former quarters, in the Majestic theatre building, into new and more roomy quarters in the Commercial Club building, a more centrally located spot.

Myrtle Tannehill and Wilmuth Merkyl with Kalem

Players Will Be Featured in Three-Act "Broadway Favorites" Productions—Actress Appeared with William Gillette and in "Cabbage Patch"

MYRTLE TANNEHILL and Wilmuth Merkyl have been added to the ranks of stars to be featured in Kalem's three-act "Broadway Favorite" productions. This is in line with the announcement issued by Kalem a few weeks ago.

Miss Tannehill has been identified with some of the great Broadway successes. Miss Tannehill made good from the day she decided upon the stage as a career. Her first season as a professional was with no less a star than William Gillette, in "The Admirable Crichton." She next appeared in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." This was followed by a role in "Just Out of College," in which she appeared with Max Figman.

Miss Tannehill later played the leading role in "Broadway Jones," at the George Cohan theatre. "Snobs" afforded her another opportunity to display her histrionic ability. Then came her appearance in one of the principal roles in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

After scoring in "The Girl of the Golden West," Miss Tannehill, as the result of her pleasing impersonations in the foregoing productions, was sent to London. There she repeated her American triumphs at the Theatre Royal, the Drury Lane.

More recently, Miss Tannehill scored on Broadway when she appeared in "A Pair of Sixes," which was staged at the Longacre theatre. It was just after she closed with this show that Kalem secured her for one of the three-act "Broadway Favorites" productions. The name of the photoplay in which Miss Tannehill is to appear will be announced shortly.

Like Miss Tannehill, Mr. Merkyl has long been associated with successful Broadway productions. The vehicle selected for Mr. Merkyl's screen appearance is John A. Stevens' famous drama, "Wife for Wife."

PHOTOPLAY LEAGUE PLAN TRIP FOR SELIG VISITORS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 19.

Learning that a number of scenario writers and press men will take advantage of the Selig Exposition Flyer to California in July, President Frank E. Woods and members of the Photoplay Authors' League have already begun making plans for the entertainment of the visitors.

The matter was taken up at the annual meeting of the league, when practically all local members were present. All were unanimously in favor of a picnic at one of the numerous beaches about Los Angeles, as a portion of the entertainment.

In addition there will be an open guests' meeting of the league, and it is very possible an excursion to a number of the studios will be given. It is understood that the Selig Special will remain at Los Angeles for several days and the photoplaywrights expect to see that there are no dull moments for the excursionists.

ROLFE PRODUCING IN CENTAUR STUDIOS

The Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., is producing at the studios of the Centaur Film Company, Bayonne, N. J., a multiple reel dramatic subject called "The Flaming Sword," in which Jane Grey, late star of "Kick In," and Lionel Barrymore, who has been seen in many screen successes, are featured.

Miss Diestel, late of the Edison company, is cast for the heavy leads. Mrs. E. Middleton and Glenn White also have principal parts. The company, which is directed by E. Middleton, with F. Champury as technical director, has just returned from Portland, Me., after several weeks' work taking outdoor scenes.

MARIAN SWAYNE STARS IN "THE WINNING LOSER"

Marian Swayne, leading lady and ingenue for the Empress pictures on the United program, combines all the intelligence of a woman with brains and the gentleness, ingenuity and attractiveness of the little person with five feet two of loveliness that she is.

Marian Swayne is small and slender, and there is an impetuous charm of manner about her which endears her to every one she meets. It was this very attractiveness which gave to her the distinction of being chosen by James Montgomery Flagg out of hundreds of applicants to impersonate "Kitty Cobb" in the filmization of the series of newspaper pictures made by him under the title of "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb," which has recently been produced.

One of the most attractive of the later pictures in which Miss Swayne will appear is "The Winning Loser," a fascinating story of a girl society newspaper reporter and the wealthy young hero who falls in love with her, and wins her only after he has been injured in a race which he entered for her sake.

AUGUST AND BAILEY WILL CO-STAR IN PYRAMID

Edwin August and Bill Bailey will co-direct and co-star in the new Pyramid pictures now in course of production at the Smallwood studios, in Cliffside, N. J.

Mr. Smallwood has also arranged for the two well-known leading ladies, Iva Sheppard, late of the Universal and Famous Players Pictures, and Ruth Blair, to appear in the same productions with Edwin August and Bill Bailey.

With this strong company of players, which also includes Harry Mainhall, late of the Essanay company, Pyramid one and two-reel productions promise to do much in helping the United program in its fight to raise the standard of short-story pictures. That it will succeed goes without saying.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. MARY PICKFORD REVUE PROVES DRAWING CARD

ELEVEN thousand six hundred and eight paid admissions were secured at the Woodley theatre, Los Angeles, not long ago, when the total cost of film rent mounted to fifteen dollars and the advertising for the program totaled $298.43. The special attraction was a "Mary Pickford Revue," which consisted of the showing of five reprints from old Biograph subjects. The 100 twenty-four sheet stands and all newspaper and slide advertising contained the following:

Mary Pickford Revue

A selection by herself of the subjects that made her famous.

Produced by

D. W. Griffith

The supporting casts include Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet, Arthur Johnson, Mack Sennett, The Gish girls and Mae Marsh.

The offering consisted of five reels of the following subjects: "The New York Hat," "Wilful Peggy," "All on Account of the Milk," "Iola's Promise," and "Lena and the Geese." The scenario for the latter subject was written by Miss Pickford.

The idea was conceived by Seth Perkins, manager of the Woodley theatre, and he is authority for the statement that it brought the greatest business of any week in the history of the theatre. So successful was the revue that additional subjects were shown later on under the same heading. The prices for the week were the same as usual, ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents.

FEATURES BRING OUT THE CROWDS

REPORTS from practically all of the 170 motion picture theatres of Cleveland bring the information that feature films are extremely popular with the majority of the patrons of these houses.

With few exceptions, every picture play house in Cleveland is booking at least one feature film a week, in addition to the other releases—Mutual, United, Metro, Paramount, General, Kriterion and Universal. A small number use three and four features weekly, while between ten and twelve use features only.

For the week of April 11 the leading theatres had these bookings: Alhambra, Universal submarine set for the entire week; Duchess, Metro feature; "The Cowboy and the Lady"; Standard, "The Christian"; Knickerbocker, Paramount; Reel, Paramount and other features; Dreamland, Mutual masterpieces. All of them have one general feature to attract patrons—Chaplin films, all of which have attained great popularity in Cleveland.

The Standard is charging twenty-five cents for "The Christian," something unheard of before here with the exception of "Neptune's Daughter," "Ben Hur" and "Cabiria," all of which were shown in the big houses. Outside of these big films the maximum seat price has never run over twenty cents.

PRICE IS NOTHING IF THE PICTURE IS GOOD

MANAGER C. A. McFARLAND, of the Queen, Houston, Texas, recently gave out an interesting interview to the Houston "Post" for its motion picture page, in which he said that the growing demand from Houstonians for better pictures and especially for feature films of four, five and six parts, had induced him to offer a series of Mutual Masterpieces, beginning with "The Outcast." He said he was going to keep this policy up, also.

"We find that it pays to give a smashing feature—even if the prices are boosted up a little," Manager McFarland said. "We heard many favorable comments on 'The Outcast,' and the success of this picture has told us that the theatre-goers of this city want these big pictures. Well, all I've got to say is, that we're going to give them if they can possibly be secured."

PEARCE BELIEVES IN THE FEATURE FILM

"IT is absolutely impossible to try to foist fictitious advertising on the public, and still expect to get a crowd," remarked J. E. Pearce, the New Orleans head of the Pearce interests and one of the biggest men in the exhibition game, to the NEWS correspondent the other day. "You must have the feature film to bring them out," he continued, "for the old gag won't work any more.

"I don't believe that you can 'fool the whole public part of the time,' not the least bit, and especially has this been demonstrated at New Orleans, Lake Charles and Vicksburg, our three operating centers. Every big feature that comes to the Pearce theatres is first viewed in our demonstration room at the Trianon theatre, if there exists the least doubt that it is a big feature. If other exhibitors tried the same policy, they would find it pays to give your audiences only the highest class stuff."

PITTSBURGH SUBURB THEATRE GOES TO 20 CENTS

THE Cameraphone Theatre in East Liberty, one of the suburbs of Pittsburgh, has changed its tactics and is now charging twenty cents admission. The management, H. B. Kester, is one of the wide-awake picture theatre men in that section.

Regardless of the fact that other theatres in the section were charging five cents he went ahead and billed some of the biggest features he could secure and raised the price to ten cents.

Then he was able to secure bigger and better pictures and again raised the price. This time it went to twenty cents, and he stated as he was doing bigger and better business at the new price he would maintain the new high figure.

He has booked all of the big ones of the Fox Film Corporation and the World Film Corporation, and is looking for other fields to conquer. He says there is no time like the present, and he backs up his thinking by acting to the extent that he has had his house crowded to its doors at twenty cents per, while the fellows in the neighborhood are doing little at five cents.

ASKS PUBLIC TO PHONE FOR SCHEDULE EVERY DAY

WHEN a manager has succeeded in making his telephone number and business as well known to the general public as Pear's Soap he has certainly succeeded as an exhibitor. And this has been the result achieved by the management of the Empire, one of Alabama's largest and most progressive theatres, situated in Birmingham.

Every press notice, every squib that appears in the local newspaper, whether it is a life sketch of Charlie Chaplin or a notice of the next day's program, ends with the line "phone 1700 for schedule every day." The formula never varies: "phone 1700 for schedule every day."

Now it's so graven on the minds of the public that they would miss it if they didn't read that line at their breakfast table each morning.

NEW GAME FOR ENERGETIC CHILDREN

MANAGER SHRODE, of the Rex theatre, Hopkinsville, Ky., is using a novel scheme to advertise his house. He has distributed several hundred fly swatters to the children of the city and offers a ticket of admission to each child who turns in a certain number of dead flies.

New Manager at U City Plans Many Innovations

Changes in Scenario Department Will Make Each Script Pass Through Ordeal of Close Scrutiny and Improve All Program Releases—3 Directors Engaged

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 19.

SINCE the arrival of George Magie, new general manager of Universal City and studios, the first of the week, a number of changes have been planned, and arrangements made for the fulfillment of these innovations.

The first general order of the new manager was issued Friday, and provided that all employes work seven days each week for the next four weeks in order that it may be possible to get ahead on releases and relieve the congested condition in the company's factory in the East.

During the week three new directors have been engaged, which increases the staff to twenty-two. In addition to that of H. C. Matthews, who will make juvenile subjects, with Baby Early and Elsie Albert as his principlas, for Universal release, William Robert Daly, formerly of the Imp Company in New York, and Albert Hale, late of Kalem and St. Louis companies, will produce at Universal City.

Mr. Daly will have Fritzi Brunette for his leading woman. She was formerly with the Imp company in New York, where she appeared in one reel comedies and one, two and three reel dramas. Mr. Daly will make dramas of one, two and three reels here.

The Hale company will take up the filming of "Was She a Vampire?" a one-reel subject, scenario of which was written by George E. Hall and Dr. H. G. Stafford. Edna Maison will be the leading woman for this company, Allen Forrest leading man, and Edward Beall, characters and heavies.

The list of Universal directors now includes Sydney Ayres, Hobart Bosworth, Lon Chaney, Al. E. Christie, Jack J. Clark, Allen Curtis, W. R. Daly, Joseph DeGrasse, Francis Ford, Charles Giblyn, Albert W. Hale, Burton King, Robert Z. Leonard, Frank Lloyd, Horace Davey, Roy H. McCray, Murdock MacQuarrie, Henry McRae, the Smalleys, Otis Turner and H. C. Matthews.

Perhaps the most important change is in the scenario department, under the management of Calder Johnstone and the editorship of James Dayton. In the past many of the productions have been made from scenarios written by the directors, and produced before scenarios had been inspected by the department. It will now be necessary to go through the scenario department first, and then be inspected by the business managers of the producing companies, and then to the general manager.

Following acceptance by these parties it will be presented to the director of the producing company, who will have power of rejection. If favorably received it will then be returned to the scenario department and prepared for production.

In the past week a number of additions have been made to the scenario department, in the hope that it will be possible to have two or three scenarios ahead of each director at all times, in order that there may be no delay from a lack of supply, and also that arrangements can be made in advance for all settings and props.

L. V. Jefferson, who has been a free lance writer, contributing to the "Saturday Evening Post," "McClure's" and "Munsey" magazines, will write dramas; Ben Cohn, another free lance writer, will write comedies; and Julian L. LaMothe, who for the past six months has been with the Western Lubin Company, will write dramas. Hugh Weir, of the New York studio scenario department, is here to write feature photoplays.

Ida May Parks, a free lance writer, has also been added to the staff. The other members are Earl R. Dewitt, reader and writer; Dr. H. G. Stafford, reader and writer; Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hall, readers and writers, and Clarence J. Badger, a writer of talent.

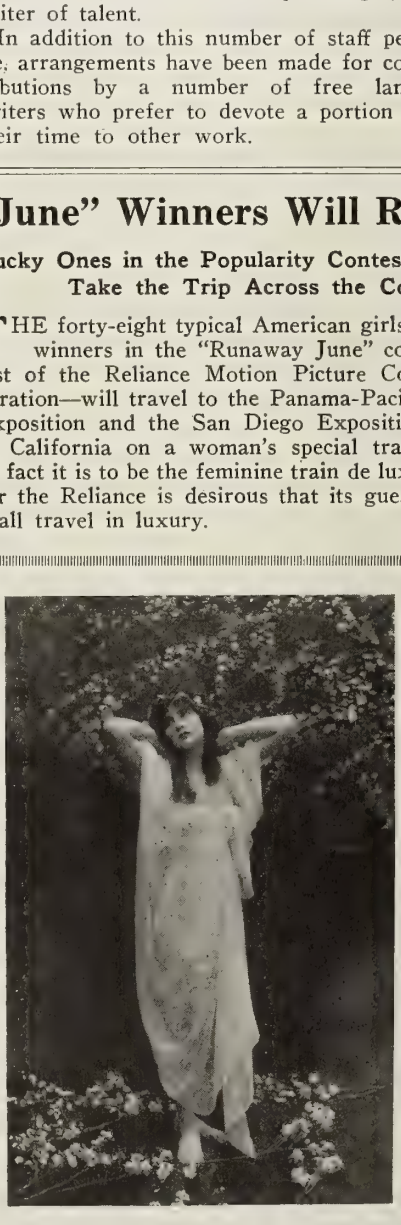
In addition to this number of staff people, arrangements have been made for contributions by a number of free lance writers who prefer to devote a portion of their time to other work.

TRIP TO COLORADO SPRINGS ON SELIG TOUR

Another interesting sidetrip has been added to the Selig Movie Special tour of California, which will start on Thursday, July 8, and continue for seventeen days at the low rate of $128 the round trip including pullman, hotel accommodations, et cetera.

At Colorado Springs the tourists will be permitted to make another sidetrip, if they so desire, to Cripple Creek, and the silver mines. It is a 102-mile ride by railroad along a wonderful scenic route. There will be no extra cost.

BLACKWELL SUCCEEDS PETERS WITH LASKY



The first Lasky offering, with Carlyle Blackwell, will be a film version of the Harold MacGrath story, "The Puppet Crown," in which he will be a co-star with Ina Claire, featured in the Lasky "Wild Goose Chase," recently completed.

Mr. Blackwell has signed a long-time contract with the Lasky company and succeeds House Peters as juvenile leading man of the stock company, who is now leaving.

"June" Winners Will Represent Ideal Womanhood

Lucky Ones in the Popularity Contest Conducted by the Reliance Company, Who Take the Trip Across the Continent Will Be Brilliant Gathering

THE forty-eight typical American girls—winners in the "Runaway June" contest of the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation—will travel to the Panama-Pacific Exposition and the San Diego Exposition in California on a woman's special train. In fact it is to be the feminine train de luxe, for the Reliance is desirous that its guests shall travel in luxury.

GERTRUDE McCOY, ONE OF THE EDISON STARS, IN A CHARMING SCENE FROM "GREATER THAN ART"

So many photoplay theatres have already begun the contest, and so many managers of theatres have asked permission to send certain unsuccessful contestants at the expense of the theatres, that the Reliance is already making arrangements for its special train.

To begin with, the typical American girls—and they'll be typical because photoplay patrons in each state select a winner—are to be enabled to make any toilette they fancy. Manicures, hairdressers, pedicures, massage women, stewardesses and an army of maids will travel on the Reliance train of Pullmans, their services at the free disposal of the prize winners.

After the winners are known their individual tastes will be studied carefully. To gain one of the coveted prizes the contestants must appeal to large bodies of men and women. Hence a winner will be undoubtedly an exceptional person. She may possess great gifts or talents. Some will be musicians, in all probability, some artists, and others splendid cooks. If one of the guests of the Reliance is a musician, she'll find her favorite instrument aboard the train.

Every day while the special is speeding across the continent, there will be afternoon tea at four. In many of the cities through which the typical American girls pass, the municipal officials will be entertained aboard.

Other social functions are being arranged to take place in the train.

All in all, the train which is to take the typical American girls to California, with its complement of maids, manicures, dressmakers, etc., is the distinctive feminine special of the age.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 19.

THERE have been additions to and subtractions from the motion-picture colony here during the past week. Monday two Essanay comedy companies began their first production here, and on the same day Carlyle Blackwell, head of the Favorite Players, contracted with the Lasky company to appear exclusively in Lasky productions.

The Favorite Players have closed, and the studio has been leased for a period of six months to the Albuquerque company which moved there this week.

The invasion of the Essanay companies is to be permanent. G. M. Anderson, manager of the Western producing companies, is to be here within the next few days to make arrangements for the permanent location of at least two companies in Los Angeles, and it is hinted that the Niles studio may be closed at an early date.

Jesse L. Robins will be managing director of the Los Angeles branch, Fritz Wintermier will be manager, and Charley Chaplin will direct one company and Jesse L. Robins another.

L. C. SHUMWAY

Those who came here, beside the above named, are Edna Purviance, Margie Reiger, Bud Jamison, Leo White, Paddy Maguire, Ernest Van Pelt, William Armstrong, Tom Crizer, Harry Pollard, Dan Kelleher, Jack Pollard, H. M. Ensign, William Gorham, William Gordon, Al Griffin and Tom Wilson. M. A. Braslauer will be in charge of the publicity department.

For the present this will leave two companies at the Niles studio, under the direction of G. M. Anderson, which has discontinued the making of Western drama and is now making society drama, and R. C. Clements, who is producing comedies with Messrs. Potel, Todd and Turpin and Margaret Joslin.

Albuquerque Moves

For the present the Essanay Los Angeles companies will occupy a set of offices and dressing rooms and use the stage at the Commercial studio of the Los Angeles Film Company, at 406 Court street.

GENE GAUNTIER IN "HEARTS IN EXILE" (Universal)

The Albuquerque company moved Monday to their new quarters, at 1725 Allesandro street. A lease for six months has been made for this property, including the offices, laboratory and stages, and the company will continue to make one reel of comedy each week, featuring Dot Farley. This week Director G. P. Hamilton is making "She Can't Get Away from It," a comedy, with the principal character, Hattie Green, a money-mad old maid.

The "Black Box" series company under the direction of Otis Turner is now making the final scenes for number thirteen of the fifteenth two-reel releases, and is hoping to be able to complete the remaining two releases by May 1.

Ruth Baldwin, of the Universal West Coast scenario department, who prepared the scripts in collaboration with the director, is still in London, where she is working with E. Phillips Oppenheim, who is novelizing the plots of the pictures. Letters received by friends here state the scenario writer expects to be home by June 1.

MILDRED HARRIS (Reliance-Majestic)

The Bosworth company, filming "Fatherhood," a four-reel subject for the Universal, went to Banning, Cal., the latter part of last week, to make exterior Western scenes for this subject. Included in the party were Joseph Flores, Hart Hoxie, Helen Woolcott, Mrs. Lydia Titus, who have the principal parts, and Ralph Merollo.

Dal Clawson has returned to the Universal company as cameraman for the Smalley company, after photographing two feature productions under the direction of Thomas Ricketts at the American studio at Santa Barbara. Mr. Clawson is now on his third engagement with the Smalleys, having turned the crank for them when they were with the Universal the early part of last year, and gave up an engagement in Paris to return when they began producing for Bosworth, Inc.

Last Scenes of "War" Filmed

The remaining scenes of the five-reel subject showing the horrors of strife between nations and entitled "War," were made last week at the Selig Jungle Zoo, under the direction of E. A. Martin. In the big battle scenes close-up and long-distance views of war, showing all the modern implements for obliterating humanity, together with all present-day tactics of warfare, were filmed. During the day Director E. A. Martin made 1,260 feet of negative, which included thirty-two scenes. This is believed to be a record for negative making in one day.

The theme of this subject revolves about an old inventor and his daughter, played by Edward Wallock and Bessie Eyton. Others playing principal parts are A. D. Blake and Lillian Hayward. The inventor conceives the idea of a new explosive which is more powerful than any now in use, and by its application any nation could obliterate another at a distance of hundreds of miles.

After giving his government a test, showing the strength of the explosive, the inventor falls asleep in his laboratory. In the picture there are one hundred and five dissolve-outs and over-prints, and in many instances the negative film was passed through the camera five times. All of these show modern warfare as the inventor dreams of it.

SPECIAL STREET SET BUILT FOR "A DAUGHTER OF ISRAEL" (Universal)

He views the horrors that his work has wrought and finally he is brought to realize to the fullest what all of his pains have brought when he sees his daughter bending over the body of her husband, who has fallen, and a stray bullet takes her life.

It is following the war scenes that the Christus, played by C. C. Holland, appears with the statement, "I died that men might live, and you have lived that men might die." Awakening from the horrible dream the inventor, after fully realizing that it has been a dream, destroys all pertaining to the making of the explosive, and resolves that neither his government, or any other government, shall know his secret.

Big Scene Appals

One big scene remains to be taken, that of destroying a building in which five hundred troops and women are supposed to be housed. Planted under this building will be two hundred pounds of dynamite and two hundred pounds of black powder. For this subject many articles of modern warfare were specially made, including armored motor trucks. All the late patterns of guns and artillery, both light and heavy, will be seen. Director Martin aims that this shall be a lesson to humanity, teaching the meaning of war.

A one-reel animal drama entitled "In the Amazon Jungle," by Emma Bell, is being made by Director Lewis W. Chaudet. The principals of this subject are William Scott, Harry de Vere, Thomas Bates and Irene Wallace.

Perhaps the largest shipment of animals that has come over the mountains in other than a circus train, was that received last week at the Selig Jungle Zoo. This included bears, kangaroos, tigers, lions, leopards, an elephant, and many different varieties of birds and monkeys. Included in the lot is a black leopard, which is believed to be the only one now in captivity other than in Africa.

Giles Warren, who produced several big subjects for the Selig company at the Chicago studio, including "A Texas Steer" and "Your Girl and Mine," who has been working at the Jungle Zoo for the past two months, has accepted a position on the producing staff of the Reliance and Majestic companies and begins work there this week.

West Directs "Mating"

The most expensive interior scene built at the N. Y. P. M. studio, or for that matter any other of the Los Angeles producing studios, is that of the interior showing three sets, main floor and gallery of the United States Senate, which has been photographed for the Mutual Master-Picture subject under the direction of Reginald Barker and supervision of Thomas H. Ince. This is a powerful political story, entitled "The Man from Oregon," with a woman as its central figure, and the stars are Clara Williams and Howard Hickman, the latter playing the name role.

Two other big subjects are under way, and between the three, Managing-Director Ince is made a very busy man.

Raymond B. West is directing "The Mating," which will offer Bessie Barriscale in comedy drama of co-educational college life, with Lewis J. Cody in opposite lead.

The third big production being made will serve as a medium for the debut of Henry Woodruff as an Inceville star. The title of this is "The Beckoning Flame." The scenes are laid in East India, and required the building of a number of streets and jungle sets which are being placed in position along the beach near the N. Y. M. P. studio.

W. S. Hart was very painfully injured on evening during the last week when the automobile carry-all in which he was riding to his home from the studio was overturned. Hart suffered a dislocation of his knee and a number of bad scalp wounds. Others in the car who were injured were Charles K. French and Cyril Gottlieb.

For the N. Y. M. P. subject "The Shadowgraph Message," a melodrama, an automobile was run off of a sixty-foot cliff and totally wrecked at Inceville. This disaster was needed to show the escape of a forger on his way to prison.

Said to Be a "Big One"

All the occupants of the car but the forger were killed. He returns to seek revenge on the hand-writing expert who exposed him. A mute employe at the expert's home flashes a message to his employer before he reaches the house by means of a shadowgraph, and thus prevents the criminal from effecting vengeance.

For a strike riot scene in the N. Y. M. P. subject "The Strike at the Centerpede Mine," a big explosion was filmed last week, and Ken O'Hara, beater of the P. A. typewriter at the beach studio, is authority for the statement that the detonation was so great that it cracked the lens of three of the four cameras that were used on the scene. (That's a thundering big one, but why didn't you drive the water of the Pacific Ocean out five or six miles?)

The explosion was needed to show the destruction of a hut in which an old miner, supposed to have turned traitor, had been made a prisoner. His daughter, played by Margaret Thompson, proves herself the heroine of the occasion by not only saving her father but aiding the sheriff and his posse to quell the riot and stop the strike.

"The Tavern Keeper's Son" is a two-reel Spanish N. Y. M. P. story being filmed this week. It portrays a young Spaniard coming to America, making his fortune, remaining true to his native sweetheart, and then returning to aid his parents, who at the time of his arrival were in such desperate straits because of the demands of the money-lenders that they planned to rob their own son, but recognize him before the deed is committed. The scenario is by Richard V. Spencer and Thomas H. Ince.

A one-reel comedy, "Never Again," is being made at Inceville this week by Scott Sidney. The scenes for this are laid in the Catskill Mountains.

William D. Taylor, who is director for the Favorite Players company, staged for a local order a four-act version of "Damon and Pythias" at the Mason Opera House. Three evening performances were given, and while the players were all amateurs it was highly commented upon by the local press.

C. C. HOLLAND AS CHRISTUS (Selig)

Otto Assembles Two Comedies

Helen Holmes, of the Kalem Railroad series, has her share of the heavy stuff in the subject made last week, entitled "Helen's Peril." In this all the principals are thrown from a train, and Helen rescues them all. The subject has a novel introduction which involves five exposures.

During the past week Director Henry

GLIMPSES OF SOME OF THE LATEST RELEASES FROM THE AMERICAN ON THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

"DAY OF RECKONING" (American, April 26) "WHEN EMPTY HEARTS ARE FILLED" (American, May 5) "DREAMS REALIZED" (Beauty, May 7)

Otto, of the American studio, has filmed, cut and assembled two single-reel comedies. One is "A Wife Wanted" and the other "The Broken Window."

The first installment of the next serial picture of the Universal program, "The Broken Coin," is to contain scenes in and about San Francisco and the exposition, and Director Francis Ford and company spent a week there filming exteriors.

The "Who Pays" series company of the Balboa studio is making the final scenes this week for the seventh of the series, entitled "Houses of Glass." This deals with idle gossip and portrays the not unusual result of talking of your neighbors or your friends. In this particular instance the film will show the breaking up of families, destruction of property and other deeds injurious to mankind. Number seven of the series will be entitled "Blue Blood and Yellow," and will have to do with the worship of ancestry. The subject will bring out a young lady's refusal because she fears the lover is not on her social plane. This results in the almost total destruction of her future happiness.

Director Harry Harvey, in charge of the production, will take the company to Mt. Wilson for many of the exteriors of number seven. These two subjects, like the preceding ones, were written by Will M. Ritchey.

First Smalley Film an Allegory

The first subject to be made by the Smalleys for Universal release will be a picture of an allegorical nature, in three reels, through which a horrible figure representing the title of the subject, "Scandal," will be seen in many of the scenes.

The aim of this subject is the portrayal of the far reaching power of the tentacles of this octopus of society. The story and scenario was written by Lois Weber who with her husband, Phillips Smalley, have charge of production and play the leading parts, that of a stenographer and her employer.

The story unfolds the results of idle jesting of club men, regarding a fellow member and his attention for purely business reasons to his stenographer, when his business is threatened with bankruptcy, and he takes her to and from her home in his car because of an accident which makes it impossible for her to walk to the car line.

The business man is made defendant in the divorce court; his father-in-law refuses to make good a promised loan and his business is swept away; an old letter causes jealousy which results in murder; love matches are broken off; mother and daughter are separated; but the wagging of tongues continues.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Smalley other principals in the subject will be Rupert Julian and Adele Farrington, supported by a big cast of Universal players.

An unusual story dealing with the life of theatrical people of France, a number of years back, forms the plot of a three-reel subject, "The Heart of Cerise," being made for Rex brand release at Universal City.

Scenario by Miss Seawall

The scenario is by Mollie Elliott Seawall and the name part, Cerise Vignol, an actress of temperamental turn, is played by Pauline Bush. Joseph de Grass appears in the main male role, and others of the cast are Agnes Vernon, William Clifford, Henry Nelson and Ray Gallagher.

"Lizzie," of Nestor comedies fame, reads in the newspapers of the "Under the Crescent" Universal series, sees the six photoplays, and decides to break into a harem, but she does not possess the beauty qualification. After numerous attempts and failures, she becomes one of the scrub women at the palace—all of which makes up a Nestor comedy with Victoria Forde in the role of Lizzie, from the fertile brain of Al E. Christie.

In this the other two original Nestorites, Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons, take part, and hereafter, because of the many demands from exhibitors and exchange men, these three will play together. For the past six months Mr. Lyons has been directing one Nestor company, and playing leads. In the producing field he was very successful, but the hundreds of letters caused the men higher up to see that it was easier to secure a director than a comedian of the calibre of Mr. Lyons.

Al E. Christie will direct one Nestor company and have the supervision of the other which will be under the direction of Horace Davey. Another Nestor comedy recently produced is "With Father's Help," in which the old man gives his daughter a goodly roll of money to elope, against the wishes of the mother. In order to satisfy herself and cause no ill feeling with her parents she takes the man of her choice instead of either her parents had selected. "When Her Idol Fell" is a travesty on the bowing down of society women to a foreign violinist and the manner in which the husbands reduced him to a common ordinary mortal.

The Joker companies have staged two subjects, "A Duke for a Day," and "Country Love and Tricksters." The first has its settings at a seaside hotel, where two lovers are dropped when it becomes known royalty is coming to town. The pair masquerade as the duke and his escort, hide the foreigners, and win the day. The second is laid in a small town and has to do with relieving a country lad of his inheritance, by an adventuress and her aide, and the recovery of the sum by the boob's country sweetheart.

Shows Two Sides of the Law

"The Paramount Law" is the vehicle for the introduction of Adele Lane, former Selig leading woman, on the Universal program, and this subject is now being made under the direction of Burton King. This photoplay of two reels will show why justice has come to look upon crime in some instances as justifiable. Supporting Miss Lane in this subject are Edward Sloman as heavy, and William C. Dowlan as leading man.

The better side of human nature is portrayed in "A Change of Heart," a one-reel Rex subject, in which Helen Leslie appears as a newspaper artist, and draws a picture, from memory, of a man who she thought stole her purse. This sketch enables the police department to locate the man, but finding that he has returned the money, upon being able to secure work, is not prosecuted. Millard K. Wilson appears as the heavy, and Marc Robbins the detective.

The Laemmle brand company is making "The Old Doctor," a one-reel character sketch subject of the village practitioner, in which Murdock MacQuarrie plays the lead. The young doctor, supplied with all modern appliance, handsome offices, et cetera, takes away the practice of the older man, but when a serious case confronts the recent graduate, he finds through a series of channels that he is wanting in experience, and a partnership is formed, following the old doctor saving the life of the younger one's sweetheart.

With the producing department of the Reliance and Majestic companies now well taken care of in the matter of stages, wardrobe and scenery storage buildings, carpenter shops, laboratories, dressing rooms, et cetera, attention is being given to the business department, and plans are being made for an office building to grade the only portion of the big grounds not now in use

This, it is planned, will also house the scenario department and afford offices for the directors. The new restaurant building has been completed and is now open.

Cartoonist Vic Will Act

The business department now occupies an old residence on the property, and this will in all probability be removed to furnish a large site for the office building.

Vic, the cartoonist, who created the doings of "Flooey and Axel" for New York newspapers, has been engaged to play a part in a one-reel Komic brand release, in which he will be supported by the two well known characters of his drawings, which have appeared in the New York "World" and other leading newspapers throughout the country.

The story for this subject shows Vic the cartoonist of the daily "Blizzard" canned from his job, and when he falls asleep his two pen and ink companions step out of the paper and show him how to bluff the managing editor and get back on the job. Clarence Barr will play the part of "Axel," and Bobbie Fuehrer will appear as "Flooey."

Were it not possible to cover up a black eye successfully with grease paint, two Majestic players would of necessity be on a vacation as the result of a fight staged for a saloon scene in the film version of Opie Read's "Yankee from the West," now nearing completion in four reels. The principals in the bout were Wallace Reid, who plays the lead, and Tom Wilson appearing as the heavy.

So earnestly did the two get into the fight that they did not hear the director cry "cut" and they continued until separated by players. Wilson has a beautiful shade tree under his lamp, and Reid is marked up so that it is clear to all he meets that he has met something.

Locations at a number of the beautiful old missions in and about Los Angeles have been selected for scenes for "At the Stroke of the Angelus," a two-reel Majestic, being made under the direction of F. J. Grandon. The story is by Mary Rider and a cast composed of Charles Clary, Francelia Billington, Anna May Walthall, Walter Higby and Edward Warren has been selected.

John Emmerson, until recently on the speaking stage, but who has been playing in Majestic and Reliance subjects for the past two months, is soon to be made a director and will soon begin his first subject.

Owls Make Things Interesting

While making scenes for the two-reel Reliance subject, "The Old Shoemaker," in an old cave, the players were given the fright of their lives. They entered the cave to explore, lighting their way with a small tail light from an auto.

When the electric lights were turned on, they frightened a flock of owls that made their home in the cave, and for a few minutes it was hard to tell whether the players or the owls were strongest in the matter of hooting and yelling. But "Sheriff" Arthur Mackley arrested their fears after all the birds had been driven out, and the scenes were completed.

The work of producing "Her Shattered Idol" has been taken up at the Majestic studio. This will consist of four reels with Mae Marsh playing the leading role, supported by Robert Harron. The direction will be under John B. O'Brien, who has just completed filming "Capt. Macklin," with Jack Conway in the title part.

Third Lasky Company Under Neil

One of the Features Ideal companies spent last week in the San Gabriel canyon, where the exteriors for a film version of "Brand Blotters," a Western story by William McLeod Raine, were made.

In this subject Norbert Myles appears in the name part Brand Blotters, the sheriff, Edna Payne is the girl, Henry Alrich heavy, Will Scheerer character lead, and Hal Wilson has an important part. The subject will be completed in two reels.

The other Features Ideal company is making "Mismated," with settings at the fishing villages along the ocean. This is under the direction of Frank Beal.

Rina Valdeez is a new member of the Features Ideal stock company, where she will play leads.

The third producing company will be added at the Lasky studio, when James Neil will take up the production of "The Clue," a detective story from an original scenario by William C. de Mille. Blanche Sweet will be featured in this, supported by Theodore Roberts, Anita King, Mrs. Lewis McCord, and H. B. Carpenter.

Ina Claire, who came West to appear in "The Wild Goose Chase," has been engaged for another subject, and this will be ready for production within the next few days.

Irvin Cobb, who is playing 'xtra for the Lasky company in the making of "The Arab," has made good and has been offered a regular berth—or dressing room. In the market scenes for this subject he wore out his lines—which consisted of the word "no," to be uttered every time one of the natives tried to sell him anything—and appeared in the part of a tourist without any disguise than a pair of leggings.

An attempt was made to induce Mr. Cobb to write scenarios for the Lasky company, but he modestly refused by explaining that he had once written a musical comedy. "Before it was produced, my friends told me I was 'discovered'," he said, "but after they had seen it they said I was 'exposed'."

Work will soon be taken up on the nine-reel subject to be made at the Lasky studio. The scenario for this is now in preparation, and plans for many of the big scenes have been completed and the technical staff is now busy with the preperation of the sets.

Chicago Sees "The Diamond From the Sky"

AN advance showing of the "Diamond from the Sky," the North American Film Corporation's $10,000 picturized romantic novel, the first chapter of which will be released on Monday, May 3, was held before a large audience of exhibitors, exchange men and representatives of the press at E. E. Fulton's projection room last Friday morning.

Before the presentation of the first three chapters, John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Manufacturing Company, and Joseph Finn, of the Nichols-Finn Advertising Agency, each gave a short talk upon the different phases of the conception, manufacture and exploitation of this picturized romantic novel.

The audience was most enthusiastic in their appreciation of the perfect photography and the many thrills which the seven-reel picture held. No dissenting voice was among the speakers.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

NEW ENGLAND FILM MEN ORGANIZE

THE Film Boosters' Association, comprising traveling salesmen and exchange men, representing film manufacturing companies with branch agencies in New England, was organized in Bangor, Me., during the past week.

The association is designed to safeguard the interests of film men traveling in this section of the country, and is a benevolent and fraternal organization.

It is the only one of its kind in New England and film salesmen in this territory will be eligible to membership providing they have been in the business at least a year. It will provide a means of keeping in touch with one another, and is expected to be of considerable value.

The association officers were elected as follows: William C. Green, Portland, president; Herman A. Slvovlos, Boston, first vice-president; Walter J. Davidson, Boston, second vice-president; J. J. Donnelly, Boston, treasurer; Mitchell Granby, Boston, secretary. Meetings will be held in different cities from time to time at the call of the president.

The film men present represented the following companies: William C. Green, Mutual Film Corporation, Portland; J. J. Donnelly, George Kleine Film Company, Boston; Walter J. Davidson, Pathé Exchange, Boston; Arthur A. Allen, of Bangor; Sherman Feature Film Company, Boston; Mitchell Granby, Fox Film Corporation, Boston; Herman A. Slvovlos, Boston; American Feature Film Company, and others. Charles Green, of the Searsport Amusement Company, who was present at the meeting, was elected an honorary member.

LEVISON GOES TO DALLAS FOR FOX FILM

LEO F. LEVISON, formerly manager of the Pittsburgh branch of the World Film Corporation, has resigned and is now on his way to take up the managership of the Dallas, Texas, office of Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Levison's successor in the Pittsburgh office of the World Film Corporation is C. A. Meade, who goes to Pittsburgh from the west. He is expected to take up the work in a few days.

MOORE MANAGES UNITED IN INDIANAPOLIS

O. W. MOORE, formerly of the Blache Feature Service, Indianapolis, has been appointed manager of the United Film Renting Service, formerly known as Warner's Features.

Mr. Moore assumed charge last Monday. He succeeds S. B. Kramer, who has gone to Pittsburgh.

HEAD OF THE ALLIANCE ON TOUR OF EXCHANGES

ANDREW J. COBE, president of the Alliance Films Corporation, is now making a tour of the Alliance exchanges east of and including Duluth.

Mr. Cobe since his departure from New York has met and conferred with Harry Schwalbe, the head of the Electric Film Exchange, of Philadelphia. Pittsburgh was the next exchange center visited, and together with A. A. Weiland, of the Northern Film Exchange, he studied conditions in that territory. Leaving Pittsburgh his next stop was Chicago, where Felix Feist, the managing head of the Celebrated Players Film Company, met him. Mr. Cobe is still the guest of Mr. Feist and will probably stay in the Windy City for the best part of a week.

The itinerary of his homeward trip includes a visit to Duluth, where he will meet J. F. Cubberly, the manager of the Zenith Exchange. Leaving here he will go directly to Des Moines, where the Alliance program is handled by the Des Moines Film Supply Company. Kansas City will next be visited, where A. D. Flintom, the president of the Monarch Feature Film Company, will be the host of Mr. Cobe.

From Kansas City the Alliance head will go to Dallas ,and there meet J. W. Hill, Jr., of the Alliance Film Company of Texas. Several very important matters concerning the Southern territory will be considered here, as well as in Atlanta, which is scheduled as Mr. Cobe's next stopping place.

The Alliance Southern Film Exchange in Atlanta of which P. T. Barbour is the head, controls the Alliance output in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina. Mr. Cobe will give considerable attention to the observation of film affairs below the Mason and Dixon line.

Leaving Atlanta, Mr. Cobe will travel without break until he reaches New York.

KLEINE OFFICES REPORT HEAVY BOOKING

EVIDENCE of steadily increasing prosperity along the Pacific Coast is indicated by the heavy bookings reported by feature film companies. The Kleine office at Seattle has contracted with a number of theatres, large and small, to take all Kleine Features.

The Orpheum theatre, Kalispell, Mont., plays twelve Kleine features, starting next week, while the Folly theatre, Eugene, Ore., starts a program of fourteen.

Numerous small towns in Oregon and Washington are playing features heavily, regardless of the size of the town or theatre.

UNITED OPENS EXCHANGE IN TAMPA AND BUTTE

GENERAL MANAGER R. W. SAVINI, of the United Program film service, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., reports the successful opening of a new branch exchange at Tampa, Fla., with offices at 315 Curry building.

New United film service offices have also been opened in Butte, Mont., with a comfortable home in the "Post" building, under the guiding hand of J. C. Woolf, of Denver, Colo., with Manager R. C. Knox in direct charge, while Sidney B. Lust, of Washington, D. C., who is manager of the United in that city, is preparing for a grand opening to celebrate moving to new quarters, at 903 E street N. W.

KRITERION OPENS EXCHANGE AT TOLEDO

ANOTHER Kriterion exchange will soon be opened. This new acquisition will be located at Toledo, Ohio, and will operate under the name of the Toledo Kriterion film service, with offices at 428 Huron street.

This exchange will be run by Peckham and Wesch, who are operating the Kriterion renting office at Detroit, Mich.

The Toledo exchange will open on April 19. Peckham and Wesch are well known throughout that territory. They expect to soon open another branch at Grand Rapids, Mich.

ACTIVITIES IN EXCHANGES IN PHILADELPHIA

THE Philadelphia Famous Players exchange has "The Eternal City," in addition to its regular Paramount program, and has obtained large bookings on this feature, fifty days having been taken by the Exhibitors' League. Jack Levy, manager of the Fox Film, reports "The New Governor" having passed the censor and will be released next week. The Arcadia will handle Fox Film features on first runs.

The Electric Theatre Supply Company has just added Walter Farnum to its list of Philadelphia representatives.

Harry Bryan, manager of the Metropolitan exchange, expects to release "The Jungle" very soon. This picture will have its initial showing at some large Chestnut street theatre.

The Philadelphia office of the V-L-S-E, at 1316 Vine street, of which J. S. Hebrew, formerly with the General Film Company, is manager, has announced the release dates for the big features of the new combination.

Philadelphia exchanges generally are considering a new departure in booking, namely, to have all films paid for in advance. Many of the best exhibitors, including theatres controlled by the Exhibitors' League, favor this action.

The business of the Pathé exchange, located at 1235 Vine street, has increased so rapidly within the past few weeks it necessitated the building of a separate poster department. This as well as the business end of the affairs, are under the management of G. T. Atwood.

George J. Berhoff, special representative of the World Film Corporation, and Mr. Robert Etus, general manager of the Philadelphia office, have by their combined efforts broken the record, and in spite of its being comparatively a new office have placed the Philadelphia branch fourth on the list of the twenty-three offices controlled by the firm.

John D. Clark is president and William W. Bethell treasurer of the Metro Film exchange, whose Philadelphia offices are located at 1331 Vine street. This exchange is at present making a hit with "The Heart of Maryland."

Exhibitors are booking the play without loss of time.

SHEEHAN STARTS ON TRIP TO COAST

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, spent the past week in Chicago, breaking his journey to the coast. He reports an increasing demand among exhibitors for the William Fox features. The exhibitors ascribe the popularity of the Fox photo-dramas to the manner in which they are produced, acted and staged.

"There is nothing on the film market that approaches the features that the Fox Film Corporation has recently been releasing," said one of the foremost of the Chicago exhibitors to Mr. Sheehan.

"I have done the biggest business of my career with the William Fox features—'The Clemenceau Case,' 'Kreutzer Sonata,' 'The Nigger,' 'A Fool There Was,' 'Children of the Ghetto,' and others of the long list."

Mr. Sheehan leaves Chicago this week for the Pacific Coast. On his return to New York, which will be about June 15, the Fox Film Corporation states that it will have an announcemnet to give out of immense interest to exhibitors generally. It involves the working out of an entirely new system expected to be of mutual benefit to the producing firm and to the exhibitor.

Discussion Created by "Hypocrites" Fills Theatres

In Los Angeles and Boston the Authorities Have Taken Sides on the Propriety of Exhibiting the Picture—Mayor in San Diego Sees No Harm

ONE of the first out-of-town showings of "Hypocrites" was given by J. H. Kunsky, of the Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises, at the Washington Theatre, Detroit. The film, after being greeted by acclaim by the clergy, Board of Education and the Police Department, played to 10,000 people the first three days.

By popular demand the production was held over a week after the termination of its original booking and then played a return engagement for another week. Reports of similar success in other cities throughout the country, are being received daily, and bookings are in as much demand as ever.

Public interest is immediately awakened through the various advertising ideas which emanate from the publicity office of Bosworth, Inc., and through editorials in the daily press.

Despite the success of this much discussed film wherever it is shown, difficulties are sometimes encountered by the film men in showing the subject, on account of the difference of opinion, which in a few localities has widely varied.

In Los Angeles, for instance, the film has created no end of discussion, resulting in the decision to show it before a judge and jury. In Boston the mayor has refused to allow the film to be shown in its present state, but finally agreed to let it appear in the Hub if the naked figure of "Truth" be suitably draped.

The remarkable task of draping the figure on the film has been undertaken by a laboratory expert who is now working on the film and all Boston is awaiting with interest the coming of Clothed Truth.

At the Superba Theatre, San Diego, last week the Broadway Amusement Company put on "Hypocrites," after a great amount of newspaper controversy over the propriety of showing the film.

At a special production last Saturday morning Mayor Charles F. O'Neall, District Attorney D. V. Mahoney and a representative of the chief of police, together with about a score of prominent business men, witnessed the film as an impromptu board of censors.

The mayor decided to permit the production, although he had first given orders against it to the police department. He required, however, that certain sections of the film, which he believed to be too close to the immoral, be deleted before the public production would be allowed.

As a result of the publicity which has been given the film the Superba has been playing to full houses for six performances daily at an increased scale of prices.

DIRECTOR HEFFRON JOINS SELIG

T. N. Heffron, director of feature picture plays, arrived in Chicago last week to join the Selig Polyscope Company as producer of Selig Spectacular Specials.

Mr. Heffron has directed many of the Famous Players productions, and has also produced many notable successes for Thanhouser, Biograph-Klaw and Erlanger Motion Picture Company, et cetera. Mr. Heffron will succeed Lawrence Marston, who has been producing multiple reel dramas at the Selig Chicago studios.

KERRIGAN WILL NOT LEAVE UNIVERSAL FOR SPEAKING STAGE

J. Warren Kerrigan is not going into the spoken drama. This star will continue to act in picture plays of the Universal company.

The rumor has been prevalent for a week that Kerrigan had accepted an offer to appear in a New York production, in which he was to play the leading role, a part suited to his abilities.

MISSISSIPPI IS VIRGIN FILM TERRITORY

AL. DURNING, of the United Film Service, traveling out of New Orleans, reports things very prosperous in Mississippi, and his report is echoed by others in that territory.

Moving pictures are accomplishing great things for the country districts in Mississippi. It is putting that state on the film map, and from the looks of things, Mississippi is to take front rank as an "exhibitor's paradise."

The field is large, too, Mr. Durning states, and in many districts as yet practically untouched.

WORLD FILM IN BUFFALO MOVES

THE Buffalo World Film office will move on May 1 to the corner of Swan and Main streets, where it will have 3,800 square feet of floor space.

M. E. Hoffman, who has been in Buffalo arranging for the transfer, declares that when the new office is fitted up it will be the finest in the state, outside of New York City. The old office at Swan and Pearl streets has been very inadequate to handle the rapidly growing business.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., HAS RECORD ATTENDANCE

IN a special report on Montgomery, Ala., by Maurice F. Barr, traveling representative of the World Film Corporation out of New Orleans, it is shown that the daily average attendance at the theatres in that city every week exceeds Montgomery's white population by nearly 8,000 people, which is said to be the record for any Southern city, far outdistancing New Orleans, Mobile and Atlanta.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Next Mary Pickford Film Is "Fanchon, the Cricket"

THE next Famous Players production starring Mary Pickford will be an artistic film version of the famous drama, "Fanchon the Cricket," by Georges Sand, the celebrated Frenchwoman, to be released on the Paramount program May 10.

Mary Pickford, as "Fanchon," portrays

MARY PICKFORD IN "FANCHON THE CRICKET" (Famous Players)

all the dramatic depths and the varying lights and shades in this famous character. Fanchon is a little elf-child, and the granddaughter of a reputed witch. Her own mischievous nature constantly leads her into committing wild pranks and tricks upon the stupid village children. Fanchon falls in love with Landry, son of a rich merchant, and he grows to love her in spite of the fact that he is about to be betrothed to Madelon, daughter of his father's friend. Landry boldly professes his preference for the ragged little Fanchon, bringing upon his head a storm of parental wrath. Fanchon, however, has too great a nature to allow her lover to suffer for her sake, and because she is not sure that she is more than a passing fancy with Landry, though to her he is all the world, she tells him she will not be his wife until his parents ask her to marry him.

Lanry reluctantly returns to his home and goes on a journey to make the long wait less hard. How he returns, how he is in peril of his life and is saved by the daring and devoted Fanchon, and how his humbled and penitent parents are finally forced to beg Fanchon to marry their son, is unfolded in the climax of this fascinating drama.

SELIG GUESTS WITNESS FILMING OF THEATRE SCENE

Chicago newspaper men and other interested guests were at the Selig studio in Chicago, Ill., last week to witness the staging of the theatre scene in Anna Katherine Green's "The Millionaire Baby."

Hundreds of supernumeraries were used in the production.

DOROTHY GREEN WILL PLAY LEAD IN "AFTER DARK"

In the William A. Brady-World Film feature, "After Dark," Dorothy Green will play the leading feminine role, and others in the cast will include Alec Francis, Melville Stewart, who was with Augustin Daly, Norma Trevor, who is now a member of the all-star cast of "Sinners," at the Playhouse, New York, and Frederick Esmelton, former stage director for Wilton Lackaye and Robert Mantell.

"Help Wanted" Next Morosco-Bosworth Release

AS its next release the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, in association with Bosworth, Inc., announces a film version of the well known theatrical success, "Help Wanted," by Jack Lait, featuring Lois Meredith, supported by others of the original cast.

The popularity of "Help Wanted" all over the country needs little comment. The initial presentation of the play was given at the Cort theatre, Chicago, a little over a year ago, where it scored immediate success. An engagement lasting the full length of the season followed at the Cort, where new records for attendance and receipts were established by this production. The New York presentation took place at the Maxine Elliott theatre, and big success was also accorded the play.

In the principal role of this photoplay the producers offer the original star, Lois Meredith. At the Maxine Elliott theatre this charming little favorite met with big success in the character of Gertie Mayer, the innocent little stenographer who becomes enmeshed in a web of complications as a result of her employer's unscrupulous attentions. Her work in other metropolitan triumps, such as "Everywoman," "Rackety Packety House," "Within the Law" and others, has won her much fame despite her youth.

Lillian Elliott, one of America's foremost character artists, who again appears in her characterization of Mrs. Mayer, mother to the little stenographer. Others in the cast are Hobart Bosworth as Jerrold D. Scott, the stenographer's employer; Adele Farrington, as his wife; Owen Moore, as the son; Helen Wolcott, the daughter, and Carl Von Schiller. "Help Wanted" is the second release of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and will be released in association with Bosworth, Inc., on the Paramount program, April 29. The play has many diverting scenes.

LUBIN FINISHES FILMING "THE CLIMBERS"

Clyde Fitch's "The Climbers" has just been completed by the Lubin company and promises to attract wide interest through the strength of the play itself, the importance of the cast and the extravagance of the production. Clay M. Greene made the scenario and Barry O'Neil is producer.

Gladys Hanson, one of the best known of the younger emotional actresses on the stage today, is featured in the production, and supporting her are such Lubin favorites as George Scule Spencer, Walter Hitchcock, Bernard Siegel, Charles Brandt, Peter Lang, Walter Law, Eleanor Barry, Ruth Bryan, Frankie Mann, Edith Ritchie, Walter Clarke, Mildred Gregory, Rosetta Brice and Florence Hackett.

LEONARD COMPLETES "SILENT COMMAND"

Robert Leonard, producer and co-star with Ella Hall, of "The Master Key" serial, has completed "The Silent Command," a four-reel production dealing with hypnotism. The feature photoplay will be released by the Universal under the Rex brand in the near future.

The play was written by Mr. Leonard and depicts the battle waged by a young lawyer to combat the influence which a famous doctor, a hypnotist, exercises over a beautiful young woman. Mr. Leonard is cast as the father of the girl, Ella Hall.

"THE MAN WHO CAME BACK" FEATURES ADAMS

The Vitagraph Company has secured "The Man Who Came Back," an original story of the regeneration of a man, from Lionel Adams, and will put it in immediate production with a picked cast.

Mr. Adams in writing his story has succeeded in conveying through suggestion, a tenseness that takes the place of the ordinary method of creating thrills, and, in contrast, reverts to an exceptionally thrilling fire scene.

"The Man Who Came Back" will be a Broadway star feature in three parts, the principal character being enacted by Mr. Adams himself.

First Release of Vitagraph's "The Goddess" May 10

Picture, in Powerful Imaginative Scenes, Shows Possible Upheaval of the World's Economic, Financial and Social Conditions a Few Generations Hence

ON Monday, May 10, the Vitagraph Company of America will release through the General Film Company the first chapter, in two reels, of its serial, "The Goddess," featuring Anita Stewart and Earle Williams.

"The Goddess" is founded on a strong story from the pen of Gouverneur Morris, one of America's best known authors. Until this week no intimation of the plot of the serial was made public.

"The Goddess" deals with the possible future results of a great world conflict, such as the present European war, its effects on the economic, financial and social structure of the world and what the heritage of future generations will be.

Miss Stewart plays a semi-allegorical character, the incarnation of the perfect woman, who brings good out of evil.

In the opening chapter a triumvirate of financial powers plan to gain monetary control of the world. They decide to use a woman as a tool. So a child is adopted and reared to this end. Big scenes are shown, such as one with thousands of persons gazing reverently at the girl. Earle Williams plays the hero. Frank Currier, Tom Brooke and Paul Scardon compose the triumvirate.

Ralph W. Ince, the director who produced "The Juggernaut," "A Million Bid," "The Painted World," "413," "From Headquarters," "His Phantom Sweetheart," and many other Vitagraph features, has been working on "The Goddess" for two months.

When "The Goddess" was in contemplation it was definitely decided by A. E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton, heads of the Vitagraph Company, that the first episode would not be released until six were ready, so there would be no break in the continuity of the releases. "The Goddess," when completed, will be the greatest achievement of the Vitagraph Company. Extreme care in photography, direction, scenic effects, individual and ensemble acting, powerful dramatic scenes, thrilling moments and sequence in the action of the story will characterize "The Goddess."

"The Melting Pot," Cort Film, Is in Big Demand

Company Handling Picture Featuring Walker Whiteside Receives 170 Telegrams and Numerous Letters After Advertisements Appear

FROM reports of the Cort Film Corporation, exhibitors throughout the country must have created a considerable demand for "The Melting Pot," in which Walker Whiteside is appearing.

A representative of John Cort, president of the corporation, announced this week that 170 telegrams and a large number of letters were received at the Cort offices in the Longacre building, only a day or two after the advertising of the picture on a state right basis of sale had appeared.

It is said that while Mr. Cort had anticipated a great demand for the picture and had expected some very tempting offers for the most of territorial divisions of the United States, he was astonished at the suddenness with which the demand came, and at the big prices which were offered for the film, especially in territories that are not looked upon as particularly productive in the booking of this class of picture.

One reason for this is probably the fact that Mr. Whiteside has a very large following in the West and was a popular stage idol all through the country.

As an indication of the demand which the picture has created, it has been booked for the week of May 3 at the Hippodrome, New York, and it is said that the management of the big spectacle theatre is paying more for the film than has ever before been paid for any film production in any theatre in America.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

KANSAS CENSORSHIP NOW IN FORCE

State inspectors this week began censorship of all motion pictures shown in Kansas. Until the state can provide a dark room of its own, the censors, Miss Carrie Simpson and the Rev. Festus Foster, assistants to W. D. Ross, state superintendent of public instruction, will use the machine and screen of a Topeka theatre to try out the films. Scenes showing intoxication will not be permitted unless they teach a lesson. Mr. Ross says further:

"We will not permit any murder or robbery or any other crime to be actually shown on the film. If such a section cannot be removed, the entire film must be thrown out. Our rule to start is that no crime or debauchery shall be displayed."

The Kansas censorship law was enacted in 1913, but has been held up until this time by suits brought against it by the motion-picture men. The supreme court of the United States has just upheld the statute.

The theatres themselves will not be bothered by the system. The exchanges will send descriptions of the films to the chief inspector, along with the reel itself. The law requires that this synopsis must be in considerable detail. If it appears clear from this description that the film is proper, the reel will not be shown for the inspection of the censors. But if the censor suspects any film, he may forbid either parts or the whole to be shown.

COURT OF APPEALS HEARS ARGUMENTS IN LENT CASE

Arguments were heard last week in the Court of Appeals, at Albany, N. Y., in the case of William H. Lent and others against Wolden Kieley. The appeal is from an order of the appellate division second department, sustaining a writ of habeas corpus and discharging Kieley.

He was arrested Sunday, January 24, 1915, on the charge of violating an ordinance of the city of Yonkers by operating a motion picture theatre. He claimed the common council had no authority to enact the ordinance prohibiting the opening of motion picture shows on Sundays, as it was a matter of regulation by the state.

BALTIMORE MINISTERS WANT FEDERAL CENSORSHIP

The appointment of a Federal board of censors for motion pictures by President Wilson is called for in resolutions passed by the conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session in Baltimore, Md. The ministers have determined to take up the matter with both houses of Congress and a committee will be appointed to perform this work.

Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon brought the subject before the body and it was suggested that the board be similar to the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

Bishop Burt, the presiding officer, in speaking of the matter, said that much owuld depend upon the personnel of the board, and he severely scored the lack of "real civil service" in the administration of the nation's affairs.

TRY TO BLOCK EXHIBITION OF "NATION" IN BAY STATE

Should an attempt be made to show the much disputed film, "Birth of a Nation," in Massachusetts theatres outside the Boston metropolitan district, opposition of the state police is expected, because of the chief's refusal to allow the film to be shown on Sunday in Lynn.

Despite opposition, carried before Governor Walsh himself, the film, with elisions demanded by Mayor Curley, is on daily exhibition at the Tremont Theatre in Boston. The state police chief's attitude regarding the Lynn application for a Sunday showing, is believed to foreshadow refusal of permission for the picture to be taken to any city other than Boston.

In Boston itself the opposition has not given up hope of driving the picture from the local screen. Meanwhile the film draws big crowds. As a result a mass meeting of colored people has been held, at which a Cambridge business man went so far as to urge his fellows to war on the whites.

CALIFORNIA CITY TO DISPENSE WITH BILLBOARDS

The city council of Porterville, Cal., has decided not to issue any more permits for the erection of billboards within the fire limits and has turned down the application of W. J. Godley, a theatre owner, for billboards in Olive street.

This will mean that new boards can be erected only in the residence sections of that city. At Sacramento, Cal., an ordinance is in effect providing that all billboards and signs must be removed from the lobbies of theatres after 12 o'clock noon each day. So far the measure has not been enforced, as there is a technical error in the ordinance, and this is now being corrected.

"WILD ANIMAL BILL" KILLED

Through the efforts of David Horsley, president of the Centaur Film Company, the "wild animal bill" fostered by the S. P. C. A. and introduced into the California State legislature by Representative Slater, of Santa Rosa, designed to prevent cruelty to wild animal performers and to eliminate all possible hazard to trainers by making it a misdemeanor for any person to enter any cage or arena with a wild animal, has been killed. It was pointed out by Mr. Horsley that the proposed measure, were it to become law, would work seriously against owners of wild animal exhibitions without accomplishing one iota of good.

GUATEMALA ESTABLISHES CENSORSHIP

The president of Guatemala has signed a decree providing for a censorship of films brought into the country. All cinematograph films must be submitted to the inspection of delegates appointed by the Minister of Government and Justice before their production will be authorized.

To obtain admission through the customs or the post office the officials in charge will send, through the proper channels, a list of the films and the name of the consignee to the minister named for his decision. The presence of children under twelve years of age at night exhibitions is forbidden, and the films shown at day exhibitions at which children are present must be suitable to their age. Infractions of this decree are to be punished by a fine and by the confiscation of the films, according to "Daily Consular Reports."

SONTAG JURY DISAGREES IN FRAUD CHARGE

The jury in the trial of George Sontag, of the famous Sontag and Evans bandit gang, charged with conspiracy to defraud stockholders of the United States Feature Film Company, has disagreed and has been discharged. A second trial will be held at Chico, Cal., on September 7.

AMMEX SUES IN SAN DIEGO

The Ammex Motion Picture Company has filed suit in the California Superior Court against J. E. Ervay, of National City, Cal., near San Diego, for damages in the sum of $4,500, alleging that the company was suddenly ousted from its studio and that its moving picture outfit was confiscated by the defendant.

"FATHERHOOD" IS FIRST BOSWORTH-UNIVERSAL RELEASE

Hobart Bosworth's first Universal release, a four-reel drama entitled "Fatherhood," is a Western picture of action and of strong psychological interest. Mr. Bosworth is the author of the play, and appears in it as the leading character, Lon Gilchrist, who amasses a fortune as a ranchman. Helen Wolcott appears opposite Mr. Bosworth in the role of Lizzy Mayberry.

"The picturesquesness of the West and the fact that that type of man seems to have developed more completely in the loneliness of the great ranges," said Mr. Bosworth, "than anywhere else, prompted me to select the cattle country as a setting for my picture."

EDYTHE STERLING, DARING RIDER, JOINS KRITERION

Edythe Sterling, a daring rider known all over the Pacific Coast for her marvelous work as a horsewoman, is now a member of Bert Bracken's Company at Santa Barbara producing Western dramas for the Kriterion program.

Miss Sterling as a leading woman in Western dramas that require dare-devil feats has no equal.

"WHO PAYS?" NOVELIST DEAD

Edwin Bliss, well known as a novelist and writer of short stories, died suddenly in the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York on April 14.

Mr. Bliss' last work, and one which he had only just finished before his death, was the novelization of the Pathe series, "Who Pays?" These stories had been syndicated and are being published in leading newspapers all over the country.

E. P. BLISS

Mr. Bliss was only thirty-six years old. Those who have read his "Who Pays?" stories state that it is greatly to be regretted that he did not live to enjoy the increased fame and popularity which these stories were destined to bring him.

Bookings for "The Clemenceau Case" on Increase

Fox Picturization of Dumas Classic Aids Exhibitors to Raise Admission Prices—Film May Exceed "Kreutzer Sonata" in Popularity, Says Sheehan

WILLIAM FOX'S production of "The Clemenceau Case," by Alexander Dumas, featuring Theda Bara, William E. Shay and Stuart Holmes, and adapted for the screen by Herbert Brenon, has since its recent release, swept the country from coast to coast. The Fox exchange offices are flooded with demands for the picture.

Speaking of the picture, one exhibitor writes from Seattle:

"I raised my admission from twenty to twenty-five cents during the run of the "Clemenceau Case"; even then I turned them away and will have to secure from you the earliest return date that I can. My brother exhibitors laughed at me when I raised my prices for this Fox feature.

"I was sure from my previous experiences with 'Kreutzer Sonata,' and 'A Fool There Was,' and 'The Nigger' that 'The Clemenceau Case' was going to be something out of the ordinary. I felt justified in raising by prices, and the results more than proved me to be in the right. Basing my belief in the Fox features on the splendid photoplays you have been giving us lately, I am considering running a two-weeks' bill consisting of nothing but William Fox productions, at twenty and twenty-five cents.

"This may sound like an exaggeration to those who don't know the tremendous demand that exists here for the Fox pictures, but your Uncle Dudley knows that he is right, and, like the hair-tonic people, he has proved it."

From the Chicago offices of the Fox concern where he is stopping on his way to the Pacific Coast, and to the other branches of the corporation, Winfield R. Sheehan, the general manager, writes that the demand for "The Clemenceau Case" is nothing less than overwhelming.

Exhibitors who reap such handsome pofits and big business with the "Kreutzer Sonata," another of Mr. Brenon's productions, have heard that "The Clemenceau Case" is likely to prove even a greater success than "Kreutzer Sonata," which, up to date, has broken and is still breaking records.

Not the least remarkable feature of the success of "The Clemenceau Case" is that it has attained so much publicity and attention throughout the country that practically every exhibitor intends to reap a harvest with this photoplay by increasing his normal prices during its run at his house.

THEDA BARA

Wherever this has been done up to date, the results have more than justified the expectations. Louis T. Rogers, manager of the New York booking department of the Fox Film Corporation, reports that the local demand for the "Clemenceau Case" has reached unusual proportions, and his staff is kept busy apportioning first-runs of the picture to the scores of exhibitors who are demanding it.

Kalem Feature to Be Released on Regular Service

"An Innocent Sinner," by Lawrence Marston, and Starring Katherine La Salle, Deals with Doctor's Hypnotic Influence Over Girl Victim

THE advertising value of Kalem's "Broadway Favorites" production, "An Innocent Sinner," was practically doubled when Katherine La Salle, who is featured in this attraction, was engaged to enact the leading role opposite John Barrymore, in "Kick In."

One of the most successful plays on Broadway this season, "Kick In," has just gone on tour after a long run at the Republic theatre and Manhattan opera house. Since "An Innocent Sinner" will be released Monday, May 3, it is inevitable that Miss La Salle will find the "Broadway Favorites" production in which she is the bright particular star, being shown in the cities where she appears in "Kick In."

Written by Lawrence Marston, "An Innocent Sinner" has for many years been in high favor with theatregoers. The story deals with the fortunes of Hinda, an orphan victimized by an unscrupulous doctor, who possesses an hypnotic control over her.

Although a feature attraction, this three-act production will be released by the Kalem Company in regular service.

GUSTAV FROHMAN BACK FROM BOSTON

Gustav Frohman, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, has returned from Boston, where he visited a large number of exhibitors to get their opinions of his policy to release only clean, sweet screen stories of the human interest sort. He reports that he found nearly all of the moving-picture purveyors in The Hub anxious to get just that sort of pictures.

Pearce Appeals for Exhibitors' Co-operation

President of National Organization, Back in Baltimore After Trip to New York, Who Reports a Cordial Reception of League Officers by Film Manufacturers, Wants All Motion Picture Managers to Join the Association and Support Its Policies

Special to Motion Picture News
Baltimore, April 19.

MARION S. PEARCE, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has given out the following interview:

"I have just returned from a trip to New York in the interest of the national convention, to be held in San Francisco, July 3 to 16, and am very glad to report that the national officers have been cordially received by the manufacturers and other trade interests, and that the convention is receiving their hearty support.

"Never has there been a time when the league needed this support more than right now. For this reason the friendly attitude of trade and press is doubly welcome and is the cause for self-congratulation upon the part of every exhibitor.

"Just one cause has brought about this splendid effect—the personal interviews of the national officers with the executives of the largest concerns in the business.

"During these interviews the officers have been taken to task severely at times for the errors made by our organization in the past. We have freely admitted our faults, but on the other hand have been equally forceful in directing attention to errors of the producers resulting in injustices to exhibitors.

"Honest criticism, sincerely offered, always produces good, and this, together with the free exchange of ideas, has produced a wave of advancement that led to better understandings all around, and from which the league will receive great benefit.

Discuss Plans with Film Makers

"A future plan, or policy, of the league has been discussed, and the manufacturers have assured us they will co-operate in what the league is trying to do. In return we have pledged the exhibitor to fair treatment and co-operation in fighting the many dangers that threaten their business now.

"Now, Brother Exhibitor! it's up to you. We cannot expect to continue in the favor of the press and enjoy the support of the trade, unless we make good.

"An appalling number of laws that are positively vicious, and regulations most unfair, have been enacted or attempted during the past year. Some directed against one branch of the business, some against another. But that which injures one branch of the business, reflects upon and injures all branches.

"But in all localities where there has been a good strong exhibitors' league, this adverse legislation has been defeated. Doesn't that mean anything to you?

"Organization is the key to the whole situation. It's the one tocsin that should bring us all into line for a fight that is to decide the very future existance of every exhibitor, and for every manufacturer as well.

"The president of one of the largest film corporations stated emphatically that the onerous burdens imposed upon his company through censorship and other drastic regulations had resulted in their very seriously considering whether after all it was not best to discontinue business. To stay in business and meet these conditions, an entire change in their system would have to be made at enormous cost. And who pays the freight. It strikes me that it is up to the league and to each individual member of it to lend a willing hand and pull with all his might to offset a condition of this sort "That is what the league is for. Let's show the trade that while organized for mutual protection, and while demanding just and fair treatment for ourselves, we are willing and ready to render them effective assistance and co-operation in fighting any danger that threatens any branch of the business.

"If every exhibitor will do this, we will have an organization that it will be a pride and pleasure to belong to, and every manufacturer in the country will be only too glad to recognize in the league a powerful factor for good—one that proves a real ally in times of greatest need.

"Don't sidetrack this matter until tomorrow. Do it now. Join the league. If there is no local in your state or town, write to me about starting one, or joining the national body direct."

Ford and Cunard Begin "The Broken Coin"

San Francisco and Its Environs Will Furnish Many of the Backgrounds for New Universal Serial—Heads of Company See Troupe Off

WHILE "The Black Box" continues to smash all box-office records, Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, with their great special company, have begun work along the bay of San Francisco water-front on the Universal's next great serial, "The Broken Coin," which will be released in fifteen episodes of two reels each upon the completion of the run of "The Black Box."

Mr. Ford already has filmed many important scenes in Golden Gate Park and in the underground passages of San Francisco's famous Chinatown district. Miss Cunard and Mr. Ford sailed from San Pedro for San Francisco on the morning of April 5 aboard the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's steamer "Congress."

President Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers and George A. Magie, the new Pacific Coast representative of the Universal Company who has just arrived to take up his new duties, were at the pier to see the company off.

On the way up from San Francisco Mr. Ford was given the freedom of the ship by Captain N. E. Cousins, and both the captain and his crew play important roles in the first reels of the serial. The Ford-Cunard company are stopping in San Francisco at the Manx Hotel, the manager of which, Chester A. Kelly, has afforded Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard exceptional facilities for a number of important scenes.

U CITY POOL USED IN THRILLING "BOX" SCENE

The new pool at Universal City was completed and given its christening last week for a scene in the "Black Box" series. This tank of re-inforced concrete is 50 feet wide, 135 feet long, and from one to ten feet deep, constructed so that the top is on the level of the grounds.

For the "Black Box" series scene a bridge was built across this, fitted with a trap, and a fleeting messenger on horseback was given a cold plunge as he crossed the bridge.

MYRTLE LANGFORD, ACTRESS OF ABILITY, IS PUBLICITY EXPERT

Myrtle Langford, the Eastern representative of the American Lifeograph Company, is at present handling the publicity for the first release of that company, entitled "Where Cowboy Is King."

This picture, photographed especially for the Federal Government in 1914, has been placed in the hands of the United Booking Office. The events constitute a yearly event in Pendleton, Ore., resembling the California Rodeo, a time when cowboys gather from the surrounding country and vie with each other in horsemanship.

CRAUFURD KENT FITTED FOR SCREEN ROLES

Of all the actors whom the screen has won away from the speaking stage, one of the most conspicuous is Craufurd Kent, whose work in the Trump dramas, distributed by the Kriterion service, has earned for him a large following all over the country.

Mr. Kent is ideally fitted by nature to interpret leading roles. He stands something like 6 feet high, has a proportionately large physique and handsome features.

It was about a year ago that Mr. Kent left a Broadway attraction to enter the field of motion pictures. His success was almost instantaneous. In some degree this is due to his extraordinary versatility and adaptable nature. He readily picked up the technique of the screen. Fortunately he photographs very well, and his histrionic ability makes him able to interpret the most difficult and dramatic roles.

Director Frank, under whose watchful eye Mr. Kent works, says of him: "I have never association with any other player so enjoyable. Mr. Kent is always willing to work and always a factor for pleasant studio conditions. This is almost as important to me as his acting ability. When the two are taken into consideration, I think I would rather direct him as leading man than any other fellow I know."

Realism the Keynote in "The Lily of Poverty Flat"

Principal Scenes Filmed on 35,000 Acre Estate, Where In a Forest Ravine a Whole Frontier Town Was Erected for the Picture

A VIVID, accurate and stirring picture of life in the pioneer days in the Golden State is the April feature film release of the California Motion Picture Corporation, "The Lily of Poverty Flat," a photodrama produced from the scenario which Playwright Charles Kenyon based on three of Bret Harte's poems, "Her Letter," "His Answer to Her Letter" and "Her Last Letter."

The principal scenes in this screen-play were filmed at Boulder Creek, California, where the 35,000-acre estate of H. L. Middleton was turned over to the motion picture company to use as the background for this Sierran drama.

Here, in a romantic wooded gorge, a complete mining village was built—twenty-five stores, saloons, log cabins and shack cottages. The incidents at "Poverty Flat" were filmed with this sort of substantial scenery.

Equal care was taken in the mining scenes to see that realism was obtained. Boulder Creek itself was dammed up, ditches and flumes were built, and gold was washed out of the gravel in approved "Forty-niner" fashion.

The plot of "The Lily of Poverty Flat" concerns the romance between a young miner and the belle of the camp, The Lily, daughter of the village storekeeper and the wealthy man in the settlement. "Striking it rich," the father takes his daughter to Paris for her debut. Here, although courted by rich and titled Frenchmen, she remains true to her "Joe," as her letter to him testifies.

Beatriz Michelena, the beautiful star of the California Motion Picture Corporation, demonstrated that she had courage and gameness as well as good looks when she swam her horse across the Russian river in flood time just to get one scene in the photoplay.

Both the actress and her horse were carried under by a treacherous eddy in the swift current, and it was only her coolness and strength as a swimmer brought her and her mount safely across.

For the last act in the drama, a sheer cliff was scaled by Miss Michelena and others of the company, and the climax came when, in a dramatic battle on the edge of the precipice, Jack Hamlin, the heroic Poverty Flat gambler, received his death wound at the hands of the outlaw, Sanchez, whom he hurled into the chasm.

Aside from the many charming vistas of typical redwood country scenery and the glimpses of rugged canyon and mountain wilderness.

Edwin Thanhouser Plays Host at New Rochelle

SMOKING large black cigars is a pleasurable indoor sport, but it is seldom that a bunch of writing persons are all caught in the act. However, circumstances alter cases, and when Edwin Thanhouser hands them out at the studio at one of those famous expeditions personally conducted by Leon J. Rubinstein—why, that's different. No wonder the representatives of several publications look pleased and contented as the cat that ate the canary.

The occasion was the recent excursion to New Rochelle. Mr. Thanhouser extended the hospitalities of his plant right royally, and the three coming releases which he showed were much appreciated.

First of "Crescent" Series to Be Released on May 25

Harem Experiences of Princess Hassan Will Appear in Six Chapters—Will Be Handled Like "O'Rourke" Except That 2 Reels Will Be Released a Week

ONE of the most interesting series of pictures ever filmed promises to be the unique six-part feature which introduces to Universal audiences Her Serene Highness the Princess Hassan, in "Under the Crescent."

This series has just been completed in twelve reels at Universal City, where some of the most tremendous sets ever constructed for moving picture purposes have been used.

The series will be handled like the "Terence O'Rourke" series, except that two reels will be released each week. The release date for the first episode has just been set for Tuesday, May 25, and the other episodes will follow as Gold Seal features on each succeeding Tuesday.

The title of the first, which will be complete in itself, as will all the others, will be "The Purple Iris." The others in order will be "The Cage of Golden Bars," "The Shadow of the Pyramids," "For the Honor of a Woman," "In the Name of a King," and "The Crown of Death."

Prominent in the cast are Edna Maison, Edward Sloman, William Dolan, Carmen Phillips and Helen Wright. It was directed by Burton King.

The Princess Ibrahim Hassan, before her marriage to Prince Hassan of Egypt, was Ola Humphrey, of Oakland, Cal. Her husband is the nephew of the Sultan of Egypt, who was shot at in Cairo on April 8, and the heir to the throne of Cleopatra.

The Princess is now staying at the Hotel

EDNA MAISON

Alexandria in Los Angeles, and for the last two months has assisted in the preparation of the Universal adventure serial.

The story of the Princess Hassan's adventures already has been written and published by Grosset and Dunlap, and an interesting volume it makes, too. The book as well as the film relates how Miss Humphrey, then an actress, met the dashing young Egyptian Prince in Paris and accompanied him to his harem in Cairo.

Finally she could stand the restraint no longer and begged to see Paris once again. The Prince took his favorite to Paris for a short visit and Miss Humphries fled at once to the protection of Americans and later sailed to New York, where she was met by President Carl Laemmle of the Universal Film Company. Negotiations were commenced almost immediately.

Mr. Laemmle signed a contract with her in which the Princess agreed to appear in a series of moving pictures depicting her life in the harem. During her idle moments the Princess took a number of photographs of the women in the harem while they were unaware of it, and these views, together with photographs of the wonderful gardens and vistas beyond the walls of the exterior of the harem, have been of great assistance to Director King in staging the serial.

LANIER SUCCEEDS MILLS AT PICTURE PLAYHOUSE

Reginald B. Lanier, son of F. D. Lanier, of the old established New York banking house of Winslow, Lanier and Company, has succeeded Philip O. Mills as secretary of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., with offices at 71 West Twenty-third street.

There have been many instances of the use of Wall Street capital in the moving picture business, but in this case a Wall Street man has turned from stocks, bonds and securities to the personal promotion of photoplays.

Mr. Lanier has been interested in the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., as a stockholder for some time, but as the result of negotiations which were concluded on April 19, he has assumed an official position with the big feature company, and in the future will devote all of his time to the company's interests.

Mr. Lanier's purchase of Mr. Mills' stock makes him a big factor in the company. In addition to acting as secretary of the organization, he will have charge of the department of publicity and advertising. Mr. Lanier has also been elected a member of the board of directors.

FANIA MARINOFF STARS IN "LURE OF MAMMON"

"The Lure of Mammon" is the "Broadway Favorites" vehicle in which Fania Marinoff, the popular leading lady, will shortly be seen. This production will be released by Kalem company, Monday, May 17.

Miss Farinoff enacts the character of Dorinda, the unhappy wife of Thorston, a brute. Among the novel effects shown in the photoplay is a fire at sea.

Like "An Innocent Sinner," the "Broadway Favorites" feature which preceded it, "The Lure of Mammon," is in three acts and will be released by Kalem in regular service.

Lasky Announces 7 Releases for Summer Period

Company Will Put on Paramount Program in June, July and August "The Fighting Hope," "The Wild Goose Chase" and Other Strong Plays

SAMUEL GOLDFISH announces on behalf of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company that it has been definitely decided to release through the Paramount program seven exceptional productions during the summer months of June, July and August.

The releases are as follows: Laura Hope Crews, who has been engaged by the Lasky Company and David Belasco in association, through an arrangement with Morris Gest, in the film version of William J. Hurlbut's American domestic drama, "The Fighting Hope"; Ina Claire, in an especially merry comedy of youthful romance by William C. De Mille, entitled "The Wild Goose Chase"; Edgar Selwyn, one of America's foremost stars and playwrights in a picturization of his own dramatic success, "The Arab"; Blanche Sweet, in a photodrama founded on "The Secret Orchard," adapted by Channing Pollock from the novel by Agnes and Egerton Castle; Blanche Sweet in a picture version of the new play by Margaret Turnbull entitled "The Clue"; Charlotte Walker, in a photo-drama rendition of Charles Kenyon's American drama, "Kindling," presented by arrangement with Edward J. Bowes; and Fannie Ward, in a picturization of her success, "The Marriage of Kitty," which was originally written in French by Fred de Gresac as "La Passerelle" and adapted into English by Cosmos Gordon Lennox.

FRITZI BRUNETTE BOOKED FOR UNITED TIME

Fritzi Brunette, who plays the leads in the Santa Barbara dramas, released through the Kriterion service, will be one of the featured players to appear on the United time over the Keith circuit through New York City and vicinity.

Miss Brunette is booked for an indefinite period. She will appear for four days at each theatre in one production.

"THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY"

(Lubin Special—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

"THE District Attorney" is one of those dramas in which corrupt politics plays a prominent part. In this case the "gang" finds a victim in one Frank Pierson, who becomes their tool on the promise of $50,000, which will enable him to marry the girl he loves, Helen Knight.

Pierson is railroaded to prison, believing he will be pardoned in three months through the influence of the gangsters, who however, conveniently forget their promises for their own safety's sake.

After three years slip by without his release, Pierson becomes desperate and instrusts his case to his sweetheart and to General Ruggles, conducting a reform newspaper. The rest of the story is mostly taken up with Helen's efforts to interest the newly elected district attorney in the case of her sweetheart.

How she is fooled into believing him an enemy and how this belief leads her to give up the only evidence Pierson has to substantiate his story is unfolded as the picture progresses. In the end the innocent victim is released through the efforts of the reformer, Ruggles, all of the guilty are punished in true story book fashion and the arrogant boss, desperately ill, has only death in sight or imprisonment if he by chance recovers.

Dorothy Bernard and A. H. Van Buren specially engaged by Lubin for this play, take the parts of Frank Pierson and Helen

ONE MAN AGAINST THE REST

Knight in an adequate manner. Both do good work in the trial scene where Helen declines to testify for fear of bringing the vials of wrath of the district attorney down on her head, and he misunderstands her silence as a betrayal of his trust. George Soule Spencer, though well cast as the district attorney, has not much chance for any unusual acting.

All the gangsters, Charles Brandt, the boss; Peter Lang and Ferdinand Tidmarsh, his henchmen, look like real grafters and act up to their looks. Rosetta Brice and Ruth Bryan are the Brainerd girls, the former becoming the wife of John Stratton, the district attorney, their wedding forming one of the prettiest scenes of the play.

Although the date is not yet decided upon. "The District Attorney" will be one of the early releases of the new V-S-L-E combination.

"SALAMBO"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THE World Film Company offers an excellent production in "Salambo," founded on Gustave Flaubert's famous story, which in the estimation of Arthur Symonds, the distinguished English critic, is the most perfect historical novel in any language. In the earlier scenes of the photodrama the producer sticks faithfully to the book, but departs from the original version in the final episodes to give the film a "happy ending."

The liberty taken with the great novelist's arrangement of material in no way mars the story. Indeed, it is an improvement—if one might commit heresy by such a statement in connection with one of the world's literary masterpieces—for the present purpose. In the play the Carthaginian priestess marries her lover, Matho, leader of the mercenaries in revolt against the great Punic city, whereas Flaubert makes the man die a violent death almost before the very eyes of Hamilcar's grief-stricken daughter.

The producer has taken advantage of such of the book's dramatic incidents that lend themselves to strong picturization. Numerous scenes were introduced having very little action. This was not a drawback, as it might seem at first, if one expected a constant succession of swiftly moving incidents crammed full of exciting moments. These "slow" scenes, because of their spectacular nature, served to give historical atmosphere, which enabled the spectator to imagine for the time being that he was present at events in the stirring times of 2,000 years ago in the only city that succeeded in disputing for any length of time the supremacy of Rome, the mistress of the ancient world.

One or two sets were not worked out with the usual care shown in the rest of the play. For instance, the walls of Carthage, filled with the city's inhabitants looking on the departing mercenaries with relief, were of flimsy construction and failed to convey the impression of massive masonry. Then in the subtitles the name of Hamilcar was spelled Amilcar with maddening consistency. This, however, is a small matter which will pass unnoticed by the average audience.

The spectators will be more apt to watch with breathless interest such thrilling scenes as the entrance of Matho and Spendius into Carthage through the aqueduct, and the theft of the sacred veil from the idol Tanit by the daring leader and his faithful companion.

The general treatment of the story evidences a desire on the part of the producers to make the film suitable for family audiences, for they have been very discreet in the handling of certain parts of the book which might seem in the eyes of some directors capable of more vivid presentation—notably the visit of Salambo to the tent of Matho in the dead of night.

This scene—a very necessary part to a logical continuation of the plot—is introduced with all delicacy necessary to prevent offense among particular audiences. Exhibitors may feel in booking this picture that there is no danger of getting a subject on their hands which reveals the unabashed realism of the ancient mind, so appalling to our modern viewpoint.

"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS"

(Imp-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN the course of its adaptation to the screen "The Corsican Brothers" has been completely modernized. In the Paris scenes modern dress is in vogue, both for men and women. While this is not exactly following the original story by Alexandre Dumas, the subject as presented forms an interesting tale, replete with original situations, although the correct atmosphere is, of course, lost.

Consequently as a picture of modern Corsican life the three reels are entertaining. The hand of Alexandre Dumas shows in the plot which is exceptionally novel. In its production George

A. Lessy has displayed good judgment in retaining the essentials of the story for the screen version.

The plot hinges about two twin brothers who were born much in the same manner as the renowned Siamese twins. When separated each one has the peculiar faculty of experiencing the same sensations of the other. So, when one brother is killed in a duel, in which he participated to avenge an insult of a lady, the other feels a death-like pain in his side. He goes to the city and avenges both the insult and his brother's death.

King Baggot, playing in both these parts, does very well, investing the roles with the same modernisms that are apparent in the rest of the picture. The double exposures are cleverly handled. Hal Clarendon is the heavy Chateau Renard. Both Mr. Baggot and Mr. Clarendon display considerable ability in the duel scenes, which are most exciting. Jane Gail is Emilie, and Mrs. Brundage, Frank Smith and Ned Reardon complete the cast.

Considering everything, including photography and scenes, this will make an acceptable feature for those who do not object to seeing Dumas modernized.

"LONELY LOVERS"

(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

IN "Lonely Lovers," which will be released on April 26, Maibelle Heikes Justice offers a drama which portrays a few pages from the lives of the inmates of a theatrical boarding house.

Human interest, rather than thrills or exciting situations, is successfully used to make this an interesting production. The cast headed by William Stowell and Marian Warner do good work in interpreting the different characters which congregate around the boarding house table.

Violet Wynne, a young and inexperienced aspirant for stage honors, is much ridiculed by two veteran actresses, but is defended by Van Cleet, a comedian, and by Jerry Phillips. The latter falls in love with her and does all in his power to make her struggle easier.

At last she wins a place as leading woman in a great tragedian's company after the two self-admittedly great actresses had been turned down. She and Jerry are quietly married at the Church Around the Corner, and every occupant of the boarding house is happy except the two who had laughed at Violet's efforts.

"THE DAY OF RECKONING"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

JUST before the birth of her child, an innocent young girl is brutally left by the man who had deceived her into thinking that he is her legal husband.

Penniless she leaves her baby with a good-hearted motherly neighbor and finds employment in a department store Her employer, a wealthy young bachelor, becomes interested in her and when she breaks down from worry and over-work, he has her cared for at the hospital.

Later he asks her to marry him and she accepts without informing him of her past. After their marriage they adopt her baby whom she leads him to believe is the orphan child of her cousin. Years later her betrayer and an adventuress learn of her wealthy marriage. In their attempt to blackmail her, her husband discovers the whole truth, but on account of the child, whom he has come to love dearly, he finally forgives the deception and determines to forget the past.

On the whole the work of the cast, which includes Vivian Rich, David Lythgoe, Louise Lester, Jack Richardson, and Charlotte Burton, is good, but the best acting is done by an exceptionally cunning baby, whose actions are thoroughly natural and not in the least forced.

Charlotte Burton and Jack Richardson, in the role of the villain and adventuress, respectively, deserve special praise, and Vivian Rich, as usual, makes a heroine of attractive qualities.

"THE FENCING MASTER"

(Majestic-Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT seems a pity that Mutual Master Pictures exclude from their ranks subjects only two reels in length, for "The Fencing Master" is surely deserving of the greatly misused appellation "feature." However, exhibitors who book only program service may congratulate themselves on having the opportunity to obtain such a meritorious two-reel drama at program prices.

Just a plain story is presented in the picture, and for this very reason it is attractive. Nothing melodramatic is aimed at, and consequently nothing improbable is achieved in the story's picturization.

In scenic effects and photography the entire two reels leave no room for criticism of a condemning variety. The costumes worn by the various players are carried with an ease and grace which takes one back several generations, and no modernisms have crept in uninvited.

The leads of the story are effectively handled by Thomas Jefferson, who is seen in the title role; Teddy Samson as his ward, Frank Bennett as his son, and George Walsh as the heavy.

The three male principals mentioned are creditable exponents of the neglected art of fencing, and the two duels which are fought for life or death add a series of genuine thrills to the realistic story.

THE DUEL IN THE WOODS

While the first few scenes of the drama, depicting the events which lead to the adoption of the orphan by the Fencing Master, are technically padding, their appearance may be pardoned on the ground that they are both short and interesting.

The story tells how the Fencing Master was partially paralyzed while giving a lesson; subsequently how his son entered into a duel with the best fencer in France to avenge an insult to his father's ward, how he was worsted and how the father, regaining the use of his arm, avenged both the rankling insult and his son's injury.

"THE COMMUTERS"

(George Kleine—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

WHOEVER writes the scenarios for George Kleine's adaptations of plays which have been comedy successes on the speaking stage is an exceptionally able script expert, for though comedy is the frailest subject in the world, none of its value is lost in the adaptation. If anything, it is increased by well chosen, close-up views, and exceptionally funny subtitles.

The idea of preceding a close view of an alarm clock in action by a subtitle reading "the commuter's rooster," or showing a close up of a fork manipulating a bow of spaghetti is funnier on the screen than words convey. These two isolated examples do not give a sufficiently strong idea of the way the fun is sustained throughout the picture.

"ME GO AROUND BEGGING GRUB? NEVER!"

For instance, an empty street is shown in a suburban village. Then comes a view of the approaching train. Then a subtitle, "the commuters' marathon," and then a view of the street suddenly becoming populated as people surge into it, all running for the train.

There is plenty of basic material in the plot, the fundamental part of which lies in Larry Brice visiting cabarets, instead of seeing the boss off for Europe, and bringing home a comedy orchestra leader.

All sorts of entanglements follow in riotous succession, and there is never a dull moment.

Irene Fenwick makes her screen debut as Hetty Brice, the wife, and proves attractive and accomplished. George LeGuere is the husband. Dan Moyles and Della Connors are seen in roles very small for such able farceurs.

Briefly—a comedy that is a comedy.

"THE LILY OF POVERTY FLAT"

(California-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN "The Lily of Poverty Flat," the California Motion Picture Corporation has presented another visualization of a Bret Harte work, or to be more exact a combination of three of his poems, which some time ago were together offered as a play.

Although the story must have appeared exasperatingly simple to the adaptor and director of the play, Alexander Beyfuss, he is to be congratulated on his handling of the subject. The story as given on the film, appears as Bret Harte's works read. No foreign counterplots have been introduced, and except in rare instances the characters are skillfully cast.

Past productions of this company have proved that in the selection of fitting and artistic locations, they have few equals. Practically all the important scenes in the five reels comprising this picture are exteriors, and as such they are praiseworthy examples. The greater part of these beautiful locations are supported by photography of a distinct and pleasing nature, in a very few of them the correct focus has not been secured.

The plot moves with less rapidity than most, but as the picture progresses, its action becomes faster and is punctuated by stirring thrills. The stage hold-up is very well executed, Joe's fight with the Indian is realistically handled, and his dive from no mean height into the swift river has a startling effect. The climax in which Hamlin is contending with the two desperadoes, and his belated rescue by Lily is productive of great suspense.

Lily of Poverty Flat is loved by both the miner, Joe, and the gambler, Hamlim. She favors the former. A jealous woman leads Lily to believe that Joe is a squaw man. She leaves the town in company with her father, mother and Hamlin, for a long stay in Paris. They return on the day that Joe has been captured by robbers. Hamlin in his efforts to rescue his rival is killed, and afterwards explanations are in order between Lily and Joe.

Beatriz Michelena, playing in the title role, is called upon to exercise a great bit of versatility over the part. In the light scenes her performance is pleasing, in the heavier parts, which are fewer in number, she is not so effective. Frederick Lewis as Joe is consistently good, although he tends to overact in some scenes. Andrew Robson plays the sympathetic part of Hamlin in fine fashion.

NEW YORK OPERATOR MADE HAPPY

MORRIS J. POTKER, 493 East 170th street, New York, a member of Local No. 306, Operators' Union, New York, was presented with a nine-pound baby boy on Saturday, March 27. Both Mrs. Potker and the boy are doing well.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Seventeen)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

BY the introduction of a Chinese criminal as the source of the schemes concocted to harm Elaine and Craig Kennedy the atmosphere of the serial has been slightly changed, but it is notable that there has been none of the familiar hackneyed stuff that saw its best days during the height of the stage melodrama. Instead there is a succession of original situations, calculated to keep any audience excited.

At the end of the last chapter Elaine was a captive in the hands of Wu Fang and his gang. In spite of desperate efforts on the part of Kennedy this instalment closes with her in the same predicament, and apparently in still greater peril. The girl's capture was due to Wu Fang's determination to get the mystic ring which she had, no matter what obstacles might be in the way.

Accordingly he instructed her to send for it as the price of her release. This she did, but Kennedy who planned to be prepared, had made a duplicate of it, and told the girl's aunt that he would give this to the Chinaman. Wu Fang himself heard this from the Chinese idol in which he had concealed himself as a means of getting into the girl's home.

Going to the mystic cave, he and his friend Long Sin use the real ring stolen from Elaine's aunt, and with it open the treasure vault of the Clutching Hand. Knowing Kennedy and Jameson to be close on their trail they put the fortune in jewels back in its place and escape.

With the duplicate ring Kennedy and Jameson open the vault and make off with the gems. But their happiness is small. Although they have found the fortune they have lost Elaine, and the last heard of her is the Chinaman's threat to kill her at once.

There are many fine and ingenious scenes in the picture, which space does not permit describing at length. It is fully in keeping with the general excellence of preceding "Elaine" chapters.

"BLINDFOLDED"

(Essanay—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"BLINDFOLDED," to be released on April 27, is a detective drama written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr. The maintenance of interest throughout the two reels is assured by several exciting situations and by the withholding of the solution of the mystery until the very last. The cast is headed by Richard C. Travers and Nell Craig, whose work is thoroughly convincing.

ACQUIRING THE CRYSTAL BUTTERFLY

Arnold Blaine, a clever rogue, is captured in possession of the Crystal Butterfly, a rare piece of jewelry which he has stolen from Andrew Meredith. Milburn Warren an amateur detective in love with Meredith's daughter, Bernice, is responsible for the capture of the crook.

In order to prevent a future theft, the jewel is hidden in a secret compartment in a bookcase and a clever trap is set in such a way that anyone rifling the compartment will set off a flash-light photograph. The jewel is again stolen and the photograph unmistakably is that of Blaine who is still in jail; also the finger prints on the safe are identical with Blaine's marks.

Warren in attempting to solve the mystery is captured and dragged to a deserted house, but is later rescued by the police. It then transpires that a second robbery was committed by Blaine's twin brother, who used a rubber tip to register the print of Blaine's finger.

"WHO VIOLATES THE LAW"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

MELODRAMA pure and simple albeit exceptionally good of its kind is this picture, the scenario furnished by Herman A. Blackburn.

Arthur Johnson will lose none of his well deserved popularity as director and leading man, for he has done excellent directing here—nothing over done where there was much scope for such a fault.

LENA A PRISONER IN MOTHER BOND'S DEN

As Bob Nelson, the enterprising reporter, he has a sympathetic and well-acted part. In fact, every one of this cast is so good it is hard to discriminate. Lottie Briscoe as the sheriff's daughter, and Eleanor Blanchard, as Mother Bond, keeper of the "speak easy," near the Old Soldiers' Home, are veritable wonders in their big scene, when Lottie as Lena Black is lured to the den on the pretense of getting evidence to prove her sweetheart Bob innocent of the murder for which he has been arrested.

Mother Bond hopes thus to get even with Sheriff Black, who she thinks, has squealed on her after winking at her "violating the law" for his part of the graft. Here events fall thick and fast. Lena is gagged and bound while the dive keepers fight desperately about her.

She is at last on the point of being rescued by Hanky Pank, a tough and tool of the corrupt sheriff, who however, has one good spot, his love for Lena. This causes him at the crucial moment to rise even above his jealousy of his successful rival Bob. In the hurly-burly Lena has managed to reach her father by 'phone, but before his posse can come to Lena's rescue Mother Bond is killed. In the melee the lamp is overturned and Lena and Hank are caught in the trap with all doors locked.

He, wounded by the thugs, still tries to carry Lena to safety but fails and when rescue comes it's too late for him. He dies, after confessing himself the murderer instead of Bob. Pank, played by Howard Mitchell, and Sheriff Black, by Bernard Seigel, deserve their share of praise. The fight and fire scenes are most realistic. A particularly good piece of camera work shows Lottie Briscoe bound and gagged under the table. Lottie and Eleanor Blanchard were so bruised and battered in this scene there wasn't a well spot on their bodies.

"CAPTAIN MACKLIN"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

AS a stylist Richard Harding Davis has most decided limitations, but his romances of Central American revolutions have a dash which carries away the reader in spite of himself. "Captain Macklin" is such a story, and is therefore particularly suitable for screen production.

In fact, as a film the narrative is decidedly more convincing than in book form. In cold type the exploits of the soldier of fortune seem rather hard to swallow in some places, but this element of doubt is entirely removed by the realistic effects produced by the aid of the camera.

THE ASSAULT ON THE HILL

The most striking feature about the story is the very liberal changes which have been made in Mr. Davis' plot. So great are the alterations that the heroine does not marry the same man as in the original. Besides this, there are many other changes. For the most part these may be fairly said to be of a sort which strengthen the dramatic force of the novel, and hence its effectiveness on the screen.

Jack Conway in the title role handles the part in a gay and debonair manner which is quite in keeping with it. Lillian Gish as the captain's sweetheart is charming. An unusual sort of role for Spottiswoode Aitken is that of General Laguerre, but it is one which is played in a most finished style. John B. O'Brien produced the picture at the Majestic studios.

In its altered form the story is briefly as follows. Royal Macklin, the youngest of a line of army officers, is expelled from West Point for a minor infraction of the rules. As a result his sweetheart's father ends his engagement, but he meets her for a farewell and tells her that he will make good elsewhere.

Going to Central America he becomes a Captain in the Foreign Legion of General Laguerre. His sweetheart's father, who is interested in a big company carrying on business in Anduras, takes the girl and goes to the country at the suggestion of a supposed friend, who has gone there to further his plans.

This man causes the arrect of the American and seizes his daughter, who has refused his attentions at home. The father escapes, and reaching Laguerre's camp tells the news. An immediate attack is made on the town, and of course the gallant Captain Macklin, after dashing through the thick of the fighting, rescues the girl, and there is a joyous reunion.

The settings are effective, although some of the battle scenes might have been a little improved. On the whole the production is a fine example of the Latin-American revolution picture.

"RUNAWAY JUNE"

(Reliance—Instalment Fifteen)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

RUNAWAY JUNE has run her limit. Ned, "the deserted husband," may now shed his pathetic appellation and assume a smile, for June has been caught, after thirty thousand feet of running. June, be it known, has accomplished her purpose in running away. For during all these fifteen weeks she has been earning enough money to cause her independence from her husband on the financial question.

And in what manner did she earn the money, you may rightfully ask? And the answer is, June has been masquerading as a motion picture actress, hence the wild pursuit. Of course, she might have explained this to husband Ned, but evidently this thought eluded her mind. Blye might also have offered a solution to the erstwhile exasperated husband regarding his own and June's conduct, instead of adopting the idea that Ned was a lunatic, but it seems that he was too much engrossed in his work as leading man to give much thought to the question.

In fact, a great number of flaws might be picked as to the logic of the concluding chapter, and its relation to those which went before, but this would be a waste of space. Ned is apologetic when he learns of his wife's act, they are reconciled and supposedly resume their interrupted honeymoon.

We have now seen the last of Norma Phillips, Arthur Donaldson, J. W. Johnston, Marguerite Loveridge and the others, as characters in the Chester play. However, their reappearance in something of a different nature may be anticipated with the greatest of pleasure.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Eighth Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MUCH of the action in this episode centers around Craig, the servant of Professor Ashleigh, who escaped in the previous chapter. Craig's freedom is short lived, for when he arrives in England he is detained by Scotland Yard officials and taken to Lord Ashleigh for identification. This duty his lordship readily performs, but during the transfer of the criminal from the Ashleigh manor to the county jail he escapes from his captors.

That evening he is pursued by hounds and a posse made up of the manor servants, but he successfully evades them after a long chase which is responsible for a considerable amount of excitement. When the pursuit is at last given up Craig takes refuge in the cellar of the Ashleigh castle, knowing well its numerous mysterious passages and counter passages, having once served its owner.

QUEST MAKES A DISCOVERY CRAIG EVADES THE POSSE

Quest suspects that Craig will make his hiding place beneath the edifice and explores the regions below, but meets with little success.

The scene of action for the time being is now England, and, of course, all the principal characters have been transferred. The English atmosphere is very well conveyed to the spectator.

This change of locale has brought the two Ashleigh brothers together, and as William Worthington is playing both parts, double exposures have been made necessary, which are cleverly handled.

It is now a confirmed fact that Craig is a real criminal, as his conduct and the fact that Quest discovered that numerous of his ancesters had committed foul deeds bring forth proof conclusive of this. The mysterious manner of the professor has yet to be explained.

"THE CAPTIVE"

(Lasky—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

BLANCHE SWEET and House Peters have the leading roles in this romantic drama which marks Miss Sweet's second appearance in Lasky pictures. Strange to say, House Peters is the captive, not Miss Sweet, as would be the natural inference.

Peters plays Mahmud Hassan, a Turkish nobleman, who is captured by Montenegrins and turned over to Sonia, played by Miss Sweet, to till the fields and generally play the servant under the influence of her big horsewhip.

A satisfactory sub-title explains that captives were put to this sort of work that agriculture might go on during recent hostilities.

Then comes the subjugation of the noble captive, whom Sonia hates for his race and rank. He is made to feel humiliation and the sting of the whip. His sufferings are alleviated by the friendship of Sonia's little brother, Milos, and an innocent flirtation which brings Sonia to her senses.

SONIA AND THE SOLDIERS

Battle scenes follow and Hassan saves Sonia from the brutality of the soldiers. After the war Hassan is evicted by his own government. Thus any possible class distinction is swept away and he returns to wed Sonia.

Artistic effects and pretty scenes help greatly. Miss Sweet's work is a distinct advance over her "Warrens of Virginia." The somewhat tenuous plot is aided and abetted by considerable detail. For instance, the humiliation of Hassan is gone into at great length. He has to eat at a side table, make bread, plow, wash clothes and draw water, each separate incident being fully developed. Little Gerald Ward adds a lovable touch as little Milos. House Peters, like business in England, is "as usual," meaning excellent. "The Captive" is an original script by Cecil B. De Mille, who undoubtedly had his leading characters in mind.

"A COUNTRY LAD"

(United-Ideal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AFTER reading a book descriptive of the underworld of a great city the country boy dreams of being enticed from his home town by a band of crooks, and made a mere tool in their hands. His adventures while with the thieves are fraught with thrills of the most sensational sort.

George Larkin, who plays the title part, has long since proved himself an acrobat of almost unequaled ability, and his opportunities to exercise his dare-devil tendencies in this story are manifold. Such feats as climbing down a water pipe from the roof of a high building and swinging from one fire escape to another, seem very simple to Mr. Larkin, and consequently have the effect of creating a most thrilling sensation.

Supporting Mr. Larkin is Dolly Larkin, playing his sweetheart. For a thrilling two reeler this one takes the prize. The photography, scenes and direction are all good.

"MAN'S PREROGATIVE"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

PERHAPS it would be going too far to say that this picture actually advocates a double standard of morality for men and women, but if it does not do this it points out strongly the deep-seated belief in such a standard, which is so widely advocated by men.

At the beginning is a subtitle of some length advocating the view that when a woman turns from the path of virtue not only herself but her children suffer. Man, on the contrary, can, according to the writer of this subtitle, sin without harming anyone but himself.

From the foregoing it should appear plainly enough that the film is one which deals with sex problems in a decidedly open and direct manner. No matter what a person's views on these matters may be he cannot help but be held by the power of this drama. It is based on the story of the same title by Frank E. Woods, and was produced at the Reliance studios with a strong cast.

In the role of the sinning husband Robert Edeson does effective acting, with equally good support by Mary Alden as his wife. Charles Clary plays the part of the wife's friend. Billie West does her best as the vampire woman, but it is a role which she is a bit too charming to fill in just the conventional style.

THE MAN FORGETS HIS WIFE

A lawyer marries a young writer, who has the highest ideals of the home and married life. Their first months together are fully in accord with her fondest hopes, but then the husband meets a dazzling beauty at the studio of an artist friend.

The wife, seeing her husband's infatuation, pretends to be in love with the artist, and carries the affair so far that everyone considers her guilty, though she is innocent. When her child is born her husband questions whether he is its father. Later a dying statement from the artist convinces him that his wife has never erred, and there is a meeting at which she forgives him for his sin, and they start anew. Their child, however, has died.

VIVIAN RICH CAST FOR AMERICAN HEART INTEREST DRAMA

AMID majestic coast scenery, the second "Flying A" company, from the American studios, has produced a striking drama of heart interest and tenderness under title of "When Empty Hearts Are Filled."

Harry Von Meter has been cast as Paul Latham, a crippled fisherman whose heart is made glad by the finding of a baby girl washed ashore tied to a raft, a character of love and affection. With Vivian Rich as the dutiful wife, the picture presents many touching episodes.

"EDISON NIGHT" TAKES WELL IN BROOKLYN THEATRE

A COMPLETE Edison program followed by the personal appearance of some of the Edison stars was presented at the opening of the new Albany theatre, St. Johns place and Albany avenue, Brooklyn, Monday night, April 19.

William Brandt, the manager, is to be congratulated on the beauty and good taste shown in this playhouse. A believer in simplicity, he has decorated the whole interior in white, breaking it only with a black border around the curtain. The spacious lobby creates an atmosphere of dignity which is well borne out by the interior decorations and the pictures shown. The seating capacity is six hundred, and even standing room was at a premium.

The roof is fitted up as an airdome and if the first night is any indication of the popularity the theatre is to enjoy, there will not be any vacant seats above, where 1,000 can be accommodated.

The program consisted of "The Stoning," "A Deadly Hate," "An Unpaid Ransom," "The Cook's Mistake" and "A Sad Awakening." It is difficult to say which received the most applause, the pictures or the appearance of the actors and actresses, but there was plenty to go round and leave everybody satisfied.

Viola Dana, Robert Conness, Marc McDermott and Augustus Phillips each made a short speech which was greeted with approval.

Mr. Brandt asserts that he will keep up the high standard set by this performance. Several "Edison Nights" are on his program and he is at present planning a "Charles Chaplin Week."

MINUSA PUTS SCREEN IN ST. LOUIS HIPPODROME

THE Minusa Cine Products Company of St. Louis has just completed the construction of a special screen for the Hippodrome of St. Louis. Many difficulties not ordinarily encountered were overcome before perfect screen results were obtained. Foremost among these adverse conditions was the extreme width, 83 feet. This width would ordinarily cause a great deal of distortion and fade-away to the side, so a very rough molded surface was used. The results are fine.

Mr. Oldham of Louisville will be in charge of the Hippodrome and will open the house with "The Heart of Maryland." The Hippodrome seats 2,500; the prices charged for the best of feature programs will be five and ten cents.

This will be the first feature house of size for the downtown district of St. Louis and everyone is watching with interest the outcome.

ARTHUR SIEDLE DESIGNS SET FOR KALEM PLAY

ARTHUR SIEDLE, technical director for the Metropolitan opera company, has just completed a design for a magnificent hotel lobby setting, to be used in the Kalem company's forthcoming detective series, "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel."

Mr. Siedle's experience as a designer of stage settings commenced some forty years ago, when he became a member of the Drury Lane theatre forces. He came to America in 1878, with Col. Mapleson. The last twenty years have been spent with the Metropolitan opera company.

When Kalem determined to spare neither effort nor expense in making the principal set of "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" worthy of the series, Mr. Siedle, as the foremost authority in this particular field, came to mind.

FIRST PARAMOUNT TRAVEL FILM SETS STANDARD

AN interesting introductory film to the Paramount travel pictures has been shown in many of the theatres during the past month and the consensus of opinion seems to have been that Paramount would not be able to keep up the high standard of quality.

The first release, however, which appears April 12 and includes the hydro-aeroplane pictures, is far and away ahead of the introductory film. The different sections of this release are of high scenic value, and the river scenes give one a new idea of the Florida waterways. The foliage-crowned banks and the large variety of craft which ply about and penetrate far into the mysterious everglades make the Paramount trip to Florida as quaint as it is interesting.

KANE SEEKS INTEREST OF "DRYS" IN "PROHIBITION"

THE feature film, "Prohibition," will probably play an important part in the preliminary campaign work for the presidential election of 1916, as already the Prohibition party, always sought by the major parties as being one of the balances of power, are preparing to use it in winning votes for the cause.

In Washington this week, the exhibition and support of the picture as a vote-winning measure, was discussed and warmly recommended, and it is not unlikely that the Prohibition party will adopt it as their national "film organ."

Dr. P. A. Baker, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, in charge of the "dry" legation at Washington, is actively promulgating a physical demonstration before the very doors of Congress with thousands of men and women wearing white ribbons.

Robert T. Kane, president of the Prohibition Film Corporation, at his offices, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, this week also reported that he has received and will accept the powerful aid of The Gideons, the national association of traveling men, who through their probity belie the usual stage idea of the wild-living drummer.

This organization, it will be remembered, put bibles in almost every room in every hotel in the country. They now propose to similarly distribute literature on "Prohibition."

PHOTOPLAY AUTHORS RE-ELECT FRANK WOODS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, April 19.

THE annual election of officers of the Photoplay Authors' League of America was closed Saturday night, April 10, after allowing the members, who are now in all parts of America, to ballot either by mail or personally. The vote showed the re-election of Frank E. Woods, manager of production at the Majestic-Reliance studios, president, and Russell E. Smith, Mr. Woods' assistant, was made vice-president.

Hetty Gray Baker was elected secretary, Richard Willis, treasurer; William Lord Wright, first vice-president, and Richard Harding David, second vice-president. Besides the first three-named officers, the board of control will be composssd of D. W. Griffith, Mary H. O'Connor and W. E. Wing.

In and Out of Town

HARRY R. RAVER and Mrs. Raver are in Havana, Cuba. where Mr. Raver just presented "Cabiria."

Guy L. Wonders, of the Wilson theatre, Baltimore, Md., visited New York recently, staying at the Elks' club.

Edward "Waistcoat" Barry, well remembered through his long connection with Ambrosio in this country, is making a brief visit from England, where he has been located for the past two years. He is stopping at the Hotel Flanders.

Carle E. Carlton, owner of the Imperial theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., the Lyric theatre in Butler, Pa., and several other motion picture theatres in that part of the state, was in New York last week looking over the business in general.

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Program

At this time, when the Motion Picture trade is rife with announcements of new programs, great pictures, better systems of distribution, and—

There is a general realization that better pictures for better people are to be—in fact, are—in vogue; and even the newest factors are discovering that such fundamental principles as longer runs, higher admissions, better presentation and finer theatres are essentials of success—

While the oldest companies, who for years have ignored these principles, are now exhorting their exhibitors to adopt them.

In view of all this, it is highly advisable that the

Paramount Pictures Corporation

take this opportunity of setting forth in detail the things for which it has stood;

To let those already interested, and those who will be interested, know what Paramount really has accomplished.

Paramount Policies

Paramount Pictures Corporation was organized with a definite policy, to inaugurate certain ideas in the film industry.

Paramount originated and first advocated the ideas of:

A Regularly Released Feature Program

Longer Runs

Higher Admissions

Better Theatres

Better Patrons

Paramount first carried out a systematized campaign of national advertising.

Paramount Efficiency Systems first placed the exhibiting business on a business basis, thereby enabling exhibitors to improve and build theatres.

Paramount is the only company that has created unquestioned prestige for exhibitors of its program.

The three leading producers releasing through Paramount Program have advanced the quality of feature service to the highest plane yet attained in the history of the motion picture art. These producers tell of their general and current activities in the following pages:

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Children's House." (Biograph. Mon., April 26.)—The famous Montessori method of caring for young children is shown in this picture, which depicts children at work and play in one of the "children's houses" patterned after the ideas of the Italian educator. The picture is to be a part of the New York exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

As suggested by the makers, the film is one which offers exhibitors a good chance for publicity by interesting the local Board of Education in the methods shown. The child players are also of unusual interest.

"Adam Bede." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., April 27.)—George Eliot's great novel is dramatized in this picture, which is the thirty-fourth of the maker's two-reel productions of well-known stories. The story is one of peculiar pathos, despite the fact that it deals with a situation world-old.

A girl loves a man above her class, and as a result loses her virtue. Thinking to do what is for the best, she kills her child and is sentenced to death. She is pardoned, and before she dies brings together her honest carpenter friend and former suitor, Adam Bede, and a girl who loves him.

This is a mere skeleton of a strong story. It is a costume play with the action taking place in England about the end of the eighteenth century. Franklin Ritchie plays the title role, Louise Vale appears as the unfortunate, Hetty Sorrel, and Dinah Morris is portrayed by Gretchen Hartman.

"Fool's Gold." (Biograph. Thurs., April 29.)—This is a Western story of a dull old school which is slowly dying out. It includes all the elements, battle, murder, jealousy and romance. Joseph McDermott and Mary Malatesta play the leading parts.

"His Poor Little Girl." (Biograph. Fri. April 20.)—The troubles of a poor girl at a fashionable finishing school are the basis of this fantastically absurd story. Of course, there is the hero who deserts the snobbish misses who have snubbed the poor girl, and marries her. In the cast are Rea Martin, Gus Pixley, Irma Dawkins and Jack Mulhall.

"A Double Winning." (Biograph. Sat., April 21.)—Tiresome as the theme is, there seems no end of pictures showing a wealthy city clubman who for some foolish reason finds himself in the heart of the wilds, and there wins the affections of a country girl. This picture is one built on this badly frazzled plot. In the cast are Charles West, Harry Carey and Helen Bray.

"The Idle Rich." (Edison. Tues., April 27.)—William Wadsworth and Arthur Housman appear in this comedy as "traveling men" of the side door Pullman sort. A bank messenger drops a $1,000 bill, which they find. This leads them through some surprising adventures, during which there is a large amount of slapstick work. Thanks to their activities a boob detective manages to stumble onto a discovery about the lost money.

"Count Macaroni." (Edison. Wed., April 28.)—This is the familiar old story of introducing a fake count in order to lessen the popularity of a visiting nobleman. The nobleman is really a street cleaner, and the arrival of his wife and family results in some lively and amusing complications during the course of an evening dance. Gladys Hulette is the heroine.

"Poisoned by Jealousy." (Edison. Two reels Fri., April 30.)—The improbability of this story robs it of much of the interest which might attach to it if a little more care had been given to the plot. Two Italians are suitors for a girl in Italy. After her marriage her husband goes to America to seek his fortune and by a lucky accident becomes a successful opera singer.

Meanwhile the jealous rival in Italy withholds all the communications which the couple send to each other, and at last sends word to each that the other has died. An accidental meeting when the singer revisits his old home leads to a belated happiness and punishment for the false friend. Bessie Learn is seen as Dolce, the Italian girl. The two men are played by Carlton King and Harry Beaumont.

"His Convert." (Edison. Sat., May 1.)—A clubman jeering at the work of a Salvation Army preacher lays a bet that he can go out on a street corner and make as many converts as the real minister. He meets with a startling sort of success when he discovers that he has converted a girl of the underworld, who as a result of his earnest exhortations decides to forsake her ways and seek righteousness.

The impromptu preacher is enabled to help her in her decision and to save her from the man who has been exercising his baneful influence over her. In converting the girl he converts himself. A strong picture, but very improbable. Marc McDermott is seen as the hero.

"On the Dawn Road." (Essanay. Mon., April 26.)—Albert Roscoe, Beverly Bayne and Lester Cuneo appear in this drama, by H. Tipton Steck. It shows how a young reporter, after an exciting fight, thwarts an unscrupulous financier's plot to get control of a railroad. Incidentally he rescues the daughter of the heaviest stockholder in the road from two hired crooks and wins her love.

"Blindfolded." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., April 27.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Fable of a Night Given Over to Revelry." (Essanay. Wed., April 28.)—In this George Ade comedy, Mr. Dubley, of the class of '88, counts on having a good time at the jolly college dinner. Now the main idea at such a function is to get a flying start.

It was to be a dry dinner, so most of the sons of Bohunkus were doing what a camel does just before crossing a desert. When at 8:15 the crowd was herded into the banquet hall, the oysters had been warming up since 6:30.

Fortunately the soup was not hot enough to scald the thumb of a longshoreman who had been brought in as an extra waiter. The menu included cold storage fish, a petrified quail and some head lettuce guaranteed by a standard rubber firm.

At 11:30, the first speaker still held the floor and the cocktail brigade was dying on the vine. Then the oldest living graduate told the history of Bohunkus. He was past 90 and looked feeble, but at 2:30 a. m. he was still holding forth. They carried Mr. Dubley out on a shovel.

"The Undertaker's Uncle." (Essanay. Thurs., April 29.)—As usual in this Snakeville comedy, Slippery Slim and the Undertaker are rivals for Sophie's hand. The Undertaker hires a poor hobo to impersonate his wealthy uncle, and after Sophie is impressed with his riches, the hobo plays dead. All would have gone well had not Slim got wind of the plot. He conceals himself beneath the coffin and pricks the hobo at the crucial moment.

"The Tie That Binds." (Essanay, Fri., April 30.)—A baby left upon the door-step of a wealthy home arouses the mother instinct in a society loving wife and reunites her with her husband who was about to get a divorce. G. M. Anderson is featured in this drama, assisted by Marguerite Clayton.

"Frauds." (Essanay. Three acts. Sat., May 1.)—Zelda Dunbar, a girl detective on the trail of two notorious blackmailers, offers herself as their accomplice in luring Kendrick, a wealthy bachelor, into what might be construed to be a violation of the Mann Act. When the blackmailers offer to clear Kendrick upon the receipt of $2,000, Zelda has them arrested. In the meantime she and Kendrick have fallen in love. An excellent cast including Edna Mayo, Bryant Washburn and Thomas Commerford play this drama.

"The Haunted House of Wild Isle." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., April 26.)—Highly improbable as this story is there may be some audiences who will like it because of the slender thread of excitement. A doctor lives with his ward in a lonely house.

He discourages visitors and is aided in this by the general belief that the place is haunted by the ghost of the girl's father. A visitor meets the girl and they fall in love. On coming to the house the young man is shot at by a rifle which suddenly appears through a hole in the wall of a room.

He finally discovers that the rifle was in the hands of the girl's father, who instead of being dead has become unbalanced mentally and is shut up in a wing of the house by the doctor who thus obtains control of the estate. The fight with the older man results in an injury to his head which causes a return of reason. There is a happy reunion, and the doctor is captured.

"The Phoney Cannibal." (Kalem. Tues., April 27.)—This is an extremely poor specimen of the Ham comedies. Ham and Bud seeing a missionary exhibiting a cannibal and taking up a collection, disguise themselves as a similar pair. The result is not entirely happy.

"The Tattooed Hand." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., April 28.)—By means of a faked tattoo mark a gangster seeks to throw the detectives off the trail when he assaults a policeman. He is captured by a band headed by the girl detective, who shows no more intelligence than in any of the preceding stories of the series. She does, however, expose herself to danger in a useless and silly way. The usual cast is seen.

"The Destroyer." (Kalem. Three reels. Fri., April 30.)—Solomon in his "Proverbs" was far from the first writer to point out the destruction which overtakes the man who gives himself over to a scarlet woman. It is this great lesson which is driven home in "The Destroyer." A young man of unusually bright prospects sinks to the lowest depths of poverty stricken degradation as the result of his folly. The presentation of such a story may have a good effect. The evil and the good woman are played with effectiveness by Alice Hollister and Anna Nilsson. Harry Millards is seen as the ruined youth.

"The Box-Car Trap." (Kalem, Sat., May 1.)—Helen Holmes continues in the "Hazards of Helen" in this picture. The principal thrill is supplied by the wrecking of a large freight car which jumps the tracks and pitches down a steep embankment. A crook, who has stolen from a man who helped him in time of need is hiding in the runaway freight car, and meets his death in spite of Helen's heroic attempt to rescue him.

"The Spy's Sister." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., May 7.)—One of the numerous Civil war stories showing the struggles between love and duty of a Southern girl who has met and learned to love a Northern officer. In this case Joy Fulmer tries to save her brother, the "boy spy," from capture by her Northern sweetheart by pretending to be false to the Northern man, and claiming her disguised brother as her secret lover.

In the end the brother is killed and the true lovers are reunited by the fall of the Confederacy at Appomatox. The part of Joy and Bob Fulmer, the Southerners, and Lieutenant John Gladstone, the Northerner, are well filled by Justina Huff, Arthur W. Matthews and Edgar Jones. The latter also does the directing. Scenario by Elizabeth R. Carpenter.

"The Busy Bell Boy." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., May 8.)—This farce is full of action, and gives Pat Rooney the chance to show his brilliant dancing, as well as that of his co-star, Marion Bent. How a soda-water mixer falls in love with Marion Bent over the counter, impersonates first a bell boy, then a waiter, and last a guest, in order to be with and dance with her at the hotel, gives a chance for much comedy of the slapstick order which most people find so diverting. Clara Lambert, Gilbert Ely and George Trimble are others in the cast. Produced by A. D. Hotaling, and written by Lawrence McCloskey.

"Road o' Strife." (Lubin. Five reels. Mon., May 3.)—Will be reviewed elsewhere.

"Curses! Jack Dalton." (Lubin. Tues., May 4.)—This is a cartoon by Vincent Whitman showing two rivals for a fair maiden's hand, who, in true cartoon style, assisted by a stork, a battleship, a submarine and other objects, fight for the girl all over the screen. She is finally won by Jim Dorney, who hurls curses at Jack Dalton.

"The Twin Sister." (Lubin. Tues., May 4.) Telling how the stranger and more determined of twin sisters, Nancy, cures Bill Bolton of rooster pecking his wife and her twin, Eva, by substituting herself for Eva unknown to Bill during a few hours. This is all right in slapstick comedy, but in real life there is always some way by which a husband must know his wife from her twin. Mae Hotley is the twins, and Babe Hardy the husband.

"The Undertaker's Daughter." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., May 1.)—A comedy having a gruesome note with an undertaker's shop as the background and coffins as a feature. The man's daughter, Martha, loves John Scott, but dad favors Sime Sloan. There is a third suitor, Bime. Martha conceives the idea of making one sleep in a coffin all night while the other watches, promising to marry the successful rival.

She gets John to help frighten both men off with wind noises, etc. In their hasty exit they run amuck through a prayer meeting presided over by dad, knocking him and his brethren all over the place. Chagrined, he decides John is the best after all and makes him a partner. Produced and written by Will Louis. Acted by John and Mattie Edwards, Messrs. Kelly, Higgins and Scott.

"Safety Worst." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., May 1.)—A silly name for a silly comedy of the slapstick order, which, however, will cause a lot of people to laugh. Billington Briggs hands a "Safety First" card to a spooning couple, two fighting men, a policeman arresting a burglar and others, always getting into trouble for his pains, and finally being dumped in the river. Written by E. W. Sargent. Produced by G. T. Henener.

"Such Things Really Happen." (Lubin. Two reels. Thurs., May 6.)—As this is a story of a fake College of Photo Play Writing it ought to appeal to many people who have been lured by the promises of just such institutions. Others eager to try scenario writing should be warned by this well acted film story.

The scenario showing how Rose Archer and Steve Bradley were both fleeced of the money they were saving up for their marriage, and what came of it, makes an interesting and exciting plot. Of course the men running the College of Photo Play Writing are the villians, Rose and Steve the virtuous sufferers.

In the end, Brandon murders Milton, and is about to abduct Rose when he is foiled and she is rescued by Steve and an officer. As Brandon tries to escape a mounted cowboy happening in from a motion picture producing company helps in the chase and lassos the escaping murderer from the top of a quickly moving car. The motion picture people then proceed to help the reunited lovers so they can marry, and they return to their own walk of life.

This gives scope for many novel views relating to the picture industry. The excellent all-star cast includes Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe, Arthur Matthews, Eleanor Barry, Kempton Green, Herbert Foster. The scenario is by Campbell Emmet Hall. Produced by George Terwilliger.

"Lonely Lovers." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., April 26.)—Review at length in another part of this issue.

"The Honor of the Camp." (Selig. Tues., April 27.)—Edgar Sill, an unscrupulous miner, gets Roger Dunham into his power and endeavors to steal the latter's mining claim. Sill's plot is circumvented through the medium of Merry Waymire and her wealthy father, to whom Sill tries to sell the claim.

The miners at the camp also learn of Sill's attempt and drive him out of town. Virginia Kirtley and Robyn Adair are the principal characters in this rather unconvincing drama.

"The Voice of Eva." (Selig. Wed., April 28.)—Eva becomes a cabaret singer and wins the love of a man who disapproves of the gay life. He breaks their engagement and later Eva loses her position. A little girl finally brings them together again. Virginia Kirtley and Robyn Adair are the principals.

"At the Mask-Ball." (Selig. Fri., April 30.)—Mr. and Mrs. Prettyman, each unknown to the other, plant to attend a gay French masquerade ball. Not recognizing each other's identity, they start a flirtation which is interrupted by the entrance of a pickpocket. Mr. Prettyman, in the costume of a devil, scares everyone out of his wits and is about to be arrested when all matters are explained.

"Boobley's Baby." (Vitagraph. Mon., April 26.)—Boobley, tired of "strap-hanging" in the street cars, has discovered that anyone with a baby gets a seat. He accordingly buys a large doll, and, pretending he has a baby, finds it easy to obtain sitting room. Unfortunately he is seen by the girl he is courting and as a result has a chilly reception thereafter.

Later she sees him apparently drowning the "child," and calls the police. It turns out to be the doll which he has thrown into the lake. Some time later Boobley is shown with the girl as his wife and a fine pair of real babies. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are the cast. The picture is a good comedy.

"The Boarding House Feud." (Vitagraph. Wed., April 28.)—A rather silly comedy, but which amuses. When his uncle is away a young chap gets even with his landlady by starting a boarding house in his uncle's home having first lured all the servants from the other establishment. The uncle of course returns unexpectedly, but serious trouble is averted. Billy Quirk and Constance Talmadge play the young couple.

"Strictly Neutral." (Vitagraph. Thurs., April 29.)—Al the warring nations are represented among the servants in the Higgins' household. When the war gets well under way in Europe it is reflected in miniature on the estate. The result is a lively and entertaining picture. Flora Finch and Kate Price are two of the most militant members.

"The - Sort - of - Girl - Who - Came - from - Heaven." (Vitagraph. Fri., April 30.)—The clubman, on being asked why he never married, tells his story. He meets an actress who succeeds in making him spend a lot of money on her, and she finally informing him she is married just after he has placed an engagement ring on her finger. Anita Stewart and Earle Williams are in the leading parts of this comedy-drama, and because of their capability and popularity the picture will make quite a hit, although the story is nothing to speak of. Ralph Ince produced the picture.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Gussle's Wayward Past." (Keystone. Sat., April 10.)—At the opening of this comedy Sid Chaplin, as Gussle, is seen returning from the hunt with his faithful hound. The hound is a very small and playful puppy. From this start the picture proceeds with a highly entertaining series of mishaps in which Gussle springs the startling stunts which are always to be expected from him. A very good piece of slapstick throughout.

"The Beauty Bunglers." (Keystone. Mon., April 12.)—The amusing antics in this picture take place in a beauty parlor, which the hero conducts under the extremely watchful eye of his wife. There are many different sorts of funny stunts, and the picture can be recommended as a sure laugh-producer, although not as good as most Keystones. Some scenes in a woman's swimming pool are both novel and interesting.

"Do-Re-Mi-Boom!" (Keystone, Thurs., April 15.)—Chester Conklin is the hero of this screaming farce. The most novel feature is a runaway piano which goes coasting down a hill with the hero riding on the top and a small monkey sitting on the bow, the whole outfit apparently travelling at breakneck speed.

By way of added interest a light bomb sends clouds of smoke from the piano, and at the close of the picture everything goes up in a tremendous explosion. The musical instrument had been the property of a singing teacher whose efforts in a vocal way crowd the hero out of favor with a lady fair. There is the usual amount of slapstick stuff, and altogether the picture is a decided success.

"The Light in the Window." (Reliance. Fri., April 16.)—A miserly farmer refuses his son money. Shamed by his inability to buy anything for his sweetheart the boy attempts to take some money from his father's purse. He is detected and ordered from the house by the furious miser. The boy's sister tells him that she will put a light in the window in case her father relents.

Watching for the light the boy sees one which thieves who are robbing his father, have moved. His timely arrival results in the arrest of the thieves, and a reconciliation with his father. In the cast are Otto Lincoln, William Hinckley, Mae Gaston and Eleanor Washington.

"A Man for All That." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., April 17.)—An ex-convict finds a boy who has run away from his home and joined a circus. He takes the little fellow home, and is asked to stay. He falls in love with the boy's older sister, but leaves because he does not wish to tell her the truth about himself, or to let her name be joined with his. He is fortunately discovered by a detective, who forces him to return to his new home. There he tells the truth about the man, and shows that he was convicted falsely. The former convict then finds love and happiness. Miriam Cooper, Tom Wilson and Elmer Clifton are in the cast.

"The Highbinders." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., April 18.)—As a straight melodrama of the old school this is a particularly fine bit of work. It consists of one thrill after another, and should make a big hit with audiences who favor that type of film. Rather than marry a brutal and repellant gangster the daughter of a Chinatown saloonkeeper takes refuge with a Chinaman and marries him.

Twenty years later the Oriental tries to sell his daughter to some highbinders. The white mother and her half-caste son are aroused at this, and after a startling series of fights, killings, ffights over roofs and through devious alleys, and other forms of excitement the girl is rescued. The father is killed by the Tong men. An unnecessary touch is given by marrying the half-breed girl to a white man. The couple, together with the girl's brother, find peace in the country.

"Ethel's New Dress." (Komic. Sun., April 18.)—Ethel, the stenographer, repairs to a reception attired in a glorious regalia, resembling man's accepted apparel. Because the Countess de Shellac fails to appear, Ethel is introduced as that lady.

Then two crooks appear disguised as the Count and Countess. The fun which results after this point is rich with novel and uproariously laughable incidents. The methods which the Count and Countess employ in stealing the guests' jewels are side-splitting, and the apprehension of the two thieves puts a climax on the story, which is as funny as all the previous action. This is No. 21 of the Bill series and is by far the best we have seen. Fay Tincher is better than ever.

"The Stain of Dishonor." (Eastern Reliance. Mon., April 19.)—In which a secret service agent apprehends a spy, who is in the act of stealing from a general valuable plans of coast fortifications. This makes an average drama of fair interest. The lighting is well handled, and the ballroom scene lends a touch of brilliancy to the story.

"The Story of a Story." (Majestic. Tues., April 20.)—The author with ideals decides to write a trashy quick-selling novel. He dreams of the consequences which might follow such an act. A shop girl reads it and goes wrong. Awakening, he throws the half completed script into the fire. A drama of a novel nature, that contains some unusually clever effects.

In his dream the two leading characters of the man's book, a man and woman of evil repute, step out from the book. They are in miniature, and when the story is over they grow small again and step back. Again they are seen when the script is burning in the fire, wildly gesticulating for help. Eugene Pallette and Miriam Cooper are the principals of the inside story. Tod Browning directed. This ought to please any house.

"Rose Leaves." (Reliance. Wed., April 21.)—Wherein a widower is reminded of his wife by the crushing of rose petals by his new love. This act so affects him that he quits the woman, immediately afterwards discovering she is a spy, seeking for information which only he possesses.

This is a subject which pleases in some scenes, and then again appears forced in others. It will hardly convince because of the actions of the adventuress, which would certainly arouse the suspicions of the man. In the cast are Ray Myers, Virginia Kirtley and Lucille Young.

"The Reformation of Peter and Paul." (Thanhouser. Fri., April 23.)—Two little bullies grow up to be absurdly priggish, while the two girls who were before the recipients of their abuse turn out to be sports, and it remains for them to effect a cure for the others. A pleasing comedy in every respect, except its ending, which is too abrupt to give satisfaction. There are many genuine laughs in the reel, and the subject is novel. The principals are: Lorraine Huling, Mignon Anderson, Arthur Ashley and Morris Foster.

"The Handicap of Beauty." (Falstaff. Fri., April 23.)—A stenographer can't keep her job because she is pretty. She disguises herself as an old maid and secures a position, but her employer discovers the deception and the story ends romantically. This is a good comedy, cleverly handled by the director. Mignon Anderson and Boyd Marshall are the principals.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 16." (Thurs., April 22.)—An unusually large section of this issue is devoted to pictures concerning the European war, while other events of interest are the arrival in New York of General Victoriano Huerta, late dictator of Mexico; and a motorcycle race at Venice, Cal., in which Otto Walker broke the world's record for three hundred miles.

"Fashions and the Simple Life." (Thanhouser. Sun., April 25.)—An old model in a department store poses as a woman of fashion when in reality she loves simple country life. An equally old salesman works the same trick, so when the deceptions are discovered both are satisfied. This possesses a good plot and some funny situations, but the leading players could have been younger, and so made the picture more attractive in this respect.

"The Day of Reckoning." (American. Two reels. Monday, April 26.)—Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

"No Quarter." (American. Tues., April 27.)—The plot of this comedy is laid around the lack of twenty-five cent pieces for a slot gas meter. The gas in the meter is running out at the dinner to announce the engagement of two young people. The meal is prepared with the aid of a grate fire and an inverted electric iron. In the midst of it the electric lights go out, and as they suddenly flash up, things are disclosed which lead to the temporary breaking of the engagement. This is an amusing comedy with a new idea for the plot.

"Wanted—A Wife." (American. Wed., April 28.)—A bachelor seeking a wife and a young girl seeking a hero meet at a summer resort and find what they are looking for in each other, much to the discomforture of a count who is in love with the girl. This is an interesting comedy drama with beautiful beach scenes and a realistic rescue of a drowning girl. Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood are featured.

"Bianca Forgets." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., April 27.)—A young girl is very much taken by a Count, neglecting her previously accepted fiance. The count, however, prefers another girl, and between the two of them they manage to set things aright with the estranged couple. Although this story is rather shallow and really not deserving two thousand feet of film, it will register a success merely because of the exceptional ability of the cast, which makes the most of every situation. The scenes and photography are very good. Florence La Badie, Morris Foster, Bliss Milford and Charles Jahn are the leads.

"The Renegade." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., April 28.)—An English soldier is made the prisoner of a white slave dealer in Africa and sold to a native prince. The slaver returns to England and impersonates the soldier, coming into his property.

Later, with the aid of the Prince's favorite slave, the man escapes, sails to England and puts the villain to rout in a highly melodramatic manner. There are some good fight scenes in this. The scenes and photography are all good. The story is well put on, always holding the interest. Charles Ray is the soldier.

"The Power of the Street." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., April 29.)—The man who placed implicit trust in his friend is ruined by him through the Street. The "friend" makes off with his wife. The other exiles himself to the Alaskan gold fields and becomes immensely rich again.

On learning of his wife's death, he returns to civilization and breaks his betrayer through the market, later going to his house and strangling him. While this picture is by no means pleasant and without any obvious moral value, it will pass as good entertainment for that class of people which enjoys plain and thrilling melodrama. Walter Edwards makes the husband a sympathetic figure. Clara Williams is seen as his discontented wife, while Arthur Maude has his accustomed role of heavy.

"The Valley of Hate." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Fri., April 30.)—A picture dealing with the eternal story of the feudists in the conventional (Kentucky) mountains. The ancient tale has been well handled by the director and put on in such a manner as to be intensely interesting. The scenes are very pretty and realistic, while the photography is bright and distinct throughout the two reels. Rhea Mitchell makes an appealing figure of the girl, and Thomas Chatterton is seen as the schoolmaster who manages to reconcile the two families through his love for the girl.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News, No. 29."—The war news is not given as much space in this reel as is usually the custom, yet the domestic events which fill the number will not fail to be of interest. A polo game at Aitken, S. C., is an inspiring spectacle, while pictures of William Hale Thompson, the new mayor of Chicago, and his wife are timely. The animated cartoon by J. R. Bray, which brings the reel to a close, is most pleasing.

"Pathe News, No. 30."—Views of and connected with the German cruiser "Kronprinz Wilhelm" which recently put into Newport News, Va., are of special interest. The opening of the Federal baseball season in Brooklyn and Chicago will please the followers of the game. A picture of General Huerta, one time Mexican president, will arouse interest. Some other war news and a few more domestic events complete the reel.

"Picturesque Andalusia." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This is an attractive scenic picture showing interesting sights in this primitive region of Spain. Many of the methods shown are centuries behind the times. On the same reel is "A Study of Insect Life."

"A Study of Insect Life." (Pathe. Split reel.)—The most interesting portions of this film are those given over to the life of the giant American moth known as the Cecropia. This is an extremely common night flying moth in the Eastern United States, but is seldom seen because so strictly nocturnal. The subtitles refer to the moth as a butterfly, which is an inaccuracy. Several other insects are shown, and altogether the picture is one of much interest.

"Col Heeza Liar Signs the Pledge." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This is another of the amusing and excellent animated cartoons depicting the adventures of Col. Heeza Liar in animated cartoons. This form of motion picture offers exceptional opportunities to show the feelings of a man who has had a trifle too much liquor. It should prove an exceptional laugh getter at any theatre. On the same reel is a scenic picture entitled "Monuments of Pisa."

"Just Tramps." (Pathe. One reel.)—Tramps arrive in town by way of the "side door pullman." They at once start on a tour for food, which leads to a laughable series of mishaps. At last they escape by the same means which brought them to town. The picture is a slapstick comedy and fairly well done. Although a bit slow in parts, it should do well in most houses.

"Unfounded Jealousy." (Pathe. Two reels.)—The most noticeable feature of this picture is the fine effect which is produced by the large number of beautiful scenes. Taken on the California coast a particularly happy choice of backgrounds has resulted in scenes of great beauty.

The use which has been made of sea birds gathering for food and a good sized herd of seals is also a good feature. The story is the rather familiar one of the apparent disaffection of a young husband in favor of his wife's younger and more attractive sister, who is at the home for a visit. It appears that the girl has only been doing her best to help out a tangled situation, and the picture ends with everyone happy. The extremely clever acting of a little girl about seven years old is one of the most attractive points of the picture.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"Told in the Rockies." (Lariat. Two reels.)—An Englishman traveling with his baby in the mountains is rendered insane by a fall from his carriage. Years later he is living the life of a hermit, while his daughter has been brought up by a family of Westerners. The identity of the two unknown people is established when the crazed man's father visits the West on a hunting trip. The man is cured and all ends well. This drama is inferior to most of the United releases of the week, as its main plot is too weak to hold the interest. There is a secondary story with a love motif, but this is hardly direct enough to help the picture. The scenes and photography are very good. The acting is fitting.

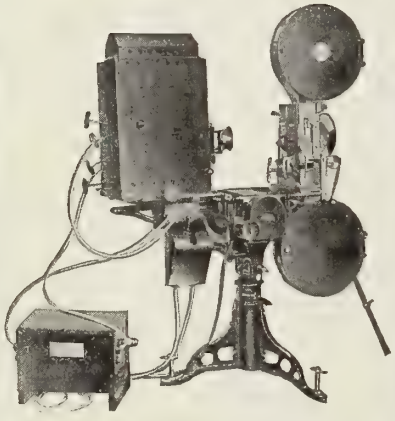
"One on Father." (Premier. Two reels.)—Father objects to his son's choice for a wife, but decides to go to the masquerade and look her over anyway. The son learns of his parent's plan, and changes costumes with his sweetheart, fooling his father and finally gaining his consent to the marriage. The scenes in this which take place at the masquerade ball are most artistic in both aspect and photography. On the whole the picture is a good comedy, although the acting of the son could have been better. The old man is very good.

"Tough Luck." (Starlight.)—James Aubrey and Walter Kendig, the Starlight comedy team, once more pursue the living which they believe the world owes them. One of them marries an heiress, but encounters many trials and tribulations afterwards. Finally he is arrested as a goose thief. Mr. Mittenthal has made better comedies than this, but there are a few laughs in the reel.

"All About a Baby." (Superba.)—A few humorous situations appear in a slightly jumbled plot that concerns chiefly a baby, which is usually missing from its mother. Nestle's Food receives a number of various obvious boosts.

"The Beginning at the End." (Ideal. Two reels.)—A millionaire sodden with riotous living reposes himself on a park bench contemplating suicide. His past rises before him, and he realizes that the number of lives he wrecked is great. He is about to shoot himself when he is stopped by a destitute girl. Seeing a chance to do some good at last he cares for her as if she were his child. George Larkin appears in the main role. There is a good fire scene in the course of the man's meditations, caused by a rough and realistic fight. The girl's jump from the window onto the pavement below adds a gruesome thrill. This has been produced well and the photography and scenes are very good. It ought to appeal. Dolly Larkin and Ethel Lehr are also in the cast.

"Avarice." (Ideal. Two reels.)—One miner kills his partner and leaves his body in the cellar of their cabin. He becomes immensely rich and moves to the city with his dead pal's daughter. Years later a doctor visiting the West on a hunting trip stumbles into the cabin and falls through the floor, discovering the skeleton of the man. After a bit of work and advertising, by which method he finds the girl, he solves the entire tragedy and marries the orphan. This story has been produced excellently. It always holds the interest and is acted very well. Both scenes and photography are good. The changes made by time are carefully and noticeably brought out. In the cast are Will Sheerer, Fred Hearne, Norbert Myles and Edna Payne.



"Two Boobs." (Starlight.)—James Aubrey and Walter Kendig again. They procure jobs in a grocery store and after wrecking the place in general are dared to stay all night in a haunted house. They do so and are frightened out of their wits by ghosts. The funniest part of this comes in the final scenes while the two men are suffering all the tortures of the superstitious while in the haunted house. A preceding scene, showing one of the men mixing a milk-shake in the other's mouth, is positively repelling and ought to be cut out.

MASTER MODEL
"Satisfactory In Every Way"

Last week we quoted a letter from Mr. W. B. Fulmer, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Here is another letter from him dated April 14th, 1915:

"I have used two American Standard Machines for over five years, running ten hours a day, seven days a week, with small cost for repairs each year. They are today in perfect condition. Last fall I installed in my new theatre two machines of your MASTER MODEL. I find them very satisfactory in every way. The STANDARD for me every time."

suicide for her, and after proving himself too much of a coward to drown himself, he gets drunk instead. Harry Kelly is featured again in this reel, which is very good. The first few scenes in which Dudley is exhibiting his craze for dancing are most humorous.

"The Spender." (Empress. Two reels.)—A novel plot and cleverly developed situations are present in these two reels, and are sufficient to stimulate a quantity of interest. Reverend C. J. Harris prepared the scenario. He has laid the cause of drunkeness not on saloons but on the homes in which the liquor is kept.

The story verging on the melodramatic in several instances, concerns two boys, one the son of the minister and the other a son of a doctor. Both of them are helped out of difficulty by the "spender," a man whose business it is to journey about and treat in the saloons.

Joe Sullivan in this part invests the role with genuine reality, and his performance throughout is good to see. Marion Swayne as his daughter and Joseph Levering as the minister's son are good, while James Levering as the minister himself renders a pleasing performance. This is one of the best of the Empress brand and should be received well.

"Louisa's Battle With Cupid." (Luna.)—The younger girl is closely guarded by her old maid sister, who wants to prevent her marriage because then she will be obliged to give her four thousand dollars. They both marry finally and split fifty-fifty of the money. Dot Farley is the elder sister in this comedy, which presents an unusual number of humorous situations in the course of its development. In fact the entire reel is an excellent example of good comedy. It will surely amuse and should get many laughs wherever shown.

"How Allopath Conquered Boneopath." (Luna.)—A cowboy is inflicted with the "boneopath" craze, believing all diseases result from some disorder of the spine. The rest of the boys plan a little joke on their pal. One of them feigns illness and applies for a cure. While being cured he feigns death.

Later Slats is obliged to watch over the dead body, and the cowboys make it hot for him, rigging up an animated skeleton and causing all the objects on the wall to move by means of strings. These last scenes are very humorous and will surely provoke hearty laughter. The whole comedy is good. The Luna comedy company has improved one hundred per cent. in its recent releases.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 163." (Wed., April 21.)—Of special interest in this number are: The German converted cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm, at Newport News, Va.; the dedication of the Straus memorial on the third anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic; the departure of Jane Addams and other prominent women for the Hague in the cause of peace. Baseball views have been procured concerning all three of the big leagues, and Hy Mayer's cartoons are good.

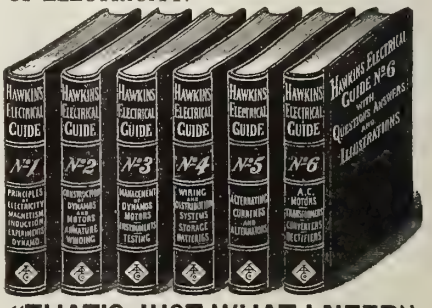
"The Honor of the Ormsbys." (Victor. Three reels. Mon., April 26.)—A young man possessed of a proud father and a lengthy pedigree marries a perfectly respectable musical comedy actress, and consequently suffers his father's disownment. The irresponsible husband drinks heavily, and after five years is a dead failure.

One night he is shanghaied. In the meantime his wife and child are taken in by the old servants of the elder Ormsby, and when the venerable gentleman is stricken with a fever, his unknown daughter-in-law nurses him back to health, and so endears herself to her charge that when the son returns, very much the man, a happy reconciliation takes place.

This is an adaptation from a story by William Addison Lathrop, and while very well constructed, it contains nothing that will startle by its originality; yet the pleasing performances offered by Mary Fuller and Matt Moore in the leading roles lend it an attractive presence. Besides, the picture has been handled well in the direction by Lucius Henderson, who evidently has spared no pains in procuring the correct effects, settings and changes undergone by the different principals in the course of time. The story itself is not strictly realistic and might fail to convince but for the acting. Charles Ogle plays the father.

"Love's Reflection." (Imp. Mon., April 26.)—A Pickford reissue split with "The Troublesome Parrot," an animated cartoon.

"Over the Bounding Waves." (Joker. Mon., April 26.)—A comedy with Max Asher in the principal role.



"Matty's Decision." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., April 27.)—This is the second of the series featuring Christy Mathewson, star pitcher of the New York Nationals, made by the Universal Imp Company. Like its predecessor, "Love and Baseball," it will be a great box-office attraction because of the presence of "Matty," but as for the story itself it seems rather lacking in power, because of its obvious padding.

However, the noted star of the diamond is enough of an attraction to counterbalance the weakness of the story, and the supporting cast renders effective work. Hobart Henley, Dorothy Phillips and Howard Crampton are in the remaining stellar roles.

The picture is a comedy-drama and contains many humorous moments, as well as several of a dramatic nature. It should certainly prove its worth, especially as the baseball season has just started. Only a few scenes of the game appear, and these are acted well.

"Faces in the Night." (Rex. Tues., April 27.)—A rich and unscrupulous millionaire, who has gained his wealth through deceit, reforms at the suggestion of his doctor and, after telling his story to some guests, replenishes the slim purse of the girl who rightfully owns his fortune. Charles Ogle plays the leading part. A poor drama, arousing little interest and containing too common a theme to be successful.

"His Nobs, the Duke." (Nestor. Tues., April 27.)—A fine comedy produced by Al. Christie, with a cast which includes Lee Moran, Stella Adams, Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon. Friend Lee is just as funny as ever in the title part, and is given admirable support by the rest of the cast.

"The Prophet of the Hills." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., April 28.)—A feud is created by adjacent land owners in a quarrel over the boundary line. It is only brought to a close by the death of the prophet of the hills, caused by a gun fight between the two factions. Marc Robbins appears in the title role, a traveling minister of the Gospel, who so endears himself to both parties that his death causes a reconciliation.

Although the main plot of this picture is rather hackneyed, the introduction of the prophet causes it to appear refreshing. It is interesting from one end to the other and will surely be appreciated. The scenes are beautiful and are supported by fine photography. Frank Lloyd directed the work, and is also seen as the leader of one of the parties, while Millard K. Wilson is the other head. Helen Leslie is also in the cast.

"Shaved in Mexico." (L-Ko. Wed., April 28.)—Hank Mann, who, by the way, deserves to be ranked with the ablest slapstick comedians of the day, appears as a Mexican barber in this side-splitting offering. Besides running the tonsorial parlor he is very much in love, and in love with a girl who is loved by many others. There need be no very great amount of plot when Mr. Mann appears in the leading role, as his ludicrous makeup and original actions are enough to set the whole house roaring. The other players who appear in this reel are exceptionally able acrobats, which fact is well demonstrated by their wild cavortings.

"Unlike Other Girls." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., April 29.)—The daughter of ignorant parents is sent to boarding school. They in the meantime are having difficulty, as the railroad company has erected a restaurant opposite theirs, and are monopolizing the business.

On the return of the daughter the business of the old place begins to boom again because of her cooking. At length a reconciliation takes place between the warring sides, which is substantiated by the marriage of the girl to the son of one of the railroad's financiers. There are many quaint and pleasing little touches in this which only Pauline Bush can effect. In the beginning several beautiful exteriors appear, yet the photography is dim.

Ray Gallagher is the lover and hardly gives enough personality to the role to make it effective. To our mind the picture would make an excellent one-reel subject, but as it stands now, numerous padded scenes detract a great bit from the interest. Joseph De Grasse directed the work.

"Courage." Big. U. Thurs., April 29.)—The man who had boasted of his great strength and fearlessness turns out to be a coward, when it comes to giving some of his blood to save the life of his child. Joe King plays this part well! Edna Maison is the wife and Bert Hadley the man she marries finally.

"The Chef's Revenge." (Sterling. Thurs., April 29.)—Only a fair comedy containing much rough and tumble work and some dirt. An educational brings the reel to a close.

"At the Banquet Table." (Imp. Two reels. Friday, April 30.)—King Baggot appears in this weird drama, and indulges throughout most of the picture in an awful nightmare which, unlike most screen nightmares, is most realistic, if that term may be applied here.

To say the least, the picture holds the interest well, and although it is as illogical as dreams are, there is something about it which convinces the onlooker, much as he is convinced by his own midnight contortions of the mind.

The cast includes besides Mr. Baggot, Arline Pretty, Ned Reardon and several others, all of whom play their respective parts very well. This ought to go in any house, as it is quite original and refreshing. Harvey Gates prepared the scenario.

"A Romance of Hawaii." (Victor. Fri., April 30.)—This was made on the old Bison company's trip around the world. It was originally a two-reel subject, but has been cut down and makes a very acceptable release. William Clifford and Marie Walcamp are the leads.

"Her Friend, the Milkman." (Nestor. Fri., April 30.)—The son of the milk magnate begins at the bottom as a driver, and in the course of his rounds meets a wealthy debutante who is acting in the capacity of maid. The romance culminates pleasantly. While this plot is slightly worn with age, Eddie Lyons and Billie Rhodes are sufficiently capable to lift it to the level of a highly amusing reel.

"Nabbed." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 1.)—Francis Ford respectfully dedicates this picture to the chief of the Los Angeles police, and it evidently has something to do with the fine showing that that gentleman has made in his war on the disorderly houses of Los Angeles.

As a dedication the picture may be suitable, but as a melodrama it is lacking in those elements which go to make such a picture good. Its story is weak; in fact, it is lost many times in the scuffle. The fights are realistic, but the police station seems unreal, according to the general plan of those in the East.

Then again the two labeled blank-book reporters, who are evidently introduced to serve the purpose of comedians, fail to fill the bill in either respect. The picture may take with an audience of people whose ideas are limited to their own home towns, but with others it will not. Mr. Ford is the police chief.

SOMETHING EVERY EXHIBITOR SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

MINA FILMS

By specializing in one reel comedies the maker of MINA Films has created a distinct type of funny picture. His scenario writers, players and directors are comedy specialists. This specialization in all departments is bringing forth comedies of individuality—comedies that are new in conception and clean and wholesome in fun. MINA comedies are so different that no exhibitor can afford to miss them.

Released every Thursday on the General Film Program.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

COURTENAY FOOTE, leading man with Vitagraph, then to Reliance, then to Bosworth, is back with Reliance.

David V. Wall and Boots Wall are playing with Dyreda Art Film corporation in "The Four Feathers."

Elinor Fried, one of the very few real film women, has left the United film service for the Universal, where she will edit pictures, order posters and do things like that.

William N. "Bill" Bailey, who has played in many features, and Harry Mainhall, actor and director, have joined Edwin August's forces and will be seen in Pyramid pictures on the United program.

McCANNA SECURES KEYSTONE STATE RIGHTS TO FEASTER MACHINE

JOHN E. Mc CANNA has secured from the Feaster Film Feed Company the exclusive rights for the State of Pennsylvania to market the "3-F" projection machine.

The "3-F" is a comparatively new machine and eliminates the rewinding process altogether. Mr. McCanna is at present located at 406 Bellevue Court building, Philadelphia, Pa.

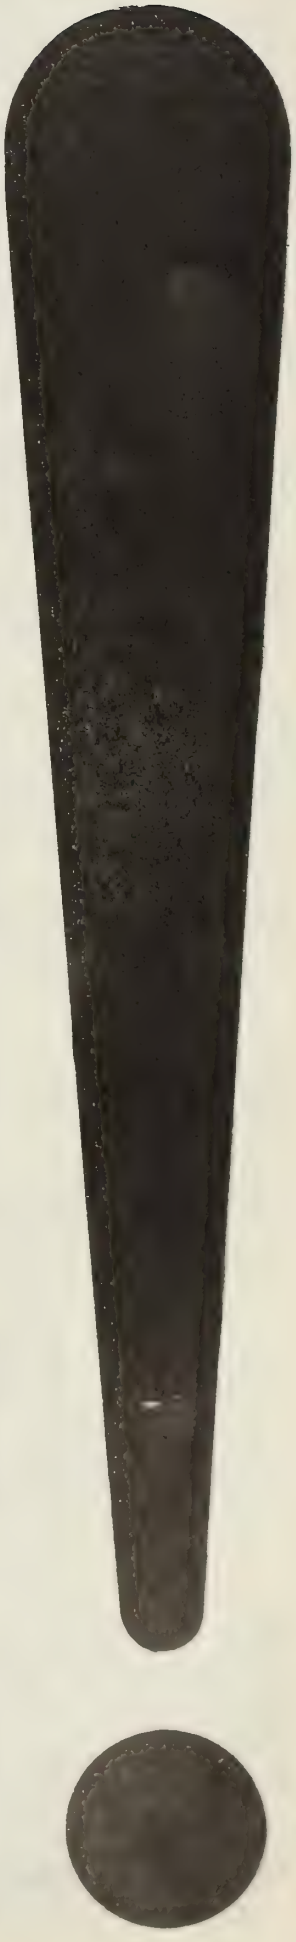
EXTRAO
UNIVERSAL

—After months of planning The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., largest maker of films in the universe, makes this mighty announcement.

—Within a very short space of time we will produce world renowned plays, world renowned stories, acted by the leading Actors and Actresses, stage stars whose names are Household words.



—And REMEMBER—All these BIG stories—ALL these mighty plays produced by the world's leading Actors WILL BE ON THE REGULAR WEEKLY UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. Can you imagine what that means, Mr. Exhibitor?

—All this will be done at a cost to the Exhibitor so absurdly low that the present prices Exhibitors are paying for so-called Features will look like rank extravagance.

—This mightiest of all mighty Universal Achievements will mean that YOU in YOUR HOUSE will be showing the costliest of all costly genuine features

Remember—These Broadway Star Features will

at a fraction of the expense that you are now paying.

—You Exhibitors who haven't booked the Universal Program, here's the chance of your lives to insure yourself and your business for life.

—Wire your nearest Universal Exchange and arrange for the complete Universal Program for your House. Do it today—this minute—it will be your master-stroke.

—Never has the Universal advised Exhibitors wrongly and never has the Universal sent out a message to the trade of such colossal importance. With this huge addition to the already successful U Program Exhibitors can sit back and rest easy FOR ALL TIME TO COME. It requires instant action on your part. WIRE your Exchange to reserve the U Program for YOU. It's the biggest thing that ever happened in the trade.

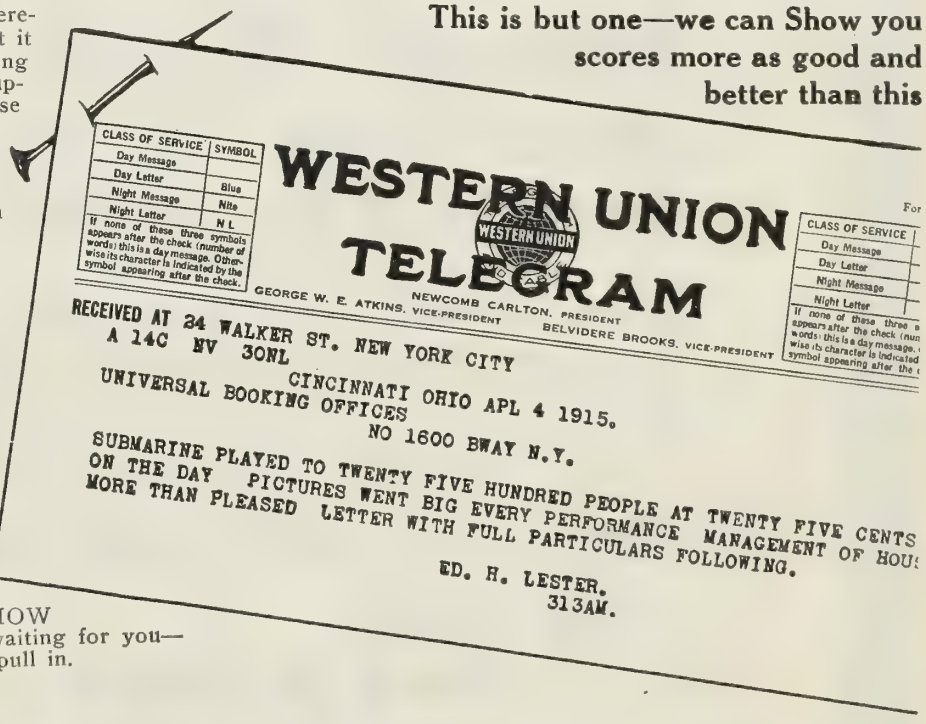
250,000 Paid Admissions in Eight Weeks in One House.

Twenty-Five Thousand PAID Admissions in 7 Days in Another House.

Another Theatre Packed 550 Seat House Five Times in One Day at 25c. and 50c. Admission.



And Figures from other Houses that will make your heart bounce with joy.

That's what the Williamson Submarine Pictures have done and will do for YOU.

All this because of the Tremendous Publicity this Wonderful Feature has received. You can pack Your House if you will but follow the Wonderful Plans that we have ready for you.

LOOK at the Telegram reproduced herewith. Read it with care. Note what it says about "The Management being more than pleased." Why do you suppose the Management was pleased? Because they were personally thrilled by the pictures? Not by a long shot. But because it got the dough—it packed and jammed the House—it brought home the hard, cold kale. We can show you scores of such messages. We reproduced this wire twice, just to show other Exhibitors what "The Management" thinks of the pulling power of the remarkable Williamson Submarine Pictures. What other Houses have done YOU can do if you will "be alive." To help all those who are about to book this supreme masterpiece, we have at immense expense prepared and printed a great complete Advertising Campaign book in which are already worked out complete plans, ideas, schemes that have already brought home the bacon to other Exhibitors. You don't have to worry, think, study or spend five minutes' time. The book tells it all. Everything is illustrated showing the plans and schemes. If you will just do your part this wonderful book will SHOW YOU HOW TO GRAB THE BIG MONEY that is waiting for you—fairly screaming at you, to reach out and pull in.

This is but one—we can Show you scores more as good and better than this

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.

Have You Started a Portrait Contest

THAT WILL PACK YOUR HOUSE

at every performance? You can by using a selection from the 62 portraits in natural color and duotone we offer you.

We will tell you how.

Every one of these portraits is the best that can be produced. The natural color portraits—not merely tinted—are by those very popular artists, Coles Phillips, Stanlaws and Manning. Both natural color and duotone are 11x14 in size, fine for framing and on heavy art mounts. To prove the quality of these portraits and value of a portrait contest, we will send you, prepaid, any two duotones and any one natural color, together with outline of contest, on receipt of 25c in stamps.

The small lot price on natural colors is 20c each, $2.00 a dozen; on duotones, 15c each, $1.50 per dozen. Special prices in lots of 100 or more.

Besides packing your house, the portrait contest will create a sale for these pictures to your patrons. Displayed in your lobby they will sell themselves.

There is a $1.00 to $3.00 profit to you on each dozen you sell. Why let some other fellow make this profit?

The time to sell these portraits is when the people have seen your show, and the desire to have portraits of popular stars is aroused.

Tear this page off across the dotted line, after checking the portraits you want. You will receive full outline of the portrait contest and pictures, postpaid.

The Favorites—Mabel Trunnelle and Augustus Phillips in the

TENSE 3-ACT FEATURE

"With Bridges Burned"

From the famous story by Rex Beach.
Released in regular service Friday, May 7th—3000 feet.

A revival of the successful Edison film of the same name

"With Bridges Burned" is a feature, full of the finest impulses and worthiest motives that can actuate a man. It thrills with the intensity of devoted man and wife, stricken in fortune, separated on their wedding day and doing deeds as desperate in self denial as any physical daring. To see so fine—so worthy—a picture is to feel that the world is a better place than we thought.

Mabel Trunnelle plays again the same role of the little unselfish wife whose royal courage faces feats that man draws back from—plays it with that unfailing sympathetic appeal that her winsome personality always evokes.

While Augustus Phillips places upon the screen some of the finest work of his career in the devoted husband half crazed in his night-and-day race against time and a powerful conspiracy of grafters.

Edison features embody all the entertainment, all the "punch" which plays of real power have—they typify to an extent well registered on the cash register that it pays to play "features of strength—not length"—Edison Features in the Regular Service.

The Funniest Cartoons on the Market—by Raoul Barre

"Cartoons in the Kitchen" must be seen to be appreciated. The hearty laughs that can sweep over an audience viewing these pictures is unbelievable. A new feature—they move while he draws them—darned funny, indeed. Released Tuesday, May 4th—1000 feet.

"Jack Kennard, Coward," winner of the Edison College Contest. Released Wednesday, May 5th—1000 feet.

"A Sad Dog's Story," a good dog story by Lee Arthur, famous dramatist, featuring Herbert Prior. Released Saturday, May 8th—1000 feet.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

BUFFALO'S NEWEST THEATRE, THE PALACE

BUFFALO'S newest and most modern photoplay theatre, the Palace, is now open and has already taken its place as one of the most popular houses in the city. The theatre is owned by the Mitchel H. Mark Realty Company, owners of the Strand, New York, and many other large theatres in different parts of the country. It was erected at a cost exceeding $150,000 and represents the last word in theatre construction.

EXTERIOR, PALACE THEATRE

The Palace is the Buffalo home of Paramount productions, which is showing these photo-plays in conjunction with the Strand. The Buffalo offices of the Mark-Brock theatrical enterprises are established in the building. Harold Edel, who has brought the Strand to its present stage of popularity, is also directing the policies of the Palace, with William Rosenthal in charge as house manager.

The Palace has a seating capacity of 1,200, features an eight-piece orchestra of exceptional quality, with Ivan Shapiro, former first violinist of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, as conductor. A $10,000 Austin pipe organ is another pleasing feature, as it is one of the largest in the city and played by Ruby Belle Nason, one of Buffalo's most talented organists.

The Palace is of modern style in architecture, being designed by C. Howard Crane. It is constructed of white terra cotta with yellow trimmings. The lobby is lined with rich, beautifully colored streaked marble surmounted by borders of exquisite gold decorations. The ceiling is decorated by several mural paintings. The theatre proper opens from the end of the long lobby, and a burst of beauty opens before the eye as one enters.

No Stairs in the Building

The seats are upholstered in heavy leather much the same as automobile seats. The walls are decorated in gold and yellow. Indirect lighting system is employed and the latest ventilating methods used to keep the house light and full of pure air at all times.

A novel feature of the house is the doing away with all stairs. The lobby is reached by a long gradual approach from the front of the lobby, and the different parts of the lobby are also reached by this method.

Eight boxes are installed, four each side of the stage, elaborately decorated and hung with rich tapestries. The screen is set back on a stage set to represent an Italian garden, in the midst of which the orchestra is located.

Ladies' and gentlemen's rest rooms are located at the rear of the house, completely equipped with all luxuries. The electrical fixtures throughout the theatre are of unique design and most attractive. The projection booth is equipped with all modern inventions that will help to make the projection perfect. Baird machines are used.

Surmounting the top of the front of the theatre is a large clock, one of the most appreciated features. At night the clock is brilliantly lighted and the hours rung on chimes. Below the theatre is a complete heating system, and the large vaults used by the Mark company.

Grauman Sells Imperial to Eastern Syndicate

GRAUMAN'S Imperial, San Francisco, has been sold by D. J. Grauman to an Eastern syndicate, headed by I. De Jongh.

The new syndicate will make improvements in the playhouse which, however, will not necessitate the closing of the theatre.

The eastern syndicate plans to purchase two other theatres in San Francisco.

One of the policies of the new combine to be introduced will be "pop" matinees. Already a large number of picture plays with prominent stars have been booked, it is claimed.

Grauman says that his retirement from the Imperial is due partially to other projects which he has under way, one of which includes the building of a large theatre on the lot situated at the southwest corner of Eddy and Mason streets.

Decision In Power-Baird Suit Handed Down In United States District Court

THE decision in the case of the Nicholas Power Company, plaintiff, against the C. R. Baird Company and Chester R. Baird, defendant, before Judge D. J. Mayer of the United States District Court, Southern District of New York, which has been reported in detail previously in the News, has just been handed down.

This suit covers Letters Patent No. 826,112, dated July 17, 1906, and Letters Patent 959,601, dated May 31, 1910, being patents covering the framing device for motion picture projection machines and the fire valves. These two patents are taken up separately by Judge Mayer in his decision, the framing device being the first to be considered.

Judge Mayer starts by quoting from the Nicholas Power Company patent and stating the points under claims 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the patent which are those directly in litigation and cover the framing device mechanism on the Power projection machine.

The defenses are invalidity and non-infringement of patent. There is a history given of the conditions of the motion picture field from the time Mr. Power entered it. To quote from the decision, "The patent in suit is not directed to an entire moving picture projection apparatus, but to a portion of it and the claims in suit are all directed to the construction for permitting the framing of the picture.

The Previous Art Defense

"It will be appreciated, at the outset, that the subject matter involved delicate mechanism and accurate inter-relation, all looking to a result which would accomplish the illusion (if it may be so called) most effectively. In an art of this character and mechanism of this delicacy, sometimes the omission or addition of merely a single element rises to the dignity of invention, and it is with this appreciation and this mental attitude that the subject must be approached.

"The prior art defense involved a consideration of the patents to Eberhard Schneider (U. S. Letters No. 647,529) and Prestwich (British) and several prior used machines produced and testified about.

(a) "First Edison machine, all the parts except the aperture plate were stationarily mounted and the framing of the picture was accomplished by adjusting the aperture plate up or down as might be necessary for its opening to register with the picture.

(b) "In the second Edison (Exhibit Q) the aperture plate was the only part of the machine to be fixed while the film feeding mechanism was adjustable up and down as might be necessary to bring the picture into registration with the lens and aperture plate.

(c) "In the 'modified Edison' (Exhibit X) the machine frame is mounted on guide rods instead of run-ways.

(d) "In the Schneider modified Edison (Exhibit C) the original rack and pinion for adjusting is replaced by a crank and screw.

Schneider Missed Commercially Successful Machine

(e) "The two early Power machines (Exhibits T and U) show the idea of the entire mechanism adjustable on its own front boards.

"None of these structures shows the combination of the claims and each lacks many of the elements. It is enough to point out that, among other things, they do not have a separate shiftable carriage nor a shiftable intermediate gearing.

(f) "The Eberhard Schneider machine (Exhibit B)—His fundamental and, in the art, advanced thought was to construct a machine having a stationary frame with fixed main shaft and stationary aperture plate in which the framing would be accomplished by adjusting the distance between the intermittent sprocket and the aperture plate. But when Schneider came to concrete his thought into a physical structure, he just missed making a machine which was commercially successful. Comparing Exhibit B with the machine of the Power patent, we find:

"(1) That there is not the 'vertically adjustable carriage.' Instead, the shaft of Schneider's intermittent sprocket is carried by a pair of 'cheeks,' mounted to swing in the arc of a circle on the axis of the main shaft, and the whole arrangement is such that the adjustment of the cheeks swings the sprocket toward and away from the aperture which is formed in the frame above the main shaft.

"(2) That in Schneider there is an oscillatory movement of the pair of cheeks, while in Power's the movement of the shiftable carriage is vertical.

"(3) That in Schneider's, contrary to Power's, there is really no intermediate gear and no shiftable intermediate between the main driving gear and the film feeding mechanism, the latter being driven directly from the main shaft.

"It is unnecessary to go on with the details, for, giving to the Power's the fair construction to which it is entitled, the Schneider Exhibit B cannot be successfully read against a single Power claim in controversy, nor can it be held that the Power mechanism is an equivalent of Exhibit B.

"If, however, a doubt as to invention were entertained (and I entertain none), the remarkable commercial success of the Power would conclusively resolve the doubt."

Judge Mayer then gives a short resume of the development of the various machines, and shows how Mr. Power, through his business ability, et cetera, made a commodity superior to the other prior used machines, and ends by saying: "I am fully convinced that the patent is meritorious and should be sustained."

No Case of Direct Infringement Made Out

"While the bill charges direct and contributory infringement, no case of direct infringement was made out, nor attempted, and only a single instance of alleged contributory infringement is testified to."

Judge Mayer then takes up the question of Charles E. Schneider, a dealer in Springfield, Mass., who was incited by the Nicholas Power Company to write a letter to Mr. Baird, requesting parts which he states "I need for rebuilding two second-hand machines which I have on hand." This, Judge Mayer says, is a common method of catching patent infringements, in this case the manufacturer having "the right to sell the parts he advertises in his company's circulars so long as the sales are not for rebuilding."

Judge Mayer goes on to say, "I believe that the word 'rebuilding' as used and placed in this letter, carried no emphasis to the mind of the reader. The parts shipped would, in no sense, rebuild the machines, and a busy business man would need a mental microscope to pick out the word 'rebuilding' in Schneider's letter as conveying to him what plaintiff contends.

"It is enough for me to state that on the evidence in the case I am satisfied that the defendants have not intended to be parties to the rebuilding of plaintiff's machine; have pursued a course of business quite to the contrary; and, in point of fact in the Schneider sale, were not guilty of contributory infringement."

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

F. H. R., Jackson, Mich.—While I am operating and looking at the screen occasionally I notice a black shadow at the bottom of the picture and cannot account for it. Do you know what may be the cause of this shadow? What size of condensers do you recommend for a throw of sixty feet?

ANSWER: Remembering that it is necessary to place a film upside down in order to have it appear correct on the screen, any shadows noticed at the bottom of the picture on the screen will start from the top section of the aperture. The most likely thing to cause a shadow at this point is the dropping of the automatic fire shutter sufficiently to come into the light rays.

You state that it generally happens while you are looking at the screen and it is not a permanent shadow. It may be surmised you allow the cranking to slacken sufficiently at times to let the shutter fall a little and thus cause the trouble. Notice the next time and see if it does not disappear as soon as you speed up.

The proper size of condensing lenses depends upon several conditions, the throw being one when it is necessary to use a different focus objective. In other words, it is not exactly the throw but the focus of the objective governing the different size of condensing lenses. It would not do to use, say, a five-inch focus condensing lens with an eight or nine-inch focus objective. The foci of the two should vary directly when a change in either is made.

The throw you state you are using is sixty feet, and if you project a screen picture of about fifteen feet you have an objective of three-and-a-half-inch focus. Condenser lenses of about five and a half to six-inch focus can be recommended for your use.

Testing Armatures for Defects

W. G. P., Indianapolis, Ind.—I have one of the motor generator outfits for motion picture machines, and want to make some tests on it. Will you please tell me the simplest way to go about testing for faults in the armature? How is the resistance of the windings from the iron of the dynamo made? What kind of instruments are necessary for this work?

ANSWER: Generally there are two kinds of resistance tests that must be made in connection with generators and motors. One is the resistance of the wires or its windings themselves, called the metallic resistance, and the other, the resistance of the insulation of these wires, which is spoken of as the insulation resistance. The metallic resistance may be either tested by a Wheatstone bridge or by the "drop" (fall-of-potential) method.

The second method is well adapted to locating faults quickly and testing the armature resistance of most generators and motors, especially so when the resistance to be measured is of a value of only a few hundredths or even thousandths of an ohm.

The "drop" method consists in passing a current through the armature and a known resistance also in circuit with the armature. The drop of potential (voltage) in the armature and that in the known resistance are compared by connecting a voltmeter first to the terminals of the known resistance and then to the armature. The deflection of the voltmeter needle in both cases is directly proportionate to the resistances included between the points touched by the voltmeter terminals.

The proper current to use when making this test depends upon the resistance of the circuit and the sensitiveness of the voltmeter. A bank of lamps or a wire resistance may be used if it is of a constant strength. A storage battery of sufficient capacity would be a good source for this current.

A station or a portable voltmeter may be used for the readings, and its terminals may be held in insulated handles.

To give you an idea of what you want to be provided with in making these tests—usually from ten to one hundred amperes are necessary for the testing current and a low-reading voltmeter is needed for low resistance measurements of armatures.

The insulation resistance should be sufficiently high so that more than one millionth of its rated current will pass through the insulation at normal voltage; and it is advisable to have it still higher.

For this reason it is beyond the range of either the Wheatstone bridge or the drop method of measurements. It is usually found by either the direct deflection method of using a sensitive galvanometer or by tests with a high reading or sensitive high-resistance voltmeter.

Gentlemen:

The Rex Film Renovator which you installed for us some time ago is the best thing the writer has ever come across in this line. It does the work so well that we call our films which have just been put through it "first run renovated." And aside from a very short distance from the beginning and the ending of the film it is indeed "first run" again. I can highly recommend this Renovator to any Exchange man who wants to have his cheaper customers satisfied. Our Exhibitors are now beginning to ask for "renovated" reels, and not for "age," as the Renovator almost entirely eliminates the age objection.

Position of Joints in Mended Films

K. L. A., Richmond, Va.—Which is the best way to make the line at joints in mending films come between the perforations or at the holes on the side of the films? I have been making them come near the center of the holes and have been told it is better not to do it this way.

ANSWER: Operators of the thinking kind follow the practice of making the lap of the joints come as near between the perforations as they can. In this way the bulge is not so apt to jump a tooth. The film lies closely to the face at the base of the teeth, resulting in a more secure hold.

If the teeth of the sprocket wheels were shaped squarely the full length of a tooth, it would not make much difference about where the lap came in regard to the tooth. If you will notice carefully, the shape of the teeth taper off, and unless the film engages the tooth at its base, the film will tend to be forced off. Hence you can see the advantage of having the lap come between the teeth on the sprocket-wheel.

Philadelphia Operators Hold Fifth Ball

THE Moving Picture Operators Protective Union, local No. 307, of Philadelphia, with headquarters at 1233 Vine Street, has 200 members. The following are the officers:

President, B. F. Bache; vice-president, Wm. Hamilton; financial secretary, Wm. Freidman; recording secretary, Jos. V. Friel; sergeant-at-arms, Chas. Smith; business manager, Louis Krouse, and trustees, Albert Eyre, Abbot Oliver and Tony Fortunato.

The Union held its fifth annual ball on Wednesday, April 14 at Music Fund Hall and made it a big financial success. There were many innovations in entertainment. Many of the Union's friends from filmdom took care of the social side of the affair and the following entertainment committee united in their efforts to make the event enjoyable: B. F. Bache, W. G. Murry, Lou Krouse, Clement Rizzo, Abbot Oliver, Wm. Freidman, Chas. Smith, A. B. Freeman, Wm. Hamilton, Wm. J. Syms, Robert Taylor, Edw. McCall, Gus. Elm, Chas. Bennet and Arthur Graver. Joseph V. Friel, floor manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane Wilbur led the Grand March at midnight. Local 307 has attractive club rooms for the "boys" in their leisure hours.

Indiana Town Forbids Smoking in Booths

MOVING picture operators in Richmond, Ind., have been prohibited from smoking pipes, cigars or cigarettes in machine booths, by an order recently issued by John W. Minor, deputy state fire marshal.

The trial of Roscoe Heimbaugh, moving picture operator at Jeffersonville, Ind., charged with violating the Sunday law, has been indefinitely postponed by the court as none of the witnesses against Heimbaugh appeared in court when the case was called.

Following the agreement of Elkhart moving picture proprietors and the city officials of Elkhart whereby the moving picture theatres of the city will be permitted to run on Sunday, Goshen, Ind., moving picture proprietors have fallen in line and will open their theatres next Sunday.

They may have some trouble, but the proprietors believe that in the end everything will be straightened out satisfactorily as any cases filed against proprietors would be tried in the same court which tried the Elkhart case in which the proprietor was acquitted, would try the Goshen cases.

Cincinnati Operators Elect Officers

MOTION PICTURE OPERATORS' UNION, Local No. 165, of Cincinnati, at their recent meeting elected the following officers: Edward Kirsch, president; Jack Hawthorne, first vice-president; J. M. Gelman, second vice-president; Henry Lacey, secretary; Walter Kinney, financial secretary; William Thornton, treasurer; Charles Ring, business representative; John Pfau, sergeant-at-arms; Harry Huelsman, trustee, one-year term; Bernard Roehm, trustee, three-year term; Walter Kinney, delegate to the district convention to be held in Cincinnati on May 2, and Edward Kirsch and Arthur Fix, delegates to the international convention in Chicago in July.

Eighty-four of the one hundred members attended the meeting. Kirsch was opposed for president by Harry Schwartz and a hot campaign was waged for all offices.

The offices on the second floor are those of Mitchel Mark, Moe Mark, Eugene Falk and other members of the company. The furnishings are solid oak throughout. The front part of the lobby at the Palace is one of the most attractive in the city. It is finished in white and gold. The ticket booth is hung with yellow silk curtains, while the billboards at the sides announce the current attractions in oil paintings in glass frames.

INTERIOR, THE PALACE THEATRE, BUFFALO, N. Y.

An electric sign is used at night on the front of the theatre. The front at night is by far the most brilliant in Buffalo, almost a thousand bulbs being used in the illumination.

The policy of the house is three changes a week, Monday, Thursday and Sunday, with admission price at ten cents. The Palace shows nothing but first run productions, all of which are of the best obtainable.

Manager Edel is always on the lookout for live subjects, such as the Vanderbilt Cup Race and the Willard training pictures, which he presents from time to time. The Palace is located on Shelton square, Main street.

Broadway-Strand Theatre, Detroit, Opens

THE Broadway-Strand, Detroit's newest theatre, was formally opened on Saturday evening, April 10, at a private exhibition for about one thousand invited guests, including exhibitors, newspaper men and prominent citizens. The theatre has been redecorated, and now has an atmosphere of coziness and comfort. The front to the second floor has been completely changed and the ticket office placed in the middle of the lobby, facing the street.

The operator's booth is in the foyer on the first floor, and is elaborately painted in gold on the outside. The orchestra sits on the stage amid an elaborate setting. A fifty-stop pipe organ has been installed. On the side and ceiling panels are pretentious fresco paintings. A large corps of ushers are garbed in red and blue uniforms. "The Christian" was the opening attraction. Business was excellent. Harry I. Garson is the general lessee of the Broadway-Strand, while Edward T. Butcher is house manager. Prices are ten and fifteen cents at matinees and up to twenty-five cents at night.

Performances are continuous from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The new theatre is creditable to the new management and to Mr. Garson who is chiefly responsible. Close to $25,000 has been spent in new decorations, fixtures and changes, so that the Broadway-Strand as it now stands, is practically a new house in every respect.

Mr. Garson is also the general manager of the Broadway Feature Film Company, and offices of both companies are in the theatre building on the second floor.

Will Enlarge the Empress in Montgomery, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., is preparing with pride her newest picture theatre.

Architects are at present busy at work on plans for remodeling the buildings now occupied by the Empress Theatre and a drug store, both of which will be enlarged and occupied by the new theatre. W. T. Hix is president of the company; J. C. Gravely, vice-president, and A. B. Meyer secretary-treasurer.

At a meeting of the stockholders it was voted to increase the capital of the company from $30,000 to $60,000.

The lobby will be thirty-five feet wide, with a generous depth. On the left side of the entrance will be the office, while the right side will be devoted to a women's rest room.

The Hix and Gravely Company is also owner of the New Orpheum Theatre in Montgomery, recently remodelled. When the newer house has been opened, the Orpheum will become a five-cent theatre, though the standard will be just as high as heretofore.

W. T. Hix recently returned from Atlanta, where he signed contracts for opera chairs and a Sunlight screen.

Mr. Hix has signed contracts for the presentation of features shown only in the very largest houses.

Opportunity to Purchase at Half Price Rebuilt Typewriters on Time

THE day has gone by when it is considered necessary to pay the so-called standard price for a typewriter—one hundred dollars. A rebuilt machine at less than half answers all requirements, according to the experience of owners who have tried both.

An unusual opportunity to purchase a machine as good as new is offered by Harry A. Smith, Room 926, 231 North Fifth avenue, Chicago, who is putting on the market an L. C. Smith typewriter at the attractive figure of $48.30. Every user of a machine purchased from Mr. Smith declares that it has proved entirely satisfactory.

These machines make a strong appeal to exhibitors, on account of the low price, quality of the machine and the work of which it is capable. Inasmuch as no theatre manager considers his office equipment complete without a serviceable typewriter, the offer of Harry A. Smith is of interest to a large number of MOTION PICTURE readers.

The offer enables an exhibitor to get a standard make at not only less than the price of a new machine but he can buy it on time at the same rate charged by typewriter renting agencies. It costs only three dollars a month to own one of these machines. Harry A. Smith guarantees all typewriters sold by him for a year. He also shows his good faith in the condition of the typewriters sold by him by stating that if a machine is not found satisfactory he will take it back after a five days' trial and refund payments.

Alliance Inaugurates New Poster Policy

WHILE Andrew J. Cobe, the head of the Alliance, is emphatic in his contention that success can only come to exhibitors who show his patrons the best films made, he still believes that persistent use of a strong lobby display while being of secondary consideration, is one of great importance in the management of a picture theatre.

Mr. Cobe is so convinced his contention is correct, that he is having made on all the current releases of the Alliance Films Corporation, not only the usual selection of one, three and six sheets, but is further augmenting this by a twenty-four sheet combination stand.

When the Alliance exchanges were sounded upon the advisability of having this paper made, they were unanimous in their approval of the proposition.

The new paper which is being made by the Morgan Lithograph Co., of Cleveland, will be ready for delivery in the immediate future, and is expected to fill a long needed, but unvoiced want.

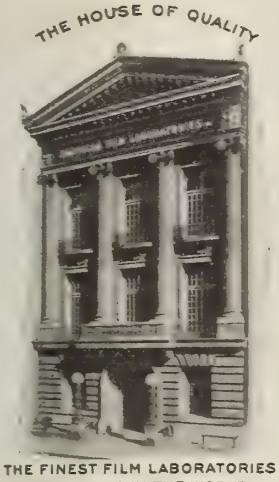
Only Scenes in Films on Selig Posters

MARKED improvement has been shown in posters issued by the Selig Polyscope Company, and the attractiveness of the one, three and six sheets is being generally commented upon.

The Selig company does not believe in depicting illustrations on posters that do not appear in the programs. It is also believed that dignity and good taste are essential qualifications in poster work. The highest-priced sketch artists in this country have been engaged in viewing the picture programs of the "Diamond S," and they then make sketches which are later painted in water-colors.

From these paintings the final selections are made. An unusually liberal supply of posters, heralds, cards and other original publicity matter will be furnished all exhibitors hereafter by the Selig Polyscope Company.

Beautiful posters in attractive colors will accompany all "Diamond" Specials, in three reels, and all Spectacular Specials in five or more reels to be released by Selig.



Colonial, Brooklyn, Builds Airdome

THE Colonial theatre, with a seating capacity of six hundred, 1746 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., is undergoing repairs while an airdome, seating 1,800, is under preparation close to the theatre for the summer season. The cost of the alterations totals $19,000. Otto Lederer will manage both enterprises for Herman Mayer, who also owns the Electra.

A new theatre is to be erected on the northwest corner of Seventy-second street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, seating 2,400. Work was started on April 15.

On Fifty-first street, between Third and Fourth avenues, Brooklyn, the Keith enterprises are to erect a new motion picture theatre seating 2,000.

Directory of New Theatres

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

THE Ben Ali Theatre, Lexington, Ky., will open its summer season with motion pictures in about two weeks and will continue the picture policy throughout the summer months. Paramount features will be shown exclusively in Lexington at this theatre. Improvements on the house are now being made. A new front and box office is being erected and a Hope Jones Unit Orchestral installed. The price of admission will be ten cents.

The Dixie Theatre at Somerset, Ky., which was damaged by fire several weeks ago and had to be closed for repairs, was reopened this week under the management of C. C. Mize. The interior has been redecorated and refurnished.

Parthenon of Nashville Will Open Soon

What will be one of the most beautiful motion picture theatres in the South will be opened within the next five or six weeks at Nashville, Tenn. The new house will be known as the Parthenon, and the fixtures and decorations will be made in imitation of the ancient Greek Parthenon. The lobby will be 100 feet in length and the seating capacity of the auditorium will be very large.

The theatre will cost about $30,000. A large pipe organ will be installed at a cost of $8,000. The theatre will be controlled by the Parthenon Amusement Company, of which C. I. Lamb is president; H. L. Lamb, vice-president, and C. A. Bowman, Jr., secretary and treasurer.

Morgantown, W. Va., is to have another new theatre. H. J. Manery will be the proprietor of the new theatre, and it will cost when completed close to $10,000. The new theatre is to be called the Oxford and will have a capacity of 500.

Mr. Manery is an old exhibitor and will run the best shows at the new motion picture theatre that he can procure from the Pittsburgh offices.

Another big theatre in Pittsburgh is to be turned over to the movies this summer. Beginning May 3 the Miles Theatre at Penn avenue and Seventh street will begin motion pictures and will run nothing but the biggest feature pictures possible to secure.

The admission price has not as yet been settled and it is said that the management of the theatre want to run nothing but the best pictures that they can secure and will have to charge not less than 25 cents, while other theatres in that section are charging a five-cent admission price.

News of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio Theatres

Herbert P. Morgan, of Chicago, has leased the Grand Central Theatre at Thirtieth street and Central avenue, Indianapolis, and will have a formal opening May 2, showing "The Hoosier Schoolmaster." Mr. Morgan has been identified with the motion picture industry in Chicago and should make a success in his new venture.

Gus Schmidt and Harry E. Cohn, of Brigham, Crose & Cohn, who are operating the Colonial Theatre, Indianapolis, with combination moving picture program of Charles Chaplin pictures and Keystone comedies and vaudeville, have leased the Crystal Theatre, in North Illinois street. The Crystal is in the "heart of movie row" in Indianapolis and has been operated by Barton & Olsen. Schmidt and Cohn leased the theatre from William E. English for a long period of years.

Roy McMullen, manager of the Colonial motion picture theatre at Joliet, Ill., is planning remodeling his playhouse. A new ventilating system will be installed, new seats put in and other improvements made.

In Texas and the Mississippi Valley

The Crescent Motion Picture Theatre, a new $10,000 theatre, which has been under construction for the past three months at Temple, Texas, was opened to the public April 12. The owner is J. J. Hegemenn, formerly an exhibitor of Galveston, Texas.

A film jumped from the sprocket of a picture machine while a picture was being run recently in a Houston, Texas, house, causing flashes resembling fire on the screen. As usual, somebody shouted "Fire" and in the rush to the exits a young girl was injured.

The Bell Air Dome, Austin, Texas, has been leased by J. C. Stevens, and will open about May 1 completely remodelled. An unusual feature, a Deagan Unaphone, has been installed, and a five-piece orchestra will furnish the music.

J. E. Manning, manager of the Hardin Theatre, Texarkana, Texas-Arkansas, is making arrangements for the installation of a $10,000 pipe organ. Mr. Manning was formerly manager of the Saenger Brothers' Theatre at Monroe, La., and recently started to go into business for himself, but the citizens of the little Louisiana town presented a petition asking him to continue as manager of the Monroe house a little while longer.

The Palace Opera House, a photoplay theatre in McGehee, Ark., is being remodelled and enlarged to take care of increasing patronage. Work began April 12.

A heavy loss of life at Bay St. Louis, Miss., was averted on the evening of April 13 by A. C. Brown, an exhibitor, who manages his theatre at this summer resort. A fire originated in the operator's room while a large audience was witnessing the pictures. Displaying much coolness, Mr. Brown told the audience to file out the exits. The last person left the building just as the burning walls collapsed.

Fire originating in a negro moving picture show in Liberty street, Baton Rouge, La., caused damage of $85,000 on April 13.

The Shelby Theatre at Shelby and Guendaline streets, Louisville Ky., which has been erected by the South End Amusement Company, was thrown open to the public Saturday night, April 10. The Shelby is an up to date, cosy, neighborhood house with a capacity of 800. The building is of brick, fireproof throughout, and has a spacious and attractive entrance and pleasing interior appointments. The General Film service is being used.

The Crystal Theatre on E street, between Sixth and Seventh, San Diego, Cal., a motion picture house, has closed its doors.

Clune, of Los Angeles, who has been putting on motion pictures at the old Isis Theatre in San Diego, has discontinued the service and the house is again dark.

New Theatres Multiplying in Mississippi

Business in Mississippi certainly is on the "hum," according to the reports gathered from film men traveling through that territory in April. New theatres, and good ones, are springing up in the rural districts like the proverbial mushrooms, they say. As an example:

The Wiggins Electric Light and Power Company, of Wiggins, Miss., is erecting an up-to-date motion picture house to seat several hundred. It is erected on a hillside and will be one of the most unique theatres in the entire country, inasmuch as the slope of the seats leading to the curtain is entirely a natural one, as the theatre is being built squarely in a steep hill.

Laurel, Miss., is to have one of the finest and best appointed picture houses in the State. A prominent location on one of the principal business streets has been selected by the promotors, and building will begin within the month.

The same Laurel syndicate is erecting another house in Hazlehurst, Miss.

Visitors from New Orleans in the summer to Bay St. Louis, Miss., will find a brand new picture house for their summer entertainment. It is the "A. and G." house, named after the initials of its owner, A. Gaspard.

Biloxi, Miss., is soon to have a film city, patterned after the famed Universal City. Fairview, just out of Biloxi, is the chosen spot, and elaborate improvements, backed by Eastern capital, are under way. A motion picture producing company, lately noted in the NEWS, is to locate here also.

The film fans of Hattiesburg, Miss., are surely getting their money's worth these days, for a sort of a war is on and some exhibitors are offering as many as eight reels in order to keep up with the keen competition and attract audiences from opposition houses.

Work on the new theatre being erected by Philip Foto in Opelousas street, Algiers, La., began April 12. It is to seat about five hundred, and is being erected on the site of the old Algiers playgrounds.

J. P. Pittman, of Port Arthur, Texas, has leased the Wignall Building on Proctor street, Port Arthur, and will open up a house under the name of the Pittman Theatre. Mr. Pittman was formerly connected with the motion picture business in Port Arthur, but had moved to new fields.

At the Mound City Theatre, Gretna, La., a picture show was held recently by the owner for the benefit of a playgrounds fund the town has been trying to raise for some time.

The camera man in Monroe, La., has been especially busy in April snapping pictures right and left of school children, public buildings, streets, etc., which pictures are later exhibited at Sugar's Theatres. Its manager says the crowds recently have been large.

Frank E. Hutchisson has sold his interest in the Grand Theatre, Delaware, O., to Park Byers, who has been prominent in the theatrical business. Mr. Byers and Guy Dailey have formed a partnership and announce that the best pictures will be booked.

The new Strand Theatre, Fremont, O., has been opened. The house is owned by A. H. Jackson, and Carl Miller is the house manager. It is regarded as the most complete playhouse in Fremont, and has been doing a capacity business since the opening night.

Another new motion picture theatre is soon to be built at Altoona, Pa. That town has been a leader in the erection of theatres in the last two years, and now it is to have a new one costing $65,000.

MR. EXHIBITOR!

Do not let Flossy "ads," reckless promises and unknown management lead you to purchase a screen that you must very soon discard. You are the one who must necessarily suffer. It's your business and your money at stake. These so-called screen manufacturers do not pay your bills. "It's up to you to sink or swim."

Investigate before you buy. Investigate not only the screen, but the manufacturer back of the screen. Sky-rockets is an appropriate name for some, and we have noticed that these sky-rockets have been shooting up and down for the past few years, and each time under a different management.

BEWARE OF THE GOLD BRICKS!

We, the undersigned, invite your most rigid investigation. We will gladly send you samples of Mirroroide, the Screen. Supreme, for tests and comparisons, leaving it to your judgment as to the merits of Mirroroide.

THEATRE MAILING LIST THEORY vs. FACTS

Suggestions in connection with circularizing motion picture theatres.

It is a common theory that an efficient mailing list can be maintained by the means of the following sources of information: correspondence, post office returns, reports of salesmen and press information.

It is a fact, however, that these sources of information are by no means complete, and (outside of our office) I still have to find a system in use for verifying the information received and getting what is missed. This is one of the strong points of the system we use.

Do not theorize, satisfy yourself whether your list is an efficient one, see what percentage of the changes that took place last year—20,245—were recorded on your list, then write me.

Edward H. Wahlsdorf, one of the well-known uptown New Orleans exhibitors, has under construction a new theatre on the uptown-river side of the Magazine street-Peters avenue corner. His new house will seat about 600, and is to be one of the very best uptown theatres. Recently, Mr. Wahlsdorf managed a smaller theatre in the immediate neighborhood, but found that gradually increasing patronage called for a newer and finer theatre.

Plans for a first-class motion picture theatre to be built at Hopkinsville, Ky., have been drawn for the Co-operative Photoplay Company, a recently organized corporation. The company has leased for a long term of years a lot on Main street in the heart of the business section of Hopkinsville, and will begin soon the erection of the new house. The building will be two stories in height with a frontage of 70 feet in Main street. On the ground floor will be a 20-foot lobby with stores on either side running back 50 feet. On the second floor will be assembly rooms suitable for lodge meetings. The theatre will be of brick and stone with a seating capacity of about 1,200, making it the largest house in that part of the state. It is expected that the proposed theatre will be ready for business in September.

A new motion picture theatre has been opened at Mt. Olivet, Ky., under the management of Sherman Arn, owner of the Gem Theatre at Maysville, Ky. The pictures shown will be the same as those exhibited at the Maysville house.

The Star Theatre at Russellville, Ky., closed last week. Eldridge Denham, the manager, is considering opening another motion picture house in some other Kentucky town.

The Leader Theatre at Forty-first street and Lancaster avenue, Philadelphia, has during the last week undergone a transformation. A new $15,000 Kimball organ has been installed; a new system of indirect lighting put in place; new Wilton carpets laid. The Auditorium has been redecorated; the projection screen shows the walls of a handsome room with parlor on one side, conservatory on the other, doing away with the old-time plain effects.

A new series of educational and scenic pictures has been added to the program of Paramount and other features. This is the first neighborhood theatre in Philadelphia to put in such extensive improvements. There are daily matinees, of two performances, and two evening performances. Mr. L. Effinger is manager of the Leader.

The handsome Arcadia, Philadelphia, owned and managed by Mr. Boyd, opened Saturday, April 10.

The Knickerbocker Theatre at Fortieth and Market streets, Philadelphia, formerly a Marcus Loew house, has emerged in the past week from vaudeville to a photoplay policy of high-class features. The young lessee and manager, Carl W. Miller, expects to make additions and improvements in the near future.

The Wishart is a new theatre of 900 seats recently opened at Front street and Alleghany avenue, Philadelphia.

Picker & Bennett to Build Theatre in Brooklyn

PICKER & BENNETT, who lease and operate two of the largest and most important photodrama houses in Manhattan—the Burland Theatre, at 985 Prospect avenue in the Bronx, and the Eighth Avenue Theatre, at Eighth avenue and Twenty-sixth street—announce the completion of plans to extend their interests into Brooklyn.

With this purpose in view, Picker & Bennett have acquired from the Brooklyn realty firm of Meruk & May the large vacant plot immediately behind the new block of stores at the corner of Flatbush avenue and Cortelyou road. This lot has a frontage of 100 feet on Cortelyou road, stretching from immediately behind the stores to Twenty-first street, and is 201 feet deep on Twenty-first street, forming almost a perfect rectangle and occupying the corner of Cortelyou road and Twenty-first street.

Music and the Picture

Editor's Note.—This department is prepared to answer all questions from exhibitors relating to the use of music in connection with photoplays, and to suggest suitable music for current pictures. Correspondence will be welcomed

CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

Music for "The Fifth Commandment"

THE World Film Corporation has issued for the Julius Steger picture "The Fifth Commandment," a musical score of value to pianists in theatres booking the feature. In addition to the music specially arranged by M. Winkler by acts, musical cues for the various parts of the drama follow the musical arrangement for the five acts.

Carl Winter, the leading character in this drama, employs a song called "Castles in the Air." This wonderful and melodious strain is the theme; in fact, the basis of the entire story. In order to represent this story correctly in musical language, it is necessary to use this melody several times, and orchestra leaders should play same, where indicated on the program.

Act I.—1. Minuet No. 2 in G, by Beethoven. 2. Castles in the Air, melody (once through), by Lincke. 3. In the Garden, from the Symphony Rural Wedding, by Goldmark. (Play No. 3 until the end of Act. 1.

Act II.—4. Ballet Suite from "Rosamunde" (once through), by Schubert. 5. Castles in the Air, melody, by Lincke. (Play No. 5 until Carl leaves for Rio de Janeiro.) 6. Good-bye, by Tosti. (Play No. 6 until the end of Act. II.

Act III.—7. Phedro, overture (once through), by Massenet. 8. Castles in the Air, by Lincke. (Play No. 8 until end of Act III.)

Act IV.—9. Scenes Pitteresques, March and Air de Ballet, by Massenet. (Play No. 9 until "I Must Go Back; I Must See Her Grave.") 10. My Heart, at Thy Sweet Voice, melody, by Saint Saens. (Play No. 10 until end of Act IV.)

Act V.—11. Dawn of Love, by Bendix. (Play No. 11 until "I'm Going Upstairs to Dress for Dinner. Please Sing the Song," etc.) 12. Castles in the Air, by Lincke. (Until "Who Are You Who Dares to Talk to Me Like That?") 13. Novellette (once through), by Marquis. 14. Castles in the Air, by Lincke. (Play No. 14 until the end of Act V.)

Music Cues for "The Fifth Commandment"

Play whatever you think is in keeping with the dignity and subject of this picture, following the different scenes with appropriate music, either in a light vein or in a dramatic vein, as the scenes may require it. Be sure to play the chorus, and only the chorus, of "Castles in the Air," during the scenes specified hereafter and exactly on the cue.

Part I.—Begin to play chorus of song as soon as title of photoplay is displayed, until the first two characters, Carl and Alice, have been introduced. Following the sub-title, "Carl Sings 'Castles in the Air' to His Friends," et cetera, play chorus.

Part II.—When boarding house mistress receives telephone message, and goes upstairs to inform Carl, play chorus of song, until Carl stops playing the piano.

Following the sub-title, "In the Sunlight of Love, Singing Their Favorite Song," et cetera, play chorus of song and continue melody softly through this scene and the following until the old man passes at fireside.

Part III.—Following the sub-title, "The Doctor Informs Winthrop," et cetera, begin chorus very softly and soulfully during the scene where Carl's wife dies, until her family enters the room.

Following sub-title, "Years Have Passed, a Thousand Hands Were Stretched," et cetera, play chorus after Carl appears on platform and has made his bow; begin when he commences to sing chorus of "Castles in the Air."

Part IV.—Following the sub-title, "Friendless and Disheartened," etc., as soon as Carl rises to sing, play "Castles in the Air" until he stops.

Following sub-title, "His Sad Mission Fulfilled," et cetera, wait until Carl kneels at grave, then play softly, almost religiously, chorus of song, until change of scene.

When you see Carl and the harpist coming along the street, get ready to play chorus as soon as they start to sing and play; stop when they do.

Part V.—Following sub-title, "You Must Not Expect Money Here," et cetera, get ready to play chorus all the way through in strict tempo, softly and with much feeling, as soon as Carl begins to sing, the words of the chorus appearing on the screen; continue until harp player stops, even though Carl does no longer sing.

Following the sub-title, "I Am Sorry You Sent the Musician Away, Daddy," et cetera, begin to play chorus softly, as if the melody floated into the room from outdoors, and continue until the butler exits.

Following sub-title, "Alice, There Stands Your Father," etc., begin to play chorus, impressively and with much feeling, and continue all the way through until Mr. Steger, after bowing to the audience, has disappeared from the screen.

$200,000 Cleveland Theatre Popular

CLEVELAND'S newest picture house, the Liberty, Superior avenue and 105th street, is a veritable palace of beauty in delicate old rose, gray and gold. Although the house is less than a month old, it has established itself with the theatre-going public of the East End. An orchestra of twenty pieces furnishes the music.

The Liberty is housed in a $200,000 building and has a seating capacity of about 1,200. S. M. Hexter is president of the company; Harry Du Rosher, manager, and Marcel L. Deutsch, house manager.

Within a short time another new and magnificent stage setting will be installed at the Duchess Theatre, Euclid avenue, near Fifty-fifth street, Cleveland, Ohio. The stage setting is being painted by Louis Fett, and will portray a mammoth garden with natural flowers growing all around and fountain beds. Elaborate electrical effects will be used, so as to make the garden set look like a genuine California affair.

Equipment and an eight-year lease on the Doan Theatre, East 105th street and St. Clair avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, have been purchased from M. J. Greenbaum and associates, by Herman and Frederick Henn, former lessees of the Orpheum Theatre, East Ninth street, opposite Chester avenue.

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 15

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

The single reel comedies produced by the World Comedy Stars Film Corporation have back of them some of the strongest names in the amusement world.

RICHARD CARLE, whose name is known all over the country, as a result of his successes on the legitimate stage of "The Mayor of Tokio," "The Spring Chicken," "The Tenderfoot" and "The Doll Girl."

TOM WISE, beloved for his work in "A Gentleman from Mississippi" and now in "The Song of Songs" and many other hits.

KATHERYN OSTERMAN, recently starred in "A Persian Garden" and "Piff, Paff, Pouff."

JEFF DE ANGELIS, starred in "Fantana" and "The Beauty Spot."

LULU GLASER, famous as "Dolly Varden," "The Madcap Duchess" and "Dolly Dollars."

FLORENCE TEMPEST, the most fascinating boy in vaudeville, noted for her work with Tempest and Sunshine.

PAULA EDWARDS, who is remembered for her playing in "Winsome Winnie" and "The Princess Beggar."

And now the further announcement that WEBER & FIELDS, the world's greatest comedians, are to be starred in one reel features.

HERE ARE MAGIC NAMES WITH WHICH TO DRAW BIG AUDIENCES.

Here is the opportunity to add at small expense a one reel comedy feature which will have the pulling power of Broadway stars and the biggest reputations in the world of comedy.

These comedies are clean, wholesome and full of laughs.

There is no better way to strengthen an ordinary program than to add and advertise one of these features. For a house that makes a specialty of feature programs, there is no program stronger than a World Feature with a World Comedy Star film.

Every exhibitor, no matter how small his house—whether he can afford to run a big five reel picture or not—can afford to run a World Comedy Star one reel feature and use the big name it represents, to give his house the atmosphere of tone and strength that big names always give.

Here is one good way for the live exhibitor to make money—to realize full houses with a very small investment.

DISCUSSED EVERYWHERE

In the entire history of the motion picture business there was never such a widely discussed project as KRITERION SERVICE. Since its inception it has made such splendid headway that it has been marveled at by everyone.

It did not use the old stereotyped methods of merely putting out pictures, but is putting out GOOD pictures combined with a service and co-operation that was never before thought of.

Also the quality of Kriterion Service, its advanced methods of business dealings and its many other innovations are natural subjects for discussion.

Kriterion has reached an advanced stage in motion picture making. It has combined good photography and good stories. It is issuing a strong line of advertising material that has the drawing power. Kriterion Service deserves its wide recognition.

Those theatres which are using Kriterion Service in turn are receiving this strong recognition from the public. They realize the splendidness of Kriterion pictures and insist on seeing them.

The time is come for a complete reversal of the tone and make-up of Serial Motion Pictures.

The uncanny and mysterious have had their vogue.

The wild and melodramatic types have tired the multitude.

The time is come for something new in Serials.

Realizing the demand, capitalizing the new sentiment, we come with "The Goddess," a new serial that marks a new epoch in picture making.

It has a sunny flavor, a Springtime idyl, a delicious medley of youth, innocence, joy, love, purity and good.

Gouverneur Morris, America's most fluid, liquid writer, has written a story that will dazzle you with its sunny deliciousness.

Charles W. Goddard, author of "The Ghost Breaker" and many other dramatic successes, has picturized the story.

Ralph W. Ince, who has more artistic successes to his name than any other director, has produced the picture.

Anita Stewart, prettiest, cleverest, and most charming, is Celestia and playing opposite as Tommy Steele, her chiefest worshipper, is Earle Williams.

Edward A. MacManus, the inventor of the pictorial serial, will have charge of the publication of the story, which will appear in all of the Hearst Syndicated Papers, covering 5,000 cities in the United States.

What more can we say than that Albert E. Smith and J. Stuart Blackton have called together the best talent in the country and have utilized all the wonderful resources of the Vitagraph organization for the production of the most fantastic, artistic serial ever attempted:

"The Red Seal of Quality"

"GRAUSTARK" MADE AUTHOR RICH; STORY THRILLED MANY MILLIONS

¶ George Barr McCutcheon comes of a family that makes its living by dreaming. It is a distinguished family and the works of the McCutcheon boys are known all over the world. For they dream dreams of stories, paintings, cartoons and books.

¶ Many dreams had been dreamed by George Barr McCutcheon before he finally happened on that most wonderful and beautiful of them all—"Graustark." Mr. McCutcheon had been writing for a number of years. He had written a great many successful short stories and several novels. He took a vacation and went to Europe. He did not follow the tourist route, but sought out those picturesque villages that are known to but few. Then he found that most wonderful of all mythical countries—"Graustark."

¶ Naturally Mr. McCutcheon chose an American for his hero. This young Grenfall Lorry is of the type that every one loves. He is of the daringly romantic kind that follows the beautiful princess of his dreams to the furthest parts of the earth. Millions of persons read of the adventures of Grenfall Lorry in "Graustark." In fact, the novel was declared to be the most popular ever published in America.

¶ ESSANAY saw the possibilities of "Graustark." Mr. McCutcheon also realized the value of his story. Many other large film companies had angled for this great feature. Mr. McCutcheon, however, was not after money alone. He wanted to be assured that "Graustark" would be given the greatest production of any photoplay. ESSANAY convinced the author. And that's a pretty hard thing to do. You will be convinced beyond a doubt when you see this remarkable drama. It is in six acts and every act is a continuous thrill.

¶ "Graustark" is the first of the big ESSANAY FEATURES. It was released April 26. All of these features will be released through the new Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay Company. The branch offices where the exhibitor can book direct are located at the following addresses: New York, 1600 Broadway; Chicago, S. E. Corner Adams and Wabash, Chicago Business College; Atlanta, 75 Walton St.; Kansas City, 12th and Walnut, Boley Bldg.; Dallas, 1900 Commerce St.; San Francisco, temporary address, C. B. Price, Hotel Stewart.

My Dear Sir:

I am writting you in regard to your great SERIAL STORY "EXPLOITS OF ELAINE" which we are playing now, and just finished to day at our Tulia House the 14th. instalment, and its been the greatest thing the writer ever saw in the way of a serial, and not only in my opinion but hundreds upon top of hundreds that stand in line at our two houses, here and Plainview, waiting to get in, and its not only great as a serial story but equally as great or greater as a MONEY GETTER, and thats one thing all we exhibitors are after, I sure want to meet each one personally some day, every one of them are actors and actresses, and we have run every serial story the Universal, have put out, also some others, ELAINE, is the best thing in the way of a serial for drawing qualities, acting excitement, suspense, thrills, etc. no dull moments no PADDING at all, and the two GREAT DIRECTORS, who are directing this are dandies, and every actor in this serial is loved here by every body, Jameson is a peach himself, and every body knows the rest of the cast are the best ever walked in front of a camera, but what I wanted to say is that I dont know where to get hold of all this bunch induvially but I want a AUTOGRAPHED PHOTO of each of them, for we begin NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE next week, and I am advised thats only 10 episodes, man for lords sake run it all summer, and early part of next fall, we cant afford to lay a thing down like this, for its to good to quit.
Be sure to tell Mr. Daly, Miss White, Mr. Lewis, and Jameson to send me one of their Autographed Photos also Mr. Arden of New Exploits, I want to frame them for Lobby, as they are all good magnets, and the two directors I would sure appreciate them.
Also we want on your mailing list, as we never expect to let PATHE out out any thing we dont buy, for I wired and accepted WHO PAYS series for two of our houses, today, and will start it 28th. of this month, which is very near, and I want you to tell Miss. Rowland, and Mr. Ling, I want their Autographed Photos alsol as they are both strangers to us and our patrons, but we want to get acquainted, so this is the best way I know off and by the way any kinds of advertising you have on this serial story, send it we will give it all kinds of publicity.
Thanking you in advance for all this and assuring you we appreciate your efforts, beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

Personality and Circulation

A SUCCESSFUL business man, the other day, stated that a man's personality counted most in the achievement of commercial success.

He spoke in proof, of a number of big business men, beginning with Judge Gary, head of the United States Steel.

All possessed personality to a marked degree.

THERE is a good deal of truth in what he says, although very often what we call personality is very largely ability—just simon-pure ability, put into generous action.

But I object to personality in one respect very strongly, and that is, its use or acceptance in securing trade journal or any kind of journal advertising.

THE personality of a publisher may help secure circulation for his publication; I mean, his personality as expressed in and through the publication—its policy, brightness, character and all-around helpfulness to the reader.

Very good; but this personality shouldn't secure advertising for the publication. There is but one thing in the world that should—just one thing—and that is, the circulation of the paper.

SUPPOSE we put it this way:

Personality helps to make circulation; circulation makes advertising.

But you must not eliminate circulation in this order of events. If you do you have not only an illogical but an unbusinesslike situation.

CIRCULATION is a commodity. Nothing more, nothing less.

There's no argument here, absolutely none. Every advertising manager who knows his business knows this to be true, and so, eventually, will every advertiser.

He will appreciate the fact that trade-journal circulation is just as much of a commodity as the one he manufactures.

It is just like a suit of clothes, for instance. It either is a suit or it isn't. It covers your body or it doesn't. It fits satisfactorily or it doesn't. It is of a certain grade of texture.

And for all these points you pay so much.

CIRCULATION is just as substantial, just as amenable to examination. It exists or it doesn't; and if it does, it is worth so much per yard.

When I come to you, Mr. Advertiser, I may radiate personality all over the place; but if I sell you an inch advertising space on this basis purely, you are giving me something for nothing, and I am begging charity.

Neither of us wants this sort of thing.

Why not a fair exchange of values—real values?

MY manufacturing plant has taken a big investment in money.

A considerable force of people are straining every effort to put out the very best product in our power to make and we are selling it to your customers, even into the far corners of your field.

All this investment, this expense, this effort—and, take my word, it is all considerable,—provides you with a medium, a channel to your trade, a genuine commodity.

IT isn't that you like me, or some member of the staff. It's how much circulation and what kind?

It isn't that we produce a pretty paper. Of what use is that to you, if it doesn't circulate for you?

It isn't that the paper says nice things or bitter things about you. Of what effect is that if it doesn't circulate?

It isn't that we support the industry. Of what use is that if our constructive work doesn't circulate?

AN advertiser said to me the other day:

"For Heaven's sake, stop arguing. I admit you've got the best paper. Why keep on talking?"

Which sounds rather humorous, except for the fact that I was simply setting forth the facts presented here, that money spent for no circulation is money given away.

THE problem of buying circulation and getting value received is simple enough.

You sell your product to a certain group of people.

Make the publication show you how many of these particular people it reaches, on a paid subscription basis.

HOW many subscribers?—that is the only guarantee of circulation a trade or class paper can give—and are these subscribers purchasers of your product?

Are the subscriptions paid? Do the subscribers renew?

Get these important facts and you will fairly gauge circulation. By no other means can you possibly get your advertising money's worth.

Vol. XI May 8, 1915 No. 18

Why This Attack?

A FOREMOST film company, one of oldest establishment, highest repute and unquestioned integrity, is attacked editorially by a racing and theatrical daily which issues a Sunday section devoted to motion pictures. The attack is surprising.

Two very well-known series of pictures, namely, "The Exploits of Elaine" and "Who Pays?" are assailed violently upon grounds which the tenderloin publication finds to be immoral.

THIS awakening is somewhat late, it would seem. Several thousand exhibitors have been exhibiting "The Exploits of Elaine" for seventeen weeks.

The series "Who Pays?," now in its second release, was introduced to the trade press more than a month ago.

Recently at a public showing in New York City, clergymen and educators were united in their commendation of the first two of the series.

"THE Exploits of Elaine" was written by Arthur B. Reeve, whose detective stories, upon which this series was based, have appeared in our leading home magazines for the past two years.

He is a writer of excellent standing, as is also the co-author, Charles Goddard, at present collaborating with Gouverneur Morris in another serial, "The Goddess."

IT would appear that Messrs. Reeve and Goddard and our best magazines and several thousand exhibitors, together with their audiences, and the National Board of Censorship have been condoning and conniving at what is now airily alleged to be an immorality.

The "Who Pays?" series is running in fiction form in about five hundred newspapers. Evidently these numerous papers and their several million readers also are gravely at fault.

LEVELED against these factors and facts is the editorial of a publication which openly specializes in "Tenderloin" news.

The incongruity of the situation is laughable.

But after the laugh, one is forced to ask, Why the attack?

THE racing publication would admit readily enough, undoubtedly, that it doesn't make a business of conducting moral crusades.

What, then, is its animus?

Pathé Freres does not advertise in its columns.

But, we take it, this cannot be the reason.

TO attack a business in an effort to induce advertising is blackmail.

It has been attempted infrequently in the past by publications unworthy of the name and without circulation. It has always been short-lived because, having no circulation, these publications did no harm.

The advertiser knew this and was not afraid; moreover, his honest sense of manhood would never permit him to surrender to barefaced graft.

THIS cannot be the reason. So obvious an attempt would bring down upon any publication the combined wrath of every legitimate business in the field; and the trade itself would be fully aided by the reputable press in stamping out such a cesspool within a legitimate business.

Perhaps it is best to laugh—and let it go at that.

THE editorial will do no harm, work no injustice, except in this one instance: it will prove a valuable exhibit in the hands of the politicians and professional reformers when the censor bills are up.

They are looking for just this sort of thing, namely, an attack by what purports to be a motion picture publication against a leading producer. Exhibitors, exchange men and producers are working hard today to prove to the intentionally or unintentionally ignorant that our best producers are fully to be entrusted with the making of pictures. The exhibit implies otherwise.

What Organization Has Done for Pennsylvania

OF all the numerous benefits that organization has brought the motion picture exhibitor, none are more tangible or impressive than those which have accrued at Harrisburg, Pa., as a result of the organized campaign of the exhibitors and exchangemen of that state, to combat the legislation that has been launched against them during the last three months.

Three months ago the film men of Pennsylvania resolved to demand of the politicians of the commonwealth that their rights and liberties be respected.

The State League, just formed, entered into the task with an astonishing determination.

The results, if not overwhelming, are nevertheless remarkable.

The exhibitors and exchangemen were defeated, to be sure. The negro equality bill passed one house in spite of them. The censor repealer was throttled.

But they have grappled with a new censor law, harsher than the old one, backed by the Governor and a legislative majority, and have, by fighting every inch of ground, compelled the Breitinger-Brumbaugh faction to make substantial, even vital, concessions.

The important fact is, not that the motion picture men have failed to gain all, but that they have, by united effort, wrested a few grants from an opponent firmly resolved, at the outset, to yield nothing.

Film Men Force Changes in Keystone Censor Law

Concessions Wrested from Breitinger and His Faction Include Reduction of Censor Fee, Right of Appeal, Limitations of Board's Rulings, Withdrawal of Advertising Slides from Their Jurisdiction, Cut in Censor's Salaries' and Reduction in Fines—Stern's "Fifty Cent" Censor Bill Reaches Second Reading

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., April 28.

MATERIAL gains were made in the week just closed by the motion picture interests that have been waging the fight in the present session of the legislature for the elimination of some of the objectionable features of censorship as now existing in Pennsylvania.

Although hopes for the absolute wiping out of censorship vanished when the House Committee of the Judiciary several weeks ago sidetracked the repealer bill that was introduced with the endorsement of the joint legislative committee of exchange men and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, the fight against some of the injustices of the present law has been continued, with the result that material concessions have just been made in the form of amendments to the Daix bill. This is the measure introduced in the Senate which, as originally offered, retained censorship with most of the objectionable features of the plan at present in operation.

The Daix bill, after reaching second reading in the Senate, was referred back to the Judiciary Special Committee of that body, where it was amended in a way to meet in part the wishes of the motion picture interests. It was then reported back to the Senate with a favorable recommendation last Thursday and is likely to be enacted into law in its present form.

Briefly summarized, the important concessions made to the picture men through these amendments are:

The fee for examination of films is reduced from $2.50 to $1 a film.

Right of Appeal Is Granted

The absolutely autocratic powers of the board of censors are taken away by a provision granting the "right of appeal from the decision of the board to the court of common pleas of the proper county." This is perhaps the most important gain, as at present no right of appeal is granted, nor did the Daix bill as originally introduced grant any such right.

The section giving the board the right to adopt any rules "it may deem necessary" for enforcing the purposes of the act is changed to provide that such rules shall be "reasonable."

A provision is inserted under which "proper announcement or advertising slides" do not have to be submitted for the approval of the censors. This section, it is understood, was inserted through the insistence of the motion picture men to protect them against such situations as that which arose several weeks ago when J. Louis Breitinger, the chief censor, threatened exhibitors with arrest for displaying slides which called on the patrons of motion picture houses to urge the lawmakers of their respective districts to vote in favor of the censorship repeal bill endorsed by the motion picture interests—which, incidentally, is now "canned" in committee.

Under the proposed law there are to be three instead of two censors, and an amendment, while making the salary $3,000 for the president of the board, as originally proposed, reduces the salaries of the vice-chairman and the secretary from $2,500 and $2,400, respectively, to $2,000 each.

Reduce Amount of Fines

The minimum fine for violation of the law is reduced from $50 to $25 and the maximum from $100 to $50, for first offense, and the minimum for subsequent offenses is reduced from $100 to $50 and the maximum from $200 to $100.

An entirely new section provides a fine of not less than $5 and not more than $10 for exhibitors convicted of displaying pictures that had been approved, without showing the certificate of approval. In default of payment of fine, exhibitors can be sent to jail for from two to five days. Any employee of the board of censors has the "authority to prevent" the display of any film which has not been approved by the board.

Instead of the board having the "general power and authority to supervise and regulate the display" of posters, a substitute provision prescribes that posters "shall be submitted to the board for its approval and the board shall withhold approval from such as are misleading or improper." This amendment, it is held, takes away the censors' power to dictate the size of posters.

Other minor changes in the bill as originally offered include one reducing from five to four feet the length of film to be used to display the board's certificate of approval.

The Daix bill, it will be recalled, is the administration measure that substitutes a board of three for the two present censors, raises the censors' salaries and provides for many more employees than under the existing law. As originally offered the Daix bill embodied the views of the present chief censor, J. Louis Breitinger, against whose autocratic methods the picture interests have so loudly protested.

Amendments Follow Conference

The amendments embodying the above-mentioned concessions to the picture men were inserted in the bill as a result of a conference in the office of Attorney General Brown, whom Governor Brumbaugh had directed to look into the complaints of the motion picture men at the time they appealed to the Governor to suspend Breitinger, whom they accused of overstepping his authority.

The conference was conducted by Deputy Attorney General W. S. Hargest, of this city. It was attended by representatives of the picture men's legislative committee and by the two censors. As a result of the investigation of the complaints of the picture men, it is understood that Breitinger was informed that he must yield in a number of important points and the result was that Mr. Hargest drafted the amendments which, it is understood, were finally agreed upon by both the censors and the motion picture interests.

The bill as it now stands represents, therefore, a sort of compromise. It is far from embodying everything that was desired by the motion picture men's committee, who set out with the original purpose of insisting on absolute repeal of censorship. It became very evident, however, that Governor Brumbaugh would have vetoed any measure providing for the entire wiping out of censorship, so the picture interests of Pennsylvania will have to be satisfied this year with half a loaf.

One thing is certain, and that is that if the exhibitors of Pennsylvania had not got together and formed their aggressive statewide league, which came to life in the convention here last January, they would have got absolutely nothing in the present legislature. As things now stand, there is every prospect that the Senate will pass the amended Daix bill. It will then go to the House, in which body it is possible that further amendments will be offered in behalf of the picture men, but the opinion of lawmakers who are on the inside is that the bill will pass about as it is in its amended form, which, it must be admitted, is a material gain for the new organization of picture men of the state.

Stern "Fifty Cent" Bill Gets Hearing

While these changes in the Daix bill were being wrought through the medium of the Senate committee, foes of the present form of censorship were active in another direction. In the lower branch of the Assembly early in the week Representative Isadore Stern, of Philadelphia, succeeded in having brought out of committee his bill making the censorship fee 50 cents a film regardless of the number of reels to a film, and containing other radical changes in the present plan of censorship.

This bill was introduced by Mr. Stern independently of any activity on the part of the legislative committee of the exhibitors and exhibitors, early in the session and everybody believed it would never reach the floor of the House for action. Mr. Stern, who is understood to have presented the bill in behalf of some Philadelphia film manufacturing interests, succeeded in having it advanced to second reading by last Thursday and on that day he induced the House to agree to make the measure a special order of business for final action at an early future date. It is understood to be Mr. Stern's purpose to keep this bill alive and to make a strenuous effort to have it passed late in the session if anything of an unfavorable nature should happen to the amended Daix bill.

In debate on his bill before the House on Thursday Mr. Stern made some telling points in his argument why censorship fees should be reduced. He said there is a very large surplus in the treasury of the board of censors which, he said, is the result of the accumulation of the $2.50 fees now charged for examination of films. The fact that there is such a surplus, he said, proves absolutely that there is no need for so high a fee for inspecting films.

Representative Williams, of Tioga county, asked why, if there is a large surplus in the treasury, the censors are asking for an appropriation of $84,000 from the present Legislature. Mr. Stern replied that he did not know the size of the censors' surplus, but he said it was his understanding that the large appropriation sought was to meet the increased salaries of the censorship board and new employees as provided for in the pending Daix bill.

Select Booking Opens Exchanges for "Eternal City"

Famous Players Establish Fourteen Branches to Handle Hall Caine Photo Spectacle Now Playing to Dollar Prices in New York

THE Select Film Booking Agency has appointed fourteen exchanges throughout the country to handle the Famous Players Film Company's stupendous photo spectacle, "The Eternal City," now playing at dollar prices at the Astor theatre, New York, and at the Studebaker in Chicago, the Boston in Boston, the New Grand Central in Chicago, and the Tabor Grand in Denver.

The film production of Hall Caine's immortal story with Pauline Frederick in the role of Donna Roma will have finished long runs at the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia, the New theatre in Baltimore, and the Washington theatre in Detroit, and will be completing a full week's engagement at the Strand in Hartford; the Trent in Trenton, N. J.; the Majestic in Birmingham, Ala.; the Majestic in Memphis, Tenn., and the Orpheum in Nashville, Tenn., by the time this is in print.

Even though the booking of the film throughout the country will be done by the exchanges named below, the Select Film Booking Agency from its office in New York will make arrangements for long engagements and will itself take care of the few territories in which it has appointed no representative.

A fuller and more complete line of advertising matter than is usual, including two styles of 24-sheets, one of 6-sheets, three of 3-sheets, and one of 1-sheets, heralds, cut-outs, booklets, souvenir books, lobby display, consisting of press matter, advance slides, stage sets, and special musical score for extended runs, has been prepared.

The exchanges are as follows:

Famous Players Film Company of New England, 31 Beach street, Boston, for Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont.

William L. Sherry Feature Film Company, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, for New York City and State.

Famous Players Exchange, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, for northern New Jersey.

Famous Players Exchange, 1321 Vine street, Philadelphia, for southern New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

Famous Players Exchange, Second National Bank building, Washington, D. C., for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

Famous Players Film Service, Inc., Pennsylvania avenue and Twelfth street, Pittsburgh, for western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

Famous Players Film Service, Inc., 37 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, for Indiana and Illinois.

Casino Feature Film Company, Dime Bank building, Detroit, Mich., for the state of Michigan.

Kansas City Feature Film Company, Gayety theatre building, Kansas City, for Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

Notable Feature Film Company, 133 East Second South street, Salt Lake City, for Utah, Montana and Idaho.

Notable Feature Film Company, 1749 Welton street, Denver, for Colorado, and Wyoming.

Progressive Motion Picture Company, Central building, Seattle, for Washington and Oregon.

Progressive Motion Picture Company, 645 Pacific building, San Francisco, for Northern California and Nevada.

Progressive Motion Picture Company, Marsh-Strong building, Los Angeles, for Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico.

Scope of V-L-S-E Branch Territory Announced

New York Office Will Look After the Empire State, Northern New Jersey and New England States—Other Exchanges Cover Wide Sections

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., of the territory to be served by each of its branch offices. This division is temporary and will be changed as new branch offices are opened.

From 1600 Broadway, New York City, Joseph Partridge will look after New York State, Northern Jersey down to and including Trenton, and all of the New England states.

The Chicago office in the Garland building, in charge of I. Van Ronkle, will take care of Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and Iowa, east of and including Des Moines.

The Kansas City office at Twelfth and Walnut streets, Mr. Peason will book Kansas, Colorado, Missouri, South Dakota, Iowa, west of Des Moines, Nebraska and Oklahoma, north of and including Oklahoma City.

Mr. Meade in Dallas at 1900 Commerce street will serve Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, New Mexico and Oklahoma up to, but not including, Oklahoma City.

San Francisco will cover California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Arizona and Montana.

In Philadelphia at 1316 Vine street, J. S. Hebrew will look after Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and southern New Jersey up to but not including Trenton.

The Atlanta office at 75 Walton street, in charge of W. C. Brandon, will cover Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Kentucky.

Additional branch offices will be established as rapidly as possible, and while it has not been definitely decided, in all probability, Boston, Columbus, Denver and Seattle will be the first cities to become V-L-S-E booking centers.

Kleine Contracts for 15 Davis Comedies and Dramas

Producer Favors Successful Dramatic Attractions Against Fiction for Screen Purposes—"The Sentimental Lady," "An Everyday Man" and Others on His List

NEGOTIATIONS have been completed between George Kleine and several well known New York playwrights to film a long list of popular plays this year. Fifteen of Owen Davis' comedies and dramas have been acquired, including his "The Sentimental Lady," "An Everyday Man," "The Inheritance," "The Jack of Spades," "What Might Have Been," "The Woman Next Door," "Beggars on Horseback," "When the Shadows Fall," "The Unwelcome Guest," "The Green Cloak," "Cupid and Mr. Jordan," "The Chest of Gold," "Queen of Poverty Flats," "Among the Poor," and "The Man Higher Up."

"The best guarantee of a successful picture is a successful play," said Mr. Kleine in discussing his plans. "I have always favored the play as against the novel for picture purposes. Any play that stands the grind of the circuits for several seasons is a sure success in film.

"It must have plot and heart interest, and is not so dependent as the novel upon language and its author's name. I think we demonstrated that very clearly in 'Du Barry,' 'Officer 666,' and 'Stop Thief.' Each one of those was brimful of action and each had shown its entertaining powers long before it was filmed. Furthermore, a successful play is more widely advertised and better known to the masses than a novel of corresponding merit, which makes it a better drawing card for exhibitors."

ADD DRESSING ROOMS TO MUTUAL STUDIO

Still larger additions to the dressing room accommodations on the Mutual studio lot at Hollywood are being built.

New actors and actresses are constantly added to the stock company and this necessitates an almost continuous increase in the facilities for housing them.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XIV

D. W. Griffith Says Producers Do Not Begin to Realize Possibilities of the Motion Picture—Pictures Are Produced Too Hurriedly with Little Regard for Their Artistic, Uplifting and Psychological Qualities—He Foresees the Day When a Single Story Will Run Two or Three Days on the Screen

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH is regarded as the master producer of America. He has always believed in making the best, the most artistic picture possible, regardless of expense, in giving every production of his a big, underlying, psychological value and in carefully studying photoplay technique and the possibilities of the camera with a view toward new effects and new possibilities.

Don't get the idea from this that Mr. Griffith is an impractical dreamer. Mr. Griffith well knows that the motion picture industry must be a financial success long to endure, but he holds that a picture produced along his lines will bring in sufficient returns to justify the outlay of time, money and expensive brains.

"The trouble with producers," said Mr. Griffth, "is that they fail to grasp the stupendous immensity of the art with which they are dealing. Anything on earth can be reproduced in motion pictures. The drama has its limitations but the scope of the motion picture is abolutely boundless.

"I noticed an article recently which said that plants show emotions. Vegetable life is capable of likes and dislikes just as animal life feels those emotions, according to this article. Now, that could never be shown on the stage, but it can be in motion pictures. The motion picture can show anything from the feelings of a lettuce up to the growth and fall of a great empire.

"Every newcomer to the business finds to his surprise that he never before realized the scope of the motion picture. The same holds true even for many who have studied motion photography. They fail to grasp its enormous scope. The stage is not a rival to be feared by the motion picture, for the picture has a field infinitely greater.

Aim Should Be Psychological

"I think that the greatest aim of a motion picture should be a psychological one, to produce a certain state of mind. When one sees an impossible melodrama often his feelings are stirred. He is excited, made angry or made sad. But when the picture is over the feeling dies away.

"That is because the picture was not true to life and its artificiality did not make a deep impression. The greatest compliment I received for 'Judith of Bethulia' was a letter from a man who had seen the picture describing the exalted state of mind caused by having seen the picture.

"Motion pictures must be true to life. The truer they are the greater they are. The Bible is the greatest book in the world today and always will be, even aside from its religious aspect, because it is the only book which dares to tell the truth. I think the Bible contains the greatest food for motion pictures of any book ever published because of that.

"The trouble when we try to produce a picture that tells the truth is that we run up against the censorship question. I have always demanded the same freedom for motion pictures that is granted the printed word. When motion pictures have the latitude that is allowed the Bible or Shakespeare then we shall have motion pictures that will be classics, just as we have classics in literature.

"Others recognize in the motion picture the coming literary force of the future. I value very highly as one of the greatest tributes ever received by the motion picture art a letter which I got about two months ago during my stay on the Pacific Coast.

"The writer was a man holding a very important position in a big chain of newspapers, a man drawing about $35,000 a year in salary and well along in the prime of life. He wrote to me and wanted to be allowed to work with me free assisting in the production of motion pictures. I was curious and wrote back asking him why he, at his time in life, desired to leave a field with which he was well acquainted and in which he was well established, to take up, as a tyro, the study of something entirely new to him.

Greatest Force of Future

"That man answered my inquiry by saying: 'I want to learn the motion picture business because I recognize in motion pictures the greatest force of the future. The newspapers may not know it, but they are doomed. The motion picture is infinitely greater than the newspaper. I want to keep in the forefront of the battle.

"'I want always to ride on the crest of the wave. So I want to learn about this motion picture business, which I feel is destined to supplant the newspaper and rank as one of the greatest forces of the days soon to come.'

"Present day producers are in too much of a hurry. They feel that the demands of business make it impossible for them to take the time. So they produce old, hackneyed stories and impossible melodramas, in which the players act as no human beings ever acted and grind them out at top speed.

"Often a director who can not 'make good' on the one and two reel pictures which must be turned out to meet the demands of filling release dates, is set to making feature pictures. So really his inefficiency earns him a promotion to a larger field.

"One great trouble with the pictures produced under these conditions is that they lack a big, vital thought or lesson. Every motion picture should teach something. People like to think, and the pictures which they remember are the ones which make them think. The pictures which do good are the ones which teach lessons.

"I do not mean that pictures should teach a lesson in a blunt, clumsy, painfully apparent way, but rather that, by insinuation and inference they should convey some thought. When a man sees a picture which puts him in an exalted frame of mind, which gives him new mental stimulus, he is bettered thereby.

"Mark my words, we will soon see the day when it may take two or three days' time for a theatre to show a single picture, when a man will drop in early in the afternoon and stay until the theatre closes at night, and then come back the next day to see the rest of it. That will be literature in motion picture form.

More Than One Day to Run Film

"There will always be room for the one and two reel picture, just as there is always room for the short story in literature, but the day will come when, outside of the real gems among the shorter pieces, the long picture, so long that it cannot be shown in a day, will be regarded as the masterpiece, and people will see it in instalments, just as they read a book a chapter at a time."

Mr. Griffith was asked if the physical question of eye strain would not interfere with persons watching motion pictures steadily from early in the afternoon till the closing hour of a theatre.

"I don't think that prolonged watching of motion pictures will result in eye strain," he said. "That question is gradually being eliminated. Photography is being improved almost every day and similar strides are being made in projection. What was regarded as very good photography and projection three or four years ago would be very poor now, and I think that as much improvement will be made in the future as has already been made.

"When I first used large figures on the screen, 'cutting off' the players at the knee, I met with a good deal of objection. Now everybody uses 'close-up' views.

"The 'switch-back,' too, of immense value, was condemned at first. I think the 'switch-back' is the most valuable bit of the present technique of picture producing Its value is both practical and psychological. The 'switch-back' is the only way of giving the action in two contemporaneous trains of events. Its psychological value is even greater.

"By the 'switch-back' you show what a man is thinking of or what he is talking about. For instance, you see a scene showing a man musing. Then the picture 'switches back' to his sweetheart and then back to the man again. Thus you know what the man was thinking of.

Effect of "Switch-back"

"Or the 'switch-back' shows what people are talking about. One cannot reproduce stage dialogue in pictures. But when you see two men talking and then the action switches back to two men fighting and then back to the two men talking, you know that one is telling the other about a fight and you know who was fighting and all about it.

"All the 'switch-back' does is gently to direct the spectator's thoughts. When you see a tense scene in a speaking play with several persons on the stage your attention wanders from one face to another, from one person's plight to that of another. You notice that one player is calm while another is fiddling with a glove and a third is casting about mentally for some means of escaping from the room. The 'switch-back' in motion pictures would show all these points clearly, one after another, and thus direct the spectator's attention to the salient points of the situation.

"Often the 'switch-back' may be atmospheric and thus serve to heighten the frame of mind necessary for the spectator to be duly impressed by the situation. Yet, when the 'switch-back' was first introduced it was decried."

In closing, a word about Mr. Griffith's career in the motion picture industry may not be out of place. Mr. Griffith had been an actor on the stage, playing under the name of Lawrence Griffith, from whence comes his familiar appellation of "Larry" Griffith. Several years ago he applied at the Biograph studios for work as an extra man. He realized the possibilities and future of the motion picture and achieved them to a greater degree than has any other man in this country, probably to a greater degree than any other man in the world.

For a long time Griffith was head producer at the Biograph studios, and to him is generally credited the merit of the pictures made under his regime. While with the Biograph Griffith personally made such pictures as "The Battle of Elderbrush Gulch" and "Judith of Bethulia." He also developed such players as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh and Henry Walthall.

He was besieged by offers and accepted that of the Mutual Film Corporation to become head producer of Reliance and Majestic brands. His salary with the Mutual is said to be about $2,500 a week, this amount including his share in the profits.

For the Mutual Griffith has produced several features in addition to supervising seven producing companies. Among his Mutual pictures are "The Escape," "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Birth of a Nation."

John Bunny Dies at the Age of Fifty-two

Vitagraph Comedian Passes Away at His Home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on April 26, After an Illness of Two Weeks—Known the World Over

JOHN BUNNY, the famous Vitagraph comedian, died Monday, April 26, at his home, 1614 Glenwood road, Brooklyn, N. Y., at the age of 52, after an illness of about two weeks. He is survived by his widow, Clara Scanlan Bunny, and two sons, George and John Bunny, tenth. Funeral services were held in the Elks' club house in West Forty-third street, New York City, at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening, April 28.

He was a member of the Elks, the Screen club, the Vaudeville Comedy club, the New York Press club, the A. A. A., and an honorary member of the Theatrical Stage Employees and the Motion Picture Operators Union.

From his first appearance on the screen in 1910 until he left motion pictures last summer to head a theatrical attraction of his own on tour, John Bunny was undoubtedly the most popular and best known comedian in the world. His face was as enthusiastically received in England, France, Australia, Germany, South Africa, or India as it was in America. In Italy he was an especial favorite.

Proof of this is best given by the reception which he received on his picture-taking tour of the world three years ago. Eyewitnesses say that his reception in London equalled in magnitude that ever given any king. The same held true wherever he went.

John Bunny was born September 21, 1863, in New York City. His father was George Bunny, who came from Penzance, England. The Bunny family had always followed the sea, John being the first exception.

At twenty-four John Bunny went on the stage, starting as a minstrel man. He graduated to the comedy roles of Shakespeare, playing Bottom with Annie Russell in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." After that he appeared in comic roles in musical comedy and other attractions. Among the stars in whose support he appeared are Maude Adams, Hattie Williams and Sol Smith Russell. He was a member of the original cast of "The Old Homestead," playing Hi Holler.

But when he went into moving pictures Mr. Bunny came to his own. He started with the Vitagraph company about Christmas, 1910. At that time his salary was said to be $40 a week. When he left last summer by an agreement which permitted him to head his own show, he was said to be getting $1,000 a week. He planned to tour the world, but the war cut the trip short. "Bunny in Funnyland" was the attraction.

John Bunny was the first motion picture comedian to be personally advertised. That and his appearance in Vitagraph comedies made his face loved and familiar the world over. He has undoubtedly made more persons laugh than has any other player.

DWAN AND PAULINE BUSH MARRIED AT SAN DIEGO

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 26.

Alan Dwan, director for the Famous Players, and Pauline Bush, Universal star, were married Saturday evening, April 24, at sundown, at San Juan Capastrano, the oldest mission in California.

The two well known photoplayers began work for the American Film Manufacturing Company on the same day, several years ago, and this mission was the first location the producing company with which they were cast used on that day. At this mission the two became acquainted. A number of well known motion picture people accompanied the couple to the mission, which is near San Diego, in autos, and witnessed the wedding.

"THE NIGGER" IS VINDICATED IN ELIZABETH, N. J.

Special to Motion Picture News

Elizabeth, N. J., April 27.

Unanimous approval was given the Fox picture portrayal of Edward Sheldon's drama "The Nigger" by a local committee that sat as censors to-day at a private exhibition in Proctor's East Jersey Street Theatre. Mayor Victor Mravlag, to whom a delegation of colored clergymen and others protested against the picture yesterday, headed the party, and immediately afterward full permission was given Manager Philip Wolfe to show the film here at any time. The picture which was scheduled for Monday and Tuesday of this week will be shown on the same days next week.

The censor delegation was made up of the Rev. J. Frederick Virgin, rector of Grace Episcopal Church; Judge James C. Connolly of the Court of Common Pleas; Chief of Police Michael Mulcahy; County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt; Captain John Hiney of the Detective Bureau, and James R. Brown, Clerk of the Police Court. Dr. I. A. Lawrence, one of the colored citizens who asked the Mayor to prohibit the picture, was also present and was told by Mayor Mravlag that he owed Manager Wolfe an apology for the mistake he had made in objecting to the film. Dr. Lawrence's protest was withdrawn.

SELIG EXECUTIVE OFFICES IN GARLAND BUILDING

The Selig Polyscope Company executive offices were moved late last week from 20 East Randolph street to the twelfth floor of the new Garland Building, corner Wabash avenue and Washington streets, Chicago.

The new executive officers are among the most up-to-date in the Windy City. In order to accommodate the rapidly increasing business of this concern, large offices were a prime necessity. All executive departments will be found hereafter in the Garland Building and the private offices of W. N. Selig, president of the company, will be also located at the new address. Exhibitors and other friends of the Selig Company are invited to visit the new offices and to make themselves at home.

NORTHWEST CONVENTION HALL CHANGED

Special to Motion Picture News

Minneapolis, Minn., April 27.

It has been decided to change the place where the coming convention and exposition will be held May 3 to 7 from Arcadia Hall to the West Hotel, according to William A. Steffes, secretary of the Northwestern Exhibitors' Association.

The convention and exposition will occupy the entire lobby floor of the West Hotel and the entire balcony. The rooms on the balcony floor, including the writing room, together with all the vacant stores on the ground floor, will be turned over to the exhibitors. This will give much more space than would have been secured at Arcadia Hall.

GERALDINE FARRAR BECOMES A LASKY STAR

World Famous Singer, Most Popular of Metropolitan Opera House Favorites for Several Years, Is Impressed with Importance of Film Drama and Signs Contract Covering a Number of Seasons—Diva Will Spend Eight Weeks at West Coast Studios for Four Subjects

THE Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has signed Geraldine Farrar, the world-famous star of the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Farrar will, it is said, receive the largest salary ever paid an artist to pose for pictures, the amount aggregating somewhat more than two dollars per minute for the time that she will actually be before the camera.

This engagement, which is the result of seven months of negotiating, has been arranged by Morris Gest, representing the diva, and Samuel Goldfish, representing the Lasky company.

Negotiations have been in progress practically throughout the grand opera season just concluded and were consummated the day after Miss Farrar's farewell for the season at the Metropolitan, when thousands of admirers cheered her for more than an hour and refused to leave the auditorium until, breaking all the rules of that institution, she made a speech announcing that she would return to the Metropolitan next season.

Miss Farrar, who is now on tour with the Metropolitan company in Atlanta, will return to New York City before she starts for the Lasky studios at Hollywood, California, and while in this city will make new records of "Carmen" for the Victor Talking Machine Company.

Miss Farrar will leave for California on June 15, and will make the trip from here to the Pacific Coast in a special car, which has been arranged for by the Lasky company.

Miss Farrar will be accompanied by her mother and father, Morris Gest, her manager, and Mrs. Morris Gest, the daughter of David Belasco, who also helped to bring about the contract between the star and the Lasky company.

Miss Farrar will also be accompanied by four maids and her special hairdresser. In Hollywood, Miss Farrar will reside in a villa which has been specially leased and furnished for her use by the Lasky management.

Engaged for Several Seasons

The contract between the Lasky company and Miss Farrar, by arrangement with Mr. Gest, covers a period of several seasons. Miss Farrar will spend exactly eight weeks working for the Lasky company this season, and it is assumed that during this period she will appear in three or possibly four vehicles.

It is not possible to announce at the moment the exact nature of the productions in which Miss Farrar will appear, except to say that it is highly probable she will assume some of the characters with which her name has been conspicuously connected in operatic presentations. These matters will be settled in the near future.

Miss Geraldine Farrar, beyond all question the favorite star of the Metropolitan Opera House, and most popular opera singer in the world today, has already been associated with the Metropolitan Opera for nine years and has been engaged for four and one-half years more. She receives the highest salary of any woman who ever played at the Metropolitan.

Geraldine Farrar is a native of this country, and was born in Melrose, Massachusetts. She is the daughter of an old New England family from which she inherited her power of discrimination and artistic impulses.

Though her parents were of a musical nature, they had never made it a profession. Miss Farrar's voice gave promise of future greatness from early childhood.

In 1894 she appeared in a little opera at the city hall in her native town, and her father was so much impressed by the praise she received that, although opposed to a professional career for his beautiful daughter, he permitted her to begin a musical education in Boston under the late Madame Long.

From there she went to New York to study under Emma Thursby. From New York she went to Washington to study under Caponl. It was at about the time of Dewey's victory at Manila that Miss Farrar was presented to President and Mrs. McKinley, pleasing them greatly by her sweet voice and girlish manner.

Melba Approves of Her Voice

After these years of training Miss Farrar was permitted to try her voice before Madame Melba and Mr. Ellis of the Walter Damrosch Opera company. Melba was enthusiastic over the beautiful voice and Mr. Ellis gave practical evidence of his belief in Miss Farrar's future by offering her $20,000 for four years' work, during which time she should have opportunity to study under Melba.

At the instance of Miss Farrar's father, however, she refused this offer and also an offer of $8,000 per year from Grau.

In 1889 the Farrars sailed for Europe and Miss Geraldine spent several more years in conscientious study under Trabadello in Paris and Tenor Graziani in Berlin.

She developed not only marvelous vocal acomplishments but also an extraordinary gift for languages, attaining with amazing quickness, complete command of German, French and Italian.

Geraldine Farrar made her regular operatic debut when only nineteen years of age, at the Royal Opera House in Berlin, being received with great favor, and was immediately put under contract for three years.

She was summoned to appear before the Emperor and Empress of Germany and became the favorite of the court. Emperor William once said to her, "You have a great future. I shall hear you many times."

Miss Farrar was the youngest singer

MISS FARRAR IN A FAVORITE ROLE

[illegible] entrusted with the role of Marguerite in "Faust" and the only artist who ever succeeded in overcoming the prejudice held by the directors of the Berlin Royal Opera against singing in any other language than German. Miss Farrar insisted so strongly upon [illegible] Italian roles that the directors yielded to her wishes.

Not only was Miss Farrar received with great favor in Germany, but her Paris success was of such magnitude that she received a very flattering offer from the Paris Opera House, but was obliged to decline this because of her Berlin contract.

Appeared in All Big Cities

She has appeared in all the principal European cities, including Paris, Monte Carlo, Munich, Salzburg, Warsaw and Stockholm, where she was decorated by the late King Oscar.

Miss Farrar, after an absence of seven years, returned to her native land unquestionably the most successfgul opera star of American birth, and became a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, adding new laurels to those which she had achieved abroad.

Prominent among the roles which Miss Farrar has played with most notable success are:

Margaret in "Faust," Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet," "Manon," "Traviata," "Boheme," David Belasco and Puccini's masterpiece, "Madame Butterfly," and her latest sensation, Bizet's "Carmen," overcoming the popular conception that only Madame Calve could ever reach the ideal in this role and establishing a new precedent of even greater artistic value.

Miss Farrar's most recent success has been the prima donna role in "Sans Gene."

NINTH OF "WHO PAYS?" SERIES FILMED

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 26.

The members of the Balboa-Pathé "Who Pays?" series company returned the first of the week from spending a week on Mt. Wilson where scenes were made using the federal observatory for interior and exterior settings, which completed the eighth release of three reels.

Number nine, which was taken up Wednesday, is entitled "The Fruit of Folly," and like all preceding releases was written by Will M. Ritchey. The direction is in charge of Harry Harvey, and Ruth Roland and Henry King play the leads.

HELEN CASE FEATURED IN KNICKERBOCKER BRAND

Helen Case, formerly featured by the Universal and the New York Motion Picture Company, takes the lead as the mayor's daughter in the new feature drama, "The Kick Out," produced by Robert T. Thornby, for the Knickerbocker Star Features.

Miss Case has just completed her engagement in a five-reel feature with S. Miller Kent, in the drama, "The Cowboy and the Lady." In this Knickerbocker Star Feature Miss Kent will have an exceptional opportunity, all of which she is improving with strong artistic ability.

"THE WOMAN" AT THE STRAND NEXT WEEK

The Lasky-Belasco production of Wm. C. De Mille's famous American political drama, "The Woman," which was originally produced by David Belasco, is to be the attraction next week at the Strand theatre, New York, beginning on Sunday, May 2.

In "The Woman" Lois Meredith makes her first appearance under the Lasky management.

Surprise Birthday Dinner Tendered E. S. Porter

Producing Manager of the Famous Players Lured to Hotel Knickerbocker Before Suspecting Why Eleven of His Friends Were Awaiting His Appearance

E. S. PORTER, producing manager of the Famous Players Film Company, was tendered a surprise dinner at the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York City, to commemorate his forty-fifth birthday. The party was carefully planned and organized by Mrs. Porter, the wife of the noted director, and it is interesting to note that though eleven of Mr. Porter's closest associates were invited, the guest of honor did not have the faintest intimation that the dinner had been arranged until his entrance into the dining room.

THE GROUP AT THE EDWIN S. PORTER BIRTHDAY DINNER AT THE KNICKERBOCKER

Brought to the Knickerbocker by Adolph Zuker, president of the Famous Players, on the pretext that he was to attend an important business conference, Mr. Porter was fairly stunned when upon his arrival he found the little gathering of friends grouped around the table awaiting him.

The effect upon Mr. Porter was further heightened by the fact that as he crossed the threshold, the musicians concealed in a corner, began to play Garabaldi's march, the music conspicuous in the score of the orchestral accompaniment to "The Eternal City" at the Astor theatre.

Among those present besides the guest of honor were Adolph Zukor, William H. Swanson, formerly associated with Mr. Porter in the Rex and Universal Companies; B. F. Porter, "the Simplex man" and a brother of the director; Hugh Ford, who collaborated with Mr. Porter on the production of "The Eternal City"; Al. Lichtman, who acted as toastmaster; Frank Meyer; A. Weinberg; directors James Kirkwood and Sidney Olcott; Ralph Kohn, the attorney of the Famous Players Film Company, and B. P. Schulberg.

Al. Lichtman opened the addresses by the statement, "Gentlemen, this is a surprise party," at which Mr. Porter facetiously remarked, "I agree with you."

The addresses consisted of reminiscences and expressions by all present of the esteem and admiration in which E. S. Porter is held by all who are and have been associated with him. Many toasts were drunk to the absent hostess, who must have received as much happiness from the event as those who were present.

Mr. Zukor made a stirring address, in which he said that throughout his entire business career, he had never been associated with a man as lofty in his ideals, as just in his views and as thoroughly lovable in character, as Edwin S. Porter. There was a sincerity in Mr. Zukor's words that brought spontaneous applause.

About the room were posters of "The Eternal City," appropriate legends, and some lithographs of the old Rex pictures which Mr. Porter had produced, one of which entitled, "Looking Backward," was particularly significant.

Mr. Porter will no doubt remember the dinner that commemorated his forty-fifth birthday even if he has as many more.

JOHN EMERSON QUALIFIED FOR DIRECTORSHIP

John Emerson, author of "Conspiracy" and a well-known actor on the legitimate stage, is at present appearing in a Mutual Masterpicture which is in the course of construction.

Mr. Emerson finds that he likes motion pictures so well that he is studying to qualify as a director and will probably ally himself permanently with the new art.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. BANISHING THE NICKEL IN DENVER THEATRES

UNTIL last December Denver, Col., was a "jitney town." The five cent piece was the standard of exchange, especially at a motion picture theatre box office. That fact had been impressed on all by the failure of two theatres to successfully charge more than five cents admission.

Then along came G. H. Greaves, secretary of the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company, which runs the Princess Theatre, and changed it all. Not only is the Princess getting ten and fifteen cents now, but it is the talk of the town, and it is likely that other theatres will follow suit soon. Mr. Greaves himself told how it all happened on his recent visit to the New York office of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The Moose & Greaves Amusement Company," said Mr. Greaves, "conducts several motion picture theatres. We have the Princess in Denver, a 1,300 seat house, located on Curtis street, in the business section. Then there are the Princess theatres in Cold Spring and Pueblo, and the Lyric in Cheyenne, all about 1,000 seat houses.

"It was last December that I decided to raise admission prices. With the example of the Princess and Isis' previous unsuccessful attempts to charge higher prices staring me in the face I was mighty sure I was right before I went ahead. But I decided to do the job up brown.

"I closed the house, remodeled and redecorated the interior, installed new seats and a sixteen piece orchestra, and opened it with a policy of giving a six reel show. All seats are ten cents in the afternoon; the orchestra is fifteen in the evening. Good pictures were necessary. I play a feature a day. We take Paramount pictures, first run in Denver, under contract and fill in with World Film and other pictures.

"Then we play special pictures, giving them special attention. For instance we preceded the week's run of 'Hypocrites' by a 'Hypocrites' Dinner for the press. We had all the newspaper men and members of the Ad Club at the dinner, and showed them the picture. The result was much valuable and favorable publicity.

"Our publicity is not gained in a haphazard fashion. We take up the whole time of a publicity man, H. E. Ellison, and use display advertising in the newspapers. We do considerable billboard advertising, and aim to have our lobby neat and attractive.

"Our advertising has carried with it a campaign educating the people up to the hours of our shows. Now they all know that the first show starts at 11:15, and that the succeeding shows come along, one every hour and a half. We have been very successful under the present policy, and I understand several other theatres will raise their prices soon."

G. H. GREAVES

As the man who raised Denver out of the slough of jitneyhood, Mr. Greaves stands out as a wonderworker. What he has accomplished has been by following his policy of "giving the public a good show and making 'em pay for it." What has been done in Denver, if accomplished in other cities, will be of benefit to the exhibitors who pave the way, and to the whole industry.

REAL NICKELS GIVEN TO 25 CENT SEAT HOLDERS

THE Paramount theatre, Newark, N. J., recently gave away at an evening performance pocket pieces, consisting of nickels, to the purchasers of twenty-five seats.

The management informed patrons that it would redeem the prices at face value at any time. One thousand pocket pieces were distributed among Newark theatre goers.

BALCONY MADE INTO SMOKING COMPARTMENTS

BILLY GUERINGER, head of the Fichtenberg enterprises, writes an interesting letter to the NEWS correspondent from Houston, Texas, where he went to install Harry Van Demark, newspaperman and theatrical manager, who has assumed charge of the Isis, one of the biggest and best appointed picture houses in the South.

Mr. Gueringer says the lower half of the balcony floor of the Isis has been transformed into mezzanine smoking compartments, while in the rear of the lower floor three handsomely appointed boxes have blossomed forth.

"Already one of the most beautiful theatres in the South," enthusiastically writes Gueringer, "the only features needed to place the Isis on a plane with the largest and most modern theatres in the country was the addition of smoking compartments and lower boxes, which have 'caught on" with Houstonians. When the big Fox feature rolled in today, as the first offering under the new regime, patrons of the Isis found themselves amply cared for in the way of additional comforts dear to the heart of the theatre-goer."

The lower floor boxes are commodious, and will accommodate nine or ten chairs each, while the new smoking floor, in which men may smoke to their heart's content while watching a picture, seats eighty or ninety persons without crowding.

HOW LOCAL EVENT FILMS GO IN PORTLAND, ORE.

MANAGER WINSTOCK, of the National, Portland, Ore., had a local film concern take pictures of the crowds leaving the theatre on Sunday, March 7, and throwing them on the screen on the following Tuesday and Wednesday presented every patron who recognized himself on the screen, with a free pass to the theatre good for two admissions.

The Northwest Weekly, Mr. Sill manager, took moving pictures of the 1,400 school children who were the guests of the Portland Symphony Orchestra at their rehearsal Friday morning, March 12. The pictures were shown at a local theatre on March 13 and 14.

Mr. Vincent, of the American Lifograph Company, Portland, is taking a series of films, starting with the baseball boosters and their doings, to follow with actual films of the games, etc., to be used by Manager Winstock of the National Theatre from time to time.

Chicago, April 28.

SHELDON LEWIS, the Clutching Hand in Pathe's "Exploits of Elaine," is now appearing for Essanay in an original play written by H. Tipton Steck, entitled "The Coward." This three reel production is being made under the direction of Fred E. Wright, and will be released in the near future.

Edgar O. Brooks, of the Cosmofotofilm company, who has been in Chicago for the last few weeks, left Wednesday for Detroit, where he will conduct some business in the interests of this company, whose main office is in New York.

While in Chicago Mr. Brooks sold the rights of "The Victoria Cross," "The Incomparable Mistress Bellaire," and "The Black Spot," for Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Illinois, to the E. L. K. Film company. He reports that the trip to this territory has been very successful, and it is probable that he will return to Chicago in the near future.

Harry McRay Webster was the principal speaker at the April dinner of the Reel Fellows' Club, held at the Hotel Sherman on Wednesday, April 21. The subject of his talk was "Production." Mr. Webster is one of the pioneer directors in the motion picture business, and his many years of experience with the large producing companies enabled him to cover this subject in a most instructive and entertaining manner.

It was decided at this meeting that the Reel Fellows should be represented in the Prosperity Parade which took place in Chicago on April 26. The use of thirty cars were offered to carry its members and these were suitably decorated with banners.

"CARPET FROM BAGDAD" IS RELEASED MAY 3

"The Carpet from Bagdad," the first Selig Red Seal play to be booked direct to the exhibitor, will be released on the V-L-S-E service on May 3, and exhibitors will have an opportunity to prove the drawing power claimed for it.

The play is in five parts, from the novel by Harold MacGrath, and in producing it the Selig company has enriched the fascinating theme with a wealth of Oriental settings. Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary and Wheeler Oakman are seen in the leading roles.

Ince-Vitagraph Picture Noted for Costly Scene

"The Goddess," Most Elaborate Yet Produced by the Company, Will Be Remembered Long Time After Release for Expensive Furnishings, Totalling Thousands

THE effort of the Vitagraph Company of America to make "The Goddess," that company's new serial picture which will be released on Monday, May 10, the most elaborate picture that has yet been produced by the concern, is clearly shown in one of the minor scenes.

The scene is that of one of New York's finest hotels, and although it serves only as a meeting place of two of the principal characters, it took three days to build the set, and when completed $65,000 was represented. Four tapestries alone represented $12,000, a rug $4,000, and two old masters an additional $30,000.

The furnishings which had to be built to duplicate those of the hotel, are not included in the estimate of value because they were instantly taken apart when the scene had been taken.

The completeness of detail in the scene, which, by the way, will run about three minutes in the completed picture, is one of the hobbies of Ralph W. Ince, the director, who declares that his success in producing big features is due entirely to attention to this detail.

"It's the little things that count," said Mr. Ince. "Now in 'The Goddess' we have had to travel several thousand miles in order to get just the proper locations for the scenes, but I know that the results have justified this expenditure of time and money.

"When this picture is shown to the public, I know the completeness of everything is going to be a revelation. I am positive that 'The Goddess' represents the finest in the art of moving pictures, and in these days of wonderful achievements, that is a very broad assertion."

ORMI HAWLEY, LUBIN LEADING WOMAN, AND TWO OF THE PYTHONS WHO RECENTLY "STARRED" WITH HER

"A WOMAN'S RESURRECTION" ALMOST READY FOR RELEASE

"A Woman's Resurrection," the screen version of Count Tolstoi's powerful drama, "Resurrection," is now practically finished at the William Fox studios, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. This film drama is the third in which Betty Nansen, the European tragedienne, who is in this country under contract exclusively to William Fox, has appeared under that management. Appearing with Miss Nansen in "A Woman's Resurrection" are Edward Jose, as Simonson, and W. J. Kelly, the well-known leading man, who makes his screen bow as Prince Dimitri Nekhludoff.

BETTY NANSEN

Others are Arthur Hoops, who has appeared in support of James K. Hackett and Virginia Harned and who has starred in his own companies and also in vaudeville. Stuart Holmes does a fine piece of work as Jacobi. Frances Lorrimore, as Missie, does notable work. Miss Lorrimore will be remembered for her spirited perfomance in "The Misleading Lady." Others in the cast are Edgar Davenport, Anne Sutherland, Bertha Brundage, Cecilie Sydney and J. E. Williams.

DELLA BRODE IS FIRST WOMAN DIRECTOR ON THE COAST

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 26.

Three additions were made last week to the staff of directors at the Balboa plant at Long Beach. Bert Bracken is again producing for this company and will first make a three reel sea picture.

Jack Byrne will direct Jackie Saunders, Frank Mayo and Jay Herman, the leading people, in the filming of "Serving Strange Gods," a three reel subject. Charles Dudley, who has been with the company in the capacity of comedian and character man, has been made director of the comedy company and will make one reel subjects.

Della Brode, who has been playing with the Balboa companies for the past several months, has the distinction of being the first woman to be made assistant director on the West coast.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Mortmain" First Vitagraph Film with Edeson

THE first Vitagraph production in which Robert Edeson will be seen is a picturization of "Mortmain; or, the Dead Hand," from the story of Arthur C. Train.

Mr. Edeson, who will portray Mortmain, will have in his support a cast including James Morrison as Forsythe, Donald Hall as Russell, J. Herbert Frank as Doctor Crisp, Edward Elkas as Flaggs, Gladden James as Scalscope and Muriel Ostriche as Bella. The picture is being directed by Theodore Marston, under the personal supervision of J. Stuart Blackton.

ROBERT EDESON

"Mortmain," as a screen story, will be doubly attractive because of its strong dramatic action, and the scientific and psychological elements that make of it a decided novelty.

Mr. Edeson, as Mortmain, is shown being put to sleep under the influence of ether chloride, and as the drug takes effect the sensations experienced by him under its influence is shown in vivid realism. He sees his own head getting larger and larger until its bursts. This is succeeded by a falling sensation as from a great height and it is during this period the super-man leaves the body and wanders off into space.

As the force of the anesthetic is spent and the soul returns to its physical habitations, Mr. Edeson receives a sensation of a severe jerk and bump.

The experiences of the super-man during its wanderings after leaving the body make the story of "Mortmain," in which every scientific and psychological detail is pictured on the screen with startling clearness. It is a notable fact that this is the first time anything of the kind has ever been shown in pictures.

DATES OF SELIG RED SEAL RELEASES SET

The following are the official release dates for Selig Red Seal plays to be booked direct from Selig, 1600 Broadway, New York City:

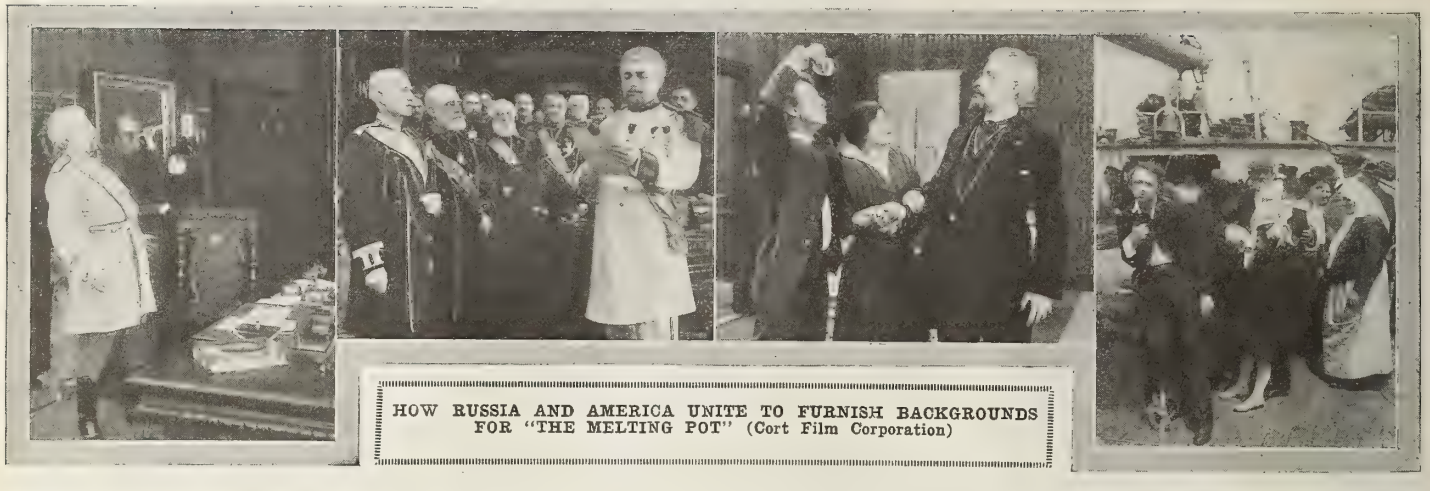
"The Carpet from Bagdad," May 3; "The Millionaire Baby," May 31; "The Rosary," June 28; "A Texas Steer," June 26.

Famous Players Releases for Summer Number 10

THE Paramount program for June, July and August will include ten of the strongest feature attractions ever yet produced by the Famous Players Film Company. The program will release one Mary Pickford production a month; this popular star will be seen in a notable characterization, "Rags," by Edith Barnard Delano, to be released in June; in a picturization of Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous play, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," to be issued in July, and in a typical portrayal entitled "Little Pal," released in August.

Other stage artists who will appear on Famous Players forthcoming program are Marguerite Clark, Hazel Dawn, John Barrymore and Pauline Frederick. Marguerite Clark will appear in screen versions of Madeline Lucette Ryley's celebrated comedy romance, "Mice and Men," and "Seven Sisters." Hazel Dawn will appear in photo-dramatizations of "Clarissa," and "The Gay Lord Quex."

PAULINE FREDERICK



Pauline Frederick, known through her magnificent portrayal of Bonnie Kenna in the Famous Players Film Company's greatest production, "The Eternal City," will be presented in July in a powerful photoplay rendition of Herman Bernstein's great dramatic work, "Sold."

SPEDON ADDRESSES QUILL CLUB

The Quill Club held a meeting on Tuesday evening, April 20, at the Hotel Manhattan. S. M. Spedon, of the Vitagraph Company of America, addressed the club on the subject of motion pictures.

HOW RUSSIA AND AMERICA UNITE TO FURNISH BACKGROUNDS FOR "THE MELTING POT" (Cort Film Corporation)

Blackwell Begins Work on "The Puppet Crown"

Star Who Scored Success in "The Key to Yesterday" and "The High Hand," Favorite Players Pictures, Will Appear with Ina Claire with Lasky

CARLYLE BLACKWELL has been engaged by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company for a long term and will immediately begin work at the studios in Hollywood, Cal., on the film version of Harold MacGrath's story "The Puppet Crown," in which he will appear with Ina Claire.

The engagement of Mr. Blackwell as a permanent member of the Lasky stock company corresponds, according to the announcement made by Samuel Goldfish, to the engagement of Blanche Sweet as a feminine star.

With Miss Sweet and Mr. Blackwell both working continually in Lasky productions this company feels that it has answered the demands of the photoplay "fans" as well as it has acceded to the demands of the general public by engaging such artists as Ina Claire, Charlotte Walker, Fannie Ward, Victor Moore and other celebrities.

Carlyle Blackwell made his first appearance on the screen with one of the old established concerns and appeared under that management for three years, obtaining during this period, a large personal following, especially in society dramas; in fact, one of the series of pictures in which he appeared became so successful that it is now being reissued.

After Mr. Blackwell left that organization he played a special engagement with the Famous Players in Edward Peple's "Spitfire." He then went to California and organized his own company in which he has appeared for the past few months with success. Among the five reel subjects in which he appeared for his own company were: "The Key to Yesterday," "The Man Who Could Not Lose," "The Last Chapter" and "The High Hand."

COURTENAY SIGNS FOR TERM WITH VITAGRAPH

Contracts calling for the appearance in moving pictures of William Courtenay, now appearing in "Under Cover," have been signed by that popular actor and the Vitagraph Company of America. Mr. Courtenay, whose Broadway successes have been many, and who created a large following during his seasons in vaudeville, will be seen on the moving picture screen in a number of roles.

He will be a welcome addition to the all-star company of the Vitagraph company, which is now featuring Robert Edeson, Frank Daniels, Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour, Earle Williams, Anita Stewart, Lillian Walker, Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Maurice Costello, Charles Richman and many others.

H. M. HORKHEIMER ON WAY EAST

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 26.

H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa company, has departed for the East with approximately fifty thousand feet of Balboa negative film.

He expects to be absent from the producing plant about three weeks, and will spend a portion of the time in Chicago. He later will go to New York City for a week.

"THE BATTLE" IS NEXT KLEINE PICTURE

"The Battle," in which Wilton Lackaye scored one of his greatest successes, is the next production to be staged at the George Kleine studio in New York City.

George Fitzmaurice, whose production of "The Commuters" is released this week, is in charge of the filming of "The Battle." He has been provided with a strong cast.

Frank Sheridan will be seen in the Wilton Lackeye role, with Anne Meredith in Josephine Victor's original part, and Fania Marinoff seen in the character created by Elsie Ferguson. Paul McAllister, Calvin Thomas, Sam Reid and Bert Gudgeon complete the cast.

George Fitzmaurice was just beginning to be considered a comedy specialist when he was entrusted with the production of "The Battle," thus breaking his record of laugh producers.

MINISTER WRITES SCENARIO FOR UNITED FILM

"The Vivisectionist" is the title of a two reel psychological drama written by Rev. Clarence J. Harris, the Unitarian minister who has just left the pulpit to become scenario editor for the United Film service, and which will appear soon on the United program.

In it Mr. Harris shows the tortuous methods indulged in by a famous psychologist to learn the workings of his wife's mind. This photodrama is played by Joseph Levering, Marian Swayne, Flavia Arcoria and Fritz Orlamond of the Empress stock company. It is bound to be popular, as it holds an appeal of universal interest.

Mr. Levering and his wife, Miss Swayne, have left the studio for an automobile trip west and south. They will be gone several weeks.

BARNETT WILL PLAY OPPOSITE VIVIAN MARTIN

Chester Barnett is to play the lead in James Young's forthcoming picture, based on the William A. Brady photoplay "Little Miss Brown," in which Vivian Martin is to be starred.

This is the third time he has played opposite Miss Martin under the World Film banner, the two previous pictures being "Old Dutch" and "The Wishing Ring."

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 25.

LOADED down with a bunch of photographs in colors of the interior of the chamber of the senate of the United States Thomas H. Ince, director general of the Nymp studios, could be seen any day last week on the big stage directing—not a scene for a motion picture, but the completion of the big set which is to be the setting for a number of scenes for the coming production, "The Man from Oregon." This task, Mr. Ince found was the biggest one he had ever tackled—biggest from the builders standpoint.

The filming of "The Man from Oregon" is under the direction of Reginald Barker, but in as much as the scenario was prepared by C. Gardner Sullivan and Mr. Ince, and the latter conceived the plan of duplicating the famous legislative chamber in the Santa Ynez canyon he is giving it his personal attention to see that every detail is reproduced to perfection.

More than six hundred people will take part in the scenes filmed on this set, of which number seventy will represent types of the upper house of the national legislature.

Howard Hickman and Clara Williams are playing the leads in this picture depicting a story of love and politics.

An elaborate East Indian cottage was burned last week for scenes in the five part Mutual master picture, "The Beckoning Flame," being produced by Charles Swickard. This cottage was complete in every detail, with two rooms completely furnished, that all interiors might be taken therein and the view of the Pacific Ocean show through the reed screen used for doors.

It was constructed of adobe and bamboo under the direction of Prince Surrey, of India, who is spending several months at the Nymp studio making a study of the manufacture of motion pictures with the view of returning to his native land and engaging in the industry there.

Fire Sacrifice as Climax

The house contained all the furnishings usually found in a residence of the class in Calcutta. The fire scene comes as a climax of the story when a native girl gives herself up in sacrifice by fire. Henry Woodruff will be offered as star of this subject.

Raymond B. West, the Nymp boy director, acted as the male chaperon last week to a party of thirty maids of the ingenue type who are working under his direction in the five part subject, "The Mating," in which Bessie Barriscale, star of "The Devil," "The Cup of Life," and "The Reward," is being featured.

This is a comedy drama of co-educational college life, and many of the exterior, as well as interior scenes will be made at the universities in Southern California.

Lewis J. Cody, recently engaged by Thomas H. Ince to play opposite Bessie Barriscale in "The Mating," claims the record for persecution—or prosecution. He recently went to the Santa Fe freight house and secured his automobile, one of the gaudy yellow, gun-boat type, and started for the studio with it.

Unfortunately it did not bear a number. The actor had proceeded but one block when he was pinched. Two blocks farther on the second policeman stopped him and served notice to appear at police station. The third start took him but another block when a traffic officer hailed him.

This caused Cody to have a sign printed and hung on the front of the machine. The sign read: "I've been pinched three times. Please!"

How misfortunes lead a prospector to make plans to rob a stage coach, but how fortune follows in his path and makes this impossible forms the basis for the Nymp western subject, "The Failure," filmed last week by Walter Edwards, who also plays the star part—that of the prospector.

Director Edwards Makes Record

Mr. Edwards is rapidly making for himself the name of the "speediest" director on the Nymp lot by the production of approximately two thousand feet of used negative each week. He made "The Scales of Justice," in which he shared honors of the leads with Clara Williams.

"The Sea Ghost," is a two reel sea story which will serve to introduce Margaret Gibson as a Nymp star. This is of the melodramatic type with ship wrecks, discovery of treasure on a desert isle, mutiny at sea, and a long list of thrillers.

More than three hundred members of the American Association of Passenger Traffic Officers, representing practically every railroad in the United States and Canada, were guests of President Carl Laemmle and General Manager George Magie, at Universal City, Tuesday, and entertained at a barbecue given in their honor.

In addition to seeing others work in pictures all of the passenger traffic men were given an opportunity to take part in the filming of a one reel railroad story, "The Struggle," specially written for the occasion, which deals with capital and labor prior to the Civil War and of the present time.

Victoria Forde Queen of the Event

For the early day scenes 150 veterans from the Sawtelle soldiers home were engaged for the day and took part in this subject and also one being filmed by Robert Z. Leonard, "Rally Round the Flag," a Decoration Day subject in three reels, the scenario for which was written by William H. Clifford.

Nestor director Al Christie had Victoria Ford appointed the queen of the event in honor of the traffic officers, and filmed scenes for "The Barbecue Belle," scenario for which was written by Ben Cohn. All the Nestorites, including Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons took part in this subject and entertained the distinguished visitors with a live line of chatter.

Among the prominent railroad men present and taking part in the scenes were Alexander Hilton, Santa Fe, St. Louis, president of association; Charles M. Burt, Boston and Maine, Boston, vice president; W. C. Hope, Central Railroad of New Jersey, secretary; L. M. Landman, Michigan Central; W. J. Black, Santa Fe; W. A. Russell, Louisville and Nashville; A. B. Smith, New York, New Haven and Hartford; L. F. Vosburg, New York Central;

M. GAY, TRAINER, AND TIBERIUS, APOLLO AND NERO, THE THREE "LEADING PLAYERS" OF THE HORSLEY BOSTOCK ANIMAL PLAYERS

Frank E. Batturs, Southern Pacific, and O. H. Taylor, Eastern Steamship corporation, who compose the executive committee of the association.

"The Fox Woman"

"The Fox Woman," an adaptation from the story of the same title appearing recently in a high class magazine, is being filmed at the R-M studio in four reels for the Mutual Master Pictures program.

CARMEN PHILLIPS ("Under the Crescent" Series)

This story was by John Luther Long, author of "Madame Butterfly," and offers exceptionally good situations for a photo play. Elmer Clifton, Signe Auen and Teddy Sampson have been selected to play the principal parts, and the direction will be in charge of Lloyd Ingraham.

An underworld story, "Out of Bondage," the scenario of which is by Chester B. Clapp of the R-M studio scenario staff, is being made in two reels. Dorothy Gish is being featured in this subject supported by Walter Long and F. A. Turner in the principal roles.

The film version of Ibsen's "Ghosts," has been completed for the Mutual Master Pictures program, and it has been decided by Frank E. Woods, manager of production of the R-M studios to film other plays of this great dramatist.

Scenarios are now being prepared for these additional offerings, all of which will in all probability be in four reels. The first offers Henry Walthall and Mary Alden in the principal parts.

Ray Myers, recently made director at the R-M studios, is now filming his first subject, "Mike's Elopement," a comedy drama in one reel for Reliance release, in which Violet Wilkey a child actress appears in one of the leading roles. Others in the cast are Harold Goodwin and Fred Burns.

The Majestic juvenile company under the direction of Franklin brothers are making "The Rivals," by Russell E. Smith. In these juvenile subjects it is the intention to film only child-like photoplays and as a basis for this, Johnny, who has a two-foot power automobile wins Nellie from Willie, the latter being so unfortunate as to have only an old soap box auto.

But the tide is turned when George, a rank outsider, wins the fair little miss. George Stone, a four-year-old, who has been in pictures for the past several months, has been cast in the part of leading man for this production and is supported by Violet Radcliff and Carmen de Rue.

Indian Writes Scenario

Little Dark Cloud, the miniature Indian of the R-M studios, is the author of a scenario, "The Converts," a two-reel Reliance subject now being filmed by Sheriff Arthur Mackley. This is based on an old Indian legend and in the picture Dark Cloud plays the important part of an Indian chief. Other well-known players of the studio are appearing in this subject.

A secret service story is the first offering Giles Warren, late of the Selig producing staff, is making for the Mutual program, at the R-M studios. The title of this is "Gridley's Wife," and the scenario was written by the producer. Claire Anderson will appear in the name role, Tom Wilson as the husband, a United States Marshal and Raymond Wells a secret service agent.

HERBERT STANDING (Bosworth)

Director William Christy Cabanne has found a way to secure an all-star chorus or band of extras. To do this he will not put in a requisition for the men or women until after twelve o'clock, as that is the hour the extras leave the studio if there is not work in sight.

With no idle people present, Cabanne has found, the manager of production, Frank E. Woods will call out all the regulars. Mr. Cabanne tried this out the other day when making a bar room scene for "The Failure," a four-reel Mutual master picture, and secured Henry Walthall, Charles Clary, Jack Conway, Sam de Grasse, Ralph Lewis, Spottiswoode Aitken, George Seigmann, George Beranger, and about twenty other directors and leading men to appear as bar flies.

Twenty-third "Bill" Comedy

Had these players not been idle at the time the scene with all high-priced players would have cost the company a big sum. But as it happened in this case this plan of making a scene is an economy.

Bill of the Komic Brand Bill series gets married in number twenty-three and Ethel the stenog is the bride. "Ethel's Romance" is the title given this release and conspicuous before the justice will be a striped dress. However, the whole story appears to be a dream as Bill is awakened when the chair, on which he has been napping, slips.

Just after the audience at the Republic theatre had expressed their appreciation by generous applause following the making of a scene for the M-M-P program subject, "The Failure," Manager Al Watson, of the theatre announced the arrival of a daughter at his home. Director Cabanne made a record of the expression of the happy father by placing him in the front row and re-taking the scene.

"The Man of It," a two-reel Reliance subject by Chester P. Clapp, is the vehicle for the early appearance of Jack Conway and Irene Hunt. This is an intensely dramatic story laid in the mountain country, and several days were spent by the players in selecting the locations. The cast requires fourteen plays and all have good parts.

Daly Producing Joker Comedies

The Victor-Universal Company is filming the George Bronson Howard story, "The Service of the Sword," from a scenario prepared by Earl Hewitt. This subject, to be completed in two reels, offers J. Warren Kerrigan exceptional opportunities for the display of his ability as a swordsman, first in a theatre where he accepts a challenge to fence a professional and again on a dueling field. The story is one of royal intrigue and the cast selected is a big one of well-known U players.

IRENE HUNT IN "ADDED FUEL" (Reliance—May 8)

The Gene Gauntier-Jack Clark Universal Company has gone to the mountains in the vicinity of Bear Lake Valley, where exteriors for three stories, "The Smugglers' Lass," two reels, "The Ulster Lass," by C. W. Bachman, in three reels, and "The Mate of the Primeval," by Ben Cohen, in two reels, will be filmed. The players expect to be gone about a month.

William R. Daly has been assigned to making Joker one reel comedies, and is now engaged in the filming of "Frivilous Fritzie," with Fritzie Brunette in the name part. The story is by George E. Hall.

The Al Curtis Joker Company is making "The Lovers' Lucky Predicament," in which Max Asher, Gail Henry and Lillian Peacock appear in the important parts.

The Nestorites in addition to filming "The Barbecue Bell" are this week engaged in making "The Downfall of Pots," and "Their Friend the Burglar." In the former Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Vicky Ford will play the important parts.

The Powers company is making "Mountain Love," by H. G. Stafford, in which Pauline Bush will be featured.

The "Broken Coin" serial company is now on the second episode of the production, which will have its first release the week following the last release of the "Black Box" series.

For this subject several thousands of dollars have already been invested in mammoth sets representing beautiful castles in the imaginary principalities about which the plot is woven.

Charles (Daddy) Manley, aged eighty-four years, the oldest photoplay actor, is to be featured in a series of twelve one reel subjects from stories written by John Flemming Wilson and scenarios by Calder Johnstone.

"Across the Footlights"

The first of these will be "Their Golden Wedding," which is now being made, and will feature Mother Benson as the wife. What brand these pictures will be released under has not been announced, but it is understood they will be in connection with a series of newspaper stories by the author of "The Master Key."

Adele Lane is playing the part of a star in a theatrical story by Leonora Dowlan,

VIC FORSYTHE, CREATOR OF FLOOEY AND AXEL (Komic-Mutual)

and produced by Burton King for the Big U brand. The title of this is "Across the Footlights," and one of the big scenes for this will be that of a theatre fire where William C. Dowlan, as the matinee idol rescues the leading woman. Edward Sloman plays the part of the theatrical manager, the heavy. The subject will be in two reels.

"The Swinging Doors," a two-reel subject for Big U brand, is being made from the story by Virginia Whitmore, and scenario by H. G. Stafford. This is a character sketch of an indulgent father, a Frenchman, who comes to this country with his family, and following numerous reversals is stricken when he sees his daughter—whom he supposed was in a convent—drinking wine while in company with a young man in a restaurant. The part of the father is played by Murdock MacQuarrie.

Director Henry McRae has written and is now producing a two-reel South African picture, "The Jungle Queen," which will feature Marie Walcamp as a lover of nature who has been successful in not only capturing very fine specimens of the wilds, but has also trained them. It is while she is giving an exhibition of her pets that one escapes. This incident leads the players into the Universal jungles where numerous hazardous escapes are effected and filmed. Rex de Rosseli appears as the father of the girl, an African hunter, and Wellington Slater his aid. Sherman Bainbridge is the heavy of the story, a sportsman on a hunting trip.

Harvey Gates, formerly of the Universal publicity department at the New York office, has been added to the West Coast studio scenario department.

The Bosworth-Universal feature company is home from Banning, Cal., where they spent ten days in the cattle country, filming scenes for the four reel western drama, "Fatherhood."

Treasurer P. A. Powers, of the Universal company, has departed for New York City, after spending a month here with President Carl Laemmle and others, supervising the completion of the mammoth producing plant of the company, Universal City, the opening of which on March 15 brought Mr. Powers West.

Powers Makes Valuable Suggestions

During his stay here the treasurer was on the grounds practically every day supervising the working and making suggestions for the improvement of conditions that will add both to the quality of the films made and the comfort of the players.

It was at Mr. Powers' suggestion that a mammoth pool suitable for river, fountain, or bathing beach scenes was made. He took particular interest in the making of this one afternoon, watching the workmen, suggesting improvements to the contractor, and during the time asked several questions.

As the officer of the company walked away one of the workmen jested to his neighbor:

"That feller surely got his two-bits worth if he considers answers to his questions of any value," the workman believing Mr. Powers to be one of the curious public who pay twenty-five cents at the gate to see how moving pictures are made.

Considerable damage was wrought at Universal City, the latter part of the week, when a very "unusual" (quoted because of frequent use with regard to California weather) sandstorm swept over the San Fernando Valley.

Scores of sets were razed, and for two hours the wind was so strong that work was impossible. All buildings are still intact and the Los Angeles river continues in its regular course regardless press reports to the contrary.

The Webster Cullison Ideal Feature Company is home from spending a week in the mountains near the San Gabriel Canon, where scenes for "Brand Blotters" were made. All have fish stories to tell and Will Scheerer has a very pressing engagement with a trout that got away.

The Frank Beal Ideal Feature Company has been working at the beach for the past few days where a shipwreck was staged for the fisherman story, "Mismated." Disk La Strange, late of Lasky Stock Company, and Rend Valdez play leading parts in this production.

BESSIE BARRISCALE IN "THE CUP OF LIFE" (N. Y. M. P.)

The company of Keystone players, including Roscoe Arbuckle, Mabel Normand, Alice Davenport, Ed Kennedy, Cameraman Lessley and others arrived home the first of the week from spending four weeks at San Francisco, during which time they made more than four reels of pictures dispite the fact that the weather conditions were such that they could work but nine days.

Exposition in Semi-Educational

One reel is of a semi-educational nature and has been given the title "Viewing the World's Fair at San Francisco," in which Fatty and Mabel have the time of their lives. A large portion of a reel was used in making night scenes at the exposition which shows the wonderful lighting effects, including the Tower of Jewels, the batteries of search lights, and the aeroplane that is used at night.

A comedy was staged on the old English convict ship originally used to transport prisoners from England to Australia and another on the U. S. Battleship Oregon. Golden Gate Park settings were used for the filming of "Wished on Mabel," a one reel subject, and another subject was made at San Jose, Cal.

The return of the San Gabriel Company of Keystones to the camp on Mt. Baldy, near San Bernardino, brought the news of a very peculiar accident that H. D. Armstrong, cameraman of the company, became victim of, when a bullet glanced at right angles and struck him, inflicting a very painful wound. Prompt medical attention prevented it from becoming a serious matter.

HENRY B. WALTHALL AS HE APPEARS IN THREE SCENES FROM THE ALLIANCE-BALBOA PRODUCTION OF "BEULAH"

While in the mountains the company made an Alpine guide picture with numerous beautiful snow back grounds. In this Gussel is the guide and a number of expert skiers are featured.

Recalls Dime Novels

The evil results of reading five-cent yellow back literature will be called to the attention of the motion picture fans by the one reel Luna comedy being made by the Albuquerque players this week, under the title, "The Near Capture of Jesse James." Dot Farley, Evalyn Thatcher and Raymond Zell appear in the principal roles.

Charley Chaplin and company of Essanay Players have completed the first Los Angeles-made subject, "By the Sea." This is of one reel, and Charley is to be seen spending a day at the beach, with a comedy situation arising with every swell.

This subject will introduce the most recent addition to the company, Billie Armstrong, an English comedian, who will appear in this and releases of the future in the impersonation of another nut.

G. M. Anderson spent several days here giving the Chaplin company a once over in its new quarters, and conferring with Director General Jesse Robins. Mr. Anderson returned to the Essanay Niles studio Monday evening.

The Colin Campbell Selig Company is now busy making the interiors for the short subjects for which exterior scenes were made while on their trip to the Panama.

The "Ne'er-Do-Well," an adaptation from the Rex Beach novel, is now completed and the negative and proof print has been forwarded to the Selig factory at Chicago.

It is very probable this company will next take up the filming of "The Crisis," the scenario for which has been adapted from the Winton Churchill "best seller" by Lanier Bartlett.

Story with East Indian Setting

An East Indian story, "The Girl in the Box," of two reels is being made at the Selig Zoo, with Leo Pierson, Edith Johnson, Lillian Hayward, Lafayette McKee, Sidney Smith and Roland Sharp appearing in the principal roles. The direction is by Tom Santschi. The plot is an entirely new one and deals with Indian trickery.

A psychological animal story, by W. C. Clifton, "The Journey's End," is being filmed by Louis Chaudet in one reel. The scenes for this are laid in California and India and the story evolves about an invalid artist and an author explorer.

Another Selig company is making "The Onion Patch," a rural comedy drama with heart interest by Maibelle Heikes Justice. This is being filmed under the direction of Norval MacGregor and the players of the "Bloom Center Chronicles" comedy series are taking part.

The Charles Belmont Davis story, published in 1909, "The Escape," has been adapted for filming by Emma Bell and is being made at the Edendale studio. This has to do with the Bohemian class of New York and the film will contain many scenes in art studios of the metropolis.

Two new subjects were taken up this week at the Rolfe studio for the Metro program. One company, headed by Orin Johnson and Olive Wyndham, began the filming of the Edward E. Rose play, "Fighting Bob," which will be completed in five or six reels.

The other subject is that of an adaptation from the musical comedy, "My Best Girl," which will be made in five reels. Max Figman has been engaged to play the lead opposite Lois Meredith.

Bosworth Films Shown in Four N. Y. Theatres

"Captain Courtesy" at Strand, "Pretty Mrs. Smith" at Broadway, "Hypocrites" at the Eighty-First and "Caprices of Kitty" at Riverside Draw Crowds

THE past week offered a strong representation on New York's important theatrical thoroughfare for Bosworth, Inc., which in association with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company is responsible for four big attractions in picture houses along the White Way.

At the Strand theatre the latest release from the Bosworth, Inc., studios, presenting Dustin Farnum in "Captain Courtesy," a thrilling drama of early California days, has been receiving due appreciation by capacity audiences. Fritzi Scheff, the famous operatic star, in a photoplay version of her recent Broadway success, "Pretty Mrs. Smith"' makes her New York debut at the Broadway theatre, where big audiences have attended the presentation of this film, the initial release of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company.

"Hypocrites," the film allegory creating a sensation all over the country, has been drawing capacity audiences at every performance at the Eighty-first street theatre, and last, but by no means least, Elsie Janis, in "The Caprices of Kitty," a delightful comedy which is receiving many bookings at the present time, has been appearing with big success at the Riverside theatre, an up-town Broadway house. The fact that a Bosworth film has been showing in a house of this character is in itself proof of the demand for the releases of the company.

Weber and Fields to Star in World Releases

Famous Comedians Will Make Exclusive Appearance in Fifty-Two Releases—Have Begun in "Two of the Finest," by Mark Swan

THE World Comedy Stars Film Corporation has signed the two World famous comedians, Joe Weber and Lew Fields, to appear exclusively in fifty-two releases, which will be exhibited at short intervals for a period of two years. Credit is due Phil Gleichman, the president of the Comedy Stars Corporation, for his exhaustive search for the best artists to complete his Comedy-Star idea.

The comedians have begun work and already one picture, "Two of the Finest," has been finished. This is a comedy by the well-known playwright, Mark Swan, who has been writing many of the Comedy-Star's previous releases.

The World Film release date set for this first picture is May 3. Others will follow.

Mr. Fields, it will be remembered, starred in the recent World Film production, "Old Dutch," in which he made immediate nation-wide success as a screen artist. He also has been playing during the season in "The High Cost of Loving," a farce comedy that was warmly received in many cities.

Mr. Weber has not played with his partner for some time, having spent the winter producing such successes as "The Only Girl" and other plays.

Exhibitors all over the country have been clamoring for good comedies. In signing these famous comedians, Mr. Gleichman feels confident that he has taken a vital step toward filling this demand.

PERMANENT CENSORS LIKELY IN GRAND RAPIDS

As a result of the committee appointed some time ago by Mayor Ellis to investigate the subject of motion picture censorship, Grand Rapids, Mich., is likely to have a permanent motion picture censor committee of five members with power to act and stop the showing of any objectionable films. The committee will be given outhority and legal status by the passage of an ordinance to be drawn by a committee of five to be appointed by the censor committee. A charge of 50 cents a reel probably will be provided in the proposed ordinance for viewing pictures. It is expected that eventually a place will be provided for showing all pictures to the commission before they are exhibited to the public.

When the report was read in the mayor's office, many prominent city officials, business men and ministers were present. Not a motion picture theatre in the city was spared by the committee in its report. All were declared to be fairly well constructed and ventilated, but all of them at times during the existence of the committee have shown objectionable pictures. A total of 27 pictures are mentioned in the report and are several criticised.

SIX WOMEN CENSOR FILMS IN EAST ST. LOUIS

The East St. Louis Women's Civic Federation, at its last monthly meeting, decided to censor the moving picture shows of the city. The action of the federation follows the showing of pictures that met with the disapproval of some of the members.

These pictures were shown in the best residence districts of the city, and to avoid a repetition of the offense a committee of six censors was appointed, each member of the committee to watch the shows in her neighborhood, and report to the manager of the theatre all films that she deems unfit.

NEW JERSEY TOWN REFUSES LICENSE

The Common Council of Summit, N. J., has refused the application for a license to conduct open air pictures made by Oliver Drake and William Sayre.

All the members of the council voted against granting the license with the exception of Edward G. Pringle, who vigorously protested such action. An appeal will be taken, it is said, to Mayor Bergen.

Test Anti-Prize Fight Film Law in Courts

THE act of Congress which prohibits the importation of motion pictures of prize fights will be attacked as unconstitutional by the promoters of the Willard-Johnson championship fight in an effort to get moving pictures of it into this country. The entire fight will probably take place in Newark, N. J. A written demand was served today on Frederick S. Freed, deputy collector of the port of Newark, that the pictures be admitted.

The demand was refused on the ground that a federal statute prohibits their importation. The pictures are now being developed and finished in Canada, it is said, and will be held there until the courts determine whether they can be admitted into this country. Former United States Senator Towne, representing the promoters, announced that he would apply to Judge Thomas G. Haight for a mandatory injunction "preventing and restraining the collector of the port of Newark from refusing to permit the entrance of the pictures." The injunction will be applied for Friday and it is believed will be argued next week.

"We do not believe the government has a right to prohibit the importation of these pictures," Mr. Towne explained. "Our bill of demand served on the collector sets forth very plainly that L. Lawrence Weber, owner of the pictures, and the men seeking to bring them in, wishes to use them for exhibition purposes only. He does not desire to sell or syndicate them through others. Our bill also sets forth that these are pictures of a prize fight. We are not seeking to hide behind the contention that it was a boxing bout or a friendly match."

The law which the promoters are attacking prohibits the importation of any pictures of prize fights for public exhibition purposes of any kind. The penalty for violation is one year in prison or $1,000 fine, or both.

Try to Jam Through Censor Bill in Bay State

IN the final days of the Massachusetts legislature session two entirely new bills to regulate motion pictures were introduced. One bill would include among films which might be prohibited those tending to arouse racial and religious prejudice.

The other extended the classification still further, making the censorship apply not only to immoral and obscene films, but also to those which tend to create disturbance, incite riots or cause public disquiet.

These bills were the direct outgrowth of the feeling aroused against the Griffiths films, "The Birth of a Nation." This feeling, participated in by whites, as well as negroes, the latter of whom claimed the film was defamatory of their race, reached its climax in a riot at Tremont temple.

Eleven persons were arrested by a special force of 150 police who had been warned of an alleged plan to break up the show and ruin the film and screen. Receiving no help from Mayor Curley, whose censors reported the film as outside of their powers of prohibition, its opponents on Patriots Day marched 2,000 strong to the State House across historic Boston Common.

Governor Walsh was outspoken in his opposition to the film, and a plan was formed to apply for a warrant in the municipal court for the arrest of the producer and manager on the ground that they were presenting an obscene show.

The judge heard much evidence, saw the film and ordered cut out within 24 hours that part which showed a negro in pursuit of a white girl. But the judge declared the law inadequate to prohibit the show in its entirety.

Hence, the late attempt to pass some law which will give officials power to prohibit any film which would arouse race or religious prejudice.

WARREN, OHIO, MANAGERS ARE DISCHARGED

Warren, Ohio, motion picture theatre managers are rejoicing over the end of the Sunday closing agitation, as the grand jury refused to indict them.

They were arrested and tried before Mayor Parks on the charge of performing common labor on Sunday. Mayor Parks bound them over to the grand jury, which decided to ignore the cases. This means, according to Prosecutor Phelps, who started the agitation against theatres being open on Sundays, that "no further action will be made and that Sunday pictures may henceforth run without interference."

The motion picture men planned, in case they were indicted, to enforce blue laws that would close every store and cigar stand, stop the circulation of Sunday newspapers and tie up the street car lines. The action of the grand jury has resulted in a wave of popular approval.

CANNOT STOP "BIRTH OF A NATION" IN BOSTON

Special to Motion Picture News

Boston, Mass., April 28.

Considerable discussion has been caused by the exhibition here of the Griffith masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation." A petition that the picture be stopped was made by the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People. Mayor Curley heard the petition and said, "I shall allow the play to proceed, and the municipal censor and a representative of the Police Commissioner may pass upon its merits."

Governor Walsh took a hand in the matter, but was informed by Police Commissioner O'Meara that the picture could not be legally stopped from the State House Meanwhile the picture is being shown.

VITAGRAPH COMPLETES "CHALICE OF COURAGE"

"The Chalice of Courage," in six parts, a picturization of the Reverend Cyrus Townsend Brady's widely read novel of the same name, has been completed by the western Vitagraph company, under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon, and will be an early Vitagraph release. The scenes are laid in the far west and the action is enhanced by typical western topography. William Duncan as William Newbold, George Holt as James Armstrong, Myrtle Gonzales as Enid Maitland, Natalie De Lontan as Louise Rosser, and George Kunkle, William V. Ranous, Otto Lederer and Anne Schaefer portray the characters.

GRACE DARLING REGISTERS HER FACE AT PATENT OFFICE

Noted People Laud Pathe Balboa "Who Pays?" Series

Nearly Thirty Persons, Including College Professors and Ministers, at Private Showing in New York City, Express Approval of Lesson Taught by These Films

THE Pathé-Balboa series of dramas which are being put out under the general title "Who Pays?" was given a formal send-off of considerable importance on Thursday, April 22, at the Broadway theatre, New York. On the morning of that date a private showing of the three first stories was given before an audience which included many of the most prominent persons interested in social and civic reforms in New York City.

RUTH ROLAND

As has already been announced, the "Who Pays?" series is made up of ten three-reel dramas each dealing with some phase of present day life. The cast is the same in each picture, but there is no connection between the stories, and each deals with a different set of characters.

The idea is to show that too many of the activities to which persons devote themselves most closely are of a nature which lead to results far from those they anticipated. If their effort meet with success there is always some one who must pay. The someone is usually the person himself or somebody dear to him.

The three plays shown at the Broadway theatre were "The Pursuit of Pleasure," "The Price of Fame" and "When Justice Sleeps." The first gives a typical example of the wrecking of a home by the social ambitions of the wife.

The second shows the ruin of several lives by the passion for fame which blinded a man gifted with musical ability. The third is a powerful arraignment of a Justice which sees only the obvious crime, and never seeks out the cause. Ruth Roland and Henry King are featured in the series.

Between twenty and thirty well known persons were asked after the performance for an expression of opinion regarding the pictures. The general sentiment expressed was that they were splendidly produced and had a strong influence for good.

Among those present were Dr. Edward E. Slosson, professor of Chemistry in Columbia University and literary editor of the "Independent"; Rev. O. C. Mees, Rev. Fred Hovey Allen, Prof. A. G. Panoroni of the College, of the City of New York; The Rev. Professor R. Venturini, Prof. R. E. Noyes, of Pratt Institute; Mrs. Edward Wadsworth Moody, Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, president of the New York State Association, opposed to Woman's Suffrage; Dr. John H. Walsh, Associate Superintendent of Schools, New York City; The Rev. Christian Reisner, Hon. Everett P. Wheeler, and Miss Ethel Peyser, member of the executive committee of the Women's Political Union.

Manager Langsfeld, of the Broadway theatre, had the lobby handsomely decorated with cut flowers, and had provided splendid music.

Cort Plans Unique Trade Showing for "Melting Pot"

Anybody In or Out of the Industry Who Fills Out Coupon Appearing in the "News" Next Week Will Be Admitted Free to Hippodrome

JOHN CORT, president of the Cort Film Corporation, has hit upon a novel scheme whereby exhibitors, as well as independent exchange managers, state rights buyers, and in fact the whole film industry may see Walker Whiteside in "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's play which has been made into a film production under Mr. Cort's management.

And it will be done without any individual being put to the necessity of going to a theatre at a certain hour on a certain day in order to get a glimpse of the newest American spectacle picturized from a famous dramatic piece.

"The Melting Pot" is to be shown first to the public at the Hippodrome, beginning May 9. Instead of the usual trade showing, Mr. Cort has decided to make the Hippodrome showing of "The Melting" a week wherein those of the business who wish to see his photoplay may do so by merely presenting the necessary credentials at the box office of the big Sixth avenue theatre any afternoon in the week of May 9.

And this means that the guest of Mr. Cort at the Hippodrome that week will get the best seat possible during the show which he witnesses free. Mr. Cort has arranged with the management to pay for any seats so distributed.

A coupon will appear in the advertisement of the Cort Film Corporation in the News next week. The only requirement necessary to obtain two seats to the Hippodrome on any afternoon of that week except Sunday and Saturday will be the name of the exhibitor, the name of his theatre and the address. When the coupon is filled out in that way it may be exchanged without cost for two seats to the Hippodrome. In the case of exchange men and state rights buyers it will be necessary only to write the name, business and business address on the coupon.

By an inadvertence it was stated in the News last week that "The Melting Pot" would be shown at the Hippodrome the week of May 3, when as a matter of fact the date should have been May 9.

CORNELL STUDENTS ASK FOR SECOND "ELAINE" BOOKING

The Whartons, Pathé producers, tell an interesting little story to illustrate the great popularity of "The Exploits of Elaine." The Ithaca theatres showing the serial have been receiving a large patronage from the Cornell students who have followed the fortunes of the fair "Elaine" with marked devotion.

It so happened that the fourteenth episode showing the detection of the identity of the "Clutching Hand" was exhibited in Ithaca while the college men were away on their spring vacation. Immediately on their return they petitioned the exhibitors to book the episode again.

The request was granted, and practically the whole university saw Sheldon Lewis's clever work when as Perry Bennett he saw his game was up.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

WASHINGTON, D. C., EXCHANGES FEEL THE BOOM

WITH the opening of May, many changes will take place in Washington, D. C., exchange circles. The offices of the World Film Corporation will be located at 1004 E street in more commodious quarters. In this move Manager Drum inaugurates a ground-floor exchange.

"I feel that this is absolutely necessary for the handling of the expressage. Besides, it adds dignity to the office itself. An innovation," he went on, "will be a fireproof vault with a humidor. This, I believe, is absolutely necessary for the safety of valuable films, and the moisture will keep them in proper condition for handling.

"This will assist in reducing the breaking of films on the operating machine. If all exchanges will use this precaution much useless patching would be avoided."

In the new offices Mr. Drum will be in closer touch with his shipping department, and Miss V. M. Bailey, who looks after the order and booking department, will be very conveniently situated.

Owing to the increase in business, Warner's Features, carrying the United Film service, has entered "The House on E Street," which will become its future home, 903. Sidney B. Lust, the local manager, has been trying for several months to find time to move, but decided that he would have to take time right now.

The new offices are large, including two floors, and the arrangement of the various departments systematic and in close relation to each other. A feature is an attractive reception room, which was not possible in the crowded quarters on Ninth street. Mr. Lust's office is much larger and offers better accommodations to customers.

"I feel like I am beginning to live now," remarked Mr. Lust with satisfaction. "I can turn around without knocking someone over, as I have been doing for some months past. The next month will see even greater improvements in attractiveness."

Irvine's Features are also located in the same building as the Warner's Features. This is a new exchange, under the management of W. H. Irvine and his son, Alex. G. Irvine. They will handle features only, and their territory will be through the South, where both men are well known to all the exhibitors.

George W. Smiley, formerly local manager of the Electric Film and Supply exchange, is now special road man for the Pathé exchange, under the management of Mr. Osbourn. Mr. Smiley is at present in the South placing the series "Who Pays?" which he reports has been readily received by the exhibitors.

H. E. Reddish, also of the Electric Film exchange, is an addition to the Pathé forces.

"I feel I was most fortunate in securing two such experienced acquisitions," commented Mr. Osbourn, "when I found it necessary to increase the force of the Washington offices."

Among the recent visitors at the Pathé exchange were J. D. Huffheimer, who operates a chain of theatres in Norfolk, Va., and M. L. Huffheimer, manager of houses in Richmond and Lynchburg.

A recent addition to the local Mutual forces is Victor L. Abbey, formerly of Warner's Features, who is the special representative for "The Diamond from the Sky," the film novel from the American studio. The first released instalment was given a private showing at Crandall's theatre on Friday night, and of the thirty odd exhibitors present all made a booking for this exceptional picture. Without a doubt this picture is a decided departure from anything that motion picture manufacturers have offered. It holds the interest and curiosity not by a series of dangerous adventures and thrills, but by a logical course of intense events.

There is some lively bidding among local theatres as to which one will secure the first release of "The Diamond from the Sky." Mr. Abbey will have his headquarter in Washington, but will spend most of his time on the road in this territory.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors who viewed this private exhibition were A. E. Thorp, of the Rex and Hippodrome, of Richmond, Va.; F. Lester Smith, of the Empire of Frederick, Md.; J. W. Myrtle, of the Art of Staunton, Va.; R. A. Steel and party, of the Richmond theatre of Alexandria, Va.

With the resignation of George W. Smiley as manager of the Electric Film and Supply exchange, that office was closed and is not at present represented in local circles. Whether this service will reopen there is not definitely known.

The Universal exchange is about the only exchange in which there has been no disturbances. Under the management of S. J. Mayer the increase in business is running along so smoothly that nothing sensational is reported unless it be the extraordinary booking of "The Black Box" serial and the Universal features. Already exhibitors are arranging for the new serial "The Broken Coin."

KLEINE OPENS OFFICE IN ST. LOUIS

GEORGE KLEINE has opened a new office in Kansas City in which bookings for that territory can be made.

The ever-increasing volume of business from Kansas and Missouri necessitated the new office. John Hardin, formerly of the Kleine Dallas branch, will be in charge at 209-12 Ozark building.

COCHARD ARRANGES SUCCESSFUL "PRE-VIEW"

A "PRE-VIEW" of the first three episodes of the "Flying A" feature, "The Diamond from the Sky," was given Wednesday morning, April 21, at the College theatre, Los Angeles, by Charles Cochard, who is managing the booking for this serial in southern California and Arizona.

This was attended by a very large majority of the exhibitors of Los Angeles, and all were very favorably impressed with the initial releases, as was shown by the number of bookings made following the showing.

The success of the showing must be attributed to the manner in which Mr. Cochard bombarded the theatre managers with mail.

He first sent to each circulars describing the early releases of the serial, then a facsimile of a night letter announcing the shipment of the films from the Chicago factory, the following morning an invitation, and the day before the showing another facsimile of a day letter telling of the success at the other booking offices of the company.

Indications at this time point to a very heavy booking of this serial and by the date of the first release the exchange expects to have more than sixty days of solid booking.

Out-of-town managers who attended the "pre-view" were J. O. LaPearl, Grand theatre, San Diego; M. M. Jackson, Princess, Santa Ana; Foster Jackson, Crown, Sawtelle; H. E. Crosby, Superba, Alhambra; Charles Jacobs, Neptune, Venice; Mrs. Dixon, Dixon theatre, Ventura; W. E. Hendrickson, Majestic, Redlands; and W. H. LaBee, Theatorium, Long Beach.

INDEPENDENT, PITTSBURGH, TO MOVE

THE Independent Film exchange, of which E. A. Davis is manager at 415 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, will move to the rooms of the Pittsburgh Photoplay Company, the latter company having been consolidated with the Continental Feature Film Corporation, at 420 Penn avenue. The new quarters will afford the Independent company a chance to branch out as the company has needed more space to do its work.

The Exhibitors Publishing Company and the Messenger service will move into the rooms which will be vacated by the Independent Film Company, as these two companies need more space and it will be found in their new quarters.

Max W. Herring, of the Alliance Film exchange, has opened a new office at 404 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, in the rooms formerly used by the Famous Players exchange. Herring is a hustler, and states that he has already done enough business in the new quarters in three days to warrant his having made the move, and says that he feels sure that he will do far more business with the service than has been done in the past in this district.

IN QUAKER CITY EXCHANGES

HARRY BRYAN, manager of the Philadelphia Metropolitan Booking Company, is taking a trip through Virginia in the interest of his firm. The Metropolitan is opening an office in Pittsburgh in the Hartley building, 405 Fourth avenue. E. C. Rockwell, of the Philadelphia office, will have charge of this new branch, the territory of which will include western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation report a big boom on "Hypocrites." After its long run at the Globe in Philadelphia it is booked for ten weeks solid in different Pennsylvania towns, with two prints at that. The Paramount Travel Series is booked for 55 consecutive days. The Arcadia will open up with this series and use in first runs every week. "The Eternal City" was booked solid for all of April and May on two prints.

A. Carlos, general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, visited the Philadelphia exchange, at 1333 Vine street, on April 24. The principal business occupying Mr. Carlos was the final arrangements in regard to "The New Governor." This will be run for an indefinite period at the Garrick, one of the large Chestnut street theatres now devoted to the legitimate.

George Dembow, assistant manager of the Fox office, will remain in Philadelphia instead of being transferred out West, as originally planned. George is reported to have said that he was to get married a month ago, but hasn't had the time to spare to go to his own wedding. Jack Levy, manager of the Philadelphia office, has gone to Washington to establish a Fox office. Lieutenant Jim P. Anderson will be the manager of this Capital City branch.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IMPROVING, SAYS WEBSTER

S. S. WEBSTER, manager of the Buffalo branch of the All Theatres Film Company, handling the Alliance output, arrived in New York on his tour of the State which has up to the present occupied seven weeks.

During his trip, Mr. Webster touched nearly every city of importance in the State, and before returning to Buffalo he will have met nearly every regular exhibitor in New York State exclusive of New York City.

When asked what the business conditions are in the State he replied, "With a few exceptions everything I saw was of a very encouraging nature. Exhibitors are as a whole better off now than they have been for the past year and a half. The Alliance program is helping the exhibitor to not only hold his own, but it is writing the word 'profit' into many weekly statements."

Conness, Edison Lead, Seasoned "Legit" Actor

Player Abandoned Business Opportunity as Confidential Secretary to a Railroad President for a Career of Histrionic Art, with Success

ROBERT CONNESS, chosen for the lead in the forthcoming Edison feature film, "The House of the Lost Court," from the book by Mrs. C. N. Williamson, represents the dramatic technique and art that comes only from inborn histrionic talent shaped with the broadest experience.

ROBERT CONNESS

Born on a farm in Illinois and succeeding in reaching the position of confidential secretary to the president of a large western railroad, the never successfully crushed leaning for the stage made him throw it all up and begin at the very bottom in order that he might attain the hope of his boyhood.

Beginning as an usher in a theatre that he might be able to study the stage's stars, he soon showed such aptitude in amateur theatricals that a theatrical manager, visiting the town, engaged him at once for juvenile roles which he was soon playing with James O'Neil in "Monte Cristo" and other productions of that star. He later played Rupert for two seasons in Frohman's "Prisoner of Zenda."

His activities since have covered the widest range of technical and emotional experience, including two seasons playing heavies with the Pabst English stock company, Milwaukee; the Suburban stock company, St. Louis; in H. B. Harris's "The Movers"; with Wallace Eddinger in "The Aviator"; five summer seasons in stock at Peek's Island, Me.; with Francis Wilson in "The Bachelor's Baby"; the Barber stock company, Portland, Ore.; featured as Robert Emmet in the play of that name; as the featured star in "Lieutenant Dick, U. S. A.," and in support of such lights as Blanche Walsh in "The Woman in the Case," and Mary Mannering. His first New York appearance was as Theodore, which he created in "The Reckoning."

Edison films are the only pictures in which Mr. Conness has appeared.

KRITERION EXCHANGE OPENS IN DETROIT

ANOTHER large exchange has located in Detroit, Mich. It is known as the Detroit Kriterion Film Company, and is incorporated under the laws of Michigan. The officers of the concern are Otto Seestedt, president; Charles D. Wesch, treasurer, and Ralph Peckham, secretary and general manager.

The company will act as Michigan distributors for Kriterion films. Later an office is to be opened in Grand Rapids to take care of western Michigan business. The company also operates a Toledo office at 428 Huron street, which will be under the general direction of Mr. Peckham. No other concern ever opened up in Detroit with such a bang as the Kriterion.

To go through its three floors would give one the opinion that it had been in business here for years. The company is located at 185 East Jefferson avenue and has the second, third and fourth floors of the building, which is only a stone's throw from Woodward avenue, and other film exchanges.

On the second floor, the company has its private and general offices; on the third floor is a large meeting room for the directors, as well as a large projection room, said to be the largest in the city.

It can comfortably seat one hundred people. On the fourth floor, the company maintains its advertising and poster department. The shipping department is on the second floor. The formal opening of this new exchange took place Monday, April 19.

RODIN SUCCEEDS YEAGER IN SALT LAKE

JOSEPH RODIN has succeeded Joe V. Yeager as manager of the Salt Lake office of the Fox Film in the McIntyre building, Mr. Yeager retiring from the exchange end to go into the exhibiting end. Mr. Rodin has been on the road for several concerns in that territory and he is very popular among all exhibitors.

GOLDBERG RESIGNS FROM CASINO AND MAY OPEN OWN EXCHANGE

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that Harry Goldberg, for the past two years sales manager of the Casino Feature Film Company, Detroit, Michigan agents for Paramount and other high-class films, has handed in his resignation to take effect May 1.

JACKIE SAUNDERS STARS IN 50 BALBOA FILMS

Popular Actress, Only Two Years in Motion Pictures, Emerges from Obscurity to Limelight of Fame—Has Gained Large Following Through Her Versatile Talents—Manner of Acting Resembles Lotta Crabtree —Role in "Ill-Starred Babbie" Gives Young Player Chance for Fine Acting

FROM the shadows of motion picture obscurity to the lime light of motion picture fame. That is the path that in a brief space of time has been traveled by Miss Jackie Saunders, who is now being featured in many important Balboa productions. One year ago she was practically unknown on the screen.

Now she has a great following among the fans of the country, while exhibitors everywhere unhesitatingly book the features in which she appears. She is the star of a company especially organized by the Balboa management to support her in a succession of photo-dramas written with her particular talents in views, and there is no doubt that in future she will scintillate more brilliantly than she has in the past.

Miss Saunders is not a peculiar type. She is a distinctive type. At present there is no one before the camera who compares with her, but in searching the history of the stage it is found that she is very similar to Lotta Crabtree, who was the idol of the American people forty years ago.

She reminds one, too, of Mattie Vickers, Anna Pixley and Maggie Mitchell. Her powers of fascination equal those of these soubrettes whose work before the footlights delighted and amused theatre-goers two generations ago, and it has been demonstrated that Miss Saunders will revive in motion pictures and popularize this method of expression.

Combined with her dramatic qualities, which are delicate but effective, she possesses rare charm as a comedienne. In fact her art is so subtle that she commands the tears as well as the smiles of her audiences, while in tense moments she rises to dramatic heights that thrill and electrify all who see her.

Miss Saunders is a very young woman to have achieved so much. As a matter of fact she is a mere girl, having but recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday. But, notwithstanding her youth, she has had a wide stage experience, and has been a leading women in motion pictures since she was nineteen. More than fifty successful Balboa productions must be placed to her credit.

Fifty Pictures Featuring Jackie Saunders

Among these are: "The Rebuke," two reels; "Gypsie Love," two reels; "Will o' the Wisp," four reels; "The Heart of the Brute," two reels; "The Hunchback of Cedar Lodge," three reels; "Little Jack," three reels; "When Fate Was Kind," two reels; "Little Sunbeam," three reels; "The Square Triangle," three reels; "The Break Up," two reels; "Through Night to Light," three reels; "The Tomboy," three reels; "The Reformation," three reels; "The Rose of the Alley," three reels; "Romance of the Hills," two reels; "The Acid Test," three reels; "Reaping the Whirlwind," five reels; "Eyes That Cannot See," three reels; "The Coveted Heritage," three reels; "Ill-Starred Babbie," five reels; "The Adventures of a Madcap," four reels, and her very latest, a three-reel photo drama entitled "A Rose Among the Briars."

Give Miss Saunders any part that calls for a wild, harum scarum sort of a girl in which she has the opportunity to impersonate a waif, a madcap or a tomboy, and she will walk away with it to the satisfaction of the most exacting critic in the world.

And while she prefers to interpret these characterizations at the opening of the play, she likes to wind up in evening dress just to show those who love her that she can be a "regular lady" when the occasion demands it.

Of course she is pretty. Devotees of the brush and palet declare her beautiful—which she undoubtedly is—but her beauty is not of the statuesque brand. As a wild child of the flowerland, clad in a simple gingham dress, she is fascinatingly winsome.

Her smile goes straight to the heart while she arouses deep sympathy every time she pouts. Indeed, it is difficult to restrain a desire to adopt her and see that she has all the comforts money can provide. She absolutely lives every role she plays, and in pathetic scenes natural tears stream out of her eyes and course down her cheeks.

One of the most exacting demands of the screen is to cry without contorting the face to such an extent that even a good-looking girl becomes ugly. Miss Saunders is one of the very few who can cry and remain pretty. In moments of anguish she is even more alluring than she is in her happiest vein, the difference being due, no doubt, to the spontaneous sympathy which the sad mood arouses.

Miss Saunders has not yet reached the zenith of her power and popularity. She improves with each picture, and it is predicted by experts who have watched her career that in her the Balboa company possesses a marvelous asset. During the coming year she will be featured in a large number of pretentious productions. Miss Saunders' portrait forms the supplement to this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Those who see Miss Saunders in "Ill-Starred Babbie"—released by the Alliance—will appreciate her talents. Will H. Whalen, the priest-author who wrote the book, conceived a character that was born under a star of ill omen. Babbie's mother dies when she comes into the world.

She is brought to girlhood by her father and an elder sister, both of whom are very indulgent. She runs around the mining village with her yellow hair flowing in the wind, committing all sorts of innocent pranks.

The gossips of the town declare she will come to a bad end and malign her at every opportunity. Being gently reproved by her sister for keeping company with a young man who shows signs of being wayward. Babbie impulsively runs away and marries him.

After a few weeks of bliss her husband begins drinking and abusing her. In a fit of drunken anger he strikes at her and his arm crashes through a window. His wrist is severely cut. Blood poison sets in and in a short time he dies. Babbie waits until he is buried in the pauper's field and then returns to her home.

Opportunities for Strong Acting

This serious and hard headed fellow is opposed to Babbie because he thinks she is a bad girl, but when he sees her he promptly falls in love with her. Babbie reciprocates his love, but she does not let him know it. Beneath the pretense that she prefers another—a newspaper reporter who has come to the village to report a strike—she hides her real feelings.

The same old Grundies who gave her a coat of black paint when she was just a wisp of a girl get busier than ever. Although she is innocent and always watching for chances to be kind they berate her with their cruel tongues. The strike of the miners is on in earnest.

Strike-breakers are on the ground. The strikers attack the strike-breakers. Babbie's father, who has not participated in the assault, is arrested, taken to a distant city and imprisoned in a freight car. Babbie mounts a horse, rides to the scene of his incarceration and rescues him.

In making their escape they are fired upon and Babbie is fatally wounded. Thus ends the life of the poor little girl who was ill-starred from the moment she entered the world. The character is one of the best that Miss Saunders has ever undertaken and she has added to her laurels by the charmingly piquant manner in which she enacts it.

Spedon Creates Film Publicity Policies

Advertising Expert, Long Associated with Vitagraph, Was First Man to Bring Players to Notice of Public Personally, and Prepares Forceful "Copy"

FIFTEEN years of motion picture experience and a life-time of practical training as an advertising expert lie behind the work of S. M. Spedon, who has been manager of advertising and publicity of the Vitagraph Company of America since the early years of the company.

During this time Mr. Spedon has not only inaugurated many notable policies but has also created an enviable record for efficiency. Subordination of his own interests to that of the company he serves has always been Mr. Spedon's principle.

On the occasions when he has been called upon to talk or write on motion picture press agentry, his views have never been dominated by the "great I am." The Vitagraph Company of America has always been his main theme.

Mr. Spedon was the first man to advertise the players personally. Maurice Costello's patrician air, Lillian Walker's dimples and John Bunny's face were first publicized by Mr. Spedon. The undoubted popularity of the Vitagraph players may be traced to Mr. Spedon's policy on this matter, which has been followed by practically every other company in the business.

One noticeable feature in Vitagraph advertisements is the way in which the art work fits the subject matter. Mr. Spedon is able to secure extraordinary co-operation between his writer and his artist, as he himself is both. The Vitagraph eagles which adorn the borders of the ads are all his own drawings.

Probably the most forceful instance of the value of his powers as an artist may be found in his advertisement of "Lost in Mid-ocean," which was a striking drawing of a sinking ship. That single advertisement attracted more attention than any other current advertisement.

That advertisement also illustrated well one of Mr. Spedon's pet traits, which is one of the ear-marks of a good advertising man—picking out one salient point and playing that point up. This Mr. Spedon does in all his featured advertisements, with the result that they are uniformly forceful and attractive.

That advertising tells the story, when truthfully handled, is Mr. Spedon's belief, and he has always worked with that in view. His motto may well be put as:

"I care not what the others may do, so long as I write the ads."

WORLD OUTDOOR STAGE NEARLY COMPLETED

The new outdoor stage connected with the World Film studios is nearing completion.

The outdoor stage when completed will be sixty feet long and thirty feet wide. It will be joined both to the studio and to the storehouse by special runways, to facilitate the quick shifting of scenery. It is expected that this stage will become very popular in the hot summer days.

"FINE FEATHERS" NEARLY READY

The five-part photoplay, "Fine Feathers," with Janet Beecher in the stellar role, is nearing completion under Joseph A. Golden.

JANET BEECHER

Work on "The Price," by George Broadhurst, with Helen Ware, has been started. Arthur H. Jacobs, of the Cosmos Corporation, will shortly announce future releases.

Fania Marinoff Sits for Portrait to Southern Artist

Star in "The Lure of Mammon," a Broadway Favorites Feature, Ready for Release on May 17, Is Painted in Oils While in Florida

FANIA MARINOFF, who recently completed her work in Kalem's three-act Broadway Favorites feature, "The Lure of Mammon," returned to New York the other day. Among her effects was a superb portrait, done in oils, showing the charming actress as she appeared in the role of Dorinda, the principal figure of the Kalem production.

Two weeks were required to finish it. The artist, a Southern painter of prominence, met Miss Marinoff while on a visit to the Kalem studios on Talleyrand avenue, Jacksonville.

The charming star was working in one of the important scenes at the time of his visit. Attracted by her interpretation of Dorinda, he requested permission to paint her portrait as she appeaed in the ole. This was granted and the first sitting occurred the following morning.

The painting was completed a few days before Miss Marinoff was to leave for New York, and was placed on exhibition in one of the windows of a Jacksonville store. The beauty of the portrait aroused considerable comment.

An amusing incident in which Miss Marinoff played a prominent part, occurred while the painting was on exhibition. In the crowd admiring the picture was a young miss who had evidently made a trip to New York early this season.

"I'm sure that it is a picture of Miss Marinoff—an actress whom I saw in 'Consequences,' at the Comedy theatre, when I was in New York," this girl declared.

"That is just who it is!" exclaimed a voice at her shoulder.

Startled, the first speaker turned—and found herself staring into the eyes of the original of the portrait. Explanations followed on both sides.

According to Kalem, "The Lure of Mammon," like all Broadway Favorites feature, will be released in regular service. The release date is Monday, May 17.

V-L-S-E Combine Seeks Welfare of the Exhibitor

General Manager Irwin Believes That Theatres Taking General Service Will Be Served Better By the Present Plan Than Had Been Possible Before

"AS simplicity is the ideal in a piece of machinery, so it is in any business organization; the highest efficiency is secured by the fewest possible manipulations in commercial transactions," said Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, "and efficiency, one hundred per cent. of it, is the aim of the four famous producing companies in the new plan, of booking their big features direct to the exhibitors.

"Big features require especial attention in point of promotion and presentation, and the best results can be obtained by direct dealings between the exhibitors and the producers.

"The welfare of the exhibitors is the chief concern of the reliable manufacturers and the demands of the public is the wealth of both. To conserve the patronage of picture play patrons, favoring features, and arouse still greater interest in the art, the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay companies have produced and are producing, special features of such magnitude and artistic pre-eminence that, to put them into the hands of the exhibitors, at prices within reason, an economic and efficacious plan of handling was necessary to show a fair return on the vast sums expended on production.

"Each of our offices is supplied with a sufficient number of prints to properly care for all bookings; it is not a case of individual profit with them, but a matter of caring for the mutual interests of the exhibitor and the manufacturer, for, while working under a corporate name, each branch manager and his staff are really the representatives of the producers, and the exhibitor may have what he wants, and as much or as little of it as he chooses.

"As for the quality, the reputation of these companies has been firmly established and little need be said. With men of the standing of A. E. Smith, J. Stuart Blackton, William N. Selig, George K. Spoor and Siegmund Lubin giving their personal attention and best efforts to the productions, aided by a powerful staff of directors and an army of distinguished stars, the film world may confidently expect features that, in artistic and dramatic values, far surpass anything ever produced.

"The best of especially written picture plays, that are ever at the disposal of our companies, will be supplemented with adaptations from famous literary works and noted stage successes. Many prominent stage stars will be featured in addition to the popular artists of the screen, and the subjects will embrace every phase of the dramatic art—spectacles, tragedies and comedies.

"The announcement of the titles and release dates of our features, three months in advance, is of inestimable value to the exhibitor; it allows him plenty of time to make up his program, distribute advance matter and by acquainting all of his patrons of its coming with the positive assurance that it will be shown on the announced date, he will get the utmost out of its exhibition."

MARY PICKFORD TO MAKE AIR FLIGHT

Mary Pickford is soon to make a flight in an aeroplane for scenes in "The Girl of Yesterday," an American comedy drama of present day life now being made under the direction of Alan Dwan in Los Angeles.

For these scenes Glen Martin and his new four-seated machine has been engaged and already trial flights have been made to map out a route that it will be possible to secure the proper backgrounds for the picture.

On these trips Al Kaufman, manager of the Famous Players studios, has been a passenger with Mr. Martin and on the flights of Miss Pickford Mr. Kaufman will take a motion picture camera and act as cameraman, occupying a rear seat, that he may secure pictures of both Mr. Martin and Miss Pickford. It is planned to ascend about three thousand feet from Griffith Park, north of Los Angeles.
